

Annals of the Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute

SILVER JUBILEE VOLUME

BHANDARKAR ORIENTAL RESEARCH INSTITUTE

1917-1942

Edited by
R. N. DANDEKAR

SILVER JUBILEE VOLUME

BHANDARKAR ORIENTAL RESEARCH INSTITUTE

1917-1942

Edited by
R. N. DANDEKAR

BHANDARKAR ORIENTAL RESEARCH INSTITUTE

MANAGEMENT FOR 1942-1945

President

His Excellency Sir Lawrence Roger Lumley, G.C.I.E., D.L., Governor of Bombay

Vice-Presidents

Sir Chintamanrao alias Appasaheb Patwardhan, Rajasaheb of Sangli
Shrimant Narayanrao Babasaheb Ghorpade, Chief of Ichalkaranji
Shrimant Sir Malojirao Mudhojirao alias Nanasaheb Naik Nimbalkar, Rajasaheb of Phaltan

K. S. Jutar, Esq., C.I.E.

Mr. B. S. Karmat, B.A.

Sir G. D. Madgaonkar, I.C.S.

Dr. Sir R. P. Paranjpye, M.A., D.Sc.

REGULATING COUNCIL for 1942-1945

*Chairman **

Shrimant Balasaheb Pant Pratinidhi, B.A., Rajasaheb of Aundh

*Vice-Chairman **

Dr. Sir R. P. Paranjpye, M.A., D.Sc.

Joint Trustees

MM. Vasudevashastri Abhyankar

Dr. A. S. Altekar, M.A., LL.B., D.Litt.

Dr. P. V. Bapat, M.A., Ph.D.

†Dr. V. G. Bhat, M.A., Ph.D.

Prof. N. G. Damle, M.A.

Rao Bahadur K. N. Dikshit, M.A.

Prin. D. R. Gadgil, M.A., M.Litt.

†Prof. A. B. Gajendragadkar, M.A.

Mm. Prof. P. V. Kane, M.A., LL.M.

Prof. D. D. Kapadia, M.A., B.Sc.

Prin. R. D. Karmarkar, M.A.

Dr. Mrs. Irawati Karve, M.A., Ph.D.

Dr. S. M. Karve, M.A., Ph.D.

Mr. N. C. Kelkar, B.A., LL.B.

Hon'ble Mr. Justice N. S. Lokur,
B.A., LL.B.

Prof. D. V. Potdar, B.A.

Khan Bahadur Prof. Abdul Kadar

Sarfraj, M.A.

Dr. I. J. S. Taraporewala, B.A., Ph.D.

Prof. R. D. Vadekar, M.A.

Sardar G. N. Muzumdar, C.I.E.

Diwan Bahadur K. M. Jhaveri,
M.A., LL.B.

EXECUTIVE BOARD for 1942-45

Prin. J. R. Gharpure, B.A., LL.B.

(Chairman)

Dr. R. N. Dandekar, M.A., Ph.D.

(Secretary)

Prof. C. R. Devadhar, M.A.

(Treasurer)

†Prof. K. V. Abhyankar, M.A.

Rao Bahadur Dr. S. K. Belvalkar,
M.A., Ph.D.

Dr. V. G. Paranjpye, M.A., LL.B., D.Litt.

†Dr. M. B. Rehman, M.A., Ph.D.

†Dr. V. S. Sukthankar, M.A., Ph.D.

Dr. P. L. Vaidya, M.A., D.Litt.

*To be elected annually.

† Nominated by Government.

VOL. XXIII ]

[ PARTS I-IV

Annals of the Bhandarkar Oriental
Research Institute
Volume XXIII
1942

EDITED BY

K. V. ABHYANKAR, M. A.

R. N. DANDEKAR, M.A., Ph.D.

SILVER JUBILEE VOLUME

BHANDARKAR ORIENTAL RESEARCH INSTITUTE

1917-1942

Edited by
R. N. DANDEKAR

---

Pp. 1-261, 314-430, 483-527, 559-567, 621-632, 657-677 printed by Dr. R. N. Dandekar at the Bhandarkar Institute Press, Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute, Poona 4; pp. 262-313 printed by L. N. Chapbekar, at the Āryasamajī Press, 193(17) Sadashiv Peth, Poona 2; pp. 431-482, 528-558, 568-620, 633-686, 673-686 printed by V. H. Barve at the Aryabhushan Press, Poona, Peth Bhamburda, H. No. 215/1

and

Published by Dr. R. N. Dandekar, M.A., Ph.D., at the Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute, Poona No. 4.

PREFACE

About the end of the year 1941, the authorities of the Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute decided to issue the twenty-third Volume of the "Annals" (for 1942) as a Special Jubilee Number on the occasion of the Silver Jubilee celebrations of the Institute and entrusted the work of editing it to me. Accordingly, in November 1941, I issued an appeal to several Indologists, in India and outside, inviting their contributions for the Silver Jubilee Volume. The willing response which I then received from all quarters was an excellent indication of the high regard in which the memory of Sir Ramkrishna Gopal Bhandarkar and the work of the Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute are held in the world of Oriental scholars. I take this opportunity of expressing on behalf of the Institute my heart-felt gratitude to all these friends whose kind collaboration has made it possible for us to bring out the present Volume, which, as will be seen from the contents, is characterised by variety of subjects and originality of treatment.

Here I have to mention very respectfully the names of two contributors of this Volume—Mrs. C. A. F. Rhys Davids and Prof. S. S. Suryanarayan Sastri—whom the cruel hand of death has recently carried away from amongst us. The services rendered to the study of Buddhism by Mrs. Rhys Davids and to that of Indian Philosophy by Prof. Sastri will prove, I am sure, a constant source of inspiration to the future students of these subjects. May their souls rest in peace!

The publication of this Volume in time would have been impossible without the great help given to me by Mr. G. N. Shrigondekar, B.A., of the Publication Department of the Institute. I really wonder what I could have done without it. My very best thanks are due to Mr. Shrigondekar. I have also to thank Mr. P. K. Gode, M.A., the Curator, and Mr. Y. R. Junnarkar, B.A., the Assistant Curator, for having helped me in various ways. I must not forget to mention the timely assistance rendered to us by the Aryasthskriti Press and the Aryabhushan Press of Poona. I am particularly grateful to the manager of the Aryabhushan Press for helping us out of all the difficulties arising out of the general shortage of paper.

Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute, Poona }
4th January 1943 }

R. N. Dandekar

CONTENTS

	PAGES
1 P. K. Acharya, M.A., D.Litt. Mānasāra Vastuśāstra, the basic text on Archi- tecture and Sculpture ...	1-18
2 Vasudeva S. Agrawala, M.A. II. Mahābhārata Notes ...	19-22
3 A. N. Krishna Aiyangar, M.A. The Diṇḍima Poets of Mullanḍram and the King of Vijayanagar ...	23-29
4 K. V. Rangaswami Aiyangar, M.A. Govindarāja ...	30-54
5 V. M. Apte, M.A., Ph.D. Ṛta in the R̥gveda ...	55-60
6 P. V. Bapat, M.A., Ph.D. Sankha-Likhita Brahmacariya ...	61-66
7 G. H. Bhatt, M.A. The Last Message of Vallabhācārya ...	67-70
8 M. A. Chaghtai, M.A., D.Litt. The Place of Tāj in World Architecture ...	71-76
9 S. P. Chaturvedi, M.A. On Pāṇini's Sūtra VII-1-90—Wrong wording or Corrupt reading? ...	77-79
10 Mrs. C. A. F. Rhys Davids India and the Pali Text Society ...	80-83
11 G. V. Devasthali, M.A. On the Probable Date of Śabara-Svāmin ...	84-97
12 Moreshwar G. Dikshit, M.A. Caudhārapādā (Lopad) Inscription of Keśideva, Śaka 1162 ...	98-102

13	V. R. Ramachandra Dikshitar, M.A. A Note on Gaṇarājya	... 103-106
14	P. C. Divanji, M.A., LL.M. Origin of the Bhāgavata and Jaina Religions	... 107-125
15	Franklin Edgerton Some Curious Middle Indic Aorists	... 126
16	Fa Chow Sākara-Maddava and the Buddha's Death	... 127-133
17	V. A. Gadgil, M.A. Indra, the Representative of the Highest Physical Aspect of Nature	... 134-142
18	K. B. Gajendragadkar, B.A., LL.B. Manusmṛti and Sagotra Marriages	... 143-145
19	P. K. Gode, M.A. Nilakaṇṭha Caturdham, the commentator of the Mahābhārata—his Genealogy and Descendants	... 146-161
20	N. A. Gore, M.A. Mālatīmādhava-Laghuvivaraṇa by Pandit Dharānanda : his date and other works written by him	... 162-170
21	R. G. Harshe, D. Litt. On the Search for Manuscripts in the Deccan	... 171-176
22	Betty Heimann The Philosophy of Flux	... 177-186
23	H. Heras, S. J. Three-Headed Animals in Mohenjo Daro	... 187-195
24	S. A. Joglekar, M.A., LL.B. The Home of the Śātavāhanas	... 196-205
25	P. V. Kane, M.A., LL.M. The Meaning of 'Ācāryāḥ'	... 206-213

	PAGES
26 A. P. Karmarkar, M.A., LL.B. Some Nude Gods in Hindu Pantheon	.... 214-223
27 Sadashiva L. Katre, M.A. Bhūpālavallabha : the work, its author and date	.... 224-241
28 S. M. Katre, M.A., Ph.D. On some words for 'Child' in Indo-Aryan	.... 242-249
29 Līlādharā B. Keny, M.A. The Origin of Nārāyaṇa	.... 250-256
30 G. H. Khare A note on the Family Records of the Peshwa's Agents at Delhi	.... 257-261
31 M. R. Majmudar, M.A., LL.B. Iconography of Candra and Candrasekhara Images	.... 262-270
32 D. R. Mankad, M.A. Manvantara-Caturyuga Method	.... 271-290
33 V. V. Mirashi, M.A. Gāṅgeysdeva of Tirabhukti	.... 291-301
34 H. G. Narhari, M.A. The Vedic Doctrine of the Worlds above	.... 302-313
35 Gaurishankar H. Ojha, D. Litt. The Nānāpā Grant of Caulukya King Kumārapāladeva of Gujarat dated Vikrama Samvat 1212	.... 314-318
36 M. Govind Pai The Vīlīvāyakuras and Sivalakura of the Kolhapur Coins	.... 319-329
37 A. G. Pawar, M.A., Ph.D. A note on the meaning and use of the word Johār	.... 330-335

38	K. R. Pisharoti, M.A.
	Sex-Life in Ancient India: Some Thoughts	.... 336-341
39	E. P. Radhakrishnan, M.A.
	Sukhsprakāśa—his identity and works	.... 342-351
40	V. Raghavan, M.A., Ph.D.
	Anubhūtiśvarūpācārya—Author of the Pra- kaṭārthavivaraṇa, Iṣṭasiddhivivaraṇa, etc.	.... 352-368
41	C. Kunhan Raja, M.A., D.Phil.
	The Hero in the Mālavikāgnimītra	.... 369-378
42	Nagraj Rao, M.A.
	The Philosophy of Madhva Dvaita Vadānta	.... 379-385
43	B. A. Saletore, M.A., Ph.D.
	Historical notices of the Lokāyatas	.... 386-397
44	B. N. Krishnamurti Sarma, M.A.
	The Sūtras of Bādarāyaṇa	.... 398-404
45	K. M. Sarma, M.O.L.
	Gleanings from the commentaries on the Vākyapadīya	.... 405-412
46	P. P. S. Sastri, M.A.
	Commentators of the Rāmāyaṇa in the fifteenth sixteenth and seventeenth centuries	.... 413-414
47	S. Srikantha Sastri, M.A.
	Soma forgotten Sanskrit poets of Karpāṭaka	.... 415-423
48	S. S. Suryanarayana Sastri, M.A., B.Sc.
	Word and Sense	.... 424-430
49	S. N. Sen, M.A., B.Litt., Ph.D.
	Dr. St. John on India	.... 431-450

	PAGES
50 H. C. Seth, M.A., Ph.D.
Certain Vedic, Avestan and Greek traditions and the Age of the Rigveda	.... 451-464
51 H. A. Shah, B.A.
Two Gospels	.... 465-479
52 R. Shama Sastry, B.A., Ph.D.
Indra and Ahalyā	.... 480-481
53 Dasharatha Sharma, M.A.
Narhad Inscription of Vighraharāja IV, V, 1218 ...	482
54 S. R. Sharma, M.A.
The Imperial Mystics of Delhi	.... 483-493
55 S. R. Shende
The extent of Mahārāstra as found in the Aihole Inscription	.... 494-509
56 Dines Chandra Sircar, M.A., Ph.D.
A note on the Goa Copper-Plate Inscription of King Candravarman	.... 510-514
57 C. S. Srinivasachari, M.A.
Studies in the Growth of Modern Tamil	.... 515-527
58 Ludwik Sternbach, LL.D., University Krakow, Lwow ( Poland )
The harmonising of Law with the require- ments of Economic Conditions according to the ancient Indian Dharmaśāstras, Arthaśāstras and Gr̥hyasūtras	.... 528-548
59 V. S. Sukthankar, M.A., Ph.D.
Epic Questions, II. Parvasaṃgraha Figures	.... 549-558
60 S. N. Tadpatrikar, M.A.
Devī-Bhāgavata or Bhagavatī-Purāṇa	.... 559-563

61	G. V. Tagare, M.A.
	Apsbhrarṇā and Abhiras	... 563-567
62	I. J. S. Taraporewala, B.A., Ph.D.
	Xvaśva-dasa in Avesta	... 568-581
63	D. S. Triveda, M.A., Ph.D.
	Sheet Anchor of Indian History	... 582-591
64	A. N. Upadhye, M.A., D.Litt.
	Harīṣeṣa's Dharmaparīkṣā in Apabhrāṇā	... 592-608
65	M. V. Vaidya, M.A.
	The Palace of Hiraṇyakaśipu	... 609-620
66	K. C. Varadachari, M.A., Ph.D.
	Some Contributions of Ālvārs to the Philo- sophy of Bhakti	... 621-632
67	Siddheshwar Varma, M.A., Ph.D.
	The position of a Preposition in the language of the Brāhmaṇas	633-656
68	H. D. Velankar, M.A.
	Divodāsa Atithigva and other Atithigvas	... 657-668
69	K. N. Watawe, M.A., Ph.D.
	The Psychology of the Rasa-Theory	... 669-677
70	G. Yazdani, M.A., O.B.E.
	Woman in the Sculpture of the Deccan: an artistic Study	... 678-686

A broad Classification of the Contents according to Subjects

( The figure refers to the number of the article )

- I Veda and Avesta : 5, 17, 34, 50, 52, 62, 68.
- II Epics and Purāṇas : 2, 4, 19, 32, 46, 59, 60, 65.
- III Classical and Modern Literature : 3, 20, 41, 47, 57, 69.
- IV Religion and Philosophy : 7, 11, 14, 22, 29, 39, 40, 42, 44, 48, 51, 66.
- V Buddhism and Jainism : 6, 10, 16, 64.
- VI History, Archaeology, Epigraphy etc. : 8, 12, 23, 24, 26, 30, 31, 33, 35, 36,
43, 49, 53, 54, 55,
56, 63, 70.
- VII Linguistics : 9, 15, 28, 45, 61, 67.
- VIII Sociology : 13, 18, 25, 37, 38, 58.
- IX Technical Sciences : 1, 27.
- X Study of Manuscripts : 21.

MANASARA VASTUSASTRA, THE BASIC TEXT ON ARCHITECTURE AND SCULPTURE

BY

P. K. ACHARYA

The Mānasāra first came to be known more than a hundred years ago through an essay on architecture by a Madras Judge, Ram Raj. His thesis contains reference to fifteen fragmentary chapters of the Mānasāra from a single badly preserved manuscript and there are few illustrations not drawn from those fragmentary descriptions, but representing local extant temples. It was published in 1834. In 1934 a critical edition of the complete Mānasāra containing all the seventy chapters has been published together with a volume of illustrations drawn to scale from those descriptions by the Government of U. P. through the Oxford University Press. The present writer prepared it out of eleven manuscripts written in five different scripts.<sup>1</sup> The language in which it is written has been truly branded as 'barbarous Sanskrit,' meaning an unpolished, and ungrammatical language. It had to be garbed in Sanskrit despite original defects in grammar, metre and rhetorics in order to make it authentic. For the very same reason the real authorship has been kept concealed and the treatise is variously ascribed to a personal name, a class of sages working on architecture and also a (smaller) work bearing the title Mānasāra which term etymologically means 'essence of measurement.'<sup>2</sup> It appears to be certain that the work was composed by some Śilpin (practising architect) whose command of correct Sanskrit language was naturally defective but whose mastery of the subject was not <sup>1</sup> For details see the preface to the text, Vol. III of the Mānasāra Series.

<sup>2</sup> (a) Kṛtam iti akhilam uktam Mānasāra-purāṇaiḥ Pīṭhabeśvara-pramukhaiḥ samastair devair idam śāstra-varaṁ puroditam. Tasmāt sam-uddhṛīya hi mānasāraṁ śāstram kṛtam loka-hitārtham (LXX 1148).

(b) Mānasāraṁ sūtram saṁgrāhya śāstre saṁkṣepataḥ kramāt (XXXIII 2).

(c) Sakala-muni-varair Māna-sūtrādi-mukhyaiḥ (XLXIX, 216).

(d) Mānasāra-ṣaṭpāṇam kṛtam śāstram Mānasāra-muni-nāmakaṁ kṛt (I, 39).

only above reproach but unique. The work deals with architecture in a very broad sense and supplies measurements, etc., of every thing constructed from the bird's nest to the king's palace and from the image of an insect to that of the highest gods and goddesses.

The work in its present form deals with architecture and the cognate arts and supplies constructional details including measurements, etc., of every object which can be wrought with human hands. Thus details are given of all kinds of settlements, villages, towns, cities, forts, fortresses, ports and harbours. In these settlements are built houses, of all sizes and varieties including dwellings, palaces, offices like courts of justice, secretariat, jails, places of amusement and other public assemblies, temples for Brahmanical creeds, Buddhists, Jainas and other sects. Auxiliary members and component mouldings have been described under proper classification and with all necessary particulars. Thus are referred to in detail roads, bridges, gateways, triumphal arches, market places, wells, tanks, trenches, drains, sewers, moats, enclosure walls, dams, embankments, railings, and flights of steps for ascending to and descending from hills, rivers, and tanks, as well as movable ladders, etc. For building houses are given all necessary directions regarding materials and mouldings which are required for foundations, walls, floors, roofs, staircases, storeys, doors, windows and other openings, as well as, pedestals, bases, shafts, capitals of pillars, and ornaments for different parts. Similarly are described various conveyances and seats and articles of furniture such as bedsteads, couches, tables, chairs, thrones, wardrobes, baskets, cages, nests, mills, conveyances, lamps and lamp-posts for street, etc. Dresses and ornaments for images of gods, sages, kings and others including crowns, jackets, lower garments, chains, earrings, bracelets, armlets and foot-wears are minutely described. Under the category of sculpture all constructional details are given not only of the idols of deities and phalli of Śiva and images of Buddha and Jina but also of statues of great personages, as well as images of demi-gods demons, animals, birds, fishes, and insects, and of toys and carvings of various kinds.

Of the seventy chapters of the Mānasāra the first eight are introductory; the next forty-two deal with matters relating to town-planning and house-building; and the last twenty are devoted to sculpture. In the Introductory chapters full accounts are given of all preliminary matters. Chapter I opens with a brief reference to the origin of architecture which subject is elaborated in chapters II and LXX and concludes with a table of contents specifying the titles of all the chapters. Chapter II opens with a classification of artists which is followed by a reference to their necessary training and required qualifications; the chapter concludes with a full account of the system of architectural measurements, the sculptural measurements being elaborated in Chapters LVII, LVIII, LIX, LX, LXI, LXII, LXIII, LXV, LXVI. Chapter III opens with the classification of Vāstu which is defined as the place where men and gods reside. This includes the ground (dharā), buildings (harmya), conveyances (yāna), and couches (paryāṅka). Buildings comprise palaces (prāsāda), smaller houses and pavilions (maṇḍapa), halls (sabhā), storeyed mansions (śālā) and theatres (raṅga). Conveyances (yāna) include carriages (ādika), chariots (ayandana), palanquins and litters (śābikā) and cars (ratha). Couches comprise cages and nests (pañjara), platforms (maṇḍali), swing and hammocks (maṇḍa), eightfold seats (kāṣṭha), benches and couches (phalakāsana) and bed-steads (bala-paryāṅka). Divine thrones for gods and goddesses and royal thrones for kings and queens are elaborated in a later chapter.

The second part of chapter III and chapters IV and V refer to the first object of Vāstu, viz. ground, whereupon villages, towns, forts, palaces, temples and houses are built. The level of the ground is variously ascertained and the characteristic vegetation upon the building site is minutely examined. The soil is tested with regard to its contour, colour, odour, features, taste and touch. Chapter VI opens with a description of the principles of dialling and the methods for ascertaining cardinal points by means of a gnomon for the orientation of buildings, and concludes with technical directions regarding the lines of demarcation in digging trenches for foundations of buildings. Chapter VII deals with site-plans, thirty-two varieties of which are described under so many technical titles. Each of these schemes are divided into a certain number of square plots each bearing the epithet of a deity, the largest one being partitioned into as many as 1024 square plots, whereupon constructions of various descriptions are conveniently referred to as occasion arises in subsequent chapters. Chapter VIII which concludes the description of preliminary matters deal with customary offerings to the Vāstu deities incidentally referred to in the preceding chapter.

Chapters IX, X deal with village-schemes and town-plans. Villages are elaborately described under eight designs, daṇḍaka, sarvatobhadra, nandīvarta, padmaka svastika, prastara, kārmuka and caturmukha. Towns are similarly classified under eight types, rājadhānī, nagari, pura, nagara, kṣēṭa, kharvaṭa, kubjaka and pattana, while forts and military camps are described under śibira, vāhīni-mukha, sthānīya, droṇaka, samviddha or vardhaka, koṭaka, nigama and skandhāpāra, as also under giri-durga, vana-durga, jala-durga, ratha-durga, deva-durga, pañka-durga and mīra-durga. These various plans have been elaborated with minute details and contain directions regarding roads, drains, quarters for various purposes, boundary walls, ditches and moats.

Chapter XI, which is the first of the forty exclusively devoted to architecture proper or house building, opens with a description of the various shapes of different structures classified under jāti, chanda, vikalpa or samkalpa, and ābhūsa groups. Then are described the five proportions of height as compared with width or breadth of different rooms as well as of the whole house under the significant designations, śāntika (peaceful), prauṣṭika (progressive), jayada (victory-giving), adbhuta (wonderful) and sarva-kāmika (fulfilling all desires). Along with this, five series of length and five series of breadth also are skilfully generalised for different stories of houses, which vary from one to twelve in civil buildings and upto seventeen in gopuras or gate-houses attached both to temples and residential and public structures. The chapter concludes with direction regarding the allotment of houses of different storeys to residents of various ranks and in accordance with their social position.

Chapter XII supplies technical and practical instructions regarding the foundations, of which size and depth vary in accordance with the dimensions and the load of structures erected upon them. Twelve series of breadth and length also of the excavation have been skilfully classified. The rock foundation and water foundation have been specially recommended. Excavation is filled with various kinds of root, cereals, rice and earth. The chapter concludes with an account of bricks of which the breadth varies from  $5\frac{1}{4}$  inches to  $22\frac{1}{2}$  inches and the length thereof is greater by  $\frac{1}{4}$ ,  $\frac{1}{2}$ , or  $\frac{3}{4}$ .

Chapters XIII, XIV, XV and XVI describe pillars and their component parts and mouldings. After citing formulae for ascertaining comparative heights of the members, measurements and other details are given of pedestals under three groups (vedi-bhadra, prati-bhadra and mañca-bhadra) of four types each, and of bases under sixty-four types each bearing a technical name. Pillars classified under five main orders, brahma-kānta, viṣṇu-kānta, rudra-kānta, śiṣa-kānta and śkanda-kānta. Special pillars and capitals are similarly classified under technical epithets. Mouldings and materials are also described in detail. Rules regarding inter columnation are also referred to. Similar particulars are also supplied of the entablature under eight divisions. Chapter XVI concludes with a reference to the roofing of buildings of which further particulars and classification are elaborated in several later chapters. There may be flat roof, sloping roof, round roof and spherical (śikhara) type roof.

Chapter XVII supplies a technical description of wood-joining both for the door, etc., of houses and articles of furniture such as coaches, cars, chairs, etc., under the designs like nandīyāvarta, svastika, sarvatobhadra, and others.

Chapter XVIII refers to the three main styles, Nāgara, Vesara and Drāviḍa which are noticeable in the general shape of a structure. In this connection are described the features, etc., of the topmost part of a building comprising śikhara, śikhā, śikhānta and śikhā-maṇi, porches (mukha-bhadra) and sloping roofs (kupā). The comparative height of storeys varying from one to twelve are also skilfully classified under several series of dimensions which are specified. An account of all building-materials is also referred to here.

Chapter XIX opens with further general classifications under the groups jāti, chanda, vikalpa, abhūsa; sthānaka, āsana, śayana (referring specially to temples) and savhita, asavhita and apa-savhita, masculine, feminine and neuter. Then follows the description of single-storeyed buildings, which, when used as temples, contain the shrines, anteroom, front pavilion in addition to the common members like gatehouse (gopura), courts (prākāra), water-channel, as well as doors and windows. The openings are, however, elaborated later under separate chapters. Temples of the Buddhists and Jāinas are also incidentally referred to here, two separate chapters being devoted to them later. The eight types of single-storeyed buildings are treated under eight technical names, jayantika, bhoga, śrīśūla, svasti-bandhana, śrīkara, hasi-praśha, skanda-tāra and kesara. Similar accounts are given of houses and temples of two storeys under eight types (Chapter XX), three storeys under eight types (Chap. XXI), four storeys under eight types (Chap. XXXI), five storeys under eight types (Chap. XXIII), six storeys under thirteen types (Chap. XXIV), seven storeys under eight types (Chap. XXV), eight storeys under eight types (Chap. XXVI), nine storeys under seven types (Chap. XXVII), ten storeys under six types (Chap. XXVIII), eleven storeys under six types (Chap. XXIX) and twelve storeys under ten types of which the technical names may be quoted, Pañcāla Dhāvida, Madhyakānta, Kalīnga-kānta, Virūṭa, Kerala and Sphūjaka. These are geographical names and would point to ten provinces architecturally divided. This Chapter XXX concludes with an elaborate account of staircases including technical instructions regarding dimensions, materials, varieties and component parts.

This general reference is followed by special accounts of important objects and special buildings and the articles of furniture etc. Thus in Chapter XXXV courts and auxiliary buildings of edifices and large temples are described. Five courts (Chap. XXXI) are referred to under the titles of antarmaṇḍala, antanihara, madhyamaniḥava, prākāra and mahāmanṛyāda. These divisions are recommended both for defence (rakṣana) and beauty (śobhā) for houses and temples alike and for offerings (balī) and attendant deities (parivāra) in case of divine structures. The shrines of the attendant deities are elaborated in chapter XXXII and the gate-houses for civil and divine edifices in chapter XXXIII. These gate-houses are classified under five groups as they are attached to the five courts under the epithets dvāra-śobha, dvāra-śālā, dvāra-prāsāda, dvāra-harmya and Mahāgopura. Each of these five classes is subdivided again into three sizes. With special reference to their steeple, pinnacle, neckpeak (gata-kūṭa) and vestibule gate-houses are further described under the titles śrībhoga, śrīśālā, viṣṇu-kānta, indra-kānta, brahma-kānta, skanda-kānta, śikhara, saumya-kānta and two others which are missing. The chapter closes with an elaborate account of windows to be used in all other classes of buildings also. They are designed under various shapes and plans indicated by the figures of nāga-bandha (snake-band), valli (creeper pattern), gavākṣa (cows pattern), kuñja-rākṣa (elephant's eye), svastika (cross pattern), sarvatobhadra (projecting all sides), nandiyāvarta (geometrical patterns) and puṣpa-bandha (flower pattern). They are decorated with floral and foliated ornaments, as well as with decorative devices in imitation of jewels. The width of windows for gate-houses may vary from  $2\frac{1}{2}$  feet to  $7\frac{1}{2}$  feet.

Chapter XXXIV deals exhaustively with numerous types of detached buildings, generally single-storeyed, known as pavilions. Thus it refers to houses built in towns and on the countryside, in orchards and gardens, on the sea-shore, on the banks of rivers, lakes, tanks, etc. Pavilions also include those detached buildings erected in the several courts of an edifice and large temple. They also include attached rooms and annexes set aside for instance to serve exclusively as family chapel, kitchen, guest house, bath-room, dining-room, etc. Certain interesting classifications are also made: for instance, pavilions of two faces are called dayāka, those of three faces svastika, those of four faces catur-mukha, those of five faces sarvato-bhadra, and those of six faces maṇḍika. Elsewhere<sup>1</sup> they are classified according to the number of pillars they are furnished with; thus one possessing 62 pillars is called subhadra, and so forth. The chapter closes with a reference to shapes of pavilion which may be in shape triangular, quadrangular, octagonal, sixteen-sided, crescent shaped and round or circular.

Chapter XXXV on the other hand deals with attached rows

<sup>1</sup> Matsya-Purāṇa, Chap. 264, vv. 13-15,

of buildings joined in various forms and height. They are designated as storeyed mansions but include all large structures to be used both as King's palace and God's temple, although there is a separate chapter dealing exclusively with palaces of the kings of nine different ranks. These storeyed mansions are classified under six types, daṇḍaka, svastika, maulika, caturmukha, śarvatoḥhadra and vardhamāna. Each of these is again subdivided into several types, the arrangement of the daṇḍaka mansion, for instance, which consists of a single row of buildings, is described under eight varieties. The ploughshaped svastika group consists of two rows of buildings, the winnowing-shaped maulika of three rows, the next group comprises four rows, the fifth group consists of seven rows, and the last group of ten rows. These blocks of buildings varying in number of storeys up to twelve are artistically joined up. These beautiful and colossal mansions are stated to be used not only for gods and kings, but also by Brāhmanas, etc., ascetics, Buddhists, warriors, artists and courtesans. The layout, architectural members with dimensions, ornaments and other details are fully described.

In consideration of enormous cost and labour proper precautions are taken for the safety and security of such structures. Correct dimensions are ascertained by the test of six formulae which are introduced in conclusion. The auspicious moment and proper reason for such constructions are also referred to in this chapter in particular.

Chapter XXXVI deals with dimension and situation of houses in different quarters in the compound and courts of large edifices like those described in the preceding chapter. The central spot is generally reserved for a temple or public hall, round which are distributed dwelling houses and other buildings for domestic purposes. The concluding chapter XXXVII of this section refers to house-warming and describes the customary ceremonies in connection with first entry into the house.

Chapters XXXVIII and XXXIX specially deal with the location and measurement of the door which is an important member in all classes of houses inasmuch as on it depends the comfort and convenience as well as the health of dwellers. Similarly chapters XL, XLI, XLII deal exhaustively with royal palaces and incidentally with the characteristics of the kings who are classified under nine ranks in consideration of their palaces, thrones, crowns, courts and entourage, cars and chariots, etc. In a descending order they are called Calravartin, Mahārāja, (or adhirāja) Mahendra (or Narendra), Pūrṣpika, Paṭṭadhara, Maṇḍaleśa, Paṭṭa-bhāj, Prōhūraka and Astragrāhin. In the compound and outside as well as in different courts of palaces are described with detail the numerous auxiliary buildings including offices, royal residences, quarters for officials, priests, guests, gardens, parks, orchards, tanks, arenas, animals and birds, attendants, etc.

The remaining chapters (XLIII-L) on architecture excepting the one (XLVII) deal with articles of furniture and ornaments for the body of the gods, goddesses, kings, queens and ordinary men and women. Chap. XLVII refers to theatres built both as part of palaces and temples, as well as independent playhouse. The green room, theatre proper, and auditorium with distribution of seats are described.

Chapter XLIII opens with minute constructional details of cars and chariots, and refers to wheels and platforms, etc., and their component parts like navel, axle, axle-band, axle-bolt, lynch-pin, hole and others. With regard to forms or number of platforms and porches (bhadrā) they are divided into seven types, nabhasvad-bhadraka, prabhāñjana-bhadraka, nivāta-bhadraka, pavana-bhadraka, prāda-bhadraka, cāndraka-bhadraka and anila-bhadraka. There is a further geographical division in consideration of the style into five, Nāgara, Drāviḍa, Vesara, Āndhra and Kaliṅga.

Chapter XLIV describes and supplies constructional details of couches and seats for ordinary use. And Chapter XLV similarly describes the special seat called thrones which are distinguished into ten varieties and assigned to gods, goddesses, kings and queens of different ranks. Their main designs are indicated by their technical names, padmāsana, (lotus pattern) padma-kesara, padma-bhadrā, śrībhadrā, śrīviśālā, śrībandha, śrī-mukha bhadrāsana, padma-bandha and pādabandha.

Chapters XLVI and XLVIII describe two decorative and constructional devices specially for the thrones referred to in the preceding chapter. The former of these two chapters deals with arches which admit of various shapes, circular, triangular, crescent-shaped, and bow-shaped. When used for ornamental purposes only they are designated as patra-torana (foliated arch) puspa-torana (floral arch), ratna-torana (jewelled arch) and citra-torana or arches containing images, etc., of semi-divine beings and mythological figures. Some are supported by leographs which are placed on both sides of the pillars supporting the pillar. Chap. XLVIII supplies all constructional details of the Kalpa-vrkṣa (all producing tree) which is used as a special decoration for arches, pavilions, sheds, etc. The branches, etc., of the tree and figures of deities, semi-divine gods, and monkeys, etc., are placed in the intervals.

Chapter XLIX supplies a detailed description of the crowns for gods, goddesses, kings, and queens. They are classified into various types, jaṭā, mauli, kāṛita, karandā, śirastraka, karandā (or kuntala), keśabandha, dhamalla, alaka, cūḍā, mukuṣa and paṭṭa with three varieties of patra-paṭṭa, ratna-paṭṭa, and puspapatṭa. Particulars of all these together with the number of jewels and gems assigned to each are fully given to facilitate construction. The distribution of these among the divine and royal wearers is also referred to. At the outset is given a list of presents to be given to the architect and other artists. The chapter closes with an account of the ceremonies in connection with the royal coronation.

Chapter L describes numerous ornaments and articles of furniture. The former include ornaments for decoration of the head, ear, neck, chest, breast, buttock, navelzone, thighzone, leg, feet, toes, root and upper and lower arm, wrist, palms, and fingers, etc. Thirty items of bodily ornaments are described in detail. The articles of furniture include lamp-post, fan, mirror, basket, chest, box, swing, palanquin, balance, cages and nests for domestic birds and animals. In this connection a list of some fifteen birds and animals including alligator and tiger are mentioned. Constructional details including materials and measurements of each of the ornament and furniture are given in detail. Thus is closed the section on architecture proper.

Chapter LI is first of the 20 chapters devoted to sculpture. It opens with an account of the nine materials of which images are made, viz. gold, silver, copper, stone, wood, stucco, grit, glass and terracotta. All constructional details of making idols with such materials are supplied. Full descriptions of the Triad, Brahmā, Viṣṇu, and Śiva are given. They are measured in the largest type while their consorts in the middle type of daśatūla measures. In this measure the whole image is ten (daśa) times of its face. Particulars of this and other sculptural measures are elaborated latter. Crowns, thrones, pedestals, and bodily ornaments of these images are elaborately described.

Chapter LII deals with the Phalli of Śiva and Chap. LIII with the altars or pedestal thereof. Several varieties of both are described with details to facilitate their carving. Similar particulars are given in chapter LIV of the leading classes of goddesses like Sarasvatī, Sāvitrī, Lakṣmī, Mahī, Mana-unmādinī, and Durgā, and of semi-divine mothers comprising Vārāhī, Kaumārī, Cāmūḍī, Bhairavī, Māhendrī, Vaiṣṇavī, and Brahmānī. The characteristic attributes and poses, as well as the complexions, garments, ornaments and decorations, etc., of each of these images are supplied together with the system of their measurements.

Chapter LV on Jain images opens with an elaborate account of various systems of sculptural measurement. The six kinds of linear measurement include māna (height), pramāṇa (breadth), parimāṇa (girth or circumference), lambamāna (length along plumb-lines), māna (length of the surface of an image), unmāna (thickness or diameter), and upamāna (interspace between any two limbs). The primary measurement or ādīmāna is the comparative measurement of an image as compared with the breadth of its temple, height of the sanctum, height of the door, height of the chief worshipper, height of the riding animal or vehicle, height of the principal idol and the height of the base or pedestal or plinth, and as given in cubit, aṅgula and tūla system. The aṅgula measure admits of four varieties, of which the one called mānāṅgula measures  $\frac{3}{4}$  inch, berāṅgula is the measure taken by the finger-breadth of the main idol and matiaṅgula by the middle finger-breadth of the master or the chief worshipper. Dehāṅgula implies one of the equal parts into which the length of an image is divided as in the tūla system. There are as many as ten to twelve varieties of tūla system, distinguished by the number of times the total height of an image is of its own face. The right proportion and dimension are ascertained by the test of six āyūdi formulae.

The characteristic features of the Jain deities are elaborated together with their attendants, Nārada and other sages, Yakṣas Vidyādhara, Siddhas, Nāgendra, Lokapāla, and Jain saints or twentyfour Tīrthamkara. Similar particulars of Buddhist images including the Buddha and Bodhisattvas are given in Chapter LVI.

Chapter LVII describes the characteristic features, tāla measures and other constructional details including complexion, attributes, pose and attitude of the seven leading sages who comprise Agastya, Kāśyapa, Bhṛgu, Vasistha, Bhārgava, Viśvāmitra, and Bharadvāja. Similar details are given in chapter LVIII of the semidivine and semihuman beings, Yakṣas, Vidyādhara, Gandharvas, and Kinnaras. Chapter LIX describes similarly the human beings classified under four classes of devotees known as Sālokya, Sāmīpya, Sārūpya and Sāyujya.

Chapters LX, LXI, LXII and LXIII deal with similar sculptural details of animals and birds comprising the goose, the garuda bird, the bull and the lion. These are the traditional vehicles of gods and goddesses. The images of other animals, birds and fishes, etc., are incidentally referred to by way of illustrating the tāla measures of smaller dimensions. Elsewhere<sup>1</sup> it is summarised that fish is measured in one tāla system, birds in two tāla, Kinnaras in three tāla, bhūtas in four tāla, Gaṇas (Gaṇeśa) in five tāla, tigers in six tāla, Yakṣas in seven tāla, man in eight tāla, Dānava in nine tāla, superhuman beings and Buddhas in ten tāla, gods in eleven tāla, and Rākṣasas in twelve tāla.

Chapters LXIV, LXV, LXVI, LXVII, LXVIII deal with those highly technical details which have not been referred to in connection with the general description of images. Chapter LXIV reiterates the comparative measures of images by adding that the dimension of an attendant deity may be ascertained by a comparison with the phallus of Śiva, main Viṣṇu image, width of the sanctum, breadth of the main temple, height of the main door, flagstaff, basement, pillar, chief worshipper, or in cubit, aṅgula, and tāla measure. In this connection groups of eight, sixteen and thirty-two attendant deities who are housed in subsidiary shrines in the compound of a large Viṣṇu temple are mentioned. And the details of the ūgādi formulae which have been incidentally referred to before are elaborated here. Similarly the details of the large type of ten tāla system are elaborated in Chapter LXV and those of the middle type in Chapter LXVI. In the large type comparative measurement of 144 parts of the body of an image is given, while in the middle 92 items are mentioned. In previous chapters such items of the small type of ten tāla as well as of the other tāla have been supplied. In chapter LXVII the method of drawing as many as eleven plumb lines over the surface and through an image for purposes of measuring interspace, etc., is elucidated. This chapter also makes a special reference to the three poses, sthānaka (erect), āsana (sitting) and śayana recumbent; and to several poses (bhaṅgas), such as samabhaṅga (even flexion), ābhaṅga (slight flexion), tribhaṅga (three flexions) and atibhaṅga (excessive flexion). The āsana posture includes varieties like padmāsana, bhadrāsana, vajrāsana, śastikāsana, yogāsana, etc.

<sup>1</sup> See the writer's Encyclopædia of Architecture under Tāla Māna.

Chapter LXIX supplies a warning against defective constructions, and specifies certain penalties or misfortune which may follow the defects in foundations, walls, roofs, towers, spires, columns, staircases, and doors and other openings. Chapter LXX describes the chiselling of the eye of an image and the setting of precious stones in the different parts of the phallus of Śiva and other images.

This last chapter of the work closes with the reiteration that this science of architecture was originally described by Brahmā, Indra and all other gods, and that the Mānasāra has been composed on the basis of those authorities.

The methodical treatment, the scientific arrangement, and the completeness of the subject matters are obvious. The preliminary matters include all systems of architectural and sculptural measures, which incidentally justify the significance of its title, Mānasāra or Essence of Measurement, training and required qualifications of different classes of artists, selection of site, testing of soil, planning, designing, finding out cardinal points for orientation, and astronomical, meteorological and astrological calculations. The treatment of architectural objects comprises villages, towns, forts, etc., joinery, dimensions, foundations, pillars, storeys, all attached and detached buildings, gate houses, porches, balconies, verandahs, floors, roofs, compartments, halls, chambers, doors, windows, steps and staircases, courtyards, quadrangles, arches, screen works, and articles of furniture, crowns and other bodily ornaments, and sculptural objects include the idols of the Hindus, Buddhists, Jains, statues of great personages, and images of animals and birds.

In form the work is made of metrical verses to facilitate memorisation, but the language is faulty both as regards grammar and metre, not to speak of figures of speech. It naturally abounds in rare and technical words. There is clear evidence that the work was brought out for practical purposes by some practising śilpīn possessing large and skilful experience of actual work.

Owing to the deliberate concealment of the author's identity the exact dating of the treatise has become a matter of speculation. All possible evidences have been thoroughly discussed elsewhere.<sup>1</sup> Nothing more precise is available than the probable date, B. C. 25, of the treatise of the Roman architect, Vitruvius, with which the Mānasāra has been shown to be similar in many respects.<sup>2</sup> In 1927 the latest limit was fixed at 500 A. D. In the meantime no newer materials have been discovered except that the Mānasāra series comprising seven volumes are completed.<sup>3</sup> I am now inclined to bring the Mānasāra close to the Vitruvius's treatise and ascribe the indebtedness of the Arthaśāstra of Kautilya to the Mānasāra for architectural matters<sup>4</sup> and place the Mānasāra-Vastuśāstra before the Arthaśāstra.

<sup>1</sup> Writer's 'Indian Architecture' 1927, pp. 160-198. Hindu Architecture in India and Abroad, 1939, pp. 240-282.

<sup>2</sup> Ibid. pp. 134-159 and pp. 210-239.

<sup>3</sup> Vol. I — A Dictionary of Hindu Architecture (1927).
Vol. II — Indian Architecture according to Mānasāra Śilpasastra (1927).
Vol. III — Mānasāra-Sanskrit text with Critical Notes (1934).
Vol. IV — Architecture of Mānasāra-translation in English (1934).
Vol. V — Architecture of Mānasāra-Plates (1934).
Vol. VI — Hindu Architecture in India and Abroad (1942).
Vol. VII — An Encyclopaedia of Hindu Architecture (1942).
Cf. Prof. Keith : A History of Sanskrit Literature, 1928, p. 461.

LATER TREATISES

For civilized eastern people dwelling houses, sepulchres and temples being more important than even food, there has been an extraordinary popularity of architecture in India. This feeling has been expressed unmistakably in all classes and branches of our literature. Thus there was a mushroom growth of architectural treatises of various sizes and topics. A large number of manuscripts running to several hundreds have been reviewed elsewhere.<sup>1</sup> Only a selected few may be mentioned here in an alphabetical order.

Agastyasakalādhikāra, Āgaravīnoda, Āyatattva, Āyādi-lakṣaṇa, Āramādipratisthā-paddhati, Kāśyapīya-Kūpādi-jalasthāna-lakṣaṇa, Kautuka-lakṣaṇa, Kriyāsamgraha-pañcīkā, Kṣetrārṇava, Kṣetra-nirṇaya-vidhī, Gārgya-saṁhitā, Gṛha-nirūpaṇa, Saṁkṣepa-gṛha-nirmāṇa-vidhī, Gṛha-piṭhikā, Gṛha-vāstupradīpa, Gṛhārambha, Gopura-nirmāṇādi-lakṣaṇa, Grāma-nirṇaya, Ghaṭṭotsargaśucanika, Caṅkraśāstra, Citra-karma-śilpāśāstra, Citra-paṭa, Citra-lakṣaṇa, Citra-sūtra, Jayamādhava, Mānasollāsa, Jalārgala, Jñānaratna-kośa, Tacousāstra, Tārā-lakṣaṇa, Daśatala-nyagrodha, Parimāṇḍala, Buddha-pratimā-lakṣaṇa, Daśa-prākāra, Dikṣādhāna, Dirghavistāra-prākāra, Devatā-śilpa Devālaya-lakṣaṇa, Dvāra-lakṣaṇa-paṭala, Dhruvādi-śoḍaśa-geha, Nārada-saṁhitā, Nabha-śāstra, Pakṣi-manuṣyālaya-lakṣaṇa, Pañca-rātra-(pra) dipikā, Piṇḍa-prākāra, Piṭha-lakṣaṇa, Pratimā-dravyādi-vācana, Pratimā-māna-lakṣaṇa, Pratisthātattva, Pratisthā-tantra, Prāsāda-kalpa, Prāsāda-kīrtana, Prāsāda-dīpikā, Prāsāda-Maṇḍana-Vastuśāstra, Prāsāda-lakṣaṇa, Prāsādāṅkāra-lakṣaṇa, Bimba-māna, Buddha-pratimā-lakṣaṇa, Maṭha-pratisthā-tattva, Manuṣyālaya-candrikā, Manuṣyālaya-lakṣaṇa, Mantradīpikā, Mayamata, Mānakathana, Mānavayāstu-lakṣaṇa, Mānasollāsa, Mānasollāsa-vṛttānta-prakāśa, Mūrtidhyāna, Mūrti-lakṣaṇa, Mūla-stambha-nirṇaya, Ratna-dīpikā, Ratna-Mālā, Rāja-gṛha-nirmāṇa, Rājaballabhatīkā, Rāśiprakāśa, Rūpa-Maṇḍana, Lakṣaṇa-samuccaya, Laghu-śilpa-īyotiṣa, Laghu-śilpa-īyotiśāra, Balipīṭha-lakṣaṇa, Vāstucakra, Vāstu-tattva, Vāstu-nirṇaya, Vāstupuruṣa-lakṣaṇa, Vāstu-prakāśa, Vāstu-pradīpa, Vāstu-prabandha, Vāstu-mañjarī, Vāstu-maṇḍana, Vāstu-yoga-tattva, Vāstu-ratna-pradīpa, Vāstu-ratnāvalī, Vāstu-

<sup>1</sup> Writer's Dictionary of Hindu Architecture. Appendix I. pp. 479-804.

Rāja-Ballabha, Vāstu-lakṣaṇa, Vāstu-vicāra, Vāstu-vidyā, Vāstu-vidhī, Vāstu-śāstra, Vāstu-śāstra-Samarāṅgaṇa-sūtra-dhāra, Vāstu-śiromaṇi, Vāstu-samuccaya, Vāstu-saṁkhyā, Vāstu-saṁgraha, Vāstu-sarvasva, Vāstu-sāra, Vāstu-saraṇi, Vāstu-sāra-sarvasva-saṁgraha, Vimāna-lakṣaṇa, Viśvakarmamata, Viśvakarma-jāśna, Viśvakarma-purāṇa, Viśva-karmaprakāśa, Viśvakarma-saṁpradāya, Viśvakarmiya-śilpāśāstra, Viśva-vidyābharapa, Vedānta-sāra, Vaikhāṇasa, Vaikhāṇasaniyama, Śāstrajaladhī-ratna, Śilpakalā-dīpakā, Śilpa-grantha, Śilpa-dīpaka, Śilpa-nighaṇṭu, Śilpa-lekha, Śilpa-śāstra, Śilpa-śāstra-sāra-saṁgraha, Śilpa-sarvasva-saṁgraha, Śilpa-saṁgraha, Śilpa-sāra, Śilpārtha-śāstra, Śilpi-śāstra, Śatvedikā-saṁdhāna, Sakalādhikāra, Sanātkumāra-Vāstu-śāstra, Sarva-vihārya-yantra, Saṁgrahīromani, Sārasvatīya-śilpāśāstra, Sthala-śubhāśubhakathana, and Hastapramāṇa.

The titles of some of these works will indicate their scanty contents. Only a few manuscripts have been so far printed. No critical edition of these printed works has been yet attempted. No dates of these printed works have been even vaguely indicated. These do not admit of a proper valuation. But one thing is certain that they are very late texts and come long after the Mānasāra. The Mayamata-Śilpāśāstra<sup>1</sup> is easily the best known of these later treatises. It is attributed to one Gannamācārya. It is completed in 34 chapters. In respect of the titles of chapters, their sequence, contents and method of treatment the Mayamata runs exactly like the Mānasāra. In chapter 23 of the former chapters XXII-XXX of the latter are abridged. So also chapter 30 of the former is an abridgement of chapters XXXVIII and XXXIX of the latter. The sculptural matters which occupy some twenty chapters in the Mānasāra are abridged in four chapters 33-36 of the Mayamata. Chapters I-XXI, XLI, XLII, XLV to L of the Mānasāra have been omitted as matter of detail in the Mayamata. It is thus not merely a reduction of the Mānasāra but is simplified by the omission of the details also.<sup>2</sup>

The Śilparatna of Śrīkumāra has been published in two parts.<sup>3</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Ed. Gaṇapati Śāstry, Trivandrum Sanskrit Series, No. LXV, 1919.

<sup>2</sup> For further details see the writer's 'Hindu Architecture' 1927, pp. 92-95, 'Hindu Architecture in India and Abroad,' pp. 159-161.

<sup>3</sup> Ed. Part I, Shastri, Ibid. No. LXXV.

Part II, Sambasiva Shastri, Ibid. No. XCVIII, 1929.

The first contains 46 chapters of which the first 45 deal with architectural matters and the last one with painting. The second part contains 34 chapters, of which the first 30 deal with sculpture and the last four with architecture. Most of these 80 chapters are a literal abridgment of the Mānasāra. But the Śilparatna shows confused borrowing. The originals have been distorted. The arrangement of chapters lacks in method and reason. Śrikumāra appears to have stolen unscrupulously, and in order to conceal his indebtedness has vainly endeavoured by displacing the original order and by distributing the contents of one chapter of the Mānasāra under several headings in the Śilparatna.<sup>1</sup>

The next treatise, attributed to Kāśyapa, bears double titles. The first 68 chapters are named Maheśvara-upadiṣṭam-Kāśyapa-śilpam, and the last 18 are called Aṁśumad-bheda of Kāśyapa.<sup>2</sup> In this treatise architecture proper is treated in chapters 1-45 and 85-86. These forty seven chapters are similar to the first fifty chapters of the Mānasāra. The Aṁśumad-bheda deals with sculptural objects in thirty-nine chapters in place of twenty chapters of the Mānasāra, each of many epithets of Śiva mentioned in chapters LII and LIII a whole chapter is devoted Aṁśumadbheda. The Mānasāra must have largely influenced this work.<sup>3</sup>

The fragmentary treatise, Vāstuvidyū, has been published<sup>4</sup> without even its author's name. It completes itself in 16 chapters referring only to the preliminary matters and practically excluding all architectural and sculptural objects. Chapters II, III, IV, V of the Mānasāra have been summarised here in Chapters 1, 2. Similarly chapters 3, 4 are an abridgment of Chapters VII and VIII. The remaining chapters 5 to 16, excluding 8 deal with auxiliary matters like platform or pedestal, auspicious moment, measurement of pillars, sloping roof, screen work to prevent dust, doors, windows, entry into the house and the connected ceremonies. Chapter 8 only refers to houses. Another fragmentary publication, Manuśūlāya-caṭṭrikā is completed in 7 chapters,

<sup>1</sup> For further details see the writer's 'Hindu Architecture in India and Abroad' pp. 176-177.

<sup>2</sup> Ed. Krishna Sarma, Anandasrama Sanskrit Series, No. 95, 1926.

<sup>3</sup> For details see the writer's 'Hindu Architecture' 1927, pp. 92-95, 'Hindu Architecture in India and Abroad,' 1942, pp. 162-165.

<sup>4</sup> Ed. Gaṇapati Śāstry, Ibid, No. XXX, 1913.

<sup>5</sup> [Annala. B. O. R. I.]

2 of which do not bear any title. It professes to deal with only dwelling houses. In Chapter 1 it summarises the contents of Chapters III, IV, V of the Mānasāra. Chapter 2 refers to the cardinal points elaborated in Chapter VI of the Mānasāra. Chapters 3-6 are a summary of Chapters XI, XVIII, XIX of the Mānasāra and Chapter 7 condenses everything concerning dwelling houses, wells and tanks from several chapters of the Mānasāra. A pamphlet named Vāst.ratnāvali<sup>1</sup> is a still smaller text compiled in a haphazard manner from several published works and does not deal with any object in particular. The Pratimā-lakṣaṇa<sup>2</sup> is a similar compilation dealing with images and is completed in 143 verses. It very briefly refers to certain measures of the fourth, sixth, seventh, eighth and tenth tālas and to certain defects and repairs.

The Samarāṅgaṇa-sūtradhāra of king Bhojadeva has been published in two parts.<sup>3</sup> This is in a sense a historical work because the King Bhoja of Dhārā ruled from 1018 to 1060 in Malwa. Besides the title implies that the unnamed text was compiled by an architect called Samarāṅgaṇa. The work contains 83 chapters, of which the last 13 deal with architecture. The confused manner of the compilation may be exemplified by the title Aṅga-dūṣaṇa-vidhāna (Chapter LXIX of the Mānasāra) is translated as Doṣa-guṇa-nirūpaṇa. There is no logical sequence or order in the arrangement of the chapters. The contents of one chapter of the Mānasāra have been unnecessarily distributed in several chapters by Samarāṅgaṇa. The patron being a king and the primary object being the royal palaces, some twenty-one chapters (49-70) have been devoted to different matters connected with the royal residence. These matters more logically have been arranged in two or three chapters of the Mānasāra. Similar multiplication of chapters may be detected at the beginning, where different chapters on the origin of the world and on the arrival of the heavenly architects have been elaborated from the first four lines of the Mānasāra. The influence of the Mānasāra over this text also is clear beyond doubt.

<sup>1</sup> Ed. Jivanath, Radhakrishna Press, Benares, 1918.

<sup>2</sup> Ed. P. N. Bose, Greater India Series, No. 5, 1927.

<sup>3</sup> Ed. Ganapati Sāsiri, Gaskell Oriental Series, No. XXV, XXXU, 1924, 1925.

II. MAHĀBHĀRATA NOTES *

BY

VASUDEVA S. AGRAWALA

१ प्राकारवप्रकुण्डल

In the Virāṭa-parvan 10.1 (Critical Edition) occurs the following verse :

अथापरोऽदृश्यत रूपसंपदा
स्त्रीणामलंकारपरो बृहत्पुमान् ।
प्राकारवप्रे प्रतिमुच्य कुण्डले
दीर्घे च कम्बू परिहाटके शुभे ॥

Arjuna as Bṛhannadā appears in female disguise wearing ornaments which consisted of a pair of kuṇḍalas and a pair of beautiful golden bracelets. The phrase prākāra-vapra qualifying kuṇḍala appears to have presented much difficulty. Amongst the variant readings we find that the only Kāśmīrī manuscript written in Śāradā characters available for this parvan substitutes प्राकारवक्षः for प्राकारवप्रे, but it stands alone in this reading, which appears to be an emendation of the original knotty text. The redactor perhaps ingeniously thought that प्राकार and वप्र being synonyms, one of them was superfluous; and since प्राकार does lend itself as a suitable उपमान for a hero's ideal chest, the correction naturally suggested itself. The three Devanāgarī manuscripts (DI-3) got rid of the difficulty by changing the text to स्थित्वा च वप्रे, which conveys little sense in the present context. It should be mentioned, however, that the remaining nine Devanāgarī manuscripts collated for the Critical Edition faithfully adhere to the old text tradition by retaining प्राकारवप्रे, although its satisfactory explanation may not have been grasped. The South Indian recensions, evidently to obviate the difficulty of suitably explaining प्राकारवप्रे, changed it to प्रवाहचिह्ने, which is of poor value from the point of view of an original reading. The learned Editor of the Critical Edition of the Virāṭa-parvan must be congratulated for retaining प्राकारवये as the traditional text, although he does so with a wavy underline. This reading, besides respecting the overwhelming testimony of the manuscripts is by far the best and the happiest for illuminating the verse with an original beautiful meaning.

* Continued from A. B. O. R. I. Vol. XXI, pp. 280-284.

The term प्राकारवये as the qualifying epithet of an ear ornament was used in a technical sense as the name of a particular kind of kuṇḍala. This type of kuṇḍala is common in the ears of the male and the female figures at Bharhut and Sanchi and in other places where specimens of early Indian art are preserved. This ornament consists of a prominent square plaque seen in front of the ear, to which a projection with two spiral turns is attached at the back and worn in the earlobe. Its front portion is adorned with the design of a four-petalled flower. Clear examples of such ear ornaments can be seen in Cunningham's Bharhut, plate XXII showing the Yakṣas, Kubera and Suciloma and the Yakṣī Candā, and plate XXIII illustrating Sirimā Devatā, Calakokā Devatā and the Yakṣiṇī Sudaśanā, the last named figure showing the kuṇḍala and its arrangement in the ear quite distinctly. A pair of such kuṇḍalas is also shown separately inside a Kalpalatā meander<sup>1</sup> at Bharhut and is illustrated on plate XLVIII, fig. E. 8 of Cunningham's book. Cunningham has also reproduced an enlarged sketch of the same on plate XLIX, figs. 13, 14. A beautiful male head shown inside a full blown rosette illustrates the same type of ear ornament (Bharhut, plate XXIV, fig. 1).

These figures are dateable in the 2nd century B. C. A still older statue of a colossal Yakṣa from Parkham (Mathura Museum) also shows this feature. It is also noteworthy that this kind of ear ornament prākāra-varpa kuṇḍala is not met with in Indian art after the Śuṅga period. In the sculptures of the Kuṣāṇa period the kuṇḍalas generally assume the form of pendants;

<sup>1</sup> The motif of the Kalpalatā or Kalpavṛkṣa producing various ornaments ubhayaśas or bhūgaṇa-vikalpa is an ancient conception referred to in the Rāmāyaṇa (Kiṣkindhā, 43, 45), Mahāvārjja Jātaka (Vol. IV, p. 352), Meghadūta (II, 11). For other examples of Prākāra-sopra kuṇḍala issuing from Kalpalatā bands shown at Bharhut, see Plate XI-A-B, 3, XII-B, C, 6, XLII-C, E, 2, XLV-E, 3, XLVIII-E, 5 and E. 8 of Cunningham's Bharhut.

FIG. 1

FIG. 2

FIG. 3

Fig. 1 Kalpalatā meander producing a pair of Prākāravapra Kuṇḍalas Figs. 2-3 Sketches of Prākāravapra Kuṇḍalas from Cun. Bharhut Pl. XLIX.

FIG. 4

Uulakoka Devata
wearing Prakaravipra Kumbhala.

more or less cylindrical in shape. The fashions changed again during the Gupta period when we find in sculpture and painting ear-rings of heavy discular shape resembling a wheel, which Kālidāsa has referred to in the Kumārasambhava (IX. 23) as ūṣanikacakra (रथस्य कर्णावामि तन्मुखस्य ताटङ्गचक्रद्वितयं न्यधातः), with which Śiva adorned the ears of his beloved consort Pārvatī. Another kind of ear-rings in vogue in the Gupta period was the makara-kunḍala.

Literary descriptions are generally illustrated in the art specimens of each age, and if properly understood and correlated with the preserved examples of sculpture, painting and terra-cotta may prove valuable for providing chronological data. The epithet prākūra-vapra in relation to kunḍala implies a comparison between the abrupt height of the rampart or city-wall (prākūra) and the cubical front portion of the ear ornament as seen on the oldest statues in India. Some of the city-walls incidentally shown in sculpture possess a coping decorated with a band of four-petalled flowers exactly similar to that decorating the kunḍalas. This can be seen in the representation of the city of Benares at Amarāvati illustrated by Dr. Coomaraswamy in his Early Indian Architecture. I Cities and Citygates, Fig. 13.

In ancient architecture the prākūra and vapra go together. As stated by Dr. Coomaraswamy, "On the city side of the moat rises the wall (pākūra, Skt. prākūra), from a foundation or plinth (vapra)" [Ibid. p. 213]. In the same place he says that vapra and prākūra are sometimes treated as synonyms (Acharya, Dictionary of Hindu Architecture, 534), but in Kautilya's Arthaśāstra we have वपस्वोपरि प्राकुरम् i. e. the prākūra (wall) was raised on the vapra (plinth). Dr. Otto Stein has also observed that the texts and the respective descriptions in literature are not always strict in distinguishing the vapra and prākūra (Arthaśāstra and Śilpaśāstra, Archiv Orientalni, Vol. 7, p. 483.).

Some specialised investigation is needed to arrive at the exact significance of the two words in earlier and later literatures. But it appears that the distinction in their meaning was later on missed and the two began to be treated as synonyms. In the compound phrase prākūra-vapra, vapra seems to resemble the spiral attachment and prākūra the cubical block portion of the heavy kuṇḍalas familiar to us in the sculptures of the Maurya and Śuṅga periods.

It may be noted that the word parihāṭaka is used twice to qualify kambū or a pair of bracelets, which must have been made of gold ( Virāṭa, 10.1.5 ); and again twice to describe the kuṇḍalas worn by Arjuna ( Virāṭa, 15. 2 ; 18-19 ). The expression परिहाटके कुण्डले of the Mahābhārata reminds us of the graphic reference to such kuṇḍalas by Patañjali as खदिराङ्गारसवर्णे कुण्डले [ Mahābhāṣya ed. Kielhorn, Vol. I, p. 7 ] and by Manu as शुभे रौक्मे च कुण्डले ( IV. 36 ).

THE KINGS OF VJAYANAGAR

RV

A. N. KRISHNA AIYANGAR

1 The Dīṇḍīma Bhaṭṭas of Mullandram, popularly known as the Gaṇḍa Dīṇḍīma Bhaṭṭas must have settled in South India centuries before the empire of Vijayanagar came into existence. The prominence to which they rose during the days of the Vijayanagar emperors is something unique. The descendants of the family successively enjoyed the patronage of the Vijayanagar rulers, as the history of the times recorded in inscriptions and copper plates. In spite of the internal feuds and changing of the dynasties at the centre at Vijayanagar, the life of the poets seems to have gone on uninterrupted. Nor was the rancour of feuds carried into this field. An instance in point may be cited. One member of the Dīṇḍīma family wrote the Śāluvaśhyudaya<sup>1</sup> describing the life and achievements of Naraśiṅga Śāluva. A later member of the same family wrote the life and achievements of Acyutarāya, the brother and successor of Kṛṣṇa Deva Rāya of the Tuluva dynasty.<sup>2</sup> An ancestor of this family, one Arunagirinātha is said to have been the bosom friend of Praudha Devarāya II.<sup>3</sup>

<sup>1</sup> The Sālavāḥyaḥudaya is available in Manuscript in the Government Oriental Mus. Library, Madras under DC No. 11818 and 11819. Extracts from this have been published in the Sources of Vijayanagar History, S. Krishnaswami Aiyangar, 1919, pp. 30-3: 90-102.

* The Acyutarāyābhūgudayaṃ was written by one Rājanatha Dīpdīpa during the time of Acyutarāya. The first six cantos have been printed by the Vanī Vilāsa Press, Srīcangam. I am now editing Cantos 7-12 for the Adyar Library.

3. Vibhāṣarāṭṭhamaṅkikā :

Sa Praṇḍhadevaḥ Kavirāṣaṇaḥ ca
Sneḥāturaḥśvekaṁamaṇaprasāraḥ ;
Śarirabhedam ca samśikṣitāḥ
TulyāmhaṣaṣaḥśvalavāśvabhṛtAm ||

The manuscript is available in the Government Oriental Library, Madras. Professor Nilakanta Sastri was kind enough to get a transcript of the work made for me in 1935.

2 Such is the distinguished position of this family. But the evidence as furnished by the inscriptions of the period is not what one would desire it to be. Only two of them have been published<sup>1</sup> and one of the important records—a copper plate grant of Bukkarāya mentioned in the Mackenzie manuscripts, is available only in an index of the Inscriptions of Southern Districts.<sup>2</sup> Thanks to the efforts of Professor K. A. Nilakanta Sastri who has been kind enough to institute a search for the plate, it may become available. Our records will be complete only when this plate is found and full details are available.

3 According to the traditional account preserved in one of the Sanskrit works called Vibhūgaratnamālikā<sup>3</sup> the ancestors of the Dīpdimas migrated from the banks of the Ganges to the Cola country in the days of the Cola kings, and settled in a village granted to them by the then Cola king. The grant was a sarva-mānya and the village so granted was called Mañcagrāma or Talpagrāma or Rājanāthapura after the deity installed therein.<sup>4</sup> The Rāyas of Belur were their patrons and the account does not mention anything more about the Rāyas of Belur.

4 Coming to later times, the members of the family were granted the village of Attiyūr by Bukkarāya of Vijayanagar, under the guidance of the sage Vidyāranya.<sup>5</sup> In the same reign

<sup>1</sup> South Indian Inscriptions. Vol. VII, pp. 25-26.

<sup>2</sup> V. Rangachari. Inscriptions of the Madras Presidency, Vol. I, p. 96.

<sup>3</sup> The Vibhūgaratnamālikā bears, Triennial Catalogue of Sanskrit Manuscripts, Madras, B. No. 1738 (d)

<sup>4</sup> Vibhūgaratnamālikā:

Verse 15:

Tuṇḍīramanḍalamahāmaṇimanḍapasya
Talpāyamānavaratālpagīroṣṇa paścāt :

* * * * *

Colāścakāra rucīram prithumagrāhāram ||

Verse 17:

Sarvepi sarvairapi mānyastānyam
Svagrāmamāpuḥ kila sarvamānyam :

* * * * *

Verse 18:

Rājanāthapura tatra Rājanāthābhīdham Sivam :

<sup>5</sup> Ibid., Verse 45:

विद्यारण्यद्वारताद्वेषुषा विध्वयविश्रान्तिना
विष्णुवक्त्रशिवालयात्तत्तना श्रीवृक्षभूषणतत्ता ।

ten families of the Dīṇḍīmas migrated to Navagrāma which was originally established by a Cola king.<sup>1</sup>

5 The most important account mentioned by the Vibhāgaratnamālīkū is the grant of an ārāma or nandanavana near the same Navagrāma to Arupagirinātha, the greatest and most important member of the family, by Praudha Devarāya II of Vijayanagar.<sup>2</sup> The account, as given in the manuscript, is highly coloured. Arupagirinātha, the donee desired to share it with all his relations.<sup>3</sup> The village was therefore duly partitioned among the seventy families, then existing. The village came to be called Mūlāṇḍam, Praudhadevapuram Dīṇḍīmūlayam Trimāṇḍalam and Sārvabhaumapuram. It was Mūlāṇḍam because it was the abode of Mūlas or wise men; since Sārvabhauma Kavi Arupagirinātha was the donee who made the village it was Sārvabhaumapuram; as Praudhadeva granted it, it was Praudhadevapuram; and as the villagers of the three villages of Attīyūr, Puttūr, and Mettapādi lived in the new village, it was known as Trimāṇḍalam; an alternative explanation was offered that as the Brahmans of the village were connected with all the three lands of the Colas, Ceras and Pāṇḍyas the village was given the name of Trimāṇḍalam; because every member of the families which lived in the village had the general name of Dīṇḍīma it went by the name Dīṇḍīmūlaya or the abode of the Dīṇḍīmas.<sup>4</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Ibid., verse 50 :

चोलप्रतिष्ठिते ग्रामे नवग्रामसमीरिते ।
इत आक्रम्य वाचाभिः कर्णैः पशुपोषणैः ॥

<sup>2</sup> Ibid., verse 101 :

प्रौढदेवो नृपः प्रादात्प्रमदत्तनकाश्चपत्तिम् ।

<sup>3</sup> Ibid., vv, 133-4

अविमज्ज्येव भोज्याः स्युः इति सोम्या मतिर्हि नः ।
संपादयन्तु को वात्र समस्तीनो वयं समम् ।

<sup>4</sup> Ibid., vv, 116 to 120 :

प्रौढदेवो ददौ परमात् प्रौढदेवपुरं भवेत् ।
सार्वभौमः स्वयंकर्ता सार्वभौमपुरं मतः ॥
यत्र स्थितानां विदुषां सामान्यं द्विषिष्ठं यतः ।
द्विषिष्ठमालयप्रित्यस्य नाम प्रोक्तं तृतीयकम् ॥
चोलेषु चोरेषु च पाण्ड्यभूमौ त्रिमण्डलवृत्तिगुहां द्विजन्मनाम् ।
वासाय तेषामिह सप्तकल्प्यते त्रिमण्डलं तत्कल्पः प्रचक्षते ॥

( continued on the next page )

4 [ Annals, B. O. R. I. ]

6 Such in brief is the account given in the Vibhāgaratnamālikā. The late H. Krishna Sastri was shown a Vivekabhāga-patrikā by a priest of the Vanniya caste at Mullandram.<sup>1</sup> This is identical with the Vibhāgaratnamālikā mentioned above. The late Mr. T. A. Gopinatha Rao edited the work under the name of Vivekapatramālā in the Indian Antiquary, 1918.<sup>2</sup>

7 As a historical document, the Vibhāgaratnamālikā should be used with caution, if not with suspicion. It has recorded the traditional account of the migration of the Dīpīmas from North India and their settlement in South India, centuries after the actual occurrence. Naturally the colour of a legend is given to the work as also to the subject-matter. To cite an instance, Arupagirinātha, the hero of the story contained in the work, is said to have been born in Kali 4,400, or 1299 A. D.<sup>3</sup> This would make Arupagirinātha a contemporary of the Hoysala kings. But in the course of the narrative of the story, the village of Praudhadevapuram is granted by Praudhadevarāya II whose date is 1446 A. D. It requires no great reasoning to point out the impossibility of Arupagirinātha being the contemporary of both Viraballala and Praudhadevarāya. I hold, that while the events narrated in the life of Arupagirinātha may be historically true, the chronology given by the manuscript has to be tested. As there are other evidences which make Arupagirinātha a conte-

( continued from the previous page )

मूला इति हि विद्वांसः तेषामण्डं समाश्रयः ।

मूलाण्डमिति तन्नाम तस्माद्वक्ष्यन्ति वै बुधाः ॥

आयूरे पुत्रपुत्रि मेतपार्श्वे

सामाख्यस्यन्ति विपश्चितां ते

येषां च तेषामिह पाद्यतस्मात्

त्रिमण्डलं तेन भवेद्विद्वत् ॥

<sup>1</sup> A. R. E. 1913,

<sup>2</sup> pp 115 to 131.

<sup>3</sup> Vibhāgaratnamālikā, verses 41-42.

चतुस्सहस्रेषु चतुश्चतेषु गतेषु वर्षेषु कलेर्मुगम्य ।

* * *

शुभे मूर्द्धने सति जातमात्रे सपुत्रके शोणघराभिधाने

mporary of Devarāya<sup>1</sup> I hold, that while what has been stated as the main events of the life of Aruṇagīrinātha may be historically true, the former portions can not be regarded as such from the point of view of chronology. The grant of Attiyūr by Bukka is mentioned and such a grant was found and copied by Colonel Mackenzie. Even there the manuscript may prove true if the text becomes available. The Kali date given for the birth of Aruṇagīrinātha has erred by a century. If it is put as Kali 4500 and the verse read as Catussahasreṣu Śāteṣu Pañcasu instead of Catussahasreṣu Catuśśāteṣu the entire chronological difficulties disappear, and the story fits in with historical facts.<sup>2</sup>

8 A few inscriptions relating to the family are now taken up. In the temple of Svayambhūnātheśvara of Mullāṇḍram—and as has been mentioned earlier, this village was established only by Aruṇagīrinātha, the hero of the chronicle there is an inscription that the Mahājanas of Praudhadevarāyapuram including the poet Dīṇḍima Kavi assigned house-sites to certain masons in the kanmālatteru.<sup>3</sup> The reference to Dīṇḍima Kavi is probably to Aruṇagīrinātha Dīṇḍima Kavi Sārvabhauma the hero of the chronicle. The record could have come only after the foundation of the village of Mullāṇḍram, which was founded only in the reign of Devarāya II.

9 Another inscription dated Śaka 1472 or A. D. 1550 records the gift of land by a Brāhmaṇa lady to the shrine of Appāmalainātha built by her, in the same temple of Svayambhūnātheśvara for the merit of herself and her husband Kumāra Dīṇḍimar Appāmalaināthar.<sup>4</sup> This Kumāra Dīṇḍima is perhaps the author of the Virakhadraṇḍīyaya and the great-grandson of the Dīṇḍima Kavi Sārvabhauma. I suggest the identification on the ground that from 1446 to 1550 we can easily give five generations without unduly straining the chronological principles. Very probably the Kumāra Dīṇḍima mentioned was not alive at the time when the gift was made by his wife. It is not also improbable that

<sup>1</sup> See my paper on "Some poets of the Dīṇḍima family", Kane Commemoration Volume, pp. 1-6.

<sup>2</sup> See, infra, note 15.

<sup>3</sup> A. R. E., 1912, para 72; 396 of 1911.

<sup>4</sup> A. R. E., 397 of 1911. I have subsequently edited and published the two inscriptions 396 and 397 of 1911 in the Adyar Library Bulletin 1941, Vol. V, pp. 59-68.

Kumāra Diṇḍimar Anṇāmalaināthar was the father of the author of the Acyutarāyābhyaṇḍaya a Rājanātha son of an Aruṇagirinātha of the Diṇḍima family.<sup>1</sup> The Acyutarāyābhyaṇḍaya dealing with the exploits of Acyutarāya of Vijayanagar must have been composed about 1540, at the latest.

10 A third inscription noted by Colonel Mackenzie is the grant of a house-site by one Diṇḍima Kavi in the cyclic year Krodhana, to one Rājagocarānum vanda deva.<sup>2</sup> The first grant, mentioned in para 8, was granted in the cyclic year Raudri. This was granted six years after the first. This also evidently refers to the same Diṇḍima Kavi—the Diṇḍima Kavisār-vabhauma.

A fourth inscription is a record of the time King Kampapa Uḍaiyar,<sup>3</sup> son of Vira Bukkaṇṇa Uḍaiyar, in A. D. 1370 in the Vidyānāthesvara temple of Puttūr ( Navagrāma established by a Cola king ) that one Somanātha Jiyar was appointed manager of the local matha and temple. The Vibhāgaratnamālikā mentions the village of Puttūr under the name of Navagrāma.<sup>4</sup> Aruṇagirinātha ran away from his maternal uncle's house, unable to bear the tyranny of his uncle's wife and took refuge in the temple of Vidyānāthesvara. It was there that the god manifested himself and blessed him, by which blessing he became the master of all sciences and arts.<sup>5</sup> To this temple Somanātha Jiyar was appointed <sup>1</sup> I am making this identification on probable grounds. The date assigned to Aruṇagirinātha and his four descendants, by me, is 1380 to 1500 A. D., and as the author of the Acyutarāyābhyaṇḍaya is a Rājanātha and son of an Aruṇagirinātha, the probabilities of the author of the Acyutarāyābhyaṇḍaya being the son of Kumāra Diṇḍima whose wife makes a gift in 1550 in the time of Sadāśivarāya—are greater and further investigation will stabilise the position.

<sup>2</sup> V. Rangachari, Inscriptions of the Madras Presidency, Vol. I, p. 56; also the Adyar Library Bulletin Vol. V, pp. 64-65, para 9.

<sup>3</sup> South Indian Inscriptions, Vol. VII, pp. 25-6.

<sup>4</sup> Vibhāgaratnamālikā, verse 50.

चोलप्रतिष्ठिते ग्रामे नवग्रामसमीरिते ।

<sup>5</sup> Ibid., vv., 60-62.

पदच्छया नवग्रामग्रामस्थापीशमालयम् ।

विद्यापतीशमनुले सुत आलस्य बाधितः ॥

अर्धेन्द्रचूडः शरदिन्दुसुन्दरः स्फुरन्मर्मोर्ध्वकर्णशङ्कणः ।

बलैर्मुनिन्द्रैश्च चतुर्भिरन्वितः बुबोध मां कथिदपेक्षपूरुहः ॥

सुतस्य मे संज्ञमलोलबुद्धेः वचनस्य देशे विवृते स्वभावात् ।

ताम्बूलसारं निजवचनसंस्थं मुनीष कारुण्यसमुद्र एव ॥

trustee not only for himself but the post was to be hereditary in the family. The Vibhāgaratnamālikā mentions a few persons of the name, Somanātha. At the present stage, it is not possible which Somanātha is mentioned in this inscription. The identification will be made later when fuller details are available.

Yet another inscription mentioned in a manuscript is, that a deed of gift to Kumāra Dīṇḍīma Arupagirinātha, the author of the Virabhadraśijaya is found engraved in the fourth enclosure of god Ekāmreśvara temple.<sup>1</sup> There is no further information. This is another document which has to be searched, and if found will throw more light on the problem which is under investigation.

One should not omit mentioning that the members of Dīṇḍīma family enjoyed a peculiar position of advantage and royal favour. It was they who composed many of the plates and inscriptions in Sanskrit, for the Vijayanagar kings. A table has been formulated in the Indian Antiquary (1918).<sup>2</sup> The close relations of the Dīṇḍīmas with the royal house was not affected by changes of dynasties as can be seen from that table. Further investigation into this subject is taken for an independent paper.

---

<sup>1</sup> Triennial Catalogue of Sanskrit Manuscripts, Madras, Vol. III, X, part 1 A, (Sanskrit) p. 2834.

<sup>2</sup> Indian Antiquary, 1918, pp. 72-83.

GOVINDARĀJA

BY

K. V. RANGASWAMI AIYANGAR

The name of Govindarāja stands high among those of South Indian commentators. To Śrivaishnavas he is an authoritative exponent of the Rāmāyaṇa, who has recorded in his bhāṣya the traditional interpretation of the ādi-kāvya viewed as a Vaiṣṇava epic illustrating the qualities of Śrī Nārāyaṇa, the Supreme Being, and containing sanctions of the main tenets of Śrivaishnavism. The value attached to the Rāmāyaṇa by Śrivaishnavas is illustrated by the tradition that Rāmānuja (1017-1137) found it necessary, as one of the pre-requisites of his training for the apostolate, to gather from his uncle Śrīśailapūrṇa (in Tamil, Periya-Tirumalai-Nambī) the traditional interpretation of the Rāmāyaṇa preserved by the Śrivaishnava ācāryas, and to hear his authentic expositions no less than eighteen times.<sup>1</sup> Śrīśailapūrṇa was one of the gifted expounders of the poem, and in the moments of leisure snatched from his services (kainkaryas) to Śrī Venkateśa on the holy hill of Tirumalai ('Upper Tirupati'), he used to expound the Rāmāyaṇa both to disciples, like his great nephew, and to the crowds of pilgrims that used to gather there for worship throughout the year. His eminence as one of the divinely appointed teachers of his nephew was commemorated by the consecration of a shrine in his honour in the Govindarāja temple at Tirupati, near the shrine of his pupil.

The Rāmāyaṇa was one of the 'springs undefiled' from which the early Vaiṣṇava saints or Ālvārs had drawn both their poetic and devotional inspiration. The relations between Rāma and Sītā were held to reflect the eternal union of Nārāyaṇa and Śrī. The Śrivaishnavas hold that the intervention of Śrī was the source

---

<sup>1</sup> See the following verse in the stanzas prefixed by Govindarāja to his bhāṣya.

सुखदुःखमहादशकृत एव श्रीशैलपूर्णवतिशेखरायम् ।

भुम्बाय रामायणसंनिदायं वदत्ये तमाचार्यपरंपरात् ॥

Yaśīśekhara is Rāmānuja. Govindarāja frequently refers to these interpretations and those of the Tamil Ālvārs as those of ācāryas.

of Divine Grace. The poem was pre-eminently a prapatti-sūtra. The offer by Rāma of asylum, protection and perennial love to Vibhīṣaṇa forms the central theme in all discourses illustrating the Śrīvaiṣṇava doctrine of śaraṇāgati.<sup>1</sup> The boundless grace of the Supreme Being is reflected in the memorable declaration of Rāma to Sugrīva (Yuddhakāṇḍa, xviii, vv. 33-34) that his grace was open to all suppliants—even to Rāvāṇa if he sought it.<sup>2</sup> The Śrīvaiṣṇava theory of 'salvation by grace' is based as much on the Rāmāyaṇa as on equally explicit declarations in the Bhagavadgītā.<sup>3</sup> It emphasised the old view that the poem was not merely the history of Rāma but equally the noble story of Sītā.<sup>4</sup> Śrīvaiṣṇava writers also turned to the epic for incidents and sentiments to embellish their poetical and devotional outpourings.<sup>5</sup>

It is remarkable that in view of its cardinal importance to their doctrine, few attempts should have been made to preserve in authoritative commentaries the traditional interpretations of Rāmāyaṇa, and that their preservation should have been left almost entirely to oral transmission from teacher to pupil. It is inconceivable that, if any such commentaries embodying the early Śai Vaiṣṇava interpretations of the epic had existed, they would not have been at least cited by name by Govindarāja. His allusion to his obligations is generally to 'previous preceptors,' to a certain Tāṭparyā-ratnāvalī and to the teachings of his "own" guru Śatakoṭa.<sup>6</sup> His citations of the views of pūrvecāryaḥ must be

<sup>1</sup> See Rāmānuja's Śaraṇāgati-gadya, and Vedānta Deśika's Abhaya-pradīpā-nasāra, passim.

<sup>2</sup> सरुदेव प्रपन्नाय तवास्मीति च याचते ।
अभयं सर्वभूतेभ्यो ददाम्येतद्भयं मम ॥
आनयेनै हरिक्षेपं दत्तमस्यामये मया ।
विभीषणो वा सुग्रीवो यदि वा रावणः स्वयम् ॥

<sup>3</sup> Cf. such verses as:
कस्मिन्नेव प्रतिजानीहि न मे भक्तः प्रकथयति ॥
सर्वधर्मान् परित्यज्य मामेकं शरणं व्रज ।
अहं त्वा सर्वपापेभ्यो मोक्षयिष्यामि मा शुचः ॥

<sup>4</sup> Cf. the comment of Ātreya Akhila on Bhaktakāṇḍa iv, 7:
'पदग्रन्थस्य लक्ष्मीप्रधान्यज्ञापनार्थः तेन सतिपाथ्यरितमिति सुष्टुक्तम्' ।

<sup>5</sup> Cf. Vedāntadeśika's Pādukūṭi-sahasraṃ passim.

<sup>6</sup> He refers to his teacher thus : अस्मद्विरुचरणाः

taken to be to works which dealt either incidentally with the interpretation of stray passages of the poem, or to a treatise-like the Maṇipravāla work<sup>1</sup> of Kṛṣṇasūri or Pariya-Āccān-pillai (who lived before Vedānta Deśika, A. D. 1268-1369) which has been the source of the Sanskrit (anonymous) Tanśilokī by Āṭerya Ahobila.<sup>2</sup> A possible reason for earlier Śrīvaiṣṇava writers not embodying in a formal bhāṣya the orthodox interpretation may lie in the view that the poem dealt with esoteric (rahasya) matters and as such was fitter for oral exposition to disciples than for commentaries which every one might read.

Govindarāja's bhāṣya has had a vogue which is not confined to readers of his own communion. His erudition, critical power, enabling to detect interpolations or wrong readings and uncereemoniously reject them (as he has done with many chapters in the Uttarakūṇḍa), and mastery of previous commentaries have made him the Rāmāyaṇa commentator par excellence in South India. The accident of his bhāṣya being available only in manuscripts written in South Indian scripts prevented its access to a wider circle of readers till recently.<sup>3</sup>

A still more curious circumstance is the scantiness of even traditions regarding his date, place of nativity, sectarian affiliations, and literary activity even in the area in which his commentary has easily displaced other commentaries by its intrinsic merit. The conflict of tradition about him is no less curious. Well-known exponents of the Rāmāyaṇa, who base their expositions mainly on Govindarāja's work, ascribe to him dates ranging from the 17th century to the twelfth. He has been generally regarded as prior to Maheśvara Tīrtha whose briefer comments occur bodily in many places in Govindarāja's work, making it look as if Maheśvara merely summarised the larger work. This is incorrect as Govindarāja explicitly names Maheśvara Tīrtha and criticises his views, when commenting on Ayodhyākāvya, ci, sl. 1<sup>1</sup>. Abobila of the Ātreya-gotra, whose Tanīśloki has now been printed along with the commentaries of Govindarāja, Maheśvara Tirtha and others in the variorum edition of the Venkateshvar Press, is obviously later than Govindarāja, whose views he invariably summarises. He declares himself to be a disciple of Parāṅkuṣamuni and to have merely translated and summarised the earlier Maṇipravāla Tanīśloki of Kṛṣṇasūri.<sup>2</sup> The pati whose disciple he claims to be is apparently the sixth pontiff in the succession of the Śrīvaiṣṇava Maṭha of Ahobilam.<sup>3</sup> The traditional date of his pontificate in the history of the Maṭha is 1499-1513 A. D.<sup>4</sup> Govindarāja has therefore to be assigned a date before Abobila. Maheśvara Tirtha is definitely later than the lexica of the 11th century like the Vaijayanṭi of Yādayaprakāśa, which he quotes.

<sup>1</sup> Kṛṣṇasūri was a Coliya Paraśikhā Vaiṣṇava. Maṇipravāla is a literary form using a mixture of Tamil and Sanskrit.

<sup>2</sup> Printed in the Venkateshwar Press ed. of 1935, as Tanśilokī.

<sup>3</sup> Edited with extracts from other commentaries by T. R. Kṛṣṇācārya and T. R. Vyāsaācārya, 1911-13, Kumbakonam and Bombay. This seems to be the first edition of the entire bhāṣya in Nāgarī. An edition in Telugu script was published in 1856, and another in Tamil-Grantha Script in 1862, with Maheśvara Tīrtha's commentary (ed. Sarasvatī Tiruveṅkaṭācārya).

In determining the date of Govindarāja, the absence of other external evidence makes it necessary to sift his references, in order to fix his upper limit. Incidentally we shall obtain an idea of the range of his learning and the literature current in South India in his time. A scrutiny of his bhāṣya shows his citation of the following works and writers.

Epics and Purāṇas: The Mahābhārata, Hariṣaṇḍa, Viṣṇu-purāṇa (frequently cited anonymously) the Mātsya, Brāhma, Brahmāṇḍa, Nārasiṃha, Brahmavaivarta and Nāradya Purāṇas and the Śrī Bhāgavata.

<sup>1</sup> अत्र महेश्वरतीर्थेन संगर्षोर्विषयेऽपरीत्यमनालोच्य स्वदृष्टकोशमात्रमामाष्येन 'तं तु रामः समाज्ञाय' इत्यादिकं सर्गमेवैकोत्तरशततमं मन्वानेन तत्सर्गव्याख्यानान्ते तु द्वयर्थ-विरोधमालोच्यैवं आक्षेपपरिहारायुक्तौ ॥

<sup>2</sup> He begins his commentary with this invocation:

भक्तप्रतिष्ठा नीलाद्रौ कलिता येन सुरिणा ।

सर्वतन्त्रस्वतन्त्रं ते पराङ्मुनिं मजे' ॥

द्रुमिडोपनिषद्वाक्याकारे रामायणस्य ये श्लोकाः ।

व्याख्याता द्रुमिडगिरा तानथ विवृणोमि भक्त्या देव्या ॥

रामायणस्य श्लोकानां व्याख्यां द्रुमिडवाङ्मयीम् ।

करोति देवचाम्प्रामादेवाहोचिताहुयः ॥

<sup>3</sup> Vide the Tamil Alaṅkāraṅgarakāśa Puṣpamālā (1941), Vol. 4, p. 41.

<sup>4</sup> The following works of Parāṅkuṣamuni are mentioned: Siddhānta-maṇidīpa, Prapattiprayoga, Puṣpakaṇḍa-dīpikā, and Nṛsiṃha-stava. He is said to have disappeared in the cave of Ahobilam.

5 [ Annals, B. O. B. I. ]

Classical Literature : Kālidāsa (frequently cited, both by name and anonymously) Māgha and the Harṣacarita.

Lexica and Lexicographers : Amarasimha, Trikūṇḍakeśa of Puruṣottama (c. 800 A. D.), Halāyudha's Abhidhānavatānamālā (c. 950), Śālvata (c. 700), Vaijayanti of Yādavprakāśa (c. 1050) Viśva, Bāṇa, Bhāskara, Bhāguri, (who is alluded to by Halāyudha), Sajjana, Śabdaratnākara, Nighaṇṭu, Liṅgāmūlāsana, ' Paṭnamālā (either Halāyudha's work, or the lexicon of the name by Irugappa, the general of Harihara of Vijayanagar (c. 1360), Darpaṇa, Śabdārṇava, and Utpalanālā.

It is noteworthy that Keśavasvāmin is not cited.

Grammar and Grammarians : Besides Pāṇini, the Mahābhāṣya the Nirukta, the Kāśikā (c. 600) the Gaṇapāṭha, the Śikṣakāra, Bhaṭṭi, the Vākyapadīya, and Kātyāyana, he cites the Darḥaḥa-ṇṭi of Śaraṇadeva (c. 1172), an anonymous Śabdabhedaprakāśikā, and a Vṛttaratnākara. If the last is the well-known work of Kedārabhaṭṭa, who is quoted by Mallinātha, it is usually held to be anterior to the 14th century. Vararuci is cited both among lexicographers and authorities on Sāmudrika.

Alaṅkāra, Nāṭya and Music : Bhārata and Śāṇḍilya are cited for dancing and music. Daṇḍin, Bhāmaha (7th century), Vāmana and Udbhaṭa (end of the 8th century), Rudraṭa (9th century), Bhoja (c. 1050), the Kāvyaṇṭakāśa of Mammaṭa and the Alaṅkārasarvasva of Ruṣyaka (both c. 1100), an anonymous work named Saṅgraha, the Sāhitya-cintāmaṇi and the Sāhitya-cūḍāmaṇi and the Camatkāra-candrikā. Saṅgraha is probably only Udbhaṭa's Kāvyaḥalaṅkāra-Saṅgraha.

Dharmaśāstra : Besides Manu and Yājñavalkya, the smṛtis of Vyāsa, Aṅgīras and Nārada are cited by name, and a well-known verse of Bṛhaspati is cited anonymously, while in another context he is named also. Viṣṇuśeṣvara (c. 1130) and Hemādri's digest (Dharmasamuccaya), c. 1260 are also named or cited.

Miscellaneous : The medical writer Vāgbhaṭa is cited. As there are two of the names belonging to the 7th and 9th centuries, the later may be accepted for purposes of determining a date.

Kāmandaka's Niśūra is quoted extensively and there is neither citation nor knowledge of the Kauṭīliya Arthaśāstra. In culinary arts a Sūdasūtra and a Pradīpa are cited. A Bheṣajakalpa is cited. The Ratirahasya (anterior to 1200) is quoted by name. Sāmudrikaśāstra, a work named Jagadvallabhā and a work of Nandī on the same subject are quoted, and both the last appear Tāntrika works.

Jyotiṣa: Varāhamihira among the older writers, and Daiyajñavilāsa among recent works are often cited. Garga<sup>1</sup> is alluded to as well as a Horāpradīpa.

Architecture: An anonymous Vāstusūtra is quoted several times.

Śrīvaiṣṇava Literature: One would naturally expect the literature of his own sect to be liberally laid under contribution by Govindarāja, and it is so. He alludes to the interpretations of the Tamil saints or Ālvāra as those of Pūrācārya without indicating more exactly the source of the citations. To Śrīvaiṣṇavas of his day, who were steeped in the literature of the Tamil Prabandham, the allusions must have been readily intelligible. Consciously or unconsciously, Govindarāja appears to have assumed that his readers would be equally familiar with the literature of his own sect. This is the obvious reason for his numerous unspecified quotations from the Stotratatva of Yāmunācārya (otherwise known as Ālavandār, c. 1025 A. D.), the Guṇaratnakosa, a famous hymn on Lakṣmī by Parāśara Bhaṭṭa, the son of Śrīvatsāṅkamīśra (otherwise known as Kūrattālvān), the Sphkatopasūryodaya and other works of the famous saint, scholar and poet, Vedānta Deśika (1268-1369), who is referred to frequently as "Ācāryāḥ" and once<sup>2</sup> as 'Nigamāntāryāḥ, a title used only by his followers. The Kāmāṇḍoḥ of Parāśara Bhaṭṭa's grand-nephew Vedavyāsa Bhaṭṭa is cited anonymously. Govindayati (known by his Tamil name of Embār), the cousin of Rāmānuja, is named more than once but the reference may be to Yādavaprakāśa who took the name when he became a Saṅkayāsini. The many references to Bhaṭṭācāryāḥ are apparently to Parāśara Bhaṭṭa.<sup>3</sup> Rāmānuja is himself often referred to by his title, Bhāṣyakūrāṇ, and his views are embodied in numerous statements of doctrine, almost in his own words. The Pāñcarātra, one of the basic authorities of the Śrīvaiṣṇavas, is relied on throughout, and citations from its vast literature are frequent. One Pāñcarātra work, the Sanatkumāra saṁhitā, is cited by name. Where the more important Upaniṣads or the Brahmasūtrabhāṣya is alluded to or cited, the source is not specified, but a minor Upaniṣad like the Rāmopaniṣad is always named, when quoted.

<sup>1</sup> See the commentary on Bṛahmaṇḍa, IV, 30 and LX, 21, and Sundarakūṇḍa, XXVII, 63.

<sup>2</sup> Embār (Govindayati) died about 1130, some years before the death of Rāmānuja. Parāśara Bhaṭṭa (1062-1090) wrote a Vijñānādvaita commentary on Viṣṇu-sahasranāma (ed. Venkateswar Press, Bombay). Bhaṭṭa is held in veneration by both schools of Śrīvaiṣṇavas. The reference Bhaṭṭācārya is in the comment on Puṇḍarikūṇḍa, XXI, 5.

The chronological drift of the evidence furnished by Govindarāja's quotations and references may now be analysed. Among the Śrīvaiṣṇava Ācāryas and writers, the latest mentioned or drawn upon is Vedānta Deśika, whose long life ended in 1369. Yāmunaācārya was Rāmānuja's ācārya, Śrīvatsāṅkamisra his disciple though older in age, and Yādavaprakāśa (author of the Vaijayanī) one of his earlier teachers. Govindayati was his cousin and Parāśara Bhaṭṭa, the most gifted of his favourite disciples died young (1090 A. D.) in the life-time of the great teacher. No others of the sect, belonging to the thirteenth or the fourteenth century, like Lokācārya, born 1264, the elder contemporary and admirer of Vedānta Deśika whom the followers of the Tēngalai or Southern School of Śrīvaiṣṇavas place at the head of their guru-paramparā, when they wish to mark the point of their cleavage from the Vaḍagalai or Northern School, are cited by name, though their writings must obviously have been familiar to Govindarāja. The Mañipravāla Tamiḥloḍi of Periya-Āccāṇ-Pillai is implicit in many of the discussions in Govindarāja's commentary. Govindarāja has the irritating habit of marshalling views opposed to his own without naming the different exponents. Recent editors, like those of the Kumbakonam edition of the epic, have endeavoured to supply the omitted names. But such identifications are open to the criticism that later writers might have repeated verbatim the views of earlier writers, and that accordingly identification of authorship by views solely is not reliable.<sup>1</sup>

Three works which are quoted frequently by Govindarāja help to a clearer determination of his upper limit. Vedānta Deśika's long life extends over two generations. Hemādri was a minister during the boyhood of Vedānta Deśika. The Sāhitya-cintāmaṇi (identified with the Sāhitya-cūḍāmaṇi, which is also quoted)<sup>1</sup> or Cintāmaṇi, is a well-known work on Alaṅkāra ascribed to Vema-bhūpāla, king of Koṇḍavīdu, otherwise known as Vira-nārāyaṇa or Pedda Komaṇi Vema. He was a great patron of learning and the patron of Vāmana Bhaṭṭa. Bāṇa, who is now usually regarded as the author of the Pārvalīpariṇaya, formerly ascribed to his greater namesake.<sup>2</sup> Vema ruled from 1403 to 1420. A second Alaṅkāra work cited by Govindarāja, viz. Camatkāra-candrikā<sup>3</sup> is sometimes ascribed to Śārvajāṇa Śiṅga the powerful king of Rājācala (Racakonda), who forestalled the fame (as author and patron of letters) of Vema-bhūpāla. Śiṅga is the author of an Alaṅkāra work, named Rasāraṇasadhākara.<sup>4</sup> The real author of both is Viśveśvara. Śiṅga flourished about 1330 A. D. The third work is on Jyotiṣa, and is named Daiyajñanīlāsa. Two works of this name are available in the Oriental Manuscripts Library at Madras, and both are by the same author, Lolla Lakṣmaṇārya. The larger work is in 108 *ullāsa*s and deals with astronomy and astrology, while the shorter (which may have been intended as a supplement to the larger work) deals with the making of calendars.<sup>5</sup> Lakṣmaṇārya is sometimes confound-

<sup>1</sup> Periya-Āccāṇ-Pillai (Kṛṣṇa Sūri) was born in 1226. He was a master of the Mañipravāla style and wrote in it commentaries on the Gadya-traya of Rāmānuja and other works on Vaiṣṇava texts.

<sup>1</sup> Sāhitya-cintāmaṇi is identified with Sāhitya-cūḍāmaṇi by the Madras Descriptive Catalogue XXII, 8793.

<sup>2</sup> On Vema-bhūpāla (1403-1420) and his family see V. Prabhākara Śāstri's Syāghāranaiyadhama, p. 45 and Epig, Ind III, 60 and 268. His life is narrated by Vāmana in Vira-nārāyaṇacarita, or Vema-bhūpālacarita, which has been printed at Śrīraṅgam.

<sup>3-4</sup> There are two Śiṅga-bhūpālas, grandfather and grandson. The former was known as Sarvajña, and Viśveśvara was his court poet and the real author of Camatkāra-candrikā, in which Śiṅga I is eulogised. Śārvajāṇa Śiṅga's date is about 1330. See S. K. De, History of Sanskrit Poetics 1923, I, 242 and the introduction to Rasāraṇa-Sadhākara in the Trivandram Sanskrit Series. Dr. M. Krishnamachariar, Classical Sanskrit Literature, 1937, para 879, mixes up the two Śiṅgas.

<sup>5</sup> D. C. XXIV, 9663. Lolla Lakṣmaṇārya belonged to Śrīvatsagoṭra, whereas Lolla Lakṣmīdhara (D. C. XIX, p. 7395) belonged to Hārītogoṭra, as stated in the colophon to his commentary on Samudāya-lāhīri (Tanjore Ms. No. 30664). They were not even of the same family. The mistake was ed with Lolla Lakṣmidhara (1465-1530),<sup>1</sup> the courtier of Virarudra Gajapati of Orissa and the real author of the legal digest Sarasvatīvilāsa. Lakṣmanārya must have been very much earlier, and not even a member of Lakṣmidhara's family, as the latter does not mention him among his ancestors in the colophon to his commentary on the Saundaryalahiri.<sup>2</sup> He probably flourished at the beginning of the 15th century. These are the latest writers, whose works were utilised by Govindarāja.

It is noteworthy that in the many interpretations of the Veda in his commentary Govindarāja relies on Bhaṭṭa Bhāskara the predecessor of Sāyana and not on Sāyana (c. 1400) to whose famous commentaries there is not a single reference.

The extreme limits of Govindarāja's date would accordingly be those of Ahobila Ātreya (c. 1500) and Vemabhūpāla (c. 1400). The ascription of the Daivajñāvilāsa, which Govindarāja has cited by name to Lolla Lakṣmidhara, the courtier first of the Gajapati ruler of Orissa and later of Kṛṣṇadeva Rāya of Vijayanagara (1509-1530) might, if justified, bring down the date of Govindarāja by at least a generation. A long interval between a writer and those who quote him need not be postulated where both come from the same region and enjoy perhaps common royal patronage. Mallinātha and his son Kumārāgiri quote royal authors who were their contemporaries. But Lolla Lakṣmanārya the author of Daivajñāvilāsa is not, as already stated, the same person as Lolla Lakṣmidhara. The colophon to the work (Madras Descriptive Catalogue, Vol. xxxiv, p. 9068) definitely says that Lakṣmanārya belonged to Śrīvatsa-gotra; while Lakṣmidhara belonged to the Hārīta-gotra.<sup>3</sup> Lakṣmana and Lakṣmidhara are not synonymous. Mahamahopādhyāya S. Kuppusvāmī Śāstri, the editor of the Descriptive Catalogue made the mistake, in committed in the D. C. XXIV, p. 9068, by M. S. Kuppuswami Sastri, ignoring the Sanskrit colophon immediately below his own note, which begins thus:

( continued from the previous page )

श्रीवत्सगोत्राद्युचिपूर्णचन्द्रो गत्वा यद्वाङ् लोहटलक्ष्मणोऽहम् ।
समस्तशास्त्रादुत्सारयुक्तं ... वक्ष्यामि देवद्वितानामादयं
उद्योगविद्भिर्ग्रीतिविद्वद्भिराद्य ॥

<sup>1</sup> Vide Ma. No. 20664 in Tanjore Library, and D. C. XIX No. 10866.

<sup>2</sup> Vide note 22 Supra.

the face of the colophon which he cited directly below his observations, identifying the two writers, by finding the name Lalla prefixed to both names, and the mistake has been copied by Dr. N. Venkataramanayya (Studies in the History of the Third Dynasty of Vijayanagara, 1935, p. 423).

Govindarāja's own references to his contemporaries may now be considered. His guru was Śaṭakopa or Śaṭakopa Deśika, of the Śrīvatsa-gotra ( vidē benedictory verse at the beginning of the commentary on the Āraṇyakaśāstra ).<sup>1</sup> This teacher was not a saṅgyāsīn, and attempts to find, from the name Śaṭakopa ( which is taken by most pontiffs of the Ahobila Maṭha ) an identity between this teacher and one of the early pontiffs of the Maṭha, must fail. He was not only the spiritual guide of Govindarāja, from whom the latter obtained his initiation into the esoteric teachings of Śrīvalśaivism ( śrīvalśaśāstrabodhaḥ )<sup>2</sup> but his master of the different śāstras, which Govindarāja claims to have studied under him. ( Śaṭhajit-pādāravindudvaya-labha-saṁasta-śāstravitatiḥ ).<sup>3</sup> The way in which the Rāmāyaṇa should be expounded, Govindarāja claims to

1 वात्स्यश्रीशठकेपदेशिकवरधीपादरेण्यञ्जनेः
दृष्ट्या निर्मलया निरीक्ष्य बहुधा पल्मीकजन्माशयम् ।
श्रीमत्कौशिकवंशसागरमणिः गोविन्दराजाह्वयो
व्याचक्षेपद्वयकाण्डमधुना परमन्तु निर्मलराः ॥

2 इत्थं शठारिगुरुवर्षद्वारविन्द-
सेवारसाधिगतसर्वरहस्यबोधः ।
गोविन्दराजविदुषः प्रमुदे बुधानां
कैश्चिन्मकाण्डविषया विततान टीकाम् ॥

3 तत्त्वज्ञानसमुच्चयो धनदयत्सारस्य सारो महान्
निष्कर्षः कमलानिवासपरणद्वन्द्वानुरागस्मृतेः ।
अक्लेशः परिपाक एव जगतामक्षय्यपुण्यावलेः
अस्माकं निधिरहस्यो विजयते श्रीमान्शठारिगुरुः ॥

इति सुन्दरकाण्डव्याख्यानारम्भे ॥

उत्तरकाण्डव्याख्यानारम्भे वेद—

श्रीमत्तकुलप्रदीपशठजित्पादरविन्दद्वयी
तेजालम्बतमस्तशास्त्रवितनिः गोविन्दराजाह्वयः ।
श्रीरामायणभूषणेऽत्र मुकुटीभूता परा उत्तरे
ग्रन्थे व्याहृतिमाननोति विदुषा प्रीतिः पुनर्वर्द्धताम् ॥

have been shown to him by his guru (Śaṭhūri-guruṇā saṁdarśitenū-dhvanā). In the benedictory verses prefixed to the commentary on the Ayodhyā-kāṇḍa, he alludes to his having heard repeatedly the inspired expositions of the epic by this teacher.<sup>1</sup> The tradition that Govindarāja was a svayam-ācārya-puruṣa, i. e. one who can take spiritual disciples, which is current in South India, seems to be negatived by these statements about his obligations to another teacher. It is probable that the guru, who, like Govindarāja, was a devotee of Viṣṇu as Śrīnīyāsa or Śrī Venkaṭeśa, the God worshipped at Tirumalai (Tirupati), and used to expound the Rāmāyaṇa on the Holy Hill, where such public expositions of the epic had been in vogue from the days of Rāmānuja.<sup>2</sup>

A name which occurs as that of a "patron" in the colophon to the commentary on the Yuddha-kāṇḍa is perhaps that of a historical personage. The commentary on that kāṇḍa is stated by Govindarāja as composed on the suggestion or prompting of his 'dear friend' Bhāvanācārya.<sup>3</sup> Who is this Bhāvanācārya? He is said to have been the father of Śrīraṅga, who was the preceptor (ācārya) of Tenāli Annayya, brother of the famous Tenāli Rāmakṛṣṇa, a member of the Academy (Aśadiggaja) founded by Kṛṣṇadevarāya soon after his accession to the throne (1510).<sup>4</sup> While the difference in age between a spiritual preceptor and disciple need not be great, that between a father and a son must be wide enough. It is accordingly open to presume that if the Bhāvanācārya, who induced Govindarāja to compose the com-

<sup>1</sup> शायं शायं शठरेः शमदमवपुषः कुलवकारावेन्दात्
आलोच्यलोच्य वाचा प्रकृतिमधुरया प्रेक्ष्य विद्वज्जनैः ।
गोविन्दायः सुधीशः कुशिककुलमणिः गूढगाढाभयाडयं
सम्यक् साकेतकाण्डे सरत्तनममुदे सादरं व्याकरोति ॥

<sup>2</sup> The discourses of Śaṭhakopa appear to have been public addresses. That he expounded the epic is shown by citations of his views by Govindarāja—'एवमस्मद्गुरुचरणाः'

<sup>3</sup> श्रीमान् गोविन्दराजो वरदगुरुस्ततो भावनाचार्यवर्य-
प्रेम्णैव व्यतुनत विपुलं युद्धकाण्डस्य टीकाम् ॥

For Bhāvanācārya's relation to the Tenāli brothers, see Vireśalingam—'Lives of Telugu Poets,' II, p. 322.

<sup>4</sup> See N. Venkataramanayya—'Studies in the History of the Third dynasty of Vijayanagara,' 1935, p. 421.

mentary on the Yuddhakāṇḍa, is this personage, the last quarter of the 15th century should be regarded as that in which he composed the work. The possession of such influential courtiers among his disciples would indicate that Bhāvanācārya's family was important and opulent. The Tirupati Devasthānam Inscriptions contains a record of a gift to the temple made by a Bhāvanācārya, son of Śrīraṅgācārya on a date equivalent to 5-7-1535.<sup>1</sup> In South India the names of grandfathers are borne by the eldest grandsons. The date of this Bhāvanācārya is too late to be reconciled, on the existing data, with the date of one who was anterior to Ātreya Ahobila, the author of the Sanskrit Tanishloki, the contemporary of the sixth pontiff of the Ahobila Māṭha (c. 1500). As Śrīraṅga or Śrīraṅgācārya, son of Bhāvanācārya, was the spiritual guide of Tenāli Annayya brother of Tenāli Rāmākṛṣṇa, a member of Kṛṣṇadevarāya's Academy, (c. 1510) an earlier Bhāvanācārya, also resident at Tirupati, or holding as influential position there, is indicated.<sup>2</sup> This personage must have been the friend and patron of Govindarāja, and persuaded him to write the commentary on the sixth kāṇḍa of the Rāmāyaṇa. The name of the patron is mentioned only in connection with the bhāṣya of this kāṇḍa. It may warrant the inference (sugges<sup>2</sup> The donor of the Tirupati grant of 1535 must be the same as the author of Suranagati-ratnamālīkā a religious tract noticed in the Madras Triennial Catalogue 1913-1915. p. 2426. This Bhāvanācārya claims to be the son and disciple of Śrīraṅga of the Kandrā Vādhūla-gotra and grand-son of Bhāvanācārya. He salutes Mahārya, son and disciple of Vādhūla Śrīnivasācārya. Mahārya is obviously identical with Doḍḍayācārya of the Kandrā Vādhūla-gotra, who lived at Colasimhapuram (Sholinghur), 30 miles from Tirupati, and fl. c. 1540-1565. He wrote a famous commentary named Caṇḍa-mūrtā on Vedānta Deśika's Śatadṛṣṭi, and a panegyric on Vedānta Deśika (the Vāḍagalai apostle) though himself of the Southern School. (Descr. Cat. XIX, 7677 and Aufrecht, Cat. Catal., I, 283.

<sup>1</sup> S. Subrahmanya Sastri—Tirupati Devasthānam Inscriptions, Introd. volume.

The ancestry claimed by Bhāvanācārya II clearly shows the validity of the suggestion that his grand-father, Bhāvanācārya I was the friend of Govindarāja. Dr. M. Krishnamachariar, 'Hist. of Skt. Classical Lit.' has mixed up the two Bhāvanācāryas. On p. 23, he correctly places him one or two generations before Tenāli Rāmākṛṣṇa, the courtier of Kṛṣṇadevarāya (1509-1530). On p. 1117 he suggests that it is the same Bhāvanācārya, who lived after Kṛṣṇadevarāya's reign.

6 [Annals, B. O. R. L.]

ted by the bhāṣya for each kāṇḍa bearing a different name) that the commentary was published in instalments, perhaps spread over some years. Bhāvanācārya was a scion of the Kandalā family of ācārya-puruṣas who belonged to Vādhūla-gotra.

Govindarāja named his bhāṣya Rāmāyaṇa-bhāṣaṇa. Consistently with this designation, the commentary on each canto is given the name of an ornament. Thus, the commentaries of the several cantos are named in sequence, Maṇimaṇjari, Pitūmbara, Ratnamekhalā, Muktāhāra, Śyāgūra-tilaka, Ratna-kirita and Maṇi-mukuta. The idea is that the poem is personified as a king and is adorned by the author by bhāṣaṇa (ornament) after bhāṣaṇa as a king will be.<sup>1</sup>

Govindarāja states that he was inspired to write his commentary by a dream, which came to him, as he lay asleep in front of the shrine of Hanumān on the hillock named after him, in the temple of Śrī Venkateśa, in front of the shrine of Śrī Rāmanuja ( Yati-kṣmābhṛt i. e. Yatirāja ). In this dream, crowds of learned pilgrims who flocked to the shrine earnestly ( sādaram ) besought him to write a lengthy exposition of the Rāmāyaṇa ( Rāmāyaṇa vyatikrīyām vistṛṇām vacaya iti saṁcoditah ).<sup>2</sup> This must refer only to the commencement of the undertaking. Its continuation was due to the divine command of Rāma himself,<sup>3</sup> who is said for instance to have ordered the bhāṣya on the Sundarakāṇḍa.

It is not unlikely that Govindarāja was already famous as an oral expounder of the epic, as well as a scholar and commentator. In spite of his self-deprecatory remarks at the

<sup>1</sup> Thus he says in the Āraṇyakāṇḍa that having clad Śrī Rāmāyaṇa in pitūmbara ( the title of the commentary on the preceding canto ) he now offers him a Ratnamekhalā :

श्रीरामायणराजस्य दत्त्वा पीतान्वरं मङ्गलम् ।

अर्पये परया लक्ष्म्या राजमूर्तीं रत्नमेतलाम् ॥

2

श्रमित्यञ्जनभूषणस्य शिखरे श्रीमिरुतेः संनिधौ

अग्रे वेङ्कटनायकस्य सदनद्वारे यद्विधमानृतः ।

नानादेशसमागतेर्विधगणे रामायणव्याख्यां

विस्तीर्णां रचयेति सादरमङ्गं स्वप्नेऽपि शृणोदितः ॥

8

पूर्वाचार्यकृता विलोक्य विविधा व्याख्या मुहुर्जनकी-

कान्तस्यामतिनाशयेव तिलकं सौन्दर्यकाण्डे व्यधात् ।

beginning of the work,<sup>1</sup> he was conscious of his erudition and powers. He claims at the end of his comment on the Bālakāṇḍa easy mastery of the Vedas, the different śāstras, poetry, drama and rhetoric and experience of writing commentaries (paṭudhīh śikā-vidhāne), as well as the necessary spiritual and religious equipment to undertake so pious a task. The claims, for the qualities which he declares as pertaining to his commentary (absence of misconstruction, tautology, irrelevance, incongruity with the text, and harshness, shown in interpretation of word after word, as well as capacity to bring out the sweetness of the poem in word after word) are established by the perusal of the commentary, which by its merits has easily displaced all older and many more recent śikās on the Rāmāyaṇa.<sup>2</sup>

As against the specific claim to have been a successful śikā-lāra, tradition knows not of any other works by Govindarāja. But, both the Adyar Library and the Oriental Manuscripts Library at Madras possess manuscripts of an elaborate bhāṣya by Govindarāja on the Taittirīya-upanīṣad.<sup>3</sup>

The authenticity of the work is established by the identity of the allusions, and even expressions, in the colophon with those in the commentary on the Rāmāyaṇa.<sup>4</sup> This commentary would repay publication. An isolated śikā on an Upanīṣad can not compete successfully with a collection of śikās by one and the same writer on the "ten Upanīṣads." This would account for

- १ काङ् मन्दमतिर्गमिरिहृदयं रामावर्णं तत्कच
व्याख्यानैस्त्व परिममहं अहो ह्यसास्पदं धीमताम् ।
को भारोऽत्र मम त्वमे कुलगुरुः कोदण्डपाणिः रुपा
कूपारो रचयत्यदः सपदि मज्जिहासतिहासनः ॥

<sup>2</sup> See the appreciation in the Introduction to C. R. Srinivasa Aiyangar's Eng. Trn. of the Poem.

<sup>3</sup> The Adyar copy bears the number X, G. 25 and that in the Madras Or. Mss. Lib. is described in the Triennial Cat. 1910-3, I, p. 27. It may contain 3600 granthas.

<sup>4</sup> Cf. this colophon with those of the Rāmāyaṇa-bhāṣya.

इत्थं श्रीशठकोपदेशिकपदद्वन्द्वारविन्दद्वयी
सेवासौन्दरसानुमतिविभवव्यक्तत्रयी तत्त्वधीः ।
श्रीमत्कोशिकवर्णमौक्तिकमणिः गोविन्दराजाभिषो
विद्वानुत्तमैतत्तयिकवरत्रय्यन्तवृत्तिं व्यधात् ॥

This commentary should have been written before that on the Rāmāyaṇa.

the eclipse of Govindarāja's aparaśadbhāṣya by the Daśopaniṣad-bhāṣya of Rāṅgarāmānuja.<sup>1</sup>

Sanskrit writers have an irritating way of not furnishing particulars about themselves. Govindarāja is in line with his kind in this respect. What we can gather about him has to be done indirectly from the tenor of his bhāṣya and the expressions of personal views that it contains. The only information about his family in the colophons is that he was the son of Varadācārya or Varadaguru, and that he belonged to Kāṇṣika-gotra.<sup>2</sup> His pride in gotra affinity to Viśvāmitra is manifested in the citation when explaining Viśvāmitra's famous declaration that he would create another Indra or leave the world without an Indra<sup>3</sup> of the proud declaration of Vedānta Deśika (d. 1369) in Saṅkalpa-sūryodaya that to his line belonged the sage who was able to create another Indra or a world without an Indra.<sup>4</sup>

It is probable that he was born and lived at Tirupati, and that his family was connected with Kāñcīpura, the other great seat of Śrīvaiṣṇavism. The presiding deities in Tirupati—below the-hill and in Kāñcīpura are respectively Govindarāja and Varada. In South India it is almost a rule to name children, or at least the eldest child, after the deity of the natal place. The original shrine of Govindarāja was at Citrakūṭam (modern Chidambaram) but it was desecrated by Vikrama Cola, the son of Kulottuṅga Cola (1070-1118), and the idol was then removed to Tirupati by Rāmānuja and installed in a temple he specially built there for the purpose. The original idol of Govindarāja was taken back to Citrakūṭam (Chidambaram) four centuries later and reinstalled there in the reign of Acyutarāja of Vijayanagara (1530-1542).<sup>5</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Rāṅgarāmānuja's bhāṣya was printed at Madras in Telugu characters over 60 years ago, and has been reprinted more recently in Nāgarī by the Ānandāśrama.

<sup>2</sup> See note 30 above.

<sup>3</sup> Bālakāṇḍa, LX, 23.

अन्यमिन्द्रं करिष्यामि लोको वा स्यादनिन्द्रकः ।

देवतामपि न क्रोधत् अष्टु उपचक्रमे ॥

<sup>4</sup> Saṅkalpasūryodaya, I, 13.

अन्येन्द्रकं मुवनमन्यदनिन्द्रकं वा

कर्तुं क्षमे कविरभूदयमन्ववाये ।

<sup>5</sup> See M. Raghava Aiyangar's Tamil Essays.

The construction and consecration of a temple to Rāma at Tirupati belongs to the last quarter of the 15th century. This is the period in which the drift of the available evidence shows Govindarāja to have flourished. It is tempting to connect the foundation with the popularisation of the worship of Rāma by the public discourses of Govindarāja and his guru Śaṭhakopa. The attachment of Govindarāja to the presiding Deity of the "seven Hills" is evident in many places in the commentary. The Deity is known ordinarily as Śrīnivāsa or Śrī Venkaṭeśa, Venkatam being the old name of the holy hills. In interpreting Bālakāṇḍa 2, 15,<sup>1</sup> Govindarāja ingeniously makes the famous and involuntary utterance of Vālmiki a concealed address to Viṣṇu in his manifestation at Tirupati as Śrīnivāsa,<sup>2</sup> another name for Śrī Venkaṭeśa.

It is the belief of Śrīvaiṣṇavas that the Rāmāyaṇa contains the authority for most of their beliefs, including the recognition of Rāma as the avatāra of Nārāyaṇa, the Supreme Being. Govindarāja comments on the poem in harmony with the doctrines of his sect, and gives interpretations which may not be readily accepted by the followers of other sects. The doctrine that prapatti or śaraṇyāgati needs for its fulfilment a mediator (ghaṭaka) is brought in on a comment on the fourth sarga of the Bālakāṇḍa.<sup>3</sup>

मा निषादं प्रतिष्ठां त्वमगमः शान्वतीः समाः ।

यत्क्रौञ्चमिधुनादेकमवधीः कामनोदितम् ॥

<sup>1</sup> चतुर्मेसपसादेन बाष्पमिमुसात् प्रथमोदितोयं श्लोकः केवलं शापपरो न भवितुमर्हति इति भगवन्मङ्गलाशासनपरतया मङ्गलाचरणपरोऽयं श्लोकः, केवलं शापपरो न भवितुमर्हतीति भगवन्मङ्गलाशासनपरतया मङ्गलाचरणपरोऽयं प्राथमिकश्लोक इति पूर्वाचार्यं वर्णयन्ति । तथा हि । निषादस्त्यस्मिन् इति 'निषादो', निषासः । 'मा' लक्ष्मीः । तस्या निषादो 'मानिषादः', श्रीनिषासः । तत्र संवृद्धिः 'हे श्रीनिषास' । 'त्वं शान्वतीः समाः' सर्वकालं, प्रतिष्ठां माहात्म्यं, 'अगमः' गच्छ । 'यद्' यस्मात् 'क्रौञ्चमिधुनात्' राक्षसमिधुनात् रावणमन्मोदरीरूपात् 'कामेन', मन्मथेन 'नोदितं' सतिषाहृतीरम् एकं रावणं 'अवधीः' रावणं हत्वा कृतवैलोक्यन्नायः स पापकालं विजयी भवतु इत्यर्थः ॥ प्रथमेन श्लोकेन इष्टदेवतास्मरणरूपं मङ्गलमाचरितम् ॥

<sup>2</sup> इयं च प्रपत्तिरस्मिन् प्रबन्धे प्रधानतया प्रतिपाद्यते । अत एव "श्रीरामायणं दीर्घ-शरणानिः" इत्याभाणकः । ... इयं च प्रपत्तिः पुरुषकारेण विना न कलाय भवतीत्यर्थोऽस्मिन् प्रबन्धे प्रधानतया प्रतिपाद्यते ॥

This is the Vaidagala or Northern School view.

The whole poem is characterised as one long discourse on śaraṇā-gali (self-surrender). In interpreting Bālakāṇḍa, XV, 31,<sup>1</sup> Govindarāja explains "sa-Rudra" in the verse as indicating that Śiva was among the suppliants of Nārāyaṇa.<sup>2</sup> Again, in interpreting Surandra in the concluding invocation in the same chapter, Govindarāja discards the explanation of Mahēśvara-tīrtha that it is in the vocative form, as an address to Nārāyaṇa conceived as Upeन्द्रa, and he takes Sureन्द्रa-guṇam as a single word and explains Sareन्द्रa as Viśvakṣena, the commander of the hosts of Viṣṇu in Vaikuṇṭha.<sup>3</sup> The simile describing the residence of Rāma at Citrakūṭa (Ayodhyākāṇḍa, xviii, 12)<sup>4</sup> as like that of the god Kubera in Nandana, is stated in an ingenious, if forced explanation, to refer to Viṣṇu's residence in Vaikuṇṭha.<sup>5</sup> The prayer of Bharata to Rāma that he should show him compassion as Mahēśvara (Ayodhyākāṇḍa, cvi, 31) shows to the Bhūtas, which would seem to allude to Śiva's compassion to the Bhūta-gaṇa, is subjected by Govindarāja to an elaborate explanation and a philosophical disquisition, in order to show that the simile refers to God's (i. e. Viṣṇu's) compassion to all beings.<sup>6</sup>

<sup>1</sup> ततो देवर्षिगन्धर्वाः सखद्राः साप्सरोगणाः ।

स्तुतिमिर्दिश्वरपाभिः तुष्टुर्मुमुसुदनम् ॥

<sup>2</sup> 'ततः' भगवदिच्छानन्तरम् 'सखद्रा' इत्यनुवादश्च पूर्व सखद्रोऽपि शरणागत इति सिद्धम् ॥

<sup>3</sup> तमेव हत्वा सखलं सखान्धर्षं विराजणं रावणमुपरोदयम् ।

सलोकभागच्छ गतञ्चराश्चिरं सुरेन्द्रगुणं गतदोषकल्पम् ॥

'सुरेन्द्रः' विश्वक्सेनः । स्वलोकमिति सम्यक् पाठः ॥

<sup>4</sup> तुभ्यगच्छिन्नकूरोऽतो गिरिराजोपमो गिरिः ।

यदिमन् वसति काकुत्स्थः कुबेर इव नन्दने ॥

<sup>5</sup> 'कुबेर इव नन्दने' - भूवाचकेन 'कु'शब्देन जगदुपलक्ष्यते, 'बेर' शरीरं, 'कुबेरो' जगच्छरिरः, परमात्मा । 'नन्दन इव' वैकुण्ठनन्दनवन इव ॥

<sup>6</sup> शिरसा त्वाऽमियावेऽहं कुरुष्व कर्णौ मयि ।

वान्धवेषु च सर्वेषु मृतैस्त्रिव महेश्वरः ॥

महेश्वरो विष्णुः ।

"यद्वेदोऽथर्वः प्रोक्तो वेदान्ते च प्रतिष्ठितः ।

तस्य प्रकृतिलीनस्य यः परः स महेश्वरः ॥"

( continued on the next page )

The worship of Śiva at Rāmeśvaram is stated in the Purāṇas<sup>1</sup> to be due to the installation of the linga there by Rāma himself. Worshippers of Śiva have sought warrant for the tradition in the Rāmāyana in the address of Rāma to Sītā, as they were passing in the aerial car (Puspaka-vimāna) over the site of the causeway over the ocean, which may be rendered thus: "The holy spot (tīrtha) which is now seen on the great ocean is famous as Setubandha, honoured by the three worlds. This spot is most holy and destroys the most heinous sins. Here formerly (purā) the lord Mahādeva proved propitious (prasādam akart)."<sup>2</sup> Mahādeva is taken by Śaivas as Śiva. Mahēśvara-tīrtha finds no justification in the poem for the word "purā" (formerly), if applied to Śiva. He notices that the Purāṇas make out that Rāma got down on the spot, while on his way to Ayodhyā from Lankā and consecrated the linga on the causeway, while the Rāmāyana shows he did not get down from the vimāna. As this would be in conflict with the allusion to a past favour of Mahādeva, he interprets Mahādeva as Samudrarāja, mahat having as one of its senses

(continued from the previous page)

इति पूर्वप्रकृतदहरविद्याकरणसम्प्रपणवपकृतिभूताकारवाच्या महेश्वर इत्युक्तेः । दहरोपास्य-
इव अपहतपाप्मत्वादिगुणैः पुरुषोत्तमः "स उत्तमः पुरुषः" इति तत्समानप्रकरणे
छन्दोग्ये श्रवणात् । अपहतपाप्मत्वं च रुद्रस्य तादृशं "अनपहतपाप्मा वा अहमस्मि" इति रुद्रेणैवोक्तेः । भूतसंहाराधिकृतस्य रुद्रस्य भूतेषु कृष्णा च गगनकुसुमतुल्या । अतः
"स एकाकी न रमते । न तो विजुप्सितः" इत्यादि क्षुतिस्मृत्यादिभिः सुश्रुतिदापाकारुण्य-वात्सल्यादिगुणगणः पुरुषोत्तम एव महेश्वर इति दिक् ॥

- <sup>1</sup> कूर्मपुराणे — सेतुमध्ये महादेवमीशानं कृत्तिवात्ततम् ।
स्थापयामास वै लिङ्गं पूजयामास राघवः ॥
पाथे— रामः पुष्पकादवरोहं महादेवं प्रतिष्ठापितवान् ॥
स्कान्दे — सेतुमध्ये महादेवं लिङ्गरूपधरं हरम् ।
रामो वै स्थापयामास शिवलिङ्गमनुत्तमम् ॥
एतत्तु दृश्यते तीर्थे सागरस्य महात्मनः ।
सेतुबन्ध इति ख्यातं त्रैलोक्येनाभिपूजितम् ॥
इत्यपवित्रं परमं महापातकनाशनम् ।
अत्र पूर्वं महादेवः प्रसन्नमकरोत् प्रभुः ॥

—मुद्रकाण्डे, सं. १२६, श्लो. २१-२२

"water".<sup>1</sup> Govindarāja accepts this interpretation as the only natural one in the context, rebuts the view that "Mahādeva" in the śloka means Rudra, on other cogent grounds, and denies the Purāṇas equal or superior validity over the Epics.<sup>2</sup>

The critical acumen of Govindarāja is shown by his examination and rejection of many verses and occasionally even entire chapters, after a detailed statement of his grounds. The largest number of such rejections is in the Uttarakāṇḍa, on which his comments are unusually brief. As examples of Govindarāja's critical power in estimating the authenticity of texts, reference may be made to his examination of the views of Maheśvara-tīrtha who rejected, as an interpolation, the entire "kaccil sarga" in the Ayodhyākāṇḍa (ch. 100), and the affirmation of the genuineness of the sarga, as well as the arguments by which he seeks to establish the spuriousness of the hymn to the Sun (Aditya-hṛdaya) which forms the 107th sarga in the Yuddhakāṇḍa in most editions.<sup>3</sup> Govindarāja states that in some manuscripts the chapter was not to be found, that the old commentator Udāri refused to comment on it, and that it is in conflict with the doctrine of the supremacy of Nārāyaṇa, which is the

<sup>1</sup> तीर्थस्तु—महदिति जलं । तद्वृषी देवो 'महादेवः' समुद्रः । तदाह वैजयन्ती =

'गन्धिरं गङ्गां रत्नं गङ्गां क्षरणं वपुः ।

स्नेहः स्नेहं महच्छुद्धं वरुणं सर्वतोमुत्तमम् ।

पातालं सादु दिव्यं च तानि पञ्चादशाप्यु च ।'

यद्वा महादेवयतिष्वन्यतमनास्समुद्रस्य महादेवशब्देनात्र समुद्र एवोच्यते ॥

<sup>2</sup> महादेव इति समुद्रराज उच्यते औचित्यात् । 'पशुः' समुद्रजलाधिपत्या । 'प्रसाद-
मकरोत्' सागरं शोषयिष्यामीति कुपितस्य मे 'प्रसाद' प्रसन्नत्वम् 'अकरोत्' ॥ न तु
अत्र ह्यो 'महादेवः' तेन पूर्वं प्रसादकरणानुक्तः ... पुराणवचनानुसारेणार्थं श्लोको लिङ्ग-
प्रतिष्ठां बोधयतीति ॥ मैवं । उक्तदोषानिस्तारात्, इतिहासो हि परिप्रहानिश्चयात्, ग्रन्थ-
सौष्ठवाच्च, 'इतिहासपुराणं पञ्चमम्' इति आदौ अधिकक्षरत्वेऽपि पूर्वपयोगेणान्यर्हितत्वाच्च
पुराणेभ्यो गरीयानिति, 'वेदः प्राचेतसादासीत्' इति वेदमन्त्रोक्त्या चतुर्मुखप्रसादान-
मूलतया च प्रबलतरः ॥ शङ्किरोचे तामसपुराणवचनानि न प्रनागानि ॥ किं च पुराणं सर्व-
प्रतिष्ठागोर्दिष्वन्यपरामिति नेतिहासवत्पुरावृत्तकथने तात्पर्यवत् ॥ fundamental tenet of epic.<sup>1</sup> Uḍāri was not a Vaiṣṇava nor a Viśiṣṭādvaitin, like Govindarāja.

<sup>3</sup> See the Venkateswara Press. Edn. I, p. 21229 for the criticism or II, p. 380 of the Kumbakonam, ed.

Śrīvaiṣṇavas gradually split into two divisions, between which acrimonious controversies have ranged owing to doctrinal differences and differences in social usage. Though the two groups are not prohibited from intermarrying and do intermarry, reciprocal ill-feeling has grown from century to century. The rival sects are known as Vaṇṇalai (Northern Learning) and Teṅṅalai (Southern Learning). The cleavage is old, and became accentuated in the fourteenth century. The great champion of the "Northern" School is Vedānta Deśika, (1268-1369). He upheld the old śāstric traditions, as embodied in Sanskrit literature, and smṛti usage generally. The Southern School upheld the supremacy of the Tamil hymns (Prabandha) of the Dravidian saints or Āḷvārs. The points of difference are many, and are usually classified as eighteen. The differences in doctrine and usage are relevant in a consideration of Govindarāja's sectarian affiliations. The general view in South India is that he belonged to the Southern School, and was redeemed from its extremism by his great learning, including a mastery of the Vedic and ritualistic literature in Sanskrit, and by his bias towards the modes of life sanctified by the injunctions of śruti and smṛti. The position merits examination in the light of Govindarāja's views as reflected in his bhāṣya, and by his references to his spiritual obligations.

The Teṅṅalai School makes itself prominent for the first time in the life-time of its early champion Pillai (junior) Lokācārya (d. 1340). Its most eminent teacher and organizer is Maṇavāla-mahāmuni or Ramya-jāmāṭṭi-muni (end of the fourteenth century). From the fifteenth century at least it became the custom for all Śrīvaiṣṇava writers to begin their books by invocations of their pūrvācāryas in sequence, ending with their own respective preceptors. Govindarāja's invocation stops with Rāmānuja, and then proceeds abruptly to his own guru, Śaṭhakopa.

<sup>1</sup> अथ च सर्गः केचिच्चक्रोदु न दृश्यते । उदारिणा न व्याख्यातश्च । अरम्भाद्यभूति नारायणपरत्वविग्रहं च अत्र प्रतिभाति सूर्यपरत्वम् । अस्मिन्ना काण्डे त्रिंशदुत्तरशतसर्गा उदारिणा गणिताः । एतदन्तर्भावे एकत्रिंशदुत्तरशतसर्गास्तेन गणिता भवेयुः ॥

7 [Annals, B. O. B. L.]

Vedānta Deśika is so called by this title, his real name being Venkatanātha. Teṅgalais usually refer to him as Vedāntācārya, but never as "Ācārya" or by the honorific plural "Ācāryāḥ". But there are many references to him in Govindarāja's commentary in this honorific plural, and there is one specific allusion to him as "Nigamāntācāryāḥ" a designation used by his own followers, (comment on Sundarakāṇḍa, xxvii, 63: evam āhuḥ Nigamāntācāryāḥ). Such a deferential allusion to one of the unsparing critics of the tenets of his own sub-sect would indicate unusual liberal-mindedness and a courage to face the unpopularity in his own section that would follow, if the writer who made the reference was a Teṅgalai follower.

The Southern School discounts Vedic sacrifices in general and of living victims specially. The Rāmāyaṇa describes in detail many sacrifices, which Govindarāja supports by citation of the appropriate ritualistic authority, and he does so in a way which does not indicate any opposition to such yāgas. The knowledge displayed in the commentary is almost like that of one who not only knew the theory but had actually participated in the celebration of yāgas in which victims were offered.

In regard to the relations of the dvijas and śūdras, the Southern School shows tolerance of the relaxations of the smṛti restrictions on the latter. Thus in its view a gifted śūdra can be the teacher of a brāhmaṇa. It holds that a śūdra, who becomes a prapanna, is equal to the most orthodox Brāhmaṇa.<sup>1</sup> Honor is not due to mere birth. The mūla-mantra with the prapana can be recited to śūdras. Govindarāja's views seem to show some inconsistency in regard to what may be due to non-dvijas. In commenting on Bālakāṇḍa, I, 97, which refers to the reading (paṭhana) of the poem by all the four castes, and the good results which will follow from such study, Govindarāja takes the orthodox stand that as the Rāmāyaṇa is inspired by the Veda, (vedopabṛiṇhana), the śūdra, who has no right to study the Veda, can only hear the Rāmāyaṇa read to him by a dvija. Paṭhan is interpreted as śṛṇvan.<sup>1</sup> In the alternative, he would concede to the śūdra only the right to study the summary of the poem in the first chapter (samkṣepapāṭhamātre adhikūrostiti siddham). Again, in commenting on Rāma's question to Bharata (Ayodhyākāṇḍa, 100, 14) whether he honors 'Brahmans (brāhmaṇāmsca abhimanyase), Govindarāja asserts that by mere birth, and without any examination of his learning or good conduct a Brahman is entitled to honor from the king. (" Brāhmaṇān iti jātīmūtraparo vā; tadā vidyūśilūddikam aparīkṣya brāhmaṇatvamūltreṇa yathāyogyam bahumānam vinakṣitam ). Similarly, the orthodox position is upheld by Govindarāja in the scholarly discussion as to what Fire Rāma was entitled to maintain in the forest, his conclusion being it was aupāsanāgni only. ( vide commentary on Ayodhyākāṇḍa, xcix, 12 ). These are positions in consonance only with those of the Northern School.

<sup>1</sup> See V. Raṅgācārya's "Successors of Rāmānuja" in J. B. B. E. A. S., p. 132.

On the other hand, some differences from the Vaḍagalai position are evident in the commentary. In Aranyakāṇḍa, lxviii, 36, it is stated that Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa offered libations<sup>2</sup> of water in accordance with the śāstras<sup>3</sup> to Jaṭāyu. Was it right to say that a libation to a dead bird (tiryagyoni) is ordained by śāstras? Orthodox writers try to explain away the incident. Padmapurāṇa, cited by the Tilaka commentary (which now runs the Govindarājīya close in popularity) say that the rites were done by Rāma out of love (snehāt), i. e. not in accordance, with śāstra. Govindarāja faces the issue squarely, says the action was correct and in accordance with the famous injunction that they who were devotees of the Lord are not śūdras, and that in every varṇa those alone are śūdras who have no faith in Janārḍana.<sup>4</sup> He rejects such

<sup>1</sup> शूद्रस्य इतिहासपुराणयोः श्रावणमात्रं स्मृतिमिरनुशातं न तु पठनम् । तथापि पठन्नि-
त्यादि श्रावयचनप्राप्ताव्यात् 'रचनाद्रयकतस्य' इति न्यायेन अस्मिन् संक्षेपपाठमात्रे
अधिकारोऽस्ति इति सिद्धम् ॥

पठन् द्विजो वागृचमत्स्यमीयात् स्यात् क्षत्रियो भूमिपतित्वमीयात् । वाणिज्यनः पण्य-
फलत्वमीयात् जनश्च शूद्रोपि महत्त्वमीयात् ॥ वेदोपबृंहणे शूद्रस्य सर्वधानधिकारात् शूद्र
इत्यत्र पठन्निति नानुवचने, किं तु शुण्वन्नित्यव्याहृत्यते । 'शृण्वन् रामायनं मनन्त्या' इति
श्रवणस्यापि महाफलत्ववचनात् ॥

<sup>2</sup> शास्त्रदृष्टेन विविधा जले गृध्राय राचयो ।

स्नात्वा तौ गृधराजाय उदकं चक्रतुस्तदा ॥

<sup>3</sup> न शूद्रा भगवद्भक्ता पित्रा भागवताः स्मृताः ।

स सर्वर्षेषु ते शूद्राः ते हनक्ता जनादृते ॥

explanation as that the statement was intended only to show honor to Jāṭayu (praśānsū-param) and that it is another instance, like Draupadī's marriage of five husbands, of obsolete epic usage, which has to be condoned as such. Citing the ascent in status of Viśvāmītra and of the mokṣa accorded to Śabari, he maintains that devotion to the Lord supersedes mere birth.<sup>1</sup> This is a Teṅgalai tenet.

The Southern School interdicts baths in the Ganges on the ground that its waters are polluted by contact with Śiva's hair.<sup>2</sup> In Bālakāṇḍa, xlii, 27, it is sated that Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, on reaching the banks of the Ganges with Viśvāmītra, sprinkled themselves with its water, 'holy by contact with a limb of Śiva' (Bhāvāṅga-patitam toyam pavitram iti pasprśuḥ). Govindarāja's comment is characteristic. The river is holy by contact with Śiva but not as holy as it was before it made the contact after springing from Viṣṇu's feet; hence, they simply touched the water (pasprśuḥ) and did not plunge into it. (na sasnuḥ). Maheśvara-tīrtha roundly interprets pasprśuḥ as sasnuḥ.

Another Teṅgalai practice for which support is given by Govindarāja is the making of obeisance (praṇāma) by a yati or bhikṣuka to a gṛhastha.<sup>3</sup> This is contrary to smṛti precept, which is contained in such well-known saying as: "The ascetic must be saluted by every one, and the mother even by the ascetic." (Sarva-vandyaḥ hi yatayaḥ, prasūrvandyaḥ hi sādaram). An occasion for the expression of the Teṅgalai view of praṇāma is

<sup>1</sup> माङ्गलवादि जाति(1)र्हि शास्त्रैकसमधिगम्या ननु गोत्रादि वदार्हतिगम्या । तेन तत्तुल्यत्वमाशङ्क्येत । अत एव विष्णुमित्रस्यापि क्षत्रियत्वजातिरपनीता उपनीता च माङ्गल्यजातिरिति उपपादितं बालकाण्डे । अयमर्थ उपपादयिष्यते च श्रमणी वृत्तान्ते । इदं च द्वौपदीविवाहादिवत् ऐतिहासिकविलक्षणव्याप्तिविशेषनियतमिति च नातिप्रसङ्गवकाशः ॥

<sup>2</sup> See the criticism of the Teṅgalai creed and practices in Veṅkaṭādhvārī's Vīṣṇugṇāḍarśa-campū (Bombay, 1915), Sl. 220-237, and particularly the following.

न गाहन्ते गङ्गामपि नटजटासार इति
न मज्जन्त्यम्भोर्भौ लवणरसप्रेशन्तक इति ।
न पञ्चैवं गव्यानापि पशुशकृत्सार इति इ
पिबन्त्येषां दोषान् क इह निपुणः स्याद्गणवितुम् ॥

<sup>3</sup> Ibid. 231:—

यतिमपि गृहिणां वन्दनं करवन्तः

furnished by Kiṣkindhā-kāṇḍa, iii, 2-3, where Hanumān visits Rāma in disguise as a bhikṣu, and prostrates himself before Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa (vinītavat upāgāmya Rūghavam praṇipaty ca). How can a bhikṣu make a namaskāra to gṛhasthas? Commentators have been put to difficulty in explaining away the act. Some have explained bhikṣu as brahmacārī, and others have explained that Hanumān forgot himself and his ascetic disguise in his excitement when he saw the brothers. Govindarāja's view is that the prohibition of praṇāma to gṛhasthas by ascetics is only as regards salutation of ignorant gṛhasthas, since according to Manu (II, 155) seniority among Brāhmaṇas is by wisdom (viprāṇāṃ jñānato jyeṣṭhyam). He holds that the ascetic who, recognising superior wisdom in a gṛhastha, still fails to salute him contravenes the injunction of Manu. (yadi hi jñānādhikam dṛṣṭvā karmamūrtreṇādhiko yatīḥ na praṇamet Manuvacanam virudhyate). This is support of a pure Teṅgalai doctrine, which is obnoxious to Vāḍgalais.

An important doctrinal difference between the two schools lies in their conceptions of the position of Śrī or Lakṣmī. According to the traditional Śrīvaiṣṇava view, which the Northern School upholds, Śrī is a necessary aspect of Godhood, inseparable from Viṣṇu, equally uncreated and infinite, equally illimitable. God is Śrī-nivāsa. The Teṅgalais hold her to be a finite Being, greater than others, but still a created Being, like Viṣṇu, though above him; it is open therefore to attribute to her defects, which can not logically be ascribed to God. In Sundara-kāṇḍa, xlii, 10, Sītā, whose identity with Śrī is repeatedly maintained by Govindarāja, denies to the Rākṣasa women that she knew Hanumān. (Ahamatibhītāsmi, naiva jānāmi konvayam). A controversy has raged as to whether Sītā did or did not utter a falsehood when she made this denial. Govindarāja implies that she uttered a falsehood, by his extenuation of the act. He quotes an old śloka (of which many paraphrases exist in Dharmaśāstra literature),<sup>1</sup> describing five occasions on

<sup>1</sup> 'भैरवः जानामीति' ।

“विवाहकाले रतिसंपर्काले प्राणात्यये सर्वधनापहारे ।

मित्रस्य चार्येणैव वदेयुः पञ्चानृतान्यदुरपातकानि ॥”

इति स्मरणात् असत्योक्तिः ॥ The ethics of permissible lying may be found
( continued on the next page )

which an untruth spoken does not constitute a pāṭaka ( sin ). He has explained the same dictum as inapplicable to the promise made by Daśaratha to Kaikeyī, as that promise was not made on one of the five exempted occasions. The gist of his finding is to recognize indirectly in Sītā something short of the moral perfection which should characterise Godhead. Though it may be possible to argue that this was not his view, but Vālmiki's, it looks on the face of it as a concession to the Teṅgalai concept of Śrī being in the jīvakoti ( created beings ).

To sum up, Govindarāja was a learned expounder of the Rāmāyaṇa, devoted to the God of Tirupati, where he lived in the last quarter of the fifteenth century. He wrote his great commentary in instalments, publishing them as written, receiving for the bhāṣya on the sixth canto encouragement and support from an opulent Vaiṣṇava named Bhāvanācārya. He was both critical and erudite, well versed in Veda and śāstras, and of tolerant views. His aim seems to have been not to commit himself markedly to either of the rival Vaiṣṇava schools in an epoch in which sectarian animosity had become tense. The probabilities are that he was born a Teṅgalai, who, through training and conviction, drifted away from many of the tenets of his sect, and learned to revere the great Vaḍagalai saint Vedānta Deśika. The middle position that he took has ensured for his commentary immunity from partisan attacks, which might have ignored its learning, critical acumen, aesthetic sense and eloquence, and condemned what is at present one of the best expositions of the national Epic.

---

( continued from the previous page )

discussed in Caṇḍeśvara's Gṛhastharatnākara ( Bib. Ind. 1928 ), pp. 511-513, and Lakṣmīdhara's Gṛhastha-kalpatara, which is being prepared for publication by the writer.

RTA IN THE RĠVEDA

BY

V. M. APTE

H. Oldenberg,<sup>1</sup> P. Regnaud,<sup>2</sup> W. Neisser,<sup>3</sup> E. Schwyzer,<sup>4</sup> J. Vendryes<sup>5</sup>—these are but a few of the many Indologists of the West, who have paid special attention to the significance of the word ṛtā in Vedic literature, not to mention the various lexicographers and other too well-known Vedic scholars, Indian and non-Indian, who have treated of the word, in the course of their studies! And yet, in my view, the fundamental physical sense—the primary meaning—of the word, which appears alongside of, and is yet clearly distinguishable from its widely accepted secondary or derived sense and which so eminently suits a large number of passages in the Rgveda, has not been well established though hinted at, by Ludwig<sup>6</sup> and Tilak.<sup>7</sup> The present paper attempts to present the evidence in the form of the relevant Rgvedic passages, which, in the opinion of the writer, establishes this primary physical sense.

§ 2 Rtā is derived from  $\sqrt{r}$ , to go and we recognize in it the suffix ta, which is employed almost exclusively to form past participles, chiefly with passive but sometimes with intransitive meaning. The more general and original sense of this suffix is preserved in some words used as adjectives or as substantives with concrete meaning such as our ṛtā, which should therefore, primarily, mean '(something) gone over (correctly)' or better, '(the correct order of) going' and secondarily

---

<sup>1</sup> Zur Religion und Mythologie des Veda. Nachrichten von der Gesellschaft der Wissenschaften zu Göttingen, 1915.

<sup>2</sup> Le Mot Védique ṛtā. Revue d'Histoire Religieuse. XVI 26.

<sup>3</sup> Vedica; Benzenberger's Beiträge Zur Kunde der Indogermanischen Sprachen, XIX.

<sup>4</sup> Über die altindischen und altiranischen Wörter für gut und böse; Festschrift Kaegi.

<sup>5</sup> Les correspondances de vocabulaire entre l'indo-iranien et l'italo-celtique, Mémoires de la Société de Linguistique. XX 265.

<sup>6</sup> Commentar.

<sup>7</sup> The Orion, p. 159

'the settled Order or Right.' When, in the Rgveda, the fixed path of ṛtā unerringly followed by the devās (originally 'the Shining Ones or the Luminaries') is spoken of in the Rgveda, it should, in my opinion, naturally mean 'the Zodiac' or the imaginary belt or zone in the heavens, within which, the apparent motions of the sun, moon and the principal planet or devās are confined. The semantic development of the word is, in my view, exactly parallel to that of the word 'devā' as shown below.

Ṛtā=I, The belt of the Zodiac; II, World-Order, Right, rita.

Devā=I, The Shining One; II, World-ruler, god.

But the burden of proving this proposition must fall on the Rgveda passages discussed below;—passages which clearly bring out this 'physical' sense of the word, as I proceed to show.

§ 3 An almost convincing passage is I. 164, 11<sup>1</sup>: 'The wheel of ṛtā, with twelve spokes, turns round and round heaven; here (i. e. within this wheel), O Agni, the seven hundred and twenty sons take their stand in pairs.' The circle of the zodiac, the apparent motion of the luminaries within which, gives us the twelve months ('spokes') and the 360 days and nights, is here referred to as the wheel of ṛtā. The days and nights are very appropriately described as 'standing in pairs.' They are described as 'sons' of the twelve months, just as I. 25.8 ab speaks of the "twelve months with (their) progeny" (prajā). Verse 48 of this same hymn refers to this very wheel of ṛtā, mentioning in addition, the 'three naves (nābhyaṇi)' or the three seasons of four months each.

§ 4 The following 'Dawn' passages clearly indicate the spatial character of ṛtā. The Dawn (like other luminaries) starts her visible journey from a fixed point in this ṛtā. It is only when she closely follows the path of (i. e. laid along) ṛtā, that she does not miss the directions. IV. 51.8<sup>2</sup>: 'They draw

<sup>1</sup> I. 164. 11 :—

द्वादशारं नृहि तज्जरायु बर्धति चक्रं परि वामुतस्य ।

आ पुत्रा अग्ने मिथुनासो अत्रं सप्त शतानि विंशतिश्च तस्थुः ॥

<sup>2</sup> IV. 51. 8 :—

ता आ चरन्ति समुना पुरस्तात् समानतः समुना पश्यथानाः ।

कृतस्य देवीः सदसो बुधाना गवां न समौ दुषसो जरन्ते ॥ near, in the east, in the same way, extending (themselves) from the same place, in the same way. The goddesses, the Dawns, waking from the seat of ṛtā, are on the move, like kine let loose.' I. 123. 9<sup>1</sup>: 'Knowing (as she does) the name of the first day, the Shining White One is born from out of the darkness. The Dame never misses the seat of ṛtā, approaching the appointed place, day after day.' I. 124.3<sup>2</sup>: 'This Daughter of heaven has been seen, clothing herself with lustre, in the same way, in the east. She follows correctly the path of the ṛtā; as one who knows, she does not miss the directions. V. 80.4ab<sup>3</sup>: 'She of changing colours, develops double strength, manifesting her body in the east.' The last two Pādas of this verse are identical with I. 124.3cd. III, 61.7ab<sup>4</sup>: 'The Bull (i. e. the Sun) urging on the Dawns at the bottom of ṛtā, has entered into the great heaven and earth.' X. 8.3cd.<sup>5</sup>: 'In the flight of this (Agni), the Red Ones (The Dawns?) well-bottomed on the Horse (i.e. the Sun), find pleasure in their own body, in the womb of ṛtā.

§ 5 I. 136.2ab<sup>6</sup>: 'For the broad (San), a (still) wider path,

<sup>1</sup> I. 123. 9 :—

जानृत्यहः प्रथमस्य नाम शुक्रा कुष्णादजनिद्वितीया ।
ऋतस्य योषा न मिनाति धामाहरद्विर्भूतमाचरेन्ती ॥

<sup>2</sup> I. 124. 3 :—

पृथा द्विवो दुहित्वा प्रत्यद्विषि ज्योतिर्विस्ताना समना पुरस्तात् ।
ऋतस्य पन्थामन्वेति साधु प्रजानतीव न दिशो मिनाति ॥

<sup>3</sup> V. 80. 4 :—

पृथा त्वेनी भवति द्विवर्हा आविष्कृण्वाना तन्व पुरस्तात् ।
ऋतस्य पन्थामन्वेति साधु प्रजानतीव न दिशो मिनाति ॥

<sup>4</sup> III. 61. 7 :—

ऋतस्य बुध्न उपसामिपुण्यश्च वृषां सुही रोदसी आ विवेश ।
सुही सिचस्य वरुणस्य माया चन्द्रेव भ्रातुं वि दधे पुरुवा ॥

X. 8. 3 :—

आ यो मूर्धानं पित्रोररंश्च न्यध्वरे दधिरे सूर्यो अर्णः ।
अस्य पन्थामन्वेति साधु प्रजानतीव न दिशो मिनाति ॥

<sup>6</sup> I. 136. 2 :—

अदक्षि गातुरवे वरीयसी पन्थां ऋतस्य समयस्त रदिमभिः
चक्षुर्भगस्य रदिमभिः ।

(continued on the next page)

became visible; the path of ṛtā was directed with rays...<sup>1</sup> Here, the reference to the rays of the sun as spreading on and therefore, as it were, directing the path of ṛtā makes it certain that the path was high up in the heavens and was described by the motion of the Sun across the sky. In X. 80.6c,<sup>2</sup> the path of ṛtā is described as the Gandharva path and therefore, necessarily the path high up in heaven, on which along the Gandharvas are wont to travel.

§ 6 In VI. 51.1c,<sup>3</sup> the Sun rising upwards, is described as the lovely and Shining face of ṛtā and in IV. 5-9<sup>4</sup> as 'Shining in the seat of ṛtā.' Varuṇa says (in IV. 42.4b),<sup>5</sup> 'I set heaven in the abode of ṛtā. In III. 54.6,<sup>6</sup> the Sun is described as observing 'heaven and earth rejoicing in the womb of ṛtā. X. 65.8<sup>7</sup> tells

(continued from the previous page)

युक्ते मित्रस्य सार्दनमर्ष्यं वरुणस्य च ।

अथा दधाते बृहदुक्थं १ वयं उपस्तुत्यं बृहद् वयः ॥

<sup>1</sup> X. 80. 6 :—

अग्निं विश ईळते मानुषीर्यो अग्निं मनुषो नहुषो वि जाताः ।

अग्निर्गन्धिर्वी पथ्यामृतस्याग्नेर्गन्धूतिर्धृत आ निषता ॥

<sup>2</sup> VI. 51. 1 :—

उदु त्यबभ्रुर्महि मित्रयोरो पति प्रियं वरुणयोरदधम् ।

ऋतस्य शुचिं दर्शतमर्षीकं रुक्मो न दिव उदिता व्ययीत् ॥

<sup>3</sup> IV. 5. 9 :—

इदमु त्यन्महि महामर्षीकं यदुस्त्रिया सचत पूर्व्य मीः ।

ऋतस्य पुदे अधि दीवानं गुहां रघुष्यद् रघुष्यद् विवेद ॥

<sup>4</sup> IV. 42. 4 :—

अहमुपो अपिन्वमुक्षमाणा धारयं दिवं सार्दन ऋतस्य ।

ऋतेन पुत्रो अदितेर्कुतावोत त्रिपातुं प्रथयद् वि भूम ॥

<sup>5</sup> III. 54. 6 :—

कविर्नूचक्षा आभि र्भामिषट ऋतस्य योना विधृते मदन्ती ।

नाना चक्राते सार्दनं यथा वेः सम्रातेन कर्तुना संविदाने ॥

<sup>6</sup> X. 65. 8 :—

परिक्षिता पितरा पूर्वजावरी ऋतस्य योना क्षयतः समीकसा ।

यावापृथिवी वरुणाय सव्रते धृतवद् पयो महिषाय पिन्वतः ॥

us that heaven and earth share a common abode in the womb of ṛtā (compare also VII. 53.2). All these passages are clear evidence that in the geometry of the universe, ṛtā described a well-defined figure, which held within it, heaven and earth.

§ 7 Other passages, giving clear indications of the location of ṛtā in the Rgvedic cosmos, are the following:—IV. 21.3<sup>1</sup> invokes Indra to come to the rescue 'from the farthest limit, from the abode of ṛtā.' X. 65.7<sup>2</sup> speaks of the gods, the denizens of heaven, as occupying the womb of ṛtā. According to X. 123.2<sup>3</sup> Vena (the Sun) shone on the summit of ṛtā. In I. 164.47,<sup>4</sup> the rays are described as descending from the abode of ṛtā into the darkness of the earth—II. 34. 13<sup>5</sup> refers to the Maruts (the Rudras), the Storm-gods as having prospered in the seat of ṛtā, just as, according to VII. 60.5,<sup>6</sup> the Ādityas thrive in the home

<sup>1</sup> IV. 21. 3 :—

आ यात्विन्द्रो दिव आ पृथिव्या मुख समुद्रादुत वा पुरीपाद् ।
स्वर्णरादवसे नो सुकृत्वाद् परावती वा सदेनादुतस्य ॥

<sup>2</sup> X. 65. 7 :—

दिवक्षसो अग्निजिह्वा क्षतावृध क्षतस्य योनिं विमृशन्त आसते ।
यां स्वभित्त्वाप आ चक्रुरोजसा युतं जनिन्वी तुन्वी नि मांसुजः ॥

<sup>3</sup> X. 123. 2 :—

समुद्रादूर्ध्वमुदियति वेनो नभोजाः पुष्टं हयितस्य दर्शि ।
क्षतस्य सानावाधि विष्टपि घाद् समानं योनिमुभ्यनुपत वाः ॥

<sup>4</sup> I. 164. 47 :—

कृष्णं नियानं हरयः सुपर्णा अपो वसाना दिवमुत्पतन्ति ।
त आचवृत्रन् सदेनादुतस्यादिष्ट धृतेन पृथिवी व्युद्यते ॥

<sup>5</sup> II. 34. 13 :—

ते क्षोणीभिररुणेभिर्नाभिर्मा हव्रा क्षतस्य सदेनेषु वावृधुः ।
निमेघमाना अस्येन पाजसा सुवृचन् वणं इधरे सुपेशंसम् ॥

<sup>6</sup> VII. 60. 5 :—

इमे जेतारो अनृतस्य भूरैः भित्रो अयमा वरुणो हि सन्ति ।
इम क्षतस्य वावृधुर्दुरोणे जग्मासः पुत्रा अदितेरदन्धाः ॥

of ṛtā. In VIII. 22.7,<sup>1</sup> the Āsvins are implored to approach along the paths of ṛtā. VIII. 12.3<sup>2</sup> tells us that Indra drove the waters (cosmic?) like cars along the path of ṛtā. The 11th<sup>3</sup> verse of I. 46, a hymn to the Āsvins is very helpful: The Sun appears (v. 10) and then the path of ṛtā and the road to heaven become manifest to facilitate the journey to the farther goal (v. 11). V. 45.7<sup>4</sup> and 8<sup>5</sup> tell us that Saramā recovered the Cows (only) by going along ṛtā (v. 7) or along the Path of ṛtā (v. 8). The 'cows' are possibly the rays of Dawn (compare X, 67.5; 68.9).

§ 8 Finally, I may state that scattered throughout the Rgveda are indications of the extent and dimensions of ṛtā, as for example, its altitude (śṛṅga) in VIII. 86.5, its lowest depth or bottom (budhnā) in III. 61.7, its fount or well (khā) in II. 28.5, its network (prāsiti) in X. 92.4. Unfortunately, however, all these have been explained away as mere figurative descriptions of ṛtā in the sense of 'World-order' or 'Moral Order,' even when there was no necessity to do so!

<sup>1</sup> VIII. 22. 7 :—

उषं नो वाजिनविष्य यातनृतस्य पृथिभिः ।
येभिस्तुक्षि वृषणा त्रासदस्तुवं मुहे कुत्रापि जिन्वथः ॥

<sup>2</sup> VIII. 12. 3 :—

येन सिन्धुं महीरूपो रथी इव प्रचोदयः ।
पन्यामृतस्य यातवे तर्मासहे ॥

<sup>3</sup> I. 46. 11 :—

अभूदु पारमेतवे पन्यां कृतस्य साधुया ।
अदर्शि वि स्मृतिर्विवः ॥

<sup>4</sup> V. 45. 7 :—

अनृतोदत्र इस्तयतो अद्विराचन् येन दशं मासो नवंगवाः ।
कृतं युती सुरमा मा अविन्दद् विश्वानि सत्याङ्गिराश्चकार ॥

<sup>5</sup> V. 45. 8 :—

विश्वे अस्या व्युपि माहिनायाः सं यद् गोभिराङ्गिरसो नवन्त ।
उत्सं आसां परमे सुधस्य कृतस्य पथा सुरमा विदद् माः ॥

SANKHA-LIKHITA BRAHMACARIYA

Its Pali Interpretation confirmed in Chinese Texts

By

P. V. BAPAT

In an old stock passage in the Nikāyas (Dīgha, 2nd sutta, §§40-41) we find the following paragraphs—

"Idha, Mahārāja, Tathāgato loka uppajjati Araham Sammā-sambuddho.... So dhammam deseti ādī-kalyāṇam majjhe-kalyāṇam pariyoṣāṇa-kalyāṇam.... Tam dhammam supāti gahapati vā gahapatiputto vā... ; iti patisañcekhati 'sambādhō gharāvāso rajā-patho, ābbhokāso pabbajjā ; na-yidam sukaram agāramajjhāvasatā ekantaparipunnam ekantaparisuddham sankha-likhitaṃ brahmacariyam caritum : yannūnāham kesamassum ohāretvā kāsāyāni vatthāni acchādetvā agārasmā anagāriyam pabbajeyyam' ti."

"Here, O great king, a Tathāgata is born in the world, an Arhat, a fully-enlightened one....He preaches a doctrine which is auspicious at the beginning, auspicious at the middle and auspicious at the end....It is listened to by a house-holder or the son of a house-holder....Thus he reflects: staying in a house is like staying in a crowded place, a place full of dust. Renouncing one's house is like moving out in the open. It is not easy for a person living in a house to practise the holy life—a life, entirely perfect and entirely pure, and (described as) sankha-likhita. Hence, I should shave off the hair on the head and beard, put on yellowish garments and go forth into the houseless state."

This passage is again and again repeated in the Nikāyas. It occurs in the Dīgha, suttas 3.30, 4.23, 6.16, 10.2.7, 12.19, 13.41, in most of which the passage occurs in the peyyāla abbreviations. It also occurs in the Majjhima, suttas no. 27, 36, 38, 51, 82, 112 etc. as well as in other Nikāyas, either in full or in an abbreviated form.

In what sense is the expression sankha-likhita used? As far as the text goes, there is nothing in it to indicate the exact interpretation which was put upon it. This much, however, seems to be clear that it must refer to a life of holiness found, away from one's house, in a houseless state, in the perfect and pure life of a wandering anachorite. We have an authoritative explanation given by Buddhaghosa early in the fifth century A. D. In DCM. i, 181, he explains it as 'likhita-sankha-sadisa, dhota-sankha-sapṭibhāga.' MCM. ii, 205, PugCM. p. 65 (Simon Hewavitarāna ed.) also give the same explanation. Dhammapāla in his Commentary (p. 308) on Ud. V. 6 (the story of Soṇa Kuṭikappa) gives the same explanation as that of Buddhaghosa. It means 'like a polished conch, like a conch washed clean.'

In his History of Pre-Buddhist Indian Philosophy (p. 241 n. 6) Prof. B. M. Barua suggests that the Pali Commentator, Buddhaghosa, has altogether lost sight of the historical significance of this expression. He thinks the expression means the holy life prescribed by Śaṅkha-Likhita, the two famous jurists, whose names had become proverbial, as may be judged from the use of this expression, in the time of the Buddha. Prof. P. V. Kane in his History of Dharmaśāstra (vol. I section 13) gives a whole section on the Dharma-sūtra of Śaṅkha-Likhita. In the Annals of the Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute, Vol. VII, pp. 101-28, Prof. Kane has also given a collection of the quotations ascribed to Śaṅkha or Śaṅkha-Likhita, gathered from several texts. Many of these extracts are in prose and Prof. Kane suggests that there existed a prose gūtra of Śaṅkha-Likhita, which was later followed by versified smṛtis. He also points out that in some cases there are discrepancies between prose sūtra and versified smṛtis. In the collection of eighteen smṛtis, there is a work called Śaṅkha-smṛti in 18 chapters as well as a short Likhita-smṛti. Ānandaśrama has published, in Vol. 45, Laghu-Śaṅkha-smṛti, Likhita-smṛti, Śaṅkha-Likhita-smṛti and Śaṅkha-smṛti. In the Mahābhārata (IL 8.11) Śaṅkha and Likhita are mentioned as great sages sitting as members of an assembly. In another place (Śāntiparva 23. 18-50) Śaṅkha remonstrates with his brother Likhita who had come to him on a visit, for having eaten fruits not given to him. He insists on Likhita's going to King Sudyumna and asking for the infliction upon himself of a legal punishment for the offence of taking things not given to him (adattādāna). Likhita has had his hands cut off for the offence but he gets them back after having gone through a penance.

Thus it will be seen that there is a regular tradition of the school of Sankha and Likhita among the Brahmins and it is not unlikely that this Brahmanical tradition was unknown to the Great Pali Commentator, Buddhaghosa, who often exhibits ignorance of Brahmanical beliefs and Brahmanical customs. In his Introduction (pp. xiii-xiv) to the Devanāgarī edition of the Visuddhimagga (Bhāratīya Vidya Series no. 1, Andherī, Bombay 1940) Prof. Dharmananda Kosambi has shown how we can infer from Buddhaghosa's comment upon 'Bandhupādāpaccā' and upon 'Bhūnahu' that he was ignorant of the true interpretations of these terms, which one can understand correctly from the study of Brahmanical literature.

But Buddhaghosa is not alone. Dhammapāla also who exhibits a greater acquaintance with the Brahmanical tradition follows Buddhaghosa in his explanation. It may, however, be argued that Dhammapāla after all belongs to the same tradition as that of Buddhaghosa. But this is not all. There is another vast source—that of the Chinese translations of the Āgamas of the Sarvāstivāda School of Buddhism or of another work on Vinaya of the Hīnayānists. Several of the suttas from the Nikāyas referred to above at the beginning of this paper have their counterparts in the Chinese translations of the Āgamas such as Dīrghāgama, Madhyamāgama etc. These translations reveal no trace, whatsoever, of the proper names of Sankha or Likhita, but they give only the general rendering of 'pure, holy life.' See Dīrghāgama<sup>1</sup> 13. 7a 3-4; 15. 9b. 5-6; 16. 3b. 2. Other passages at 15. 9a-9b, 16. 19b. 5 pass over the expression in the peyyāla abbreviation. In Madhyamāgama also (31. 2. 6, 36. 12. 6) we find no other interpretation but 'pure, entirely pure' etc. These instances are, however, not convincing, as the Chinese translators might have entirely passed over the expression 'sankha-likhita' and given rendering only of the other two expressions 'ekantaparipunnāṃ, ekantaparissuddhaṃ.' So it was necessary to find out a passage in a commentary where is given an expression corresponding to 'sankha-likhita' and actually commented upon. After a long hunt, fortunately, I could come across a passage of this type. In Shān-cien-phi-po-shā-lūh (Nanjio No. 1125), there is a passage (5. 4b. 6-7 in the bold type edition; Vol. 24, p. 711b, 11-12 of the Taisho edition) which corresponds to Samantapāsādikā (commentary on the Vinayapiṭaka) vol. i. p. 203 where is commented upon the expression 'sankha-likhita' occurring in a passage taken from Vin. iii. 12, Suttavibhanga i. 5. 1-2. Here is the English rendering of the Chinese passage:—

<sup>1</sup> References are to the edition of bold letters in block print, apparently the same used by Nanjio for his Catalogue.

"He thus thinks: To practise in one's house the Brahmacharya consisting of the practice of Conduct, Concentration and Insight (Sīla, Samādhi, Paññā) even for a day is to have it with imperfections. It is a matter which is very difficult and not appropriate for a stay-at-home. Like polishing of a gem (Mo-cho, Radical 112 plus 11 strokes and Radical 96—according to Couvreur 95 — plus 8 strokes).

Question—What is polishing of a gem (Mo-cho)?

Answer—Just as a lapidary who polishes a gem exceedingly is able to turn it white and pure, so to practise (holy life) in a house and turn it into what may be compared to a polished gem is a thing exceedingly difficult to accomplish."

Thus it will be clear from above that the word 'likhita' is interpreted as 'polished,' a sense agreeing with that found in Pali Commentaries. The word 'sankha' is interpreted in a wider, looser and a generic sense. The Chinese translator had probably no exact, specific idea of that word. We know how the conch (sankha) occupies a prominent and esteemed position in the accessories of worship or the paraphernalia of the coronation of a monarch. See, for instance the list of objects exchanged by Emperor Asoka and Devānampiyatissa of Ceylon. (Samantapāsādikā, i. p. 75). He has, therefore, interpreted the word in the sense of a precious stone, a gem or a jewel. The translator has tried to come as near the original as possible. Sankha is considered to be an emblem<sup>1</sup> of whiteness or purity.

The two words used by the Chinese translator—Mo Cho—convey the same idea of purity of a gem. Couvreur in his Dictionnaire Classique de la Langue Chinoise (1930) gives on p. 584, 2nd column, under the word Cho an illustration of the use of this word. There he gives the example of a sage perfecting himself like a lapidary who cuts and polishes a precious stone. So the idea of extreme purity is clearly conveyed by these two words.

<sup>1</sup> Śaṅkhavarṇakṣurāḥ smṛtāḥ (Likhitasamṛtiḥ 14); na śaṅkhabhṛvamuḥ-jhātī śaṅkhaḥ śikhibhuktamukto'pi (Pāṭicatantra, 4, 110).

Now the question is: in what sense is the expression sankha-likhita used in the stock passage of the Nikāyas reproduced at the beginning of this paper? The passage is from one of the oldest strata<sup>1</sup> of the Dīgha Nikāya, and for that matter even of all the Nikāyas. The writer's intention appears to convey the nature of purity rather than the origin or source of pure life. He wants to show that in a house-holder's life it is not possible to live that pure spotless life—the life as pure as a polished conch-shell. This word, so to say, supplies an illustration explaining the two previous words 'ekantaparipunnam ekantaparisuddham' 'perfect in all respects, pure in entirety.' The pure life of holiness that is implied here—the pure life of an ideal anchorite may be described to have been in existence long before Śāṅkha-Likhita. Even the earlier Dharmasūtras of Gautama, Āpastamba and others contain passages which more appropriately describe the holy life of a Brahmacāri or an ascetic. On a careful comparison with the relevant Dharmasūtras of Gautama and Āpastamba, the writer of this paper is inclined to believe that these sūtras come closer to the earlier passages of the Nikāyas. If the holy life of an ascetic can be supposed to have gone under the name of Śāṅkha-Likhita—who, according to Prof. Kane,<sup>2</sup> may be placed somewhere between 300 B. C. and 100 A. D.—it would be more in the fitness of things to believe that it could have been styled after the Dharmasūtrakāras of the earliest past.

As has been shown, the Buddhist tradition does not support this view. Not only Buddhaghosa and Dhammapāla of the Pāli school, but also the Sarvāstivāda tradition, as represented by the Chinese translations of the Āgamas made towards the end of the fourth or at the beginning of the fifth century A. D. make no mention of these writers. Although Tipiṭaka literature exhibits but slight acquaintance with the Mahābhārata, Buddhaghosa does make references to the names of Rāmāyaṇa and Bhārata (Comment on akkhāṇa in D. sutta I, para. 13) as well as to some of the principal characters in the Bhārata (Visuddhimagga ed.

<sup>1</sup> Annals of the B. O. R. Institute, VIII. 1-16

<sup>2</sup> Ibid., Vol. VII. 105.

<sup>3</sup> [Annals, B. O. R. I, ]

by Kosambi, VIII. 19). Sarvāstivādins who accepted Sanskrit as the language of their literature may certainly be expected to know more of the Brahmanical tradition. All these do not support the contention. The Chinese translation by Saṅghabhadra in 488-89 A. D. of the Vinaya-Commentary definitely interprets the expression as 'polished like a gem.' It is by no means certain that Buddhaghosa was the author of Samantapāsādikā, the Vinaya-Commentary, to which the Chinese Version quoted above corresponds, although tradition ascribed the authorship of this work also to him. Chapters 3, 6 and 7 of the Śāṅkhasmṛti (which may be said to be dealing with what may be compared to the holy life of an anchorite) does not contain, barring of course some matter which has no relation with the outward life of an anchorite, any topics which are not found in earlier Dharmasūtras. The Śāṅkhasmṛti may be considered to be a literary successor of the Dharmasūtra of Śāṅkha or Śāṅkha-Likhita. It is a revised but a versified version of the earlier Dharmasūtra, in which the reviser has perhaps taken the liberty of modifying the earlier texts to suit the new ideas of later times. In any way, the Śāṅkhasmṛti as it exists now, along with the collection of passages made from the quotations ascribed to Śāṅkha-Likhita, does not justify any claim, on behalf of Śāṅkha and Likhita, to be the originators of sāṅkha-likhita Brahmacariya. The Likhitasmṛti consisting of 93 verses dealing with rituals of sacrifices or śrāddha offerings has still lesser claim.

Thus we conclude that in spite of the Brahmanical tradition about the Dharmasūtrakāras, Śāṅkha and Likhita, which may have had an independent existence, there is no cogent reason to believe that sāṅkha-likhita Brahmacariya had anything to do with the Brahmanical Dharmasūtrakāras, Śāṅkha and Likhita.

THE LAST MESSAGE OF VALLABHĀCĀRYA

BY

G. H. BHATT

It is stated in one <sup>1</sup> of the works of Vallabhācārya that he was twice asked by the Lord Kṛṣṇa to leave the world—once on the confluence of the Ganges and the sea, and once in Mathurā in the United Provinces—, but could not carry out that divine command, as his mission was not fulfilled. After travelling, more than once, in the whole of India, Vallabhācārya spent his days in Adel, a small village two miles away from Allahabad. When the Ācārya completed his important literary works, and commanded a good following, he received the third call from the Lord to take Saṁnyāsa. In response to the divine call the Ācārya made all preparations for becoming a Saṁnyāsī, took the Tridanda Saṁnyāsa, burnt all his property and lived on the bank of the Ganges, meditating upon the Lord, and desiring to meet Him as early as possible. Later on, the Ācārya went to Benares, and spent about a week on the famous Hanumān Ghāṭa, maintaining complete silence and abstaining from taking food. This was the last week of the order of Saṁnyāsa which continued, in all, for about two months. The Ācārya has very well expressed his views on Saṁnyāsa in one <sup>2</sup> of his short treatises.

The two sons of Vallabhācārya, Gopināthajī and Viṭṭhalanāthajī, who were seventeen and fifteen years old respectively, and the leading followers like Dāmodarādāsajī, waited upon the Ācārya even during the period of Saṁnyāsa, and followed him even to Benares. When they saw, on the second day of the bright half of the month of Āśāḍha of the V. S. 1587 (=1531 A. D.), that the Ācārya was on the point of leaving this world, they re-

---

1 अन्तःकरणसौध. The relevant verses are as follows—

आज्ञा पूर्वं तु वा जाता गङ्गासागरसङ्गमे ॥ ५ ॥

वापि पश्चात्प्रवृत्ते न कृतं तद् दृष्टं मया ।

देहदेशपरित्यागस्तृतीयो लोकगोचरः ॥ ६ ॥

2 संन्यासनिर्णय.

requested him to enlighten them as regards their duty in future. As the Ācārya was following the vow of silence, he wrote, in Sanskrit, three and a half verses<sup>1</sup> which embody the noblest teaching of the Ācārya. These verses are popularly known as Śikṣāśārdhātṛayaśloki, and are commented upon by one of the later descendants of Vallabhācārya, Dvārikeśaji by name, who flourished in the early part of the nineteenth century A. D. The verses in question have been, from the earliest times, a source of inspiration to many descendants and followers of Vallabhācārya, and have exercised such a wonderful influence in the history of the Vallabhācāryan School that writers like Harirāyaṇi (17th century A. D.) could not resist the temptation of writing short treatises<sup>2</sup> on the same subject.

The last instructions, thus given by the Ācārya to his sons and followers, refer to four points which are most important from the view point of the Śuddhādvaita School. The first point that is properly emphasised is 'not to turn away from the Lord Kṛṣṇa under any circumstances.' There are, generally, four causes of the spirit of indifference to the Lord, viz. (1) worshipping deities other than the Lord Kṛṣṇa, (2) enjoying things without dedicating them to the Lord, (3) speaking evil things, and (4) the absence of good company. One who, under the influence of these four things, neglects the worship of the Lord, invites total ruin, and should therefore, try one's best to be free from this evil influence. The second point, mentioned by the Ācārya, is that one should not look upon the Lord Kṛṣṇa as an ordinary master in the world who invariably dismisses his servants when they are found to be guilty. The Lord is always kind to all those who, once for all, surrender themselves to Him,

- १
 सदा बहिर्मुखा सूर्यं भविष्यथ कथंचन ।
 तदा कालप्रवाहस्य देहचिन्तादपोऽप्युत ॥ १ ॥
 सर्वथा भक्षयिष्यन्ति युष्मानिति मतिर्मम ।
 न लौकिकः प्रभुः कुण्ठो मनुते नैव लौकिकम् ॥ २ ॥
 मायस्तत्राध्यस्मदीयः सर्वस्वत्रैहिकस्य सः ।
 परलोकस्य तेनार्यं सर्वभावेन सर्वथा ॥ ३ ॥
 सेव्यः स एव गोपीशो विधास्यत्यसिलं हि नः ॥ ३ ॥

बहिर्मुखत्वनिरूपण and बहिर्मुखत्वनिवृत्ति

and does not reject these devotees even when they happen to show some weaknesses later on. The next point to which the Ācārya draws the attention of his followers is that the Lord never accepts the service of a person who is not completely devoted to Him, and whose interest more or less lies in the material world. The Lord should be, of course, worshipped in the manner, shown by the Ācārya himself. The last point that is referred to in the message is that one should worship the Lord from all points of view and under all circumstances, and the Lord, when thus worshipped, will manage all our things, both here and elsewhere.

After delivering this message to the world, the Ācārya entered into the sacred waters of the Ganges, and according to the tradition,<sup>1</sup> came out in the form of divine light which went up in the sky. The Ācārya lived in this world for fifty-eight years two months and seven days only.

The tradition, again, says that immediately after the disappearance of the Ācārya from this world, the Lord Kṛṣṇa manifested Himself before the sons and the followers of the Ācārya who were still waiting there mourning over the loss of their spiritual guide, and consoled<sup>2</sup> them by saying that they should not be nervous, that they should have complete confidence in Him, who is dear to the Gopis and to whom the Gopis are dear, and, should thereby, fulfil their goal. The Lord, further, said that the real liberation of an individual soul consisted in the enjoyment of its natural state after rejecting the material form made up of the twenty-eight elements. The followers of the Ācārya could, no doubt, gather courage by the words of the Lord and lived upto the highest ideal to such an extent that their names are, even now, remembered with due reverence.

The two young sons of the Ācārya maintained the best traditions of their father. The whole responsibility of the school devolved on the second son, Viṭṭhalanāthajī, after the demise of his elder brother Gopināthajī, and it must be said to the credit of

<sup>1</sup> Recorded by Dvārikāśāhī in his Sanskrit Commentary on the last verses of the Ācārya, and by Yadanāthajī in his Vallabhadigvijaya.

<sup>2</sup> मयि चेदस्ति विश्वासः श्रीगोपीजनपङ्कजे ।
तदा कृतार्थो पूर्वं हि शोचनीयं न कर्हिचित् ॥ १ ॥
मुक्तिर्हितान्पदारूपं स्वरूपेण व्यवस्थितिः ॥ २ ॥

Viṭṭhalanāthaji that he not only succeeded in discharging his duties as the son and successor of the Ācārya but developed the aesthetic side of the Śuddhādvaita Vedānta, exercised greater influence in the different parts of India, enjoyed the patronage of many ruling princes and secured a greater following. The History of the Vallabhācāryan School clearly shows that the last wish of the founder was fulfilled by many followers of the School and whenever there was any undesirable case of departure, the result was most deplorable as predicted by the Ācārya. The last message of Vallabhācārya is sufficient by itself to give us a fair idea of the grand ideal set up by him, and to show, at the same time, how the charge of sensualism that is undeservedly levelled against the teaching of the Ācārya is quite groundless.

THE PLACE OF TĀJ IN WORLD ARCHITECTURE

BY

M. A. CHAGHTAI

It cannot be denied that every country and every nation has its own peculiarities and its own masterpieces in arts but there are a few of them which to day occupy an international position in the general domain of fine arts. The Tāj Mahāl of Agra to-day is, no doubt, counted as one of the marvels of world architecture for its special features which have been more or less described elsewhere<sup>1</sup> but one has well remarked that to 'describe the Tāj is absolutely impossible. It symbolises the poetry of architecture and embodies in marble the undying love of a king.'<sup>2</sup> It behoves us, therefore, to say something about its place in world architecture.

It should be clearly stated here that it is our aim to discuss some points of comparison and contrast by putting the Tāj among the famous domed buildings which are historically either earlier than it or at least contemporary with it.

There has been a long controversy about the origin of the dome as to whether it first appeared in the East or in the West. It has now been established that the dome existed in the East in very ancient days.<sup>3</sup> However, it can safely be contended that the Dome of the Rock (Qubbatu's-Sakhrah), a building of impressive size and monumental character on an octagonal base has been existing at Jerusalem since the seventh century of the Christian era, when the Caliph Omar captured it in 637, although it embodies today many later developments.<sup>4</sup> The term Dome, as defined by the experts, can really be applied to the Dome of

<sup>1</sup> Refer to Chaghtai, M. A. Le Tadj Mahal d'Agra, Bruxelles, 1938.

<sup>2</sup> The late Rt. Hon. Sayed Amir Ali, Islamic Culture in India, Vide Islamic Culture, Hyderabad, 1927, p. 516.

<sup>3</sup> Gossiet Alphonse. Les Coupoles d'Orient et d'Occident, Paris 1889, Creswell, Persian Doms before 1400 vide Furlington Magazine, 1915, pp. 145 and 208; and La géographie et les Origines du Premier Art Roman by J. Puig i Cadafalch, Paris, 1935, p. 252.

<sup>4</sup> Encyclopedia Britannica 11th Ed. Art. Jerusalem.

the Rock and to other such domes that appear after it in adjoining countries, such as: Syria, Turkey, Egypt and Algeria. In Egypt especially the Dome of Ibn Tulun, and the grand mosque in Karavan, etc. are the replicas of that of the Rock.

From the very beginning the dome or qubba among the Arabs has been a characteristic of a tomb and where such tombs are found in abundance in Islamic countries, these places were named Qubba or Qubāb.<sup>1</sup> When the Muslim domination extended over an area wider than that of the Roman Empire and many nations embraced Islam whose architecture differed much from that of Rome and was in some cases even older, the Muslims employed Armenian masons in putting up their monuments. The adoption of the dome as a distinctive feature became common among the Arabs for their shrines and they showed in their construction the same judgment and skill as was shown by the Romans and Byzantines before them. 'But these were not the only dome builders on the earth; and Strzygowski, the protagonist of Iranian inspiration, argues that the Eastern dome originated in Asia Minor or farther east, passed through Armenia to Byzantium, and thence to the Balkans and Russia under the patronage of the Greek churches.'<sup>2</sup> Arthur Kingsley Porter has well remarked that the pendentives (mukarrinas), the main feature of the dome construction, were known in the East at a very early epoch and the arch among the Arabs was so common as a special feature of construction that they used to say 'an arch never sleeps.'<sup>3</sup>

Similarly at Constantinople, the capital of the Byzantine Empire, the dome with best specimens of pendentives appeared in St. Sophia in the early days, although it also witnessed many later developments.

Even before the conquest of Constantinople in 1453 at the hands of Sultan Muhammad II, almost all the empires including

<sup>1</sup> Encyclopaedia of Islam, Suppl. No. Art. Qubba. J. Strzygowski, Origin of Christian Church, Oxford, 1923, pp. 64. Yaqut Hamavi, Muḥam'at-Buldan, Vol. II, pp. 66, Vol. IV, p. 23, German Edition.

<sup>2</sup> Briggs, S. M., Architecture vide Legacy of Islam, Oxford, 1931, p. 100; J. Strzygowski, op. cit., p. 27.

<sup>3</sup> Porter, A. Kingsley, Medieval Architecture, New York, 1912, Vol. I, p. 105.

Muslim powers in different parts, had developed and established their own particular styles of architecture. It was the period when the ancient remains of the Greeks, Romans, Egyptians, Byzantines and Iranians had begun to be counted as classics in art. Italy, however, was already enjoying a brighter aspect of life which is aptly called the Renaissance. The architecture of this period has well been described as below:—'The Tuscans never forgot the domes of their remote ancestors, the Romans adhered closely to Latin tradition, the Southerners were affected by Byzantine and Sarassenic models which the Italians blended in their architecture'.<sup>1</sup> This movement gave to Italy an immortal life in all aspects of Arts and Letters which no country or nation had dreamt of before. It also became the cause of attraction of a good many people from other parts of the world who sowed the seeds of revivals of learning in their own respective countries. As the Italian Renaissance was a movement for 'the attainment of self-conscious freedom by the human spirit' as manifested in the European races, so the causes and effects of this Italian revival brought about tremendous change all over Europe both in cultural aspects and political awakening. Accordingly France enjoyed the effects of this revival in the period of Louis XIV as Italy did during the Renaissance.

This was the time when many travellers both from the East and the West began to tread the world and thus the communication in cultural aspects came into vogue between the East and the West and the travellers began to describe their observations of the marvels of art of other countries on comparative lines. Many French travellers went to India through Persia or by the sea and after visiting the Taj, they wrote what they observed and compared it with their own architectural masterpieces both in Italy and France.<sup>2</sup>

As to the monumental function of the Taj Mahal, it is served by only two such domed European monuments, viz. the Pantheon of Rome and the Pantheon of Paris. The former is at present called St. Maria Rotonda.<sup>3</sup> It has a vaulted roof and it was founded in A. D. 112 on a circular base. The experts have compared its dimensions with those of the dome of the mausoleum of Sultan Muhammad Adil Shah at Bijapur built in 1656 and proved that the latter known as the Gol Gumbad is the largest dome in the world.<sup>1</sup> The Pantheon of Paris was founded in 1735. In Europe domed monuments on a polygonal base are very scarce but we have plenty of them in the East. In Persia at Sultanya the mosque-mausoleum of Sultan Oljaitu Khuda Banda (1307) is one of the most beautiful and artistic domes of the East on an octagonal base.<sup>2</sup> In India the first so far known octagonal building is the tomb of Feroz Shah Tughluq at Dehli built in 1389. Humayun's tomb and the Taj are built on a quasi-octagonal base, which the experts have called Muthamman Baghdadi and which is very rare in Europe.

<sup>1</sup> Symond, Addington, Renaissance in Italy (The Modern Library Series) New York, 1935, Vol. I, p. 609.

<sup>2</sup> Chaghtai, M. A. Is there European Influence in the Taj, Islamic Culture, Hyderabad, Dn. 1940.

<sup>3</sup> Baedekar, E., Central Italy and Rome, 1912, p. 192.

M. Durand, a great French author on architecture has well arranged, as below, in his great work, the Recueil et Parallele all such domed monuments of countries on a comparative<sup>3</sup> basis.

St. Sophia at Constantinople 7th century.

St. Marc of Venice 977.

St. Maria of Florence 1425.

Taj Mahal, the Mausoleum of the Wife of Shah Jahan at Agra 1631.

St. Peter of Rome 1636-1661.

Dome of Invalids at Paris, 17th century.

Pantheon of Paris 1735.

All these above noted European domes, contrary to the East, have almost one prototype, because they resemble each other both in appearance and fundamentals.

When I placed the plan of the Taj before Prof. Paul Bigot at my alma mater L'Ecole Nationale Supérieure des Beaux-Arts, Paris to seek his advice on certain points, he at once pointed out that it was exactly similar to the Dome des Invalides, the present mausoleum of Napoleon. But this dome of Paris has its prototype in St. Maria de Carignano Eglise de L'Assomption, Genoa.

<sup>1</sup> Watts, Ed. The Largest Dome in the world, The Daily Statesman Calcutta, 25th Oct. 1932.

<sup>2</sup> Creswell, Capt. K. A. C. The Evolution of the Persian Dome, Indian Antiquary, 1915.

<sup>3</sup> Durand J. N. L. Recueil et Parallele des Edifices de Tout Genre Ancient et Modern, Paris, 1817, Pls. 9, 11, 12.

built in 1552, which has a similar plan and apart from it has four minaret-like towers on four corners. <sup>1</sup>

I revert to the discussion at the beginning. Fergusson says-- 'The one thing I was least prepared for was the extreme beauty of the interior of the building. I remember perfectly the effect of the Taj Mahal and other great imperial tombs at Agra and Delhi. But so far as my knowledge extends, the Dome of the Rock surpasses them all. There is an elegance of proportion--which, does not exist in any other building I am acquainted with.' <sup>2</sup> After quoting this opinion of Fergusson we find that almost all the above noted domed monuments of Europe and the East came into existence after the Dome of the Rock at Jerusalem.

The Crypt is a great architectural feature of the Taj and it is worth our while to trace its origin, while its particular functions concern a Mausoleum. In churches it was employed for the galleries of a catacomb or for the catacomb itself but later on it became a sub-terranean chapel known as a 'Confession' erected round the tomb of a martyr, or the place of martyrdom. The most important crypt being perhaps in Italy viz.--that of St. Mark at Venice. <sup>3</sup> Thus it became a necessary part of tombs and churches. The Musalmans also began to use it as the actual grave chamber for the mausoleums and various examples of this can be seen in Turkey <sup>4</sup> and other countries, but the best specimen being at Samarcand in the mausoleum of Bibi Khānum known as the Gour-i-Amir, because Amir Timur himself later on was buried therein. <sup>5</sup> It subsequently became a special feature of the Mughal mausoleums for the princesses who generally observe pardah; perhaps with the idea to keep even their dead bodies in seclusion this under-ground chamber was adopted for their actual graves. They called it sardūna. There are various

<sup>1</sup> Grameri, Georges, L'Architecture de la Renaissance en Italie, Paris, 1931, p. 168, fig. 80 and Gauthier M. P. Les plus Beaux Edifices de la Ville de Genes pls. 40-43.

<sup>2</sup> Lewis, T. Hayter, The Holy Places of Jerusalem, (London) 1883, pp. 26-27.

<sup>3</sup> Encyclopedia Britannica, Art. Crypt.

<sup>4</sup> Gabriel, Albert. Monuments Turcs d'Anatolie, Paris, 1930-34. Vol. I, p. 68.

<sup>5</sup> Les Mosques de Samarcand, La Gour-Emir, St. Petersburg, 1905.

mausoleums of male personages of the Mughals which are without it while those of princesses are with a crypt even at Lahore<sup>1</sup> and other places. Moreover, it cannot be denied that apart from this consideration in some places Muslim tombs can be seen bearing crypts where particularly the question of masonry concerns keeping in view the condition of sites on which they are built.

It will not be out of place to add here a few words about the pietra dura decoration of the Taj with a view to distinguish it from the mosaics found in Jerusalem, Syria, Constantinople, Italy etc. Gustave le Bon has well said—'The Arabs make use of two sorts of mosaics; one on the floor and wall covering them with pieces of marble or enamelled coloured pieces of bricks of a varied size and the other on the walls of the Mihrabs (arches). The latter is certainly Byzantine in character.'<sup>2</sup> In the light of this, therefore, we may say that the decoration of the Taj is quite distinct and is above all comparison.

After placing the Taj among the well-known monuments of various countries it may be added that its special architectural features, embodied in its double dome, pietra dura decoration on its spandrils and perfectly symmetrical<sup>3</sup> and cylindrical round minarets, and underground sepulchral vault collectively give it a distinction in world architecture and thus it constitutes a class by itself. Points of resemblance may be found here and there between the Taj and the best specimens of world architecture but this circumstance does not effect its independence for which it is regarded as unique and simply marvellous.

<sup>1</sup> Chaghtai, M. A. The So-called Tomb and Gardens of Zebu'n-Nisa at Lahore, Islamic Culture, Hyderabad Dn. 1935.

Some of the prominent Mughal Mausoleums with crypt		without crypt

Lahore:—	A H		A H
The so-called Anarakali	1034	Shah Abu'l-Masali	1024
Ali Mardan Khan's mother	1054	Jahangir	1037
Nur Jahan	1055	Asaf Khan	1051
Delhi:—
Abdurrahim Khan Khanan's wife	1027	Humayun	963
Agra:—
Qandhari Begam	1027	Akbar	1014
Taj Mahal	1040	'Itimadu' d-Dowla	1031

<sup>2</sup> Le Bon, Gustave. La Civilization des Arabes, Paris 1884 pp. 559-60.

<sup>3</sup> Chaghtai, M. A. Pietra Dura Decoration of the Taj, Islamic Culture, Hyderabad, Dn. Oct. 1941.

ON PĀṆINI'S SŪTRA VII-1-90--WRONG WORDING OR CORRUPT READING?

BY

S. P. CHATURVEDI

The commentators of Pāṇini (=P) have proposed in many cases amendments in the wording of the P. Sūtras with a view to include the desired and exclude the undesired forms in the then current Sanskrit language. But sometimes their proposed amendments are off the mark: what they amend is not really an incorrect statement, but only a corrupt reading, for which P. cannot be reasonably held responsible. To substantiate the above remark, an attempt is made below in connection with P. 7-1-90.

The P. Sūtra (gato vit. 7-1-90) as read in the current text, lays down the strengthening of o into au in the first five forms (three in the nominative and two in the objective) in the declension of go (cow)-stem. The P. Sūtra (autam-śasoḥ 6-1-93) changes o of an o-ending stem into ā, if the affixes am and śas follow it. Accepting the present reading of the above two Sūtras as correct, a number of difficulties arise and they are discussed by Paṭanjali (=Pat.). The application of P. 6-1-93 in such conjugational forms as acinavam (first person singular, imperfect-lāṭ-tense from the root ci- to gather) will have to be avoided either by limiting this sūtra to go-stem only (i. e., by reading ā gataḥ in place of autah = ā + atah) or by bringing the natural anuvṛtti of supi in this sūtra from the preceding sūtra (6-1-92). The am in acinavam not being a sup (a declensional affix), the sūtra 6-1-93 is not applicable there. But there arises another difficulty. The general sūtra 6-1-93 (being applicable in the case of all o-ending stems) would be in natural course suppressed (bādhita) by the particular (viśeṣa) sūtra 7-1-90; and consequently the sūtra 6-1-93 cannot be applied in gām (the objective case singular from go-stem) and the undesired form gāvam would result. To avoid this difficulty, Pat. suggests that the sūtra 7-1-90 should read as cto vit and that the sūtra is then applicable to all o stems and not to go stem only. The P. 6-1-93 (ā-ctam śasoḥ) consequently becomes a viśeṣa sūtra (being applicable in fewer cases) in relation to the amended sūtra (=S.) Oto nit. Hence the apprehension, that S. 7-1-90 would suppress the S. 6-1-93, disappears and the desired form gām is obtained. The amendment of the S. 7-1-90 is desired for other purposes also; for this S. would cover the case of dyo stem also; and such forms as dyām (in 'dyām gaccha' and 'dyāṃ te dhūmo gacchatu') and dyāvah (in 'yaś dyāva indra te śatam') would be easily justified. The other solution for avoiding the application of the sūtra (6-1-93) to go stem only by adopting the reading a gotomśasoh in place of automśasoh is thus rendered futile and becomes an ekadeśībhāṣya, for otherwise the above forms from dyo (dyāvah and dyām) would remain unaccounted for.

The correct reading, then of the S. (7-1-90) as suggested by Pat. and explicitly stated by Kaśikākāra and other commentators is oto nit. When Pat. suggests the amendment of the S. 7-1-90, he proposes an amendment in the wording of the S. and is not correcting a misreading. Not only Pat., but all other commentators take the P. sūtra 7-1-90 to be goto nit and comment accordingly.

But we should make a distinction between a corrupt reading and a wrong wording. That the S. 7-1-90 in the current form is corrupt text can be established beyond doubt. If the reading goto nit has P's. sanction, the other S. also must have read as a gotomśasoh; otherwise the form gām would be unjustified. If on the other hand the present reading of S. 6-1-93 is necessary to account for the form dyām from dyo, as said by Pat. the other S. 7-1-90 also must be read as oto nit to account for the form dyāvah (plural nominative from dyo). It is inconceivable that P. should provide for the form dyām and keep silent over the other form dyāvah from the same stem. Thus either both the sūtras (6-1-93 and 7-1-90) have the reading otaḥ or both have gotaḥ. It should be remembered that both these forms (dyām and dyāvah) are quoted by Pat. from Vedic literature. As it would be doing injustice to the genius of Pāṇini to regard that both the sūtras dealt with the forms of go-stem only and that he ignored the forms of the stem dyo (occurring in the Vedic lit.), it can be easily inferred that both the sūtras had the reading otaḥ and that the present reading of the S. 7-1-90 is merely a corrupt reading.

Another evidence can be brought forth in support of the above conclusion. There is no sense and rationale in adding t to go in gotah. The tapara-karaya according to P. 1-1-70 is for the specific purpose of restricting the scope of letters indicated by the accompanying ay (vowel). And as go in gotah is not a vowel, but a consonant-plus-vowel, the S. 1-1-70 cannot be applied in the present case.<sup>1</sup> Pat.'s attempt to explain gotah in that light is clearly an uphill task and proceeds on the assumption of the corrupt text as a genuine reading. It is due to this assumption that Pat. ignores<sup>2</sup> the natural and most reasonable anuvṛtti of ay in the S. 1-1-70 from the preceding S. 1-5-69. Thus it is not unreasonable to suppose that the use of t in gotah is against Pāṇinian technique. The reading of the S. must therefore have been in original P. text, ato pit and not goto pit. A slight corruption in the reading of the S. has been taken to be a genuine reading by the commentators. The proposed amendment of the S. 7-1-90, therefore, is really speaking, uncalled for.

<sup>1</sup> Cf. The Kāśikā on the S. 6-1-93.

वर्णनिर्देशेषु हि तपरस्कारणं प्रसिद्धम् ।

<sup>2</sup> Cf. Nāgārjuna in his Uddṛṣṭa on the S. 7-1-90.

तपरस्कारणस्येवमाणीनि मातुर्वर्तः इत्यनयोऽपि तस्मात्प्रत्ययः प्रहृतम् ।

INDIA AND THE PALI TEXT SOCIETY

BY

Mrs. C. A. F. RHYS DAVIDS

When, some sixty-five years ago, my husband retired from Ceylon Civil Service, and came home, a man still young in years, but thrown back, saddened and ill—had he not protested on behalf of certain peasants, thereby bringing on himself rebuke, and insidious attack, with temporary dismissal?—he pulled himself together, refused to return and started afresh as barrister. But he was haunted and pursued by the spiritual legacy bequeathed him from Ceylon—the making accessible to the scholar's world the world-literature that was India's legacy to Ceylon—the earliest known canon of Buddhist scripture and its exegesis, as still surviving in Ceylon.

This he had not come to study while in Ceylon, but it had been in a way laid before him in response to his inquiry. As magistrate there had come before him a case of, can I say? clerical succession to a cure? Was the deceased monk-parson to be succeeded by his own curate (sāmaṇera), or should it be an 'elder'? It was, he was told, a matter of 'canon law,' of Vinaya. Vinaya: what is that? And so he came to learn, not only about Vinaya and a Canon, but also of the survival, both blended with Singhalese and apart, of a literary diction, as dead as is Latin, and yet as alive, built out of old Indian dialects as the vehicle of the Canon which India had let go into exile, but which South Asia he preserved. And this he set to work to learn from a monk, ardent in faith though suffering from a mortal disease; a man who, as he expounded grammar, dropped into alert ears morsels of his formulated faith.

Behind an agnostic myopia Rhys Davids was religious in faith in spiritual growth. And he saw this as proceeding surely from growth in knowledge. Child of a fine will, he let will as mind, that is, will as reflective, take in awareness the leading place. We all still do it! The good monk's will had sown the seed; the pupil's will watered it (do not the Suttas speak of man's 'becoming' as fostered by the rain of desire?); but it was as an idea that there came to dwell with him the plan for making fructify the new attention that had just begun to be given to monastic libraries of 'palm-leaf manuscripts.'

This meant much toil of thought and hand for a penniless lawyer, struggling to get briefs, to keep himself alive; one who had no bond as alumnus with British universities and whose German university gave no aid. But his fine will stood the test, and he waved aside the friendly gibes at the insolvency that would inevitably undermine his house of cards. He laid his plans to survey materials, and place collected Mss. among scattered editors. He drew powerful allies in the scholar-world into his net—was it not the 'Blessed One's' way?—to make critical editions, always in roman letter (a far wiser decision than had he chosen the mediumship of Devanāgarī) such men as Oldenberg the German, Trenckner and Fausbøll the Danes, Minayeff the Russian, Richard Morris the fellow-Kelt, after whose established enterprise 'the Early English Text Society,' this younger child was named, Léon Feer the Frenchman and last but not least, Edmund Hardy. These men, to mention no others, gave their leisure hours for years for no pecuniary reward or wordly fame to examine, collate and edit the Pali manuscripts sent them by Rhys Davids, who himself with the comradeship of a scholar in religious history, J. Estlin Carpenter, edited the opening book of the compiled discourses or Suttantas.

Learned institutions began to subscribe; there were found by that probing net donations here and there, even from a crowned head, and it was with printing at lower rates than now, a substantial bank-balance carefully tended, which came into being, instead of the threatened bankruptcy. Oldenberg's first edition of the Vinaya, with a substantial financial backing from the India Office and the Berlin Academy, was approaching completion (1879-83), and served as, so to speak, a literary introducer of the new society's remainder of the Canon; but financially it stood upon its own feet. The better to win support from South Asian orthodoxy, the inclusion of the more pronounced Prakrit Jainist scriptures was abandoned, and a pair of Pali texts was issued every year.

In time two branches sprang from the parent stem. With increase of literary material, it became evident that Childer's great work, his Pali Dictionary, needed rewriting. In his interleaved copy, bequeathed him by Childers, Rhys Davids, for twenty years, inserted every new word and phrase. These he had copied on slips, and distributed to half a dozen Indologists, in planning a dictionary which should be an instance of that brotherhood in work, the absence of which Renan had so deplored in his Avenir de la Science, then a new work. But like Renan, he was in advance of his age; the 'brotherhood' did not fructify, though only ill health hindered a great scholar and good man, Ernst Windisch, in carrying out his part. No completed section of letters was handed in save that of the letter S, by Sten Konow, and it became evident that the great work of a new dictionary would have to be done by one worker, old age now making it impossible that this should be the society's founder. Of Dr. W. Stede's timely aid there is no need here to speak. His ten years of unremitting labour and its result belong to this century.

The other new branch was a series of translations, to carry on more thoroughly the mere samples presented in Sacred Books of the East and begun, in Sacred Books of the Buddhists, by Max Müller. Finances being still favourable, this was begun by an extra subscription volume every year till nearly thirty were published.

But meanwhile Europe had been laid waste by a ghastly war of five years, and whereas, by 1936, the Society's programme was approaching completion, so too were its financial resources. The war had crushed German university catholicism of effort, France was bled white, and printing had leapt up in price, so that the Society's expenditure was outrunning its receipts. It had sold out its modest capital; its remaining items were of exegesis only, arousing naturally less demand over and above such subscriptions as persisted. Then there fell on it yet another war—war of unprecedented rapine, impoverishing both aggressors and attacked. No European subscriptions could reach us; our best support in the book trade left a large debt owed to us. A misaimed bomb burnt out all our reserve stocks, and the Pali Text Society was left more or less ruined, insolvent, with some six (? or eight) volumes wherein to complete unfinished first editions, and bring out a few shorter works. For the first time since its start the society can promise not even one text this year, although the materials are at hand.

I have sought for special financial aid from America's generosity, but have failed to get any. I may say, as yet, the same of India. Is she indeed not of a mind to take up this sorely wounded, this all but completed undertaking, so as to make possible, if not yet the reprinting of the results of 60 years output, at least the issue of some at least of those six remaining volumes? Of all our earlier South Asian 'orthodox' support, Ceylon alone is not now in the grip of this war. But Ceylon has long lost her early testimony of sympathy with our work to make world-literature of her scripture. She has shrunk into nationalism. In India we have still a small handful of subscribers. Will India now go further and adopt us? It is not likely I shall be here to write Finis to our work. Even were the issues of texts finished, we have still a half-finished Pali Concordance slowly piling up to serve the future scholar as only a good Concordance really can. But I leave very worthy representatives to carry on, notably Miss. I. B. Horner, M.A., now editing and publishing (at her own expense) the first complete translation of the Vinaya-Piṭaka, for Sacred Books of the Buddhists, which I still edit, the Pali Text Society being unable to include more in its own series. Will India help? Will that most worthy foster-mother of struggling scholarship, the Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute, to whose Silver Jubilee we are sending greeting, make the safe and fit issue of at least some of those remaining six volumes its primary care? Will it send us, wounded and strangled, a message of help?

* ON THE PROBABLE DATE OF ŚĀBARA-SVĀMIN†

By

G. V. DEVASTHALI

Of all the commentaries on the M. S. of Jaimini, Śābara's is the earliest that is available in its entirety, though not, of course the earliest that was ever written. Śābara himself in his commentary refers to at least one of his predecessors no less than ten times,<sup>1</sup> sometimes to lend additional support to his interpretations, but sometimes also to note differences of opinion or even to offer his own criticism against his views.<sup>2</sup> This is the Vṛttikāra who has been by some,<sup>3</sup> not quite convincingly, been identified with Bhagavān Upavarṣa. We are not here concerned with the question of the identity of this Vṛttikāra, though it may be noted that the manner in which he is referred to by Śābara lends little support to this identification. Besides the Vṛttikāra (and Upavarṣa also if he is not identical with the Vṛttikāra) we

---

* This paper was originally submitted to the eleventh session of the All India Oriental Conference, held at Hyderabad (Da.) in December 1941.

† Abbreviations used in this article.

ĀGS.—Āśvalāyana Gṛhya-Sūtra.

GGS.—Gobhila Gṛhya-Sūtra.

JPM.—Dr. Jha's Prōbhākara Mīmāṃsā.

JTS.—Dr. Jha's Translation of Śloka-vārtika.

JTSB.—Dr. Jha's Translation of Śābarabhāṣya.

Kanē.—A brief Sketch of the Pūrva Mīmāṃsā by Mrs. Kane.

KM.—Dr. Keith's Karma-Mīmāṃsā.

MBh.—Mahābhārata.

M. S.—Mīmāṃsā-Sūtra.

NIR.—Nirukta.

RV.—Ṛg-veda.

ŚPB.—Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa.

SVB.—Śaṅkayāna Brāhmaṇa.

<sup>1</sup> M. S. I. i. 5; II. i. 32-33; ii. 26; iii. 16; III. i. 6; V. i. 1; VII. ii. 6; VIII. i. 2; and X. iv. 23.

<sup>2</sup> M. S. II. i. 33.

<sup>3</sup> JPM., p. 113; and JTS. Intr. p. iii. Keith is almost inclined to accept this view though he is not blind to other probabilities. cf. KM. p. 7f.

know of others like Baudhāyana,<sup>1</sup> Bhavadāsa,<sup>2</sup> and Bhartṛmītra<sup>3</sup> and Hari<sup>4</sup> some of whom have commented not only on the M. S. but also on the Brahma-Sūtra.<sup>5</sup> But about their chronological position nothing can be said with any definiteness. Being, however, in full possession of the Śābara Bhāṣya we are in a better position to draw some definite conclusions regarding Śābara and his work after a careful scrutiny of his Bhāṣya. Attempts have already been made in this direction; and we find Dr. Keith concluding that 400 A. D.<sup>6</sup> is the earliest date to which he can be assigned; while Prof. Kane holds that 'Śābara wrote his Bhāṣya between 100 A. D. and 500 A. D.'<sup>7</sup> Dr. Mm. Jha accepts the view of Dr. Keith.<sup>8</sup> But a careful study of his Bhāṣya seems to me to disclose certain facts which require us to push Śābara's date up by about three or four centuries and place him somewhere in the first century before the Christian Era.

Looking out for the relation of this commentator with the author of the M. S. we find that he must have been separated from Jaimini by several centuries. Dr. Keith allows a period of two centuries to pass between the two; for he places Jaimini and Śābara at 200 and 400 A. D. respectively.<sup>9</sup> Prof. Kane, however dates Jaimini at 300 B. C. and Śābara as later than 100 A. D. but earlier than 500 A. D.<sup>10</sup> He thus appears to allow a period of about four to eight centuries to separate the author of the M. S. from his commentator. Now though it is admittedly impossible to lay down any definite period as having separated these two writers there are certain considerations which will justify the

<sup>1</sup> KM. p. 8.

<sup>2</sup> Dr. Jha suggests that this Bhavadāsa may be identical with the Vṛttikāra (cf. JTS. p. 116). This view, however, has found little support.

<sup>3</sup> Referred to by Pārthasarathīmīśra on Śloka-vṛttika, p. 4 (v. 10); and also cited on the organ of sound, Nyāyamañjarī, p. 213, cf. KM. p. 8 a.

<sup>4</sup> Śāstradīpikā, X ii. 59-60.

<sup>5</sup> A work called the Prapañca-bhāṣya mentions that Bhavadāsa and Upavaśa had commented on 20 books of the pūrva and the uttara Mīmāṃsā. cf. also Śābhara on Brahma Sūtra, III. iii. 53.

<sup>6</sup> KM. p. 9.

<sup>7</sup> Kane, p. 13 f.

<sup>8</sup> JTSB. III. Intro. p. vi.

<sup>9</sup> KM. p. 6 and 7.

<sup>10</sup> Kane, p. 6 and 13.

conclusion that the period separating these two writers must be wide enough extending over at least three or four centuries.

Even a casual reader of the Bhāṣya cannot fail to notice how Śābara proposes different interpretations for one and the same set of Sūtras. He first interprets an Adhikaraṇa in the way which possibly he thought best and then adduces other alternative interpretation (or interpretations) which must have very probably been accepted by some of his own contemporaries or perhaps even predecessors. This phenomenon is by no means rare in Śābara's commentary. Thus, for example, he proposes two interpretations each for M. S. IX. 2.21-24; IV. 3.27-28; VIII. 1. 34 and 39; VIII. 3.14-15, and IX. 1.34-35. For M. S. IV. 1. 2 IX. 1. 1; and X. 1.1-3 he offers three each; but he records no less than four different interpretations for M. S. IX. 2.25-28. This phenomenon leads us to draw two different conclusions: (1) that Śābara had before him no definite tradition for the interpretation of the M. S. and (2) that he must have been preceded by several commentators on the M. S. who often poignantly differed from him; but who being inferior are so much eclipsed by the overwhelming work of Śābara that they all together with their works are now no more than mere names to us—a condition to which they appear to have been reduced at a very early date.

The same appears to be the case with regard to the actual text of the M. S. Thus we find that whereas the Vṛttikāra appears to have read M. S. I. 1. 3 with a न in it, Śābara reads it without a न. But we have another clearer instance where Śābara actually notes a different reading and explains it. Thus at M. S. XL 1. 14 Śābara adopts the reading 'देकशब्दादिति चेत्' and notes the other reading with the remark 'ये त्वेकशब्दादिति सूत्रं पठन्ति तेषामयमर्थः'. Here again we have a circumstance which appears to strengthen the conclusions arrived at above.<sup>1</sup>

But we need not rest on mere inferences for proving that Śābara had before him no sure and unbroken tradition to help him in the task of interpreting the work of Jaimini. We can actually quote the words of Śābara himself to show that he had not only no tradition to guide him in his work, but that in some cases he was actually at his wit's end to find out a proper topic and interpretation for some adhikāraṇas. Thus, for example, we find that while commenting on M. S. II.3.16 he makes no secret of his inability to find out a suitable interpretation for the Adhikāraṇa and in plain terms declares his indebtedness to the Vṛttikāra.<sup>1</sup> Thus absence of any unbroken tradition before Śābara not only regarding the interpretation of the M. S. but regarding even the actual reading of the same, the variety of interpretations proposed by him for some of the adhikāraṇas, and also a plurality of predecessors are circumstances which, I believe, warrant us in concluding that there must have been a gulf at least three or four centuries wide separating the author of the M. S. from the commentator thereof.

<sup>1</sup> The same again is the case with M. S. I. 1. 4 which according to Śābara is सत्संप्रयोगे वृक्षस्येन्द्रियाणां बुद्धिजन्म सत्यत्यक्षम्; the Vṛttikāra, however, changes the places of सत् and तत् in the sūtra and reads सत्संप्रयोगे वृक्षस्येन्द्रियाणां बुद्धिजन्म सत्यत्यक्षम्।

The Vṛttikāra, the only earlier commentator of the M. S. quoted or referred to by Śābara also seems to be separated from him by about a century or so. Not that he is held in very high esteem by Śābara as some are inclined to argue.<sup>2</sup> In all the places where Śābara refers to him (and they are no less than ten) there is not a single case where he is beyond doubt referred to with the honorific title Bhagavān.<sup>3</sup> The reference to Bhagavān Upavarṣa occurring as it does in the Vṛttikāra-grantha itself, cannot be

<sup>1</sup> तदेववगमकं सूत्रमेव तापदनर्थकम् । .....अथ का ज्ञप्रतिज्ञा कथं सिद्धे इति वक्तव्यम् ।
वृत्तिकारवचनात् प्रतिज्ञां संशयं चावगच्छामः ।

<sup>2</sup> Kane, p. 13; and KM, p. 8 n.

<sup>3</sup> Dr. Kaith in this connection refers the reader to M. S. II. iii. 16 and III. i. 6. (cf. KM, p. 8n). Prof. Kane refers to one more passage VII. i. 2 (a misprint for VIII. i. 2.) cf. Kane, p. 13. Of these the first i. e. II. iii. 16 I have discussed in the body of the article. The second viz., III. i. 6, though referring to the Vṛttikāra, contains nothing to establish Śābara's reverence for the Vṛttikāra. (cf. अपेक्षानाम्नं शेषाय वृत्तिकारः परिनिश्चिन्नाय ।). The third one added by Prof. Kane refers to the Vṛttikāra in plural. But out of the ten odd references made by Śābara to the Vṛttikāra this is the solitary case where Śābara against his wont uses the plural while referring to the Vṛttikāra. It cannot as such be accepted as a conclusive proof to establish Śābara's reverence for the Vṛttikāra, especially when we remember that there are at least seven places where he is referred to in singular only with no honorific title.

said to be a clear reference to the Vṛttikāra himself.<sup>1</sup> The only other place where such a reference is alleged<sup>2</sup> to have been made occurs in Śābara's commentary on M. S. II.3.16 where our commentator after declaring his indebtedness to the Vṛttikāra in no ambiguous terms writes:—'अत्र भगवानाचार्य इदमुदाहृत्य वसुनिकान्ता हि पश्य इति इदं संशयमुपन्यस्यति स्म किं यजिद्वदभियान एव आलम्बितरुतालम्भमात्र वचन इति.'

But even this cannot be admitted as a clear reference to the Vṛttikāra; for the whole passage quoted above would appear to be nothing but a mere quotation from the latter's commentary so that the honorific terms Bhagavān and Ācārya would refer to Jaimini himself and fittingly too, rather than to the Vṛttikāra who never seems to have commanded very high respect from the Bhāṣyakāra. That these high sounding tributes were easily the share of Jaimini is more than amply illustrated by later usage. Even Śābara himself uses the term Ācārya to denote, not the Vṛttikāra, but Jaimini<sup>3</sup> himself more than once. We also find that the title Ācārya has been applied by him to the various authorities<sup>4</sup> quoted by Jaimini in the body of his work. But there is not a single instance of the term Ācārya occurring in the Bhāṣya being beyond all doubt applicable to the Vṛttikāra alone. It, therefore, does not seem likely that in this one place alone Śābara against his usual practice, might give away the title to one who is far inferior to the stars forming the galaxy of the Mīmāṃsā of the creative period. The conclusion thus arrived at is further corroborated by the circumstance that Śābara not

<sup>1</sup> It has been argued that the Vṛttikāra Grantha is only a résumé and that Śābara is responsible for the reference to Upavarga, who is none else than the Vṛttikāra, a view which appears to be supported by Kumārila. (cf. KM. p. 8). But against this view goes the fact that the Tantra-vārtika mentions Upavarga as Mahābhāṣyakāra (cf. Kane, p. 13) which means that he cannot be the same as the Vṛttikāra. Thus at any rate so far as the question of Vṛttikāra's identity with Upavarga is not settled the passage in question also cannot be accepted as conclusively proving Śābara's reverence for the Vṛttikāra.

<sup>2</sup> See note 3 on p. 87 above.

<sup>3</sup> Cf. M. S. III. 1. 4; VIII. III. 7; XII. 1. 8; &c.

<sup>4</sup> Thus, for example, Lābukāyana at M. S. VI. vii. 37; Kāṣṭhāṣṭhīni at M. S. VI. vii. 85; Kāmākāyana at M. S. XL. 1. 56; Bṛhadāraṇyaka at M. S. III. 1. 3; VIII. viii. 6; Ātreya at M. S. IV. iii. 8; Aitihāṣya at M. S. III. ii. 43; and Ālekhaṇa at M. S. VI. 5. 17.

only criticises the Vṛttikāra but more often than not refers to him in singular alone without any honorific term so much so that it is only once that Śabara, it would appear, has condescended to use a plural form in referring to him.<sup>1</sup>

Śabara's manner of referring to the Vṛttikāra presents a glaring contrast to his manner of referring to other great authors whom he holds in very high esteem. Take the case of Pāṇini, for example. Of the five or six places<sup>2</sup> where Śabara mentions the name of Pāṇini, we find as many as four where Pāṇini's name is accompanied by the title Bhagavān. The title Ācārya also is used by him with great frequency while referring to the great authorities like Bādari and Aitiāyana. We may, therefore, feel justified in concluding that the Vṛttikāra did not occupy a very exalted position in the esteem of Śabara which, at the same time, should not be taken to mean that Śabara treated him with scant respect.

Is the Vṛttikāra then to be looked upon only as an earlier contemporary of the Bhāṣyakāra? We may without much hesitation answer this question in the negative on the strength of the fact that while Śabara seems to have before him no definite tradition to guide him in his task of interpreting the M. S., the Vṛttikāra seems to be in possession of some, which even Śabara is constrained to accept as we have already noted above.

Reviewing the relation of Śabara to Jaimini on the one hand and to the Vṛttikāra on the other we may now very plausibly conclude that Śabara is removed from the former by at least three or four centuries while it is only about a century or two at the most that removes him from the latter. But Jaimini, as I have endeavoured to show elsewhere<sup>3</sup> cannot be dated later than about 500 B.C. Śabara will, therefore, have to be placed somewhere in the first century B. C.

Such a conclusion regarding the date of Śabara would certainly be looked upon with great misgivings particularly because it differs too widely from the opinions expressed by such stalwarts as Dr. Keith and Prof. Kane. But I shall now put forth various facts of internal evidence supplied by Śabara's Bhāṣya which go to corroborate the conclusion arrived at above.

<sup>1</sup> M. S. VIII. 1. 2.

<sup>2</sup> M. S. VI. 1. 2 (twice); X. vi. 5; X. viii. 4 in all these places Pāṇini is styled Bhagavān. But he is not so styled at M. S. X. viii. 4 and I. i. 5.

<sup>3</sup> Vide my article 'On the Probable Date of Jaimini and his Sutra' in Bhandarkar Or. R. Institute, Annals, Vol. XXI, pp. 63-72.

One great peculiarity about Śabara is that he quotes many authorities and many a time too, but hardly ever gives us the names of the works and authors thus drawn upon by him. Thus in the whole of his Bhāṣya we find Śabara giving us hardly four names over and above those already given by Jaimini. These are Pāṇini, Kātyāyana, Piṅgala and Upavarṣa. About the identity of the Vṛttikāra nothing definite can be said in the present state of our knowledge, though much has been said both for and against his identity with Upavarṣa. But the evidence supplied by Śabara's manner of referring to him is not without its own value.

Yāska's Nirukta appears to be often quoted; but curiously enough not even once has Śabara thought it necessary to mention the name of either the author or his work. The word Nirukta occurs at least twice<sup>1</sup> in his Bhāṣya in the compound expression निगमनिरुक्तवाकरण. But in no less than three<sup>2</sup> places where Śabara appears to quote from the extant Nirukta we find that the quotations are introduced by उपदिशति or आह. Again at M. S. I.3. 13 a sentence from the Śabara Bhāṣya can be traced in our Nirukta<sup>3</sup> though Śabara gives us no ground whatever to show that he is quoting any particular work at all. It is only in the Vṛttikāra grantha that the author of the Nirukta is referred to as शास्त्रकार. There is again a couplet<sup>4</sup> quoted by Śabara while commenting on M. S. IV.3.38 which he introduces with the remark

<sup>1</sup> M. S. I. ii. 49; III. 10.

<sup>2</sup> M. S. VI. ii. 13; III. 24; X. viii. 35.

<sup>3</sup> आचिनोत्पत्त्य बुद्धिमिति giving the etymology of अक्षरार्थ also occurs in the Nirukta I. 4.

<sup>4</sup> अक्षरार्थात् संमथसि हृदयमिजायते ।

आत्मा वै पुत्रवानासि स जीव शरदः शतम् ॥

This passage which is evidently a re quoted by Yāska is found at SPB. 14. 9. 4. 8 and SVB. I. 5. 17. Śabara also quotes the following stanza

यनेव विद्याः हृदिमयमर्थं मेधाविने अक्षरयोग्यताम् ।

यस्ते न ह्युदात्तं कतमक्षराहस्यसौ भां ह्युमा निधिनाय ब्रह्मम् ॥ which is also found at Nir. II. 4. This stanza together with the other three that are found to precede it in the Nirukta are also found in the Sāmhitopaniṣad Brāhmaṇa.

* एतन्निवात्मनः प्रीतिमभिप्रेत्य भवति वचनम् । आत्मा वे पुत्र इति ।' This stanza is, however, found not only in the Nirukta III 4; but also in the AGS. I.15.9. It is also referred to in the GGS. II. 8.21. But from which of these is Śābara quoting here it is hard to say.

References to Pāṇini are more definite. More often than not he is referred to as Bhagavān Pāṇini. His Aṣṭādhyāyī is often referred to or quoted with the introductory word स्मरते.<sup>1</sup> In one place there is also an interesting discussion as to whether Pāṇini's work can be designated Smṛti; and the conclusion arrived at there is that though it cannot be called a smṛti in the strict sense of the term yet there is ground enough for inferring the existence of Smṛti.<sup>2</sup> This discussion only tends to confirm the conclusion that Pāṇini was held in very high esteem by Śābara and must, therefore, have preceded him by several centuries.

Śābara's reference to Kātyāyana as Bhagavān Vārtikakāra<sup>3</sup> is very important as furnishing us with the uppermost limit for the date of the former. The fact that he is honoured with the title Bhagavān itself shows that he must have lived at least a century earlier than Śābara. A reference to Patañjali is conspicuous by its absence in Śābara's commentary. Commenting on M. S. IX.4.21 Śābara quotes a stanza which is also found in the Mahābhāṣya of Patañjali, of course with some variation.<sup>4</sup> This stanza occurs as the 52nd stanza in the Pāṇintya Śikṣā which however is said to bear on the face of it a stamp of modernness. Śābara's indebtedness to the Śikṣa is therefore out of question. The stanza in question forms, according to Dr. Belvalkar, a genuine portion of the Mahābhāṣya since it is commented upon by Bhartṛhari in his महाभाष्यटीका and is also quoted by Kumārila in his Tantravārtika.<sup>5</sup> But looking to the position of the stanza

<sup>1</sup> M. S. II. i. 10; ii. 9; iii. 3; &c. The usual 'smariyate' is sometimes replaced by अस्मियुक्ता उपदिशन्ति । or स्मरन्ति । or विदधति ।

<sup>2</sup> ननु स्मृतिर्योऽपि कर्मोपायान्ते द्विदधते स्मरन्ति । नैषा स्मृतिरस्तीति कुतः । मयापतः पाणिनेर्वचनात् स्मृतिमनुमास्यामहे । पुमान् स्त्रिया इति ॥ Śābara on M. S. VI. i. 22.

<sup>3</sup> M. S. X. viii. 4.

<sup>4</sup> Whereas Śābara begins the stanza with मन्त्रो ह्येनः Patañjali does so with दुष्टः शब्दः. The stanza as read by Śābara is as follows:—

मन्त्रो ह्येनः स्मरतो वर्णतो वा सिद्ध्या मनुस्त्वो न तद्वर्णमाह ।

स वाग्वन्त्रो यजमानं दिनसि वसेन्द्रशत्रुः स्मरतोऽपराधात् ॥

<sup>5</sup> Dr. Belvalkar, Systems of Sanskrit Grammar, p. 27, n. 5.

in the work of Patañjali we find that it occurs in the midst of a series of statements which appear like quotations.<sup>1</sup> It is, therefore, very likely that Patañjali is quoting the stanza in question from some other source. At any rate it is but certain that Śābara is not indebted to Patañjali for this stanza, for the simple reason that he has introduced it with the remark 'ऊने च वाक्ये दोषवचनात्' which shows that he is referring to some work which could be designated Śruti, a title which by no stretch of Imagination can be made applicable to Patañjali's work. The incident referred to in the stanza is very old and we find it recorded in Brāhmaṇa literature. It is some such work that Śābara is drawing upon while quoting this stanza. That he is not quoting Patañjali is also proved by the fact that Patañjali reads it differently.

Śābara's priority over Patañjali also seems to be supported by the fact that whereas the former refuses to recognize the Atharva-veda<sup>2</sup> the latter not only accepts it but also tells us that it has nine branches.<sup>3</sup> Again in M. S. X. 8.1-4 there is an interesting

<sup>1</sup> Having stated the main advantages of studying grammar Patañjali goes on to enumerate the secondary purposes served by the study of grammar in the following words:— 'इमानि च ग्रन्थः शास्त्रानुशासनस्य प्रयोजनानि । तेऽसुराः । दुष्टः शब्दः । यदधीतम् । दस्तु प्रयुज्यन्ते । अविद्वान्सः । विमर्शिनः कुर्वन्ति । यो वा इमाम् । चत्वारि । अतः त्वः । सक्तुमिष । सारसनीम् । दशम् । पुत्रस्य । सुदेशो असि वरुण इति ।'

The explanatory stanzas or statements that follow are most of them traceable to their original sources in spite of Patañjali's failure to mention any of them. Thus यदधीतम् &c. occurs in the Nirukta I. 18 with the only difference that whereas Patañjali reads यदधीतम् Yāska reads यदगृहीतम्. It is also found in the Saṃhitopaniṣad Brāhmaṇa of the Sāma Veda. चत्वारि शृक्वा etc. and चत्वारि वाक्वरिमिता etc. are Rg-Veda IV. 58. 3 and I. 164. 45 respectively. Both these verses are also found to recur in the Nirukta Parīṣiṣṭa. The former of these is also quoted and explained by Śābara without making any reference to any other explanation as being put upon it by the grammarians. सक्तुमिष विततना &c. is found at RV. X. 71. 2 and is also found to recur in the Nir. IV. 10.

<sup>2</sup> Śābara speaks of the three Vedas viz. ऋग्वेद, यजुर्वेद and सामवेद to the exclusion of the fourth. Cf. वहीतिवुः used by him at M. S. II. i. 35. Commenting on this and the next two sūtras Śābara complacently discusses the lakṣaṇas of the three Vedas, but makes no reference to the Atharva Veda. This would show that the AV. had not as yet risen to the status of the other Vedas.

<sup>3</sup> 'नवधाधर्षणो वेदः' writes Patañjali commenting on the Vārtika. 'सर्वं देशान्तरे'.

discussion regarding the statement 'नानुयानेषु देयनामहं करोति' which according to the prima facie view is a vikalpa; but according to the Siddhāntin is a paryudāsa. Commenting on this adhi-karaṇa Śābara makes the Pūrvapakṣin quote the authority of Bhagavan Kātyāyana against Pāṇini; and ultimately winds up the whole discussion with the remark 'सद्वादित्वात् च पाणिनेर्वचनं प्रमा-
णम् । असद्वादित्वात् कान्यापनस्य । असद्वादी हि विद्यमानमपि अनुपलब्धं ब्रूयात् ।
तस्माद् पर्युदास इति ।' Here Śābara could have defended his position by referring to Patañjali (provided he was acquainted with him and his mahāmaṇṣy) instead of dismissing the discussion with the unconvincing remark quoted above. There appears to be no ground, therefore, to suppose that Śābara was acquainted with Patañjali and his work.

Coming now to the Smṛti literature we find that Śābara must have had a pretty vast material of this branch of literature before him. He regards Smṛti as being almost on a par with the Vedas.<sup>1</sup> Commenting on M. S. VI.1.5 he refers to this branch of literature by the word स्मृतिशास्त्र and says that it was studied by men. Thus Śābara does show his acquaintance with this literature in general terms; and yet he has left us almost in the dark as to the exact works that he had before him. But from the various passages<sup>2</sup> which Śābara has given us from these works it is quite clear that he is always referring to and quoting from prose Dharmaśāstras only and that he had no metrical Smṛtis before him. Of course he has quoted one verse at M. S. VI. 1.12; which is found to correspond to a verse in our extant Manu-smṛti.<sup>3</sup> But this verse is introduced by him with the simple re-

<sup>1</sup> 'देवतुल्या हि स्मृतिः । वैदिका हि पदार्थाः स्मरन्त इत्युक्तम् । .... स्मरन्ति वैदिका एव ।' Śābara on M. S. VI. ii. 22.

<sup>2</sup> 'शुक्रादुत्तमव्योमिषाद्विषयम् । वृद्धपुत्राश्च वयस्येकः समातिव्यञ्ज ॥' (M. S. VI. ii. 21); 'अष्टकाः कर्तव्याः, शुक्रनुगम्यन्तव्यः, तद्वर्गं स्मरन्तिव्यञ्ज, यथा धर्मवर्गपितृव्या, शिष्टाकार्यं कर्तव्यमित्येवमादयः' (M. S. I. iii. 1); 'एवं हि स्मरन्ति मन्वभूतानि आर्षाणि नित्यानीति' (M. S. IX. ii. 1); 'एवं हि स्मरन्ति विश्ववर्ती देवता इति' (M. S. IX. i. 6); 'स्मरन्ति हि देवता ननुः फलं ददातीति' (M. S. IX. i. 8); 'एवं शिष्टाः स्मरन्तीति राजानाध्यापनप्रतिष्ठा आश्रमस्यैव वृत्त्युपाया इति' (M. S. XII. iv. 36).

<sup>3</sup> भार्या दासश्च पुत्रश्च निर्वाहः सर्प एव ते ।

यस्य समधिगच्छन्ति यस्य ते तस्य तद्वन् ॥

Thus reads Śābara; while Manu VIII. 416 reads 'भार्या दासश्च पुत्रश्च त्रय ददायनाः स्मृताः'. This stanza is also found in MBh. Udyoga, 33, 64 which reads 'त्रय ददायना राजन् भार्या दासराथा स्मृताः'.

mark एवं च स्मरति without any reference to Manu. Nowhere else do we find Śabara quoting from his smṛti. On the contrary we find prose quotations in Śabara's bhāṣya which have good parallels in the extant Manu-smṛti.<sup>1</sup> Again at M. S. VI.2.31 and various other places smṛti passages are taken for discussion; and curiously enough they are one and all in prose. It would thus be clear that though Śabara has a vast mass of dharma-śāstra literature before him it was mainly in prose while the metrical Smṛtis or Dharma-śāstras if any had not as yet attained that position of authority which they appear to hold later on. This remark holds good in the case of Manu also who is referred to in his Bhāṣya by Śabara only once under M. S. I.1.3. There the pūrva-pakṣin is made to argue that since Manu and others have given instructions regarding Dharma it follows, therefore, that they had the knowledge of Dharma inspite of their being only human beings.<sup>2</sup> This argument though on the prima facie side is yet enough to show that in the days of Śabara there were certain works on Dharma-śāstra composed by Manu and others and that they were respected as such in some circles. But the attitude of Śabara towards all these works is made clear by the rejoinder he gives to the above argument. He says 'उपदेशं व्यामोहादपि भवन्ति' which clearly shows that Manu and other law-givers referred to by the pūrva-pakṣin did not command much respect from Śabara. So also the verse above referred to as corresponding to a verse from the extant Manu-smṛti is put in the mouth of the pūrva-pakṣin and contains a view which Śabara has set forth only to denounce it ultimately. From all this it would be clear that though Śabara shows acquaintance with Manu and his work yet he does not hold it as being authoritative; nay he is even prepared to denounce its statements and also indirectly hint that it may also be open to correction. This means that by the time of Śabara Manu and his work had just appeared in the field and that they were not universally respected. Now so far as the date problem is concerned we are told that the extant Manu-smṛti was composed between second century B. C. and second century A. D.<sup>1</sup> Hence taking into consideration the relation of Śābara with Manu and his work we may plausibly conclude that the former must have lived at a time which cannot be much later than the earliest date which can be assigned to the latter; or in other words that Śābara must have lived somewhere in the first century B. C.

<sup>1</sup> 'सोद्यन्तमादित्यमक्षितं नास्ति च पलम् ।' M. S. IV. 1. 5; & VI. 1v. 25 corresponds to Manu. IV. 37. Also cf.; Ap. D. S. I. 31. 18.

<sup>2</sup> अविबुधामुपदेशो नापकल्पते । उपदिष्टवन्तश्च मन्वादयः । तत्तात्पर्याः तुल्यो विदितवन्तश्च ।'

Again while commenting on the M. S. X. 4.23 Śābara makes a reference to the इतिहासपुराण and their views on देवता. But what works he exactly meant is uncertain. Generally the word इतिहास<sup>2</sup> is applied to the Rāmāyaṇa and the Mahābhārata, the two great epics of India. But beyond this solitary reference there is not a single place where Śābara would appear to be referring to either of these epics. As an example of an absurd statement Śābara gives a sentence<sup>3</sup> in prose which curiously enough occurs in a versified form at MBh. Sabhā Ch. 66.11. But the very fact that Śābara chooses to quote the prose form is enough to show that he was unaware of the versified one. Similar is his attitude towards the Purāṇas. Beyond the word occurring in the compound expression इतिहासपुराणसः Śābara appears to have given us no lines which can be traced to any of the extant Purāṇas. The only surmise that can be based on the solitary reference to Purāṇas by Śābara is that he was aware of the existence of not one purāṇa but perhaps several works going by that name though the exact number and the names of these works are hard to determine.

Coming to the last point we may note that though he had many an occasion to refer to लौकिकवचनसः Śābara has never given us a quotation from any of the well-known classical works even of the earliest date known to us. Very often he gives us examples from ordinary conversational tongue as used by the people in his time and naturally many of the लौकिकवचनसः given by him are in prose.<sup>1</sup> But metrical lines also are not wanting<sup>2</sup> and more than once we find Śābara quoting verses which are hardly traceable to their original sources.

<sup>1</sup> Kane, History of Dharmasāstra, Vol. I, p. 151.

<sup>2</sup> Commenting on M. S. IX. i. 44 Śābara writes 'मेवातिदिर्देव इत्येवमादि इतिहास-वचनमिव प्रतिपत्तिः । इतिहासे च विधौ सति आदिमन्त्रादीनां वेदस्य वसत्येत ।'. This would appear to indicate that Śābara did not mean the two great epics when he used the term इतिहासः.

<sup>3</sup> 'अधुनि मज्जनकलादुनि शिलाः पलवन्ते पालकाः शीतः' Under M. S. I. i. 5; and IV. iii. 3.

Besides these there are several other quotations<sup>3</sup> dealing with technical points which appear to have been drawn by Śābara from the floating mass of technical poetry. For he always introduces these with the words 'एवमात्मनन्ति (IV. iii. 3); श्लोकमनुदाहरन्ति (IV. iv. 24; VII. I. 12; etc.); श्लोकश्च भवति (IV. iv. 28); but there are several others which are given without any introductory remark whatsoever.

Such then is in short the evidence provided by a study of references to and quotations from the various branches of Sanskrit literature as we find them in the Śābara Bhāṣya. Having thus gathered together all these pieces of evidence, both positive as well as negative, we may briefly restate them by saying that Śābara mentions only three persons by name viz. Pāṇini, Kātyāyana and Upavarsa; that no work is actually referred to by him by its specific name though he has often quoted from various works like the Nirukta and the Aṣṭādhyāyī; that a specific mention of

<sup>1</sup> Cf. e. g. 'वाङ्मोक्षाय वेदास्तादृशो नृणां ताम्' (M. S. III. iv. 9); 'इयं गोः केतव्या देवदत्ताया । एषा हि चतुर्शीतं स्वयंप्रसादा अनटपृजा चेति' (M. S. I. ii. 20); 'नद्यास्तोरे फलानि सन्ति' (M. S. I. i. 2); न भवन्तः समानं गच्छन्ति न भवन्तः प्रेक्षका भवन्तीत्युक्ते तु न मन्ये गच्छन्तीणि गम्यते' (M. S. IX. iii. 2).

<sup>2</sup> Cf. e. g. 'अरुह्यो गायति मत्तकानि' (M. S. I. i. 32) एवाकृतावप्रतिमाश्च कृशाः' (M. S. VIII. I. 6); 'नीलोत्पलवनेष्वयं चरन्तज्जलसंस्त्रवाः । नीलकौशिकसंघीताः प्रणवमन्तीनि (V. L. प्रनुत्तन्तीनि) काव्याः ॥' (M. S. I. i. 24). It should be noted here that this stanza is metrically defective according to the definition of अनुष्टुप् which requires that the seventh syllable in the fourth pad shall be short; while it is long in the stanza under discussion [Def. of अनुष्टुप्—'श्लोके षष्ठं दृढं द्वये सर्वत्र लघु पञ्चमम् । द्विचतुःपादयोर्द्वैस्त्वैकं द्विर्ध्वजयोः ।' ]; and 'इतः पश्चात् घातनं ह्ये जानं पन्त्यतिम् । इति ध्वजि विद्यालाले वा विनाक्षे अरुह्यम् ।' (M. S. IV. iii. 11.).

<sup>3</sup> Cf. e. g. 'हेतुर्विचरन् निन्वा प्रशंसा संशयो विधिः ।' etc. (M. S. II. I. 33); 'आधानं पीनमास्यां चेत् पुनो दूर्ध्वं करिष्यते ।' etc. (M. S. IV. iv. 22); 'प्रकृतात् कर्मणो वस्मात् तत्तमानेष्ट कर्मस्तु । धर्मप्रदेशो येन स्वात् सोऽनिदिश इति स्थितिः ॥' (M. S. VII. I. 12); 'साधारणं भवेत् तन्ने परार्थे त्वप्रयोजकः । एवमेव यस्यैकः स्वाद् विद्यमाने सके विधी ॥' (M. S. XI. I. 1); and 'उन्मोहा बहुधाश्रय तथा वाजसनेयिनः । उच्चन्तीचस्वरं प्रातः स वै मासिक उच्यते ॥' (M. S. XII. iii. 16).

Kātyāyana as Bhagavān Vārtikakāra supplies us with the uppermost limit for Śābara's date, while the lower limit for the same can be fixed with tolerable certainty on the strength of various pieces of negative evidence which taken singly may not be of much use in proving anything positive, but which together may afford grounds strong enough to suggest at least a high probability in certain direction, particularly when they all appear to point in the same direction. Thus there is the absence of any direct reference to पञ्चाङ्गि or any of the metrical Smṛtis, or to any of the classical works or authors, which appear to speak for a date of Śābara as not being later than about 100 B. C. a conclusion we have arrived at above on the strength of Śābara's relation with the Sūtrakāra on the one hand and with the Vṛttikāra on the other.

CAUDHĀRAPĀDĀ (LOṆAD) INSCRIPTION OF

KESĪDEVA; ŚĀKA 1162.

BY

MORESHWAR G. DIKSHIT

The stone bearing this inscription was found lying in an open field in the outskirts of the village Caudhārapādā, near Loṇad in the Bhiwandi taluka of the Thana district (Bombay Presidency). According to the Bombay Gazetteer<sup>1</sup> it was first noticed in February 1882. Reference to the contents of this inscription, with some difference in details, has already been made by Pandit Bhagwanlal Indrajī, in Bombay Gazetteer, Vol. XIV, p. 212; it is also noticed by Dr. D. R. Bhandarkar, in the Progress Report, Arch. Sur. of India, Western Circle, for the year 1905-6, p. 30, and by Dr. A. S. Altekar, in Indian Culture, Vol. II, p. 416. Its text however has never been published.<sup>2</sup> I am editing it here from the ink-impressions prepared by me.

The inscribed stone measures about 6.2' x 1.5' in length and breadth and about 10' in thickness. The writing covers a space 1.2' broad and 4' high. At the top of the stone are figured in low relief the representations of the Sun, the Moon and a Kalāśa in the centre. Below the inscribed portion appears the Ass-curse, very often noticed in the Śilāhāra<sup>3</sup> and Yādava<sup>4</sup> Inscriptions of the Mediaeval period.

The inscription consists of twenty lines of writing. The letters are deeply carved and carefully executed, but the surface of the stone which was originally made quite smooth has been damaged by exposure to weather and several letters, especially in the latter half of it, have been defaced and become illegible.

<sup>1</sup> Bomb. Gaz., Vol. I, part ii, p. 20, foot-note 3.

<sup>2</sup> It is however not included in Dr. Kielhorn's List of Inscriptions of Southern India. Ep. Ind. Vol. VII, Appendix.

<sup>3</sup> Cf. Six Silahara Inscriptions, Ep. Ind., Vol. XXIII, p. 269ff. Inscriptions A, B, C, E and F.

<sup>4</sup> cf. Ibid., p. 281.

The characters belong to the Nāgarī alphabet of about the 12th century A. D. With the exception of a few letters they approach in every respect to the characters of the present day and there is nothing noteworthy about their forms.

As regards orthography, it may be noted that the Prātha-mātrū is used in places to indicate the medial é and ø; Va is used for Ba in many places, and Kṣa for Khya (line 11).

The language of the inscription is incorrect Sanskrit. But for the opening sentence (line 1), the portion appearing between lines 5-11, and the last six words in the last line, the whole inscription is in verse throughout. The verses are numbered and they are six in all. There are several mistakes in the composition of the record and some of the verses are incomplete.

The inscription is of King Keśideva, son of Aparārka, born in the family of Jimūtaketu, the crest-jewel of the Vidyādhara-vamśa. He is styled here as Mahārājādhirāja and Kouṅkapa-Cakravartī.

The object of it is to record the grant of the village Brahmapurī, by Keśideva, to one Soma-nāyaka, son of Śarvva, a priest, devoted to the worship of God Śompeśvara (or Śumpeśvara.) It also records the gift of the village Mājasapallī, included in the boundary of the village Vo(Bo)pa-grāma, to the community of priests, worshipping the God.

The grant was made on the occasion of a Śiva-rātri day (mentioned twice in the inscription) which fell on Tuesday, the 14th day in the dark-half of the month of Māgha, in the Śaka year 1162. The cyclic year then was Vikārin. This date corresponds to A. D. 1240, January 24th, which was a Tuesday as stated in the inscription.<sup>1</sup> It further records that the grant was made in front of God Śompeśvara.

The inscription opens with an obeisance made to Vināyaka. The first verse is devoted to the praise of God Śumpeśvara <sup>1</sup> Pillai, Indian Ephemeris, Vol. IV, p. 82. Regarding the particulars of this date, it may be noted that Bhagwanlal reads the year as Śaka 1161 and the day as Monday. (Bom. Gaz., Vol. XIV, p. 212). The lithi is given as 13th day in the Bom. Gaz., Vol. I, pt. ii, p. 20. Both these are obviously wrong as the estampage before us clearly reads them as above stated. Dr. Bhandarkar, op. cit., correctly restores it to Śaka 1162, but Dr. Altekar, Ind. Cult., Vol. II, p. 416, following the Bomb. Gaz., takes it as Śaka 1161.

( a form of Śiva ) who is described as the cause of creation, stability and destruction of the earth and as one, who dispels the distress of devotees. The next verse states that in the family of Jimūtaketu was born Aparārka, whose son was Keśideva. He is further extolled in praise by saying that in his powerful reign the Earth even forgot some of the best kings like the illustrious Rāma. In the prose portion that follows the names of the ministers of Keśideva are given, which are as follows Śrī Jhampaḍa Prabhu, the Prime Minister; Rājadeva Paṇḍita, the officer in charge of War and Treaties; and Śrī Ananta Prabhu, the officer in charge of the Śrīkarapa ( Treasury ).

In verse 3, the donee is described as devoted to the worship of God Śompeśvara. It states that Keśideva granted him the village Brahmapuri, which was very pleasing to the eyes on account of the Śiva temple standing there.

The inscription then gives the names of four ( including Somanāyaka ) priests as Soma-nāyaka, Sūryya-nāyaka<sup>1</sup> Govinda nāyaka and Nāū-nāyaka, to whom Keśideva granted the village Mājasapalli, for their maintenance.

This is followed by the usual imprecatory and benedictory verses. Even though it is nowhere stated in the inscription to what dynasty Keśideva belonged, it can easily be inferred that he was from the Śilāhāra dynasty of North Konkapa, from his birūdas, the manner of stating the names of the ministers, which has many parallels in other Śilāhāra inscriptions and from the reference to Jimūtaketu, from whom all the Śilāhāra kings trace their descent.

Śilāhāra Aparārka ( alias Aparāditya ) father of Keśideva, is known to us from his two inscriptions namely, the Prince of Wales Museum Inscription<sup>2</sup> and the Paral Stone inscription,<sup>3</sup> which are dated Śaka 1107 and 1109 respectively. The present inscription of Keśideva is dated Śaka 1162 and thus there is a very large gap of about 53 years in the history of the Northern Śilāhāras, which must be attributed to the long reign of either of them.

<sup>1</sup> This name was formerly read as Rāma nāyaka in the Bom. Gaz., op. cit.

<sup>2</sup> Cf. A. B. O. R. I., Vol. V, p. 169ff. Epigraphia Indica, Vol. XXIII, p. 269ff. Inscription D.

<sup>3</sup> J. B. B. R. A. S., Vol. XII., p. 333.

The references to the Ṣomeśvara (possibly a corrupt form of Someśvara) is very interesting. The nature of the donation and the occasion on which it was bestowed, makes us believe that Keśideva was a devotee of Śiva. In point of fact, many kings of the North Koṅkaṇa branch of the Śilāhāra dynasty were Śaivite. Thus Jhanjha, an ancestor of Keśideva, had built twelve Śiva temples, as the copper-plate grants of his successors<sup>1</sup> describe him. Chittarāja and his younger brother Mummupi were responsible for repairing the famous Śiva temple at Ambarānātha near Kalyāṇa.<sup>2</sup> Arikesari, one of the copper-plate grants<sup>3</sup> tells us, had visited the shrine of Someśvara (at Prabhāsa in Kāṭhīāvāda) in his childhood at the instance of his father. This shrine was also visited by Aparākka, the father of the present donor.<sup>4</sup> It is no wonder therefore that we see Keśideva granting a donation to the priests of a Śaiva Temple.

As regards the geographical places mentioned in the inscription, the village Brabmapari must be identical with modern Caudhārapādā, where the inscription-stone is still lying. The village Vo(Bo)pagrāma is modern Bāb-gāon situated about two furlongs to the east of the find-spot of the inscription. Mājas-palli, which was included in the boundary of Vopagrāma cannot be traced now. The Ṣomeśvara temple, is now represented by the basements of a temple in ruins, near the mound on which the inscription stands. Some Śaivite sculptures found in the neighbourhood of this mound are now preserved in a small shrine in Caudhārapādā. These are described in the Bombay Gazetteer,<sup>5</sup> where the above mentioned localities are identified.

<sup>1</sup> Berlin Museum Plates of Chittarāja, Śaka 956; Z. D. M. G., Vol. 90, p. 284. Prince of Wales Museum Plates of Mummupi, Śaka 971, Epi. Ind., Vol. XXV, p. 53ff. Kharepatan Plates of Anantadeva, Śaka 1106, Ind. Ant., Vol. IX, p. 33ff.

<sup>2</sup> Ambarānath temple Inscription, Śaka 983, J. B. B. R. A. S., Vol. IX, p. 319 and Vol. XII, p. 329.

<sup>3</sup> Kharepatan Plates of Anantadeva, op. cit.

<sup>4</sup> Prince of Wales Museum Inscription of Aparāditya II, Śaka 1107, Epi. Ind., Vol. XXIII, p. 262ff.

<sup>5</sup> Vol. XIV, p. 212.

Text<sup>1</sup>

[ Metres :— Vv. 1, 5, 6 Anuṣṭubh ;

Vv. 2, 3 and 4, Śārdūlavikrīḍita ]

- 1 ओं नमो विनायकाय । नमामि भुवनोत्पत्तिरिच्यतिसंहारकारिणं(णम्) । श्रीमत्पुण्ड्र-
 2 रं मङ्गजनसर्वार्तिहारिणं(णम्) ॥१॥ श्रीविद्याधरवंशमंडलमणिजौमूतकेतोः कु-
 3 ले विख्यातोऽस्य पराकर्तारजतनयः(यः) ओंकोशिपृथ्वीपतिः । यस्यापारपवित्र-
 4 पौरुषनिधेरालोक्य राज्यरिच्यति(तिम्) । श्रीरामादि महाशुजां भगवतीं पते
 5 धरा न स्मृतिं(तिम्) ॥२॥ स(श)कसंबद् ११६२ विकारिसंबन्धरांतर्गम्य माघ वदि १४<sup>2</sup>
 6 चतुर्दशो भोमे<sup>3</sup> शिवरात्रौ पञ्चांगे अचैह समस्तराजावलीसमलंक-
 7 त महाराजाधिराज कौकणचक्रवर्ति श्रीकोशिदेवकल्याणवि-
 8 जयराज्ये तथैतत्पसादान्समस्तराज्यमंडलचिताभारं ससुद्वहति<sup>4</sup>
 9 महामाये श्री जंपडप्रभु महासांधिविश्रहिक राजदेवे पंडिते श्री<sup>5</sup>
 10 -करणभंडागारे अनंतप्रभु पट्टसेडु सभु एतस्मिन्काले प्रवर्तमाने
 11 सति ब्रह्मपुरीग्रामदानशासनं समाधिलिख(ख्य)ते यथा ॥ श्रीपुण्ड्रेश्व-
 12 रदेवपूजनसदाध्यासकस(श)र्वात्मजः । सत्यावृद्धिसोमनायक<sup>6</sup> च-
 13 टोः संतानभोग्यास्विति । श्रीमद्ब्रह्मपुरीपुरारिचयनशमाभुन्मनोहा-
 14 रिणि । श्री(वि)स्तारयति + निर्मलमती(ति) श्रीकोशिपृथ्वीपतिः ॥ ३ ॥ बटुक
 15 नामानि कथ्यन्ते । सोमनायकः । सूर्यनायकः<sup>7</sup> । गोविंदनायकः । नाऊ ।<sup>8</sup>
 16 नायकः । इति चत्वारो बटुक(टु)काः ॥ निजवाहाय पुरारिपूजकवपुश्रेणी वि-
 17 ज्ञातां सदा वो(वो)पश्यामगतां स्वसीमसहितां मा[ज]<sup>9</sup>सपत्नी पुरा[1] दत्ताश्रीशि-
 18 -वरात्रिपूर्वाणि विभोः पुण्ड्रेश्वरस्याग्रतः श्रीमत्कोशिनरेश्वरेण पि(पी)मता च<sup>10</sup>
 19 -द्राक्ष्यतारावधि ॥ ४ ॥ [राज्य]<sup>11</sup>स्य मंत्रिणान्यैर्लब्धं कर्तव्यं धर्मपालनं(नम्) । धर्म-
 20 -ध्वंशो + + + + +<sup>12</sup> नरकरिच्यति(तिम्) ॥ ५ ॥ तथाचोक्तं पुर्वाचार्यमुनि-
 21 भिः । सुवर्णमेकं नामिकां शुमेरप्येकमंशुलं(लम्) । इत्येकमात्रमाप्नोति या-
 22 ददा भूतसंप्रपंचं(यम्) ॥ ६ ॥ मंगलं महाश्रीः । [शुभंम]<sup>13</sup>बहु ॥ लेखकपाठकयोः ॥

<sup>1</sup> From an ink-impression.<sup>2</sup> Expressed by a symbol.<sup>3</sup> Daspa unnecessary.<sup>4</sup> For this date, see above p. 99 foot-note.<sup>5</sup> This was formerly read as Soma-nāga Kavi, cf. Bomb. Gaz., Vol. XIV, p. 212; but the estampage before us clearly reads सोमनायक बटोः.<sup>6</sup> Bom. Gaz., ibid., gave this name as Rūma-nāyaka.<sup>7</sup> Exigencies of metre require a dīrgha akṣara in this place.<sup>8</sup> The construction is faulty.<sup>9</sup> Only faint traces of the words in the brackets are seen on the stone. These slight letters are very much damaged.

A NOTE ON GAṆARĀJYA

BY

V. R. RAMACHANDRA DIKSHITAR

The late Dr. K. P. Jayaswal of revered memory did a distinct service to Indology by his valuable contributions to different fields of Indian History. It was he who laid much significant emphasis on the term gaṇa as a republican form of constitution.<sup>1</sup> Ancient India had made many experiments in governmental organization by adopting different forms of constitution and had worked satisfactorily republican forms as well as monarchical forms of government. The fundamentals underlying both the forms of governmental organization were democratic institutions which served as effective checks on the president of the republic or the monarch of the kingdom whenever they strayed from the path of virtue or dharma. For the state was made up of two authorities, the political authority and the legal authority. The legal authority was the sovereignty of the law which was dharma. Does not the Upaniṣad proclaim that the law is the king of kings?<sup>2</sup> There should be implicit obedience to this paramount law of the state. Whether he be president of the republic or the monarch of an empire, he could not make laws nor overrule them. He should act according to the letter and spirit of the law. This was a device of deft and skill on the part of the ancient Indian statesmen. By this wonderful mechanism the political authority was made to rest on principles of right and justice. The head of the state could not easily indulge in the luxury of despotism or tyranny. He should act according to his svadharma. Legally his rights get dwarfed before the sacred task of discharging his duties. If he should evoke respect and honour from his subjects he should in his turn respect and honour them. In short the willing cooperation of the people<sup>3</sup> and the head of the state was a

---

<sup>1</sup> Hindu Polity, Pt. I.

<sup>2</sup> Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad I-4, 12.

<sup>3</sup> Ar. Śās. BK. IV. 5.

fundamental factor reckoned with in the ancient Indian polity. This tended to a large measure to the creative unity and not the artificial unity which is the make up of several modern states. For the unity that is based on ballot box cannot be counted as real unity.

The object of this paper is to show how this fundamental unity vitalised ancient Indian society and how it was the potent weapon of the state to act effectively and successfully in the affairs of the body politic. The gana form of government was a very ancient form of political organization. There is a definite reference to it in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa.<sup>1</sup> The celebrated grammarian, Pāṇini, is actually aware of its working. He mentions the Samgha and states that the Samgha was a gana.<sup>2</sup> This means that the Samgha is equated to gana. Kaṭyāya follows this interpretation when he associated Samghas with republican forms of government.<sup>3</sup> From this one has to gather that both the terms gana and Samgha were synonymous.

If we turn from the evidence of Brahmanical literature to the Buddhist and Jaina works, here again we meet with rich details and masterly analysis of republican constitutions. There is no clash of ideals and ideologies between the Brahmanical and Buddhist literature on the fundamentals of a pure form of government. The evidences on the other hand supplement and complement one another. In the Buddhist canonical works even the religious Samghas of the Buddhists were worked on republican principles, and the great Buddha was of opinion that the system was bound to serve its end so long as its members met in a full assembly and conducted its proceedings when the full assembly sat in sessions. This was what was meant by the expression Gana-rājya. Literally rendered it was government by the assembly when all the members were present and cast their unanimous vote on the resolutions brought forward.

When we come to the epoch of the epics, we have a fairly full description of a gana which in modern political parlance, can be rendered a confederacy. It is said that ganas possessed of Sam- ghāta vṛtti and saṅghāta yoga.<sup>1</sup> Nīlakaṇṭha interprets saṅghāta yoga as aikamātya prayoga. It was the feeling of oneness, of unity of purpose and of action. It was a cooperative endeavour of the most efficient variety. No differences entered the confederating units which were actuated by common ideals and by common will. It was realised that the entire success of a gaṇa government was based on the good will of its members, on the principle that 'united we win and divided we fall.' Here we have to note a very significant statement.

<sup>1</sup> VIII, 14.

<sup>2</sup> III, 3, 86.

<sup>3</sup> Ar. Śāśa, BK, XI, 1.

भिन्ना विमनसः सर्वे गच्छन्ति अविशं भवाद । Śānti. 107.13

If differences arise among the members of the confederacy, and if the latter are not of one mind and hold different views on the affairs of the state and society, weakness sets in and the gaṇas fall easily into the hands of the enemy, overcome by mutual dread and suspicion. If the gaṇa organization is not well knit and is open to dissensions among the members who form that group, the enemy who lies in wait for an opportunity, takes advantage of the weakness and succeeds in overthrowing it. Differences of opinion are due to greed and jealousy (lobha and amaṃsa).<sup>2</sup> This is true of any great organization consisting of refractory elements. The solidarity of any organization depends on the harmonious adjustment of the individual to that group. Here is the scope for the individual to develop his personality. But if the individual is animated by selfish interests and becomes erratic in his improvement, there is no salvation to that individual or to the group of which he is a member. The gaṇa government has all elements which go to make up sovereignty. It is for the gaṇamukhyas to confer together and arrive at decisions which would be binding on all. In the best interests of the gaṇa the leaders of the group should assemble, put their heads together and act so as to ensure what is called lokayātra. By this the gaṇa was able to amass good wealth, defy the enemy with its disciplined superior force and offer prompt justice. The gaṇa organisation afforded equality of opportunity and not the dead mechanical level of equality. The gaṇa was a synthesis of the wills of its res-

<sup>1</sup> Śānti, 107. 13-14.

<sup>2</sup> गणानां च कुलानां च राज्ञां मतसङ्गमः ।
वेदसंक्षिप्तान्वेती लोभामर्षो नराणि । Ibid. 10.

14 [Annals, B. O. R. I.]

pective members. That is why there is no much insistence on saṅghāta in almost every other line of this chapter on gaṇa.

तस्मात्संचातमेकादृग्गणानां शरणं महत् । Ibid. 32.

The political realism of a gaṇa government is deeply marked in the cāra (espionage), mantra (counsel), bala (armed forces), sāma dānavibhedana (means of diplomacy) and skilled foreign policy.<sup>1</sup> The secrecy of mantra is said to be jealously guarded and should be kept a close preserve of the Pradhāna or the President-leader of the gaṇa organization. It should not be a public property of the gaṇa. If this were otherwise, it defeats the very purpose of the mantra. The institution of cāra comes under this category.<sup>2</sup> From the realistic point of view of the strength of a gaṇa, it is pointed out with much force that the real danger is more internal than external.<sup>3</sup> The foreign enemy can be suppressed, vanquished and kept out by a well balanced policy, equipment and organization. There is not much dread on that account. But the actual danger to the organization comes from what we may call internal politics. It is the intransigent, disgruntled and disloyal sections of the organization that could not be easily managed. They alone form the clog in the wheel of a gaṇa's progress. It is therefore up to the gaṇa leaders to pursue a policy which would cater to the welfare of the whole gaṇa.<sup>4</sup> We have to note here specially the expression gaṇahitam. Otherwise it would be fraught with danger to the gaṇarājya. Internal disaffection cuts at the root of any organization.<sup>5</sup> So there is incessant insistence on the unanimity of the gaṇa assembly. This infuses new life into the organization and enables the gaṇa to add to its wealth and other material resources.<sup>6</sup> For no organization can stand secure without a replenished treasury and a contented people. And students of Hindu polity know that such gaṇarājyas flourished successfully and with a long lease of life which can be counted by centuries, from about 1000 B. C. to the end of the Gupta rule about 500 A. D.

<sup>1</sup> Ibid. 12.

<sup>2</sup> Ibid. 24.

<sup>3</sup> आभ्यन्तरमयं रक्ष्यमसारं चावृत्तो मयम् ।

आभ्यन्तरं मये राजत्वं सद्यो वृत्तानि कुर्वन्ति । Ibid. 28-29.

<sup>4</sup> Ibid. 25.

<sup>5</sup> Ibid. 29.

<sup>6</sup> Ibid. 15.

ORIGIN OF THE BHĀGAVATA AND JAINA RELIGIONS*

By

P. C. DIVANJI

I. Introductory Remarks

Out of the two religions whose origin I propose to trace in this paper the name of the second is familiar to everybody because it is the living faith of an important section of the indigenous inhabitants of this country. That of the first however is likely to be unfamiliar even to a majority of the Hindus, not to speak of the non-Hindus, because there is not now in India any section of the population whose religious beliefs and practices bear that label. It is not however that it has been totally extinct. It survives in the different forms of Vaiṣṇavism current in the northern and southern parts of India. Those forms are not however derived from it directly but from an intermediate modification thereof called the Pāñcarātra Dharma started by Śāṇḍilya, which had mixed up its dogma and forms of worship with those of the Tantrikas and made it so complex and Anāryan as to compel the strict followers of the Vedic school like Bādarāyaṇa and his commentator Śaṅkara to attack it, as a non-Vedic cult<sup>1</sup>. All those Vaiṣṇavite forms are attempts made by learned philosophers and devout worshippers between the 10th and the 16th centuries to restore the pristine purity and simplicity of the old Bhāgavata faith and yet none was thoroughly successful in doing so for one reason or another. It is, therefore, necessary first to define that creed before tracing its origin.

---

* A paper read before the Philosophy and Religion Section of the XI Session of the All-India Oriental Conference held at Hyderabad from the 20th to the 32nd December 1941.

<sup>1</sup> Br. Śū. II. 2. 42-45 and Śaṅkara's Bhāṣya thereon. (N. S. P. ed. pp. 572-75). It is very significant that what the Sūtrakṛta and Bhāṣyakṛta nītiśek is only that part of the doctrine of the Bhāgavatas, then merged in the Pāñcarātras, which consisted of the production of the Jīva called Saṁkarṣaṇa from Paramātmā, called Vāsudeva, that of Pradyumna, the universal mind from Saṁkarṣaṇa and that of Aniruddha, the universal ego, from Pradyumna. The reviser of the Mahābhārata claims (XII, 3, 163) that the original Pāñcarātra Śāstra had been composed by Citrasākhyaṇḍin, the joint name of the seven Ṛṣis, Atri, Aṅgīrasa, Pulaha, Pulastya, Kratu, Marici and Vasiṣṭha in the 7th Manvantara of Svayambhu Manu.

2. Even as regards Jainism it is necessary to do so because although to this day the original designation has been adhered to by a widely-spread and influential portion of the Indian community, there are several sub-divisions therein owing their rise to irreconcilable differences in matters of dogma and forms of worship. These had sprung up at different times during its long history owing to divergent causes and so it is difficult to get an idea at once as to what its original form was.

II. The Bhāgavata Religion and its Origin

3. The Bhāgavata religion is the religion of the Bhāgavatas. That term was employed by its followers to designate the object of their adoration and meant one who was possessed of the six attributes, splendour, strength, fame, prosperity, knowledge and detachment, mentioned in the couplet:—Atisvayasya samagrasya virasya paśasah śrīyah, jñānvairūgyayojaniva śaṣṭān bhaga dīrapā. In the Paurāṇic mythology these attributes are ascribed to Viṣṇu. In the earlier Vedic age, they were those of Āditya who had twelve phases, the name of one of which was Viṣṇu but in the later Vedic age sages had begun to have a conception of one Supreme Deity of whom the other former deities, Indra, Varuṇa, Rudra, Agni, Pṛthivī etc., were realised to be different and partial manifestations and the Virāt (cosmos) to be its complete visible manifestation, though not the measure of its magnitude. The sage who was first inspired with the knowledge of this deity was Nārāyaṇa, whose name is always associated in Paurāṇic mythology with that of another sage named Nara. He, on getting this inspiration, composed the well-known Puruṣasūkta,<sup>1</sup> wherein he described the process of evolution from the Virāt Puruṣa by his own immolation. Another sage Hiraṇyagarbha thought over the stage earlier than that of the manifestation of the Virāt and was inspired with the thought that such a stage must be that of a golden egg. He accordingly composed the Hiraṇyagarbhāsūkta.<sup>2</sup>

<sup>1</sup> R. V. X. 90.

<sup>2</sup> R. V. X. 121. See also R. V. X. 129.

describing the process of evolution upto the manifestation of the universe as he had conceived it. A third sage thought over the relation between the human soul and that out of whom the universe consisting of the diverse objects including the old Vedic deities had been evolved. Strange as it may seem, this sage was of the female sex. Her name was Vak and her father's name according to Sāyana was Ambhrya Rṣi. She realised that the two were identical and in a fit of ecstasy composed a hymn propounding her conviction.<sup>1</sup> I have not collected together all the philosophical hymns from the Rgveda but the above are typical ones of the psychical revolution that had been taking place during the period when they were composed. It is but natural that those sages who had been inspired with such lofty conceptions should have begun to look upon the old ideal of rising upto heaven by means of sacrifices and attaining happiness there as unworthy of a highly-developed soul, to think out the problems as to why a soul with so much potentiality should have been condemned to misery of diverse sorts and how it can be raised to its original purity. The results of their contemplation were the conceptions of the bondage of Karma, of the higher ideal of liberation from it and of the means for attaining it being the development of the virtues of non-violence, truth-speaking, non-stealing, celibacy or abstinence from sexual enjoyment and non-acceptance of gifts except so far as it may be necessary for the sustenance of life and the contemplation of the Essence in solitude with a mind unperturbed by thoughts about oneself or about any external object. These are what are called the Pañca Mahāvratas, and Abhyāsa and Vairāgya. The propagation of such views must naturally have led to the gradual establishment of what is called the "Ascetic Age," i. e. to say, an age in which many thoughtful men and women after attaining puberty betook themselves to forests in order to be able to devote their lives exclusively to an attempt to realise the high ideal above set forth

<sup>1</sup> Ibid. 125. Winternitz refers to other philosophical hymns also in the Rgveda namely B. V. I. 164. 46 and X. 60 and 85 and one in the Atharvaveda namely, X. 2, XI. 8, XII. 1, XIX. 53. I believe, there must be many more in both. He also refers to the subordination of Indra and other earlier Vedic Gods to Viṣṇu in the Yajurveda. (His. of Ind. Lit. Vol. I, pp. 90-100, 134-55).

without being hampered and led astray by temptations. It must be in this age that what Dr. Winternitz calls "Ascetic poetry"<sup>1</sup> must have originated and been developed. Apart from that the Mahābhārata refers to the existence of a distinct work on Tyāga-sāstra known as Saṁnyogavudha composed for the guidance of the Brāhmanas of the Bhāllavi Śākha.<sup>2</sup>

4. As is natural all the men in the Vedic age could not have the aptitude to lead a secluded forest life. The society must therefore have been divided into the followers of the two paths, that of an active life called Pravṛtti Dharma and that of a retired life called Nivṛtti Dharma. Our Paurāṇic works contain many references to these Dharmas which were in fact only different ways of approach.<sup>3</sup>

5. Let alone the Pravṛtti Dharma for the present. The originator of the Nivṛtti Dharma seems to be Nārāyaṇa, the author of the Puruṣasūkta above-referred to, who had been living in solitude at Badarikāśrama.<sup>4</sup> He had a very ardent devotee also in the person of Śaṁkhāyana Sanatkumāra, at times referred to simply as Kumāra or as Skanda, who never lived in a house. One tradition of the tenets of the Bhāgavata religion is spoken of in the Bhāgavata-Purāṇa as having originated from him, he having heard it from Saṁkarṣaṇa and communicated it to Parāśara, the latter to Maitreya, and the last to Vidura, brother of Dhṛtarāṣṭra, born of a Śūdra mother.<sup>5</sup> Another tradition is that Nārāyaṇa had imparted the teaching to Bṛhatsravā alias Nārada, the latter to Kṛṣṇa Dvaipāyana alias Apantarāstama, he to his son Śuka, the latter to King Parikṣita, son of Junamejaya and Romaharṣaṇa Sūta, who had heard it recited to that king by Śuka

<sup>1</sup> His. of Ind. Lit. Vol. I. by Winternitz pp. 473-75; Some Problems of Indian Literature (Cal.) pp. 21-40.

<sup>2</sup> Mbh. XII. 3. 46, 16-20.

<sup>3</sup> Mbh. XII. 3. 20-29, 36-44, 118-26, 163; Bhāg. Pu. III. 8. 7 where Sanatkumāra is said to be Nivṛtti dharmarata.

<sup>4</sup> Bhāg. Pu. III. 4. 21-22, V. 4. 5, XII. 9. 7; Harivamśa 73. 19-22.

<sup>5</sup> Bhāg. Pu. 8. 1-9; IV. 8. 1. In Mbh. XII. 3. 106-07, he narrates the Viṣṇu Māhātmya.

in the Naimiṣāranya, to Śaunaka and others.<sup>1</sup> The Chāndogya Upaniṣad<sup>2</sup> on the other hand contains a recital of the teaching of the Highest Essence (Bhūmā) having been imparted by Sanātkumāra alias Skanda to Nārada when the latter represented that his heart had been overpowered with a feeling of remorse although he had studied the four Vedas, the Itihāsa-Purāṇa and all other sciences, that he had heard from persons of the type of the sage he had approached that a man who knows the self overcomes remorse and that he was anxious to do so.

6. Apart from these lines of teachers and pupils there is a general observation in the following verse of the said Purāṇa. 'Ātmārāmāśca munayaḥ nirgranthā'pyurukrame Kurvantyachaituḥ bhaktimithambhūtaguṇa Hariḥ.'<sup>3</sup> Here the term Nirgranthāḥ is significant. It is an adjective qualifying the noun munayaḥ and means those who are without bonds. The context in which this verse occurs shows that the said term could not have been used here in the sense of the Jains as in the Buddhist Pāli Literature<sup>4</sup> and that the bonds here spoken of are the bonds of attachment to one's family, to the objects of sense-enjoyment etc. The context is that when Sūta says that Dvaipāyana Vyāsa having composed the Bhāgavata Saṁhitā taught it to his son Śuka who was Nirgranthā, Śaunaka asks him why though he was so Śuka studied this great Saṁhitā and the above is the answer of Sūta to that query.

7. Lastly, there are in the Bhāgavata Purāṇa several illustrations of great devotees of Viṣṇu or Nārāyaṇa such as Kardama and Kapila, Dhruva and Prthu, Priyavrata and three of his sons, <sup>1</sup> Ibid. XII. 4. 41-43. So far as this tradition relates to the imparting of this knowledge by Nārāyaṇa to Nārada, it is corroborated by Mbh. XII. 3. 162. This Nārada must be different from his namesake who is often referred to in Śrī Kṛṣṇa's life-account in the Bhāgavata Purāṇa. According to another episode in the Bhāgavata itself (II. 5-7) again, one Nārada had acquired knowledge from Brahmā. Further up in II. 2 it is however made clear that Nārāyaṇa himself had imparted it to Brahmā, the latter to Nārada and the last to Dvaipāyana.

<sup>2</sup> Chān. Upa. VII. 1-26.

<sup>3</sup> Bhāg. Pu. I. 7-10.

<sup>4</sup> S. B. E. Series No. XII, Introduction by Jacobi, p. XXXIV. On the Indian Sect of Jainism by Bühler, pp. 3-5.

Kavi, Mahāvīra, and Savana, Ṛṣabha, Bharata and Sumati and the 9 Yogesvaras and Avadhūtas,<sup>1</sup> which go to show that the Bhāgavata Dharma was originally so strict in the matter of discipline that it was inconsistent with its tenets to lead the life of a house-holder. It is true that some of these such as Dhruva, Pṛthu, Priyavrata, Ṛṣabha and Bharata did live the life of a house-holder for some time but it is also true that they had been persuaded to do so for some time for the benefit of humanity and that the predominant feature of the Dharma was Pāramahansa, i. e., a life of perfect detachment from social environments.<sup>2</sup>

8. It is obvious from the above that the sage, Kapila, the propounder of the Sāṃkhya doctrine, was born after the completion of the Tenth Maṇḍala of the Rgveda to which Nārāyaṇa, the founder of the Nivṛtti Dharma had made a valuable contribution. It is therefore reasonable to infer that in the said Dharma, the Sāṃkhya doctrine could have no place although in the Bhagavadgītā, the Mahābhārata and Bhāgavata Purāṇa, that doctrine is interwoven with the doctrine of the Bhāgavatas.<sup>3</sup> The authorship of all these works in their original forms is ascribed to Veda Vyāsa. It is therefore probable that it was he who brought about a reconciliation between the Sāṃkhya doctrine and the old Nivṛtti Dharma on acknowledging the propounder of the former as an Avatāra of Viṣṇu or Nārāyaṇa. The theory of Avatāras as a whole too was a product of his imagination, the material for it having been drawn from the Vedic hymns and the Gāthās current in his time which were being recited at sacrificial meetings. The reason for starting it seems to be that between Nārāyaṇa and Dvaipāyana there was a wide gap of several centuries. During that interval several members of the priestly and princely orders had left their marks on the Vedic and non-Vedic literatures that had sprung up in the meanwhile. When the latter proceeded to revive the old social order, which had been disorganised and was on the point of disruption owing to the destruction of several important

<sup>1</sup> Bhāg. Pā. III. 21-33; IV. 8. 12-44; V. 1. 15; XL 2-5, 7-9.

<sup>2</sup> Bhāg. Pā. I. 4. 31. In some of the colophons the work itself is called Pāramahansa Samhitā.

<sup>3</sup> ERE. Vol. II—Bhakti-Mārga by Grierson. pp. 339-51.

Kṣatriya families in the Mahābhārata war and that of Brāhmaṇa and Vaiśya families owing to the after-effects of that war on the economic condition of the country and also owing to the apathy towards home-life generated by the wide prevalence of the doctrine of the Nivṛttimārga, he must have seen that the only way to reconcile the Vedic and non-Vedic cults and preserve the memories of the great men of the past in both of them was to create a social order on the basis of a division of functions and to provide the literature appropriate to each class.<sup>1</sup> He accordingly collected together the Vedic hymns and the sacrificial, musical and magical formulas, divided them into four parts according to the functions to be performed by the four priests employed in a sacrifice and revived the orders of the four Varnas and Āśramas. For those who did not believe in the attainment of happiness in another world but were nevertheless anxious to regulate their life spiritually he started the theory of Karmayoga and inspired faith in it by identifying Śrī Kṛṣṇa with Viṣṇu and having composed the Bhagavadgītā laying down the principles of the old Pravṛtti Dharma brought it in a line with the Nivṛtti Dharma by making room in the Karmayoga for the theory of the Avatāras which could enable him to increase the importance of Śrī Kṛṣṇa. There yet remained a class of people to whom neither the Vedas nor the Bhagavadgītā were intelligible. For them he composed the original Bhārata called the fifth Veda,<sup>2</sup> illustrating elaborately the principles underlying the text.

9. The European scholars, guided, I suppose, mainly by Prof. Ray Chaudhary say that the Bhāgavata religion had been founded by Śrī Kṛṣṇa, son of Vasudeva and Devaki, and the pupil of Ghorā Aṅgīrasa on the teaching of the Sāuryopasana, or Puruṣavidyā, which he had learnt from his said teacher, that the Yādavas of the Sātvata clan were its followers, that it was a revolt against the old Vedic religion and that the Bhagavadgītā is the authoritative work of that religion.<sup>3</sup> It must however have been clear

<sup>1</sup> See on this point Ahīrbudhanya Saṁhitā (edited by Otto Schrader, Madras 1916) Ch. XIX according to which the Saṁhitāntra-Sāstra was the source of all the orthodox systems referred to in the verse commencing with the line:—

Trayisāṁkhyāṇ yogaś paśupati-mataś Vaiṣṇavamitī

<sup>2</sup> Buṅg. Pu. I, 4, 14-23; VII, 1, 35; XII, 6, 36-69.

<sup>3</sup> ERE. Vol. II—Bhagavadgītā, by Garbe, pp. 535-38;—Bhakti-mārga by Grierson pp. 539-31; His. of Ind. Lit. by Winternitz Vol. I, p. 457.

15 [Annals, B. O. R. I.]

from what has preceded that the Bhāgavata religion is not a new religion but a modification of the old Nivṛttimārga started by Rṣi Nārāyaṇa, the Vedic sage and that whereas it is true that Śrī Kṛṣṇa had in his age modified the way of adoration of Nārāyaṇa by propounding the view that a Kṣatriya need not renounce the world in order to be able to realise the identity of the individual soul with the Supreme soul and that he can realise it by leading a life of a Kṣatriya in the true sense of it, i. e. to say, by continuing to discharge his duties as laid down in the Dharmaśāstra without allowing his mind to be swayed by the emotions promoted by self-interest and a desire to enjoy the fruits of the efforts involved in the discharge of such duties, it cannot be true that he had started a new cult and that too in opposition to the Vedic cult dominated over by the Brāhmaṇa class because there was enmity between that class and Kṣatriya class. Nor can it be believed that the Bhagavadgītā as we now have it was his composition. If we read that work carefully and reflect over the incidents of Kṛṣṇa's life as narrated in the Mahābhārata and some of the Purāṇas, the principal among which is the Bhāgavata, we can come to the conclusion that by his sympathy for and exertions in the interest of the good and the dedication of his life to the extermination of the vain and the wicked, whether they were Anāryans like Narakāśura and Bāṇāsura or Āryans like Kamsa, Jarāsaṁdha and Śiśupāla, he had been looked upon by a large section of his contemporaries of both sexes as an incarnation of Viṣṇu or Nārāyaṇa and adored as such even in his lifetime,<sup>1</sup> that through Arjuna, Uddhava and a few of them who lived in close contact with him he had explained the philosophical outlook on life which guided his extraordinary conduct and that although he had never renounced the world, he had made such an impression even on a section of the recluses of his time like Nārada, Veda Vyāsa, and Maitreya that after his demise their devotion towards him and their belief in his doctrine increased in intensity and one of his devotees Veda Vyāsa saw in his doctrine a satisfactory remedy for putting an end to the danger of the total disruption of the Aryan social structure which had already set in through various causes and made use of it with the help of the previous literatures of both the Nivṛttimārga and Pravṛttimārga for restoring the glory of the Varpāśrama Dharma with its excellent checks and counter-checks in the shape of the mutual rights and duties of the four classes and the four orders. I say that this was the restoration of an old organisation in a somewhat modified form because its origin goes back to the day on which Viśvāmitra, a Kṣatriya king having abandoned his kingdom and his military career along with it, retired to a forest in order to attain Brahmarṣitva on acknowledging it to be superior to Rājaraṣitva. Prior to that a long and bitter struggle had been going on between the members of the priestly and princely orders ever since the time of Parāśurāma and Saṁsārārjuna, each trying to establish his superiority over the other. But when thereafter order was restored the Brahmans acknowledged Viśvāmitra as one of the Brahmarṣis and one of the best of the Vedic Seers, gave him a place among the seven Ṛṣis and admitted the Gāyatrī mantra composed and made use of by him for the attainment of his goal as the most efficacious of all the Vedic mantras and the quintessence of the Vedic teaching.

<sup>1</sup> This is corroborated even by Hemacandra (Tspc. Ch. VIII, Sargas 2-7).

III. The Jaina Religion and its Origin

10. The European scholars, of more recent times,<sup>1</sup> who have devoted some time to the thought as to the original form and the time of origin of the Jaina religion have come to the conclusions that the theory propounded by the earlier European scholars that Jainism was an offshoot of Buddhism is not well-founded, that there is sufficient evidence in the Jaina and Buddhist works as to the existence of a sect of Nirgranthas, the then designation of the Jainas led by Mahāvīra there called Nātaputta, that such similarity between the religious tenets and practices of the Buddhists and the Jainas as that on which the earlier scholars laid considerable stress was easily explicable as having been derived from the common Aryan source, that though Mahāvīra cannot be believed to be the first to propound that religion as his parents had been following the cult of Pārśvanātha, whom the Jains believe to be their 23rd Tirthankara, the accounts of the other 22 Tirthankaras given in the Jain works are so much vitiated by vagueness and hyperbolism that for the purpose of the History of Religions, Jainism cannot be believed to have been started earlier than between B. C. 877 and 717. Two south Indian scholars have only changed the latter limit to 777.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> On the Indian Sect of the Jainas by Bühler, pp. 25-39, 46-47; S. B. E. Vol. XII. Intro. by Jacobi, pp. XIX-XXXVIII; ERE, Vol. II—Jainism by Jacobi, pp. 465-66.

II. In view of the evidence and the conclusions set forth in the preceding section hereof, all the conclusions of the modern scholars except the last, though based upon somewhat different data, seem to be sound. As for the last, it is necessary to bear in mind that the theory of the European scholars that the cult of Viṣṇu had been started by Kṣatriyas as a revolt against the tyranny of the Brāhmaṇas cannot be believed to be true in view of the facts that certain Rṣis of the later Vedic age, who were undoubtedly Brāhmaṇas had already conceived the existence of an Almighty Puruṣa, realised the essential identity of the individual soul with Him, hit upon the bondage of Karma as explaining the wide gulf of difference in the powers of knowledge and action that existed between the two and conceived the idea of Mokṣa (release) from it as being capable of being achieved by a process of purification which consisted of a course of spiritual discipline. It was for undergoing this discipline, securing that release and realising of that pure nature of the self, that thoughtful members of all the castes had been renouncing the world and leading a secluded life in the forests. According to a well-known rule of the Dharmaśāstra, a non-Brahman could not take the Saṃnyāsa-dīkṣā. It is therefore natural that there should have grown up a class of the so-called unorthodox ascetics along with the orthodox ascetics, and that they should have taken to the path of devotion to either Viṣṇu or Śiva hoping to be released from their bonds by the favour of the deity in whom they had faith and to have in moments of excitement given expression to their experiences and sentiments in songs and ballads composed in their mother-tongue, which must have been different from the language of the learned and which the Europeans have labeled as "Ascetic Poetry" and have found to have been drawn upon as well by the Bhāgavatas and Jaines as by the Buddhists and Śaivas. The very fact that the so-called unorthodox ascetics adopted most of the rules and the mode of dress of the order of Saṁnyāsis is sufficient evidence of there being harmony rather than discord between the ascetics of the two classes. To add to that there are numerous stories in the Mahābhārata which go to show that there used to take place a free interchange of views between them to the mutual advantage of both and that of the society in general.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> His. of Ind. Lit. by Gower (1931) p. 259; ERE. Vol. II—Jainism by Jacobi, pp. 465-66; Ayyangar and Rao: Studies in South Indian Jainism, p. 19

12. Now, the first Tirthaṅkara of the Jaines according to their canonical books called Ādinātha (the First Lord) was Ṛṣabhadeva, son of Nābhi and Marudevi. The Kalpasūtra of the Śvetāmbaras does not seem to contain any more information about him except that he had inherited the kingdom of his father in Ikṣvākubhūmi in Bhāratavarṣa, that after having ruled for several years and teaching the people during those years 72 sciences including the art of writing, the science of arithmetic and the knowledge of omens, the 64 accomplishments of women, the hundred crafts and the three occupations of men, he renounced his kingdom, retired to the forest and was the first to lead the life of a mendicant and became the first Jaina and the first Tirthaṅkara.<sup>2</sup> The Bhāgavata Purāṇa<sup>3</sup> on the other hand acclaims him not only as a great devotee of Viṣṇu and a great Yogi but also as an Avatāra of Viṣṇu because he had in his lifetime been so successful in eradicating his individual consciousness and in being in tune with the Infinite that he had ceased to be conscious of the existence of his physical body, that his limbs had consequently ceased to perform their normal functions and that therefore he was an ideal Paramahansa who is above the limitations imposed by the Āśramadharma of the Saṁnyāsis. As contrasted with the

<sup>1</sup> His. of Ind. Lit. Vol. I, pp. 380-94, 473 &c.; Some Problems of Indian Literature, pp. 21-40; Mbh. I, 75-93, III, 100-13, 187, 273-90, V, 11-17, 120-23, XII, 3, 88-91, 92, 94-97, 340, XIII, 100, XIV, 16-19.

<sup>2</sup> S. B. E. Vol. XII, pp. 281-85.

<sup>3</sup> Bhāg. Pu. V. In Mbh. XII, 1, 124-30, Ṛṣabha is called a Brahmarṣi and one of the Śāṁkhyācāryas who preceded Kapila.

Katpasūtra, it gives many more details about his family and his descendants. It says that Ṛṣabha's father, Nābhi was one of the sons of Agnidhra, that the said Agnidhra was again one of the sons of Priyavrata who was of one of the two sons of Manu, that Kapila the famous propounder of the Sāṅkhya doctrine was the son of Devahūti who was a sister of the said Priyavrata and had been married to the sage Kardama, that Bhārata after whom this country was named Bhārata-varṣa (the Country of Bharata) was one of his hundred sons, that out of the other 99, nine did not marry and renounced the world and devoted their lives exclusively to the contemplation of the Almighty, that Nimi, one of the kings of Mithilā, the capital of Videha (roughly speaking the modern Bihar), had taken spiritual instructions from them, that after having ruled for several years Bharata too had renounced his kingdom and become a recluse and that his son Sumati too, had followed a similar course and had attained a state similar to that of Ṛṣabha.<sup>1</sup> The Jaina works agree in this so far as to say that Bharata was one of the 63 Śalākāpuruṣas and the first Cakravartin amongst them, that Sumati was their fifth Tīrthaṅkara and that Kapila was one of the 9 Vāsudevas who are included in that number 63.

13. I have also been able to identify some of the other Śalākāpuruṣas of the Jains, namely, Kṛṣṇa, Balarāma, Ariṣṭanemi and Jarāsaṁdha whose lives were intertwined to a very great extent. When I read the Triṣaṣṭhi-śalākāpuruṣa-carita of Hemacandra and the Harivaṁśa Furāṇa of Jinasena I was much surprised to find that their authors had been speaking of Kṛṣṇa with as much reverence as the Bhāgavatas except for believing him to be the Supreme Brahma in human form, referring to him by the various names Dāmodara, Hari, Govinda, Murāri, and others, which the Vaiṣṇavas hold dear, that they had narrated all the incidents of his childhood which are found narrated in the works of Bhāgavata school, that they had also been looking upon Jarāsaṁdha as a tyrant who deserved to be killed and that they also believed Balarāma to be a helpmate of Kṛṣṇa as did the Bhāgavatas. Of course there are certain differences as regards the common points between their life-stories as narrated in the works as to the ascendants and descendants of Kṛṣṇa. The reason for their entering into many more details of historical interest seems to be that they looked upon Kṛṣṇa as a highly developed soul of the status of Vāsudeva or Viṣṇu, who was only next in rank to a Tīrthamkara, who too was only the most highly developed soul of his age, as opposed to the Bhāgavatas, who looked upon him as Nārāyaṇa or Saṅga Brahma incarnate and were as such very little interested in the human side of his life and those of his ancestors and descendants. Now such historical details as they supply were not obviously necessary for bringing into relief the tenets of their religion e. g., that Kṛṣṇa's great-grandfather was Andhaka-Vṛṣṇi, that his grandfather was Sauri, who had founded Śauryapura at a distance of about 50 miles from Mathurā, that he was a ruling chief there under the suzerainty of Jarāsaṁdha of Magadha, that after having reigned there for several years he renounced the kingdom in favour of the eldest of his ten sons named Samudravijaya and retired to a forest, that Vāsudeva was his youngest son and was living under the control of his eldest brother, that he had acquired proficiency in several arts, the chief of which were those of singing and playing on musical instruments and horse-training, that he was such an adept in the former and was at the same time so handsome that whenever he stirred out in the town and amused himself by music even the married women of the town gave up their house-hold work and gathered together to hear him, that the leading men of the town once complained about him to his elder brother, that thereupon he was ordered not to leave the palace compound without permission, that finding this restraint irksome he once broke through it and wandered about from place to place, that wherever he went, he attracted the attention of either the ruling chief or a nobleman of the place and became his son-in-law, that after he had collected seven or eight wives in this manner he had an occasion to show his skill in the military science to his eldest brother Samudravijaya, who was ranged against him in battle, that the latter recognised him and took him back to his capital with his wives and kept him in his military service, that there he came in contact with Kaṁsa, son of Ugrasena, who having been abandoned immediately after his birth on account of inauspicious signs on his body had been brought up by a Banīa, that Samudravijaya was once ordered by Jarāsamḍha to send a contingent against a rebellious Gaḍhavi, that he sent for the purpose the regiment commanded by Vasudeva assisted by Kārṇa, that the latter by his bravery defeated the Gaḍhavi, arrested him and produced him before Vasudeva, who through Samudravijaya took him to Jarāsamḍha, that the latter was so pleased that he offered to give to Vasudeva the Jagir of Mathurā and his daughter Jivayāsā but the latter would not accept them saying that it was Kārṇa who deserved them by his bravery, that as the latter was reputed to be the son of a Banīa Jarāsamḍha was reluctant to give him his daughter but afterwards convincing proof of his being the son of a Kṣatriya was produced and Jarāsamḍha gave him both his daughter and the Jagir.<sup>1</sup> The works of the Bhāgavata school are completely silent about all these incidents but there is such a touch of reality about them that one is persuaded to believe that the Jainas must have had some independent source of information about them. In fact Jināsena narrates<sup>2</sup> in his Introduction that he had based his narrations of the family of Hari on the original work composed by Suvratasāthi, the 20th Tirthamkara who like Kṛṣṇa belonged to the Yādava clan, that since he composed his work, several other Jaina Śādhus had also written accounts of the family of Hari and that he had based his work on materials gathered from all of them. Hemacandra, too states in his Lives of Sixty-three Eminent Personages that he had gathered the materials for them from older works.<sup>3</sup> I am therefore led to believe that the charge that the Jainas had made out their Paurāṇic works from the Bhāgavata sources on twisting facts so as to suit their purpose must be dismissed as unfounded and that as regards certain matters of historical interest the Jaina works are more informative and reliable than the Bhāgavata works.

<sup>1</sup> Bhāg. Pū. XII. 5-7.

14. According to them Samudravijaya had a son Ariṣṭanemi born at Śāuryapura, very near the time when the whole Yādava clan consisting of three branches migrated to Saurāṣṭra owing to

<sup>1</sup> Tapo. X. VIII. 2-7, 8, 10, 11; Hv. Pu. IV. 22-36.

<sup>2</sup> Hv. Pu. Intro. pp. 3-5.

<sup>3</sup> Tapo, Intro.

to the invincibility of the attack on Mathurā by Kālā, who according to them was a son of Jarāsaṁdha. Because of his outstanding virtues, Ariṣṭanemi had become a pet of Kṛṣṇa and therefore received his constant attention in the matter of his education. Although at the time of the last encounter with Jarāsaṁdha he had grown up to be a full-fledged youth he had not fallen in love with any girl as Kṛṣṇa's sons Pradyumna, Śāmba and others, who were almost equal in age to him, had. He was once persuaded to consent to marry and even went to the house of the father of a princess named Rājīmātī but turned back from it on seeing a row of cattle tied to posts in readiness for being slaughtered for the nuptial feast and cutting off their ropes with his sword. Since then he remained in the family house for about one year but that was only for preparing himself for a life of renunciation and after that period he left the house for good, first went to Ujjain, stayed there for some time and at last returned to Mt. Revataka (Girnār) and having practised severe austerities there attained Kaivalya or as the Jains say Kevalīpada. Naturally enough he was soon surrounded by some followers, all of whom were recluses like him.

15. Dr. Ray Chaudhary has taken a note of his being a first cousin of Kṛṣṇa in his Early History of the Vaiṣṇavas but beyond that he has not made any use of the biography of that saint given at considerable details in the Jaina works. The reason for it seems to be that he was concerned with adducing evidence of Kṛṣṇa being a historical personage who had lived many centuries prior to the beginning of the Christian era, his being identical with the pupil of Ghorā Aṅgīrasa, who is referred to in the Chāndogya Upaniṣad<sup>1</sup> as the person to whom the Puruṣavidyā expounded in that Upaniṣad had been taught by the said sage and with his being the founder of the religion in which the object of adoration was Bhagavān Viṣṇu, after whom the followers of the creed were known as the Bhāgavatas. The European scholars are not prepared even to concede that there was any such historical personage as Ariṣṭanemi, although following the lead given by Dr. Ray Chaudhary they admit the historical existence of Kṛṣṇa-Vāsudeva, his identity with the Kṛṣṇa of the

<sup>1</sup> Early History of the Vaiṣṇava Sect. pp. 172-74.

<sup>2</sup> Chan. Upa. III 17.

16 [Annals, B. O. R. I.]

Chândogya Upaniṣad and his being the founder of the religion of the Bhāgavatas.<sup>1</sup> The principal obstacles in the way of their making any concession in the case of Ariṣṭanemi are (1) that according to the Jaina works there was a very long distance of 84,000 years between him and the 23rd Tirthamkara Pārśvanātha and (2) that there is no reference whatsoever in the Paurāṇic work of the Hindus as to Vāsudeva having an elder brother named Samudravijaya and the latter having a son of the name of Ariṣṭanemi. As for the first, it must be admitted that it is not possible with our present knowledge to explain what the Jaina authors mean when they say that there was a distance in time of so many thousands of years or so many Sāgaropamās between one of the Tirthamkaras and another but that for that reason alone it would not be reasonable to brush aside the whole of the life-story of Ariṣṭanemi given in several Jaina works which had been based on very old Prakṛit works as a figment of imagination. The non-mention of the names of Vāsudeva's brother and brother's son in the works of the Bhāgavata school can be easily explained by the circumstance that the Bhāgavata writers had made use of only so much of their traditional knowledge as was necessary for glorifying Kṛṣṇa as the Supreme Deity who had assumed a human form for the protection of the good and the chastisement of the wicked. There are, as shown above, many other facts of purely historical or human interest appearing from the Jaina works which have even not been hinted at in the Bhāgavata works.<sup>2</sup> The word Ariṣṭanemi appears at least in the Śāntipāṭha of the Muṇḍaka, Praśna, and Māṇḍūkya Upaniṣads of the Atharvaveda. It is, of course, there an epithet of Tārṅgya i. e. Aruṇa, the herald of the sun and means, "he, the circumference of whose wheels is perfect or unburnt." In Pāṇini VI.2.100 there is a reference to an Ariṣṭāśritapuram (a city where Ariṣṭa had taken up an abode). Apart from these, however, the Jaina works go to show that Ariṣṭanemi had not married and had renounced the world, that the original Jaina doctrine was that none who had not completely given up his connection with every worldly object and had not prepared himself by severe penances and contemplation in solitude could attain Kevalīpada, which qualified one for a Tīrthamkaraship, that Kṛṣṇa had in his lifetime revived the old ideal of the Pravṛtti Dharma about which sufficient has been said already and that Ariṣṭanemi believing the absolute necessity of renunciation for the realisation of the powers inherent in the human soul, of a better quality than were apparent from the conduct of Kṛṣṇa, had cut himself adrift from society and applied himself seriously to the problem of their realisation in a solitary place on the mountain-top of Gīrnār. They also show that after he realised his ideal, he had attracted many persons towards himself and persuaded some to follow his own example and others like Kṛṣṇa to give up drinking and that the drunken brawl that took place amongst the young Yādavas and ended in their mutual destruction was the consequence of their having indulged in drinking in spite of absolute prohibition enforced by Kṛṣṇa. Add to these the facts that after the death of Kṛṣṇa, Kṛṣṇa Dvaipāyana amplified the former's teaching to Arjuna and starting the theory of the Avatāras in order to inspire faith in the Karmayoga doctrine tried to establish that the problem of what is Karma and what is Akarma had baffled the best philosophers, that it was practically impossible for an embodied soul to remain completely inactive, that the same result which is sought to be achieved by Samnyāsa (of Karma) can be achieved more easily and more harmlessly by Yoga (of Karma), that even the Śāstras do not ordain the abandonment of the prescribed duties, that real renunciation lay in cultivating a habit of indifference to the fruits of such Karma and that if that habit is firmly acquired, the mind becomes pure and there arises the knowledge of the Essence which has the effect of eradicating the dormant evil propensities or the animal instincts of desire for enjoyment, anger, hatred, envy etc. and that of making the heart so crystal-clear as to enable a man to realise the Essence which is everywhere.<sup>1</sup> This doctrine though intended for the benefit of the weak and illiterate was very closely connected with the old Varnāśrama Dharma and a belief in the Vedas and implied at least a tacit consent to the continuance of injury to animal life. It is significant that the Jaina works contained detailed accounts of the lives of the first Tirthaṅkara Ṛṣabhadeva and the twenty-second, twenty-third and twenty-fourth Tirthaṅkaras, Neminātha, Pāraśvanātha and Mahāvīrasvāmi only. Theracut as stated before, Ṛṣabha is revered both by the Bhāgavatas and Jainas. It was, I believe, on the question of the interpretation of the life of Ṛṣabha and similar older saints that a difference of views must have arisen between them on the question of Varṇāśrama Dharma, the existence of an All-powerful Omnipresent, Omniscient God and the assumption by him of human and other forms for helping the good and chastising the wicked, acknowledgement of the Saṁhitās, and Brāhmaṇas as the ancient works of the Āryan religion, the necessity of absolute Saṁnyāsa for the realisation of the highest truth which a human soul is capable of realising and the capacity of Niṣkāma Karma to enable man to realise it, that must have caused the parting of ways between Ariṣṭanemi and Veda Vyāsa and their respective followers. Till then they had many things in common. That is the reason why we find common beliefs in the doctrine of Karma, the necessity of Yoga for freedom from the bondage of Karma which is the cause of Saṁsāra, the subordination of the Vedic gods Indra and others to the Puruṣa, similar customs and rules of conduct of the recluses etc.

<sup>1</sup> His. of Ind. Lit. by Winternitz Vol. I, pp. 457; E.R.E. Vol. II—Bhagavadgītā by Garbe, pp. 535-38;—Bhakti-mārga by Grierson, pp. 539-51.

<sup>2</sup> The Harivaṃśa does contain some stray bits of traditions collected together from a particular region, probably the south of India, at a time later than that of the composition of the Mahābhārata.

<sup>1</sup> Bhagavadgītā III, IV, V, VI, XVI, XVII & XVIII.

IV. The Probable Time of Their Origin

16. It will have been seen from the above that I believe that even in the Vedic age, there were two kinds of Dharmas, Nivṛtti Dharma and Pravṛtti Dharma, current in Āryan society, that these were in fact not two Dharmas in the sense of two religions but only two Mārgas or Panthas for attaining the same ideal, that it was from the former of them that the Bhāgavata and Jaina Dharmas had been evolved by the followers of Kṛṣṇa and Ariṣṭanemi owing to some fundamental differences as to beliefs and practices between them and as to the attitude to be taken up by the followers of the Viṣṇu cult towards the Vedic literature, the Varṇāśrama-vyavasthā and the continuance of the performance of sacrifices even by a section of the Āryan race. It would, therefore, not be out of place here to try to point out when the parting of ways took place.

17. As to that since that event took place soon after the Mahābhārata war we can arrive at its probable date if we consider that of the said war itself. That date has been the subject of many learned disquisitions by several scholars based on literary, astronomical and other data. The earliest date arrived at by some of them is B. C. 3102.<sup>1</sup> The origin of the two religions cannot therefore be placed earlier than about B. C. 3050 to 3000. The latest date arrived at by some is B. C. 1100.<sup>2</sup> The said origin cannot therefore have taken place later than between B. C. 1050 and 1000. Attempts are being made at present by the archaeologists to find out some evidence which would enable them to fix the exact date of the Kuru-Pāṇḍu war. When they will find it, the question of the date of origin of the said two religions will be easily solved and all controversy will come to an end.

<sup>1</sup> Hist. of Ind. Lit. by Winternitz Vol. I, p. 423.

<sup>2</sup> Chronology of Ancient India by Pradhan (Calcutta 1927) pp. 169-75, 268-69; Journal of India History Vol. XIX, Pt. I,—The intervening age between Parikṣit and Nanda by Trivedi, pp. 1-16.

SOME CURIOUS MIDDLE INDIC AORISTS

BY

FRANKLIN EDGERTON

In the Mahāvastu, Senart's ed. ii. 231.17 and iii. 216.7, there occurs twice, according to the mss., a form prādur-ahī. It is obviously from prādur-bhū and means "became visible, appeared." Senart emends to -ahu (for abhūt). But he would probably not have made this emendation if he had been aware of certain Pali forms which confirm the mss. reading.

In Jātaka i. 54. 4-5 we find pātur-ahimsu, 3 pl., "appeared." Further, from other compounds of bhū, ajjhabhī, to adhibhavati, which should be read It. 76.6 (ed. ajjhabhū), and anvabhī, or bhī, to anubhavati, to be read DN. iii. 147.10, 149.2; see Andersen and Smith, Crit. Pali Dict., s. vv.

These passages confirm each other and prove that, in the Protocanonical Buddhist Prakrit to which both Pali and Buddhist Hybrid Sanskrit literatures go back, the root bhū had, at least in some compounds, an aorist -abhi, -abhī, -ahi, (-ahī), 3 pl. -ahimsu (-abhimsu?). So far as I can find, Geiger and other Pali grammars do not mention these forms; nor have I found any explanation of them.

They seem to me obviously modifications of abhū(t), ahū, ahu, or the like, and 3 pl. abhumsu, ahumsu or the like (abhumsu, often written abhūmsu and the like, is a very common form in the Mahāvastu). The vocalism of these forms was modified to fit the commonest aorist type of Protocanonical Prakrit, which ended in 3 sg. -i (or ī), 3 pl. -imsu; see Edgerton, JAOS 57.19ff. (a)gami, (a)gamimsu etc.

Similarly, compounds of bhū also had a 3 pl. aorist -ahamsu, (a)bhamsu. We find pātur-ahamsu in Jāt. i. 11. 2 (and as v. l. in i. 54. 5, above); and adhī-bhamsu SN. iv. 185. 31 (Andersen and Smith s. v. adhībhavati). This last is correctly explained by Geiger §163 as having its vocalism by analogy with another aorist type in 3 sg. -ā, 3 pl. -amsu; e. g. (a)gamā, (a)gamamsu. No \-abhā*, \-ahā* or the like has been found; nor have I as yet found such 3 pl. forms Buddhist Hybrid Sanskrit.

SŪKARA-MADDAVA AND THE BUDDHA'S DEATH *

By

FA CHOW

Sometime ago, when I first read the passage, pertaining to the Buddha's accepting Cunda's invitation, in the English translation<sup>1</sup> of the 'Mahā-parinibbāna-suttanta',<sup>2</sup> I was rather puzzled to see how Dr. Rhys Davids could have interpreted the word 'Sūkara-maddava' as 'dried boar's flesh.'<sup>3</sup> Later on, I found that some Indian Scholars too think like him viz., that the death of the Buddha was due to eating some kind of meat. It would not matter at all, if this were a fact, but I am afraid the texts have been wrongly interpreted.

The different interpretations of Buddhaghoṣa and Buddhayaśas :-

The interpretation referred to above, was first given in Buddhaghoṣa's commentary,<sup>4</sup> but he also gave two other different explanations :

Firstly—

"Some say 'Sūkara-maddava' is a kind of soft food, a preparation of well-cooked soup, which is made out of the five products of the cow....."

Secondly—

"But others say, 'Sūkara-maddava' is a kind of medicinal preparation, which is prescribed in the book of the science of Rasāyana. Cunda prepared this medicine, as he hoped (that thereby) the Blessed One's death might not take place."

Beside the above three different interpretations of the word 'Sūkara-maddava,' we have one more from the Chinese translation

---

* Communicated by Dr. V. V. Gokhale, Poona.

<sup>1</sup> Buddhist Suttas, S. B. E., vol. xj, pp. 70-73.

<sup>2</sup> Dīgha-nikāya, Mahā-parinibbāna-suttanta, pp. 126-128, P. T. S.

<sup>3</sup> Buddhist Suttas, S. B. E., vol. xi, p. 71.

<sup>4</sup> Sumaṅgala-vilāsinī. See S. Devamitta's Sinhalese edition, p. 385.

"Eke bhaganti sūkara-maddavaṃ pana mudu-odanassa pañca-gorasa yūṣapāṇasa-vidhānassa añamasetāṃ ti, yathā gavapāṇam añma pūkanāmaṃ, Keel bhaganti sūkara-maddavaṃ añma rasāyanavidhiṃ taṃ pana rasāyana-satthe āgacchatī, taṃ Cundena Bhagavato parinibbāsaṃ na bhavyeyāti rasāyanam paṭiyattanti.

tion of the Dirghāgama,<sup>1</sup> which was translated by Buddhayaśas of Cabul,<sup>2</sup> a great authority on Hinayāna Buddhism, and a contemporary of Buddhaghosa, who went to China about A. D. 402, and translated four works<sup>3</sup> of Hinayāna Buddhism into Chinese in A. D. 403-413. One of these works is Dirghāgama, otherwise known in Pāli as Dīghanikāya.<sup>4</sup> I have rendered below the relevant important passages from the Chinese Dirghāgama.<sup>5</sup>

"Now, the Blessed One stayed in the Bhūmi<sup>6</sup> City as long as he desired, then he said to the Venerable Ānanda:

'Let us go on to Pāvā.'

'Be it so,' replied the Venerable Ānanda.

"Then the Blessed One robed himself, and taking his bowl, and accompanied by a great company of the brethren, he proceeded to Pāvā Via Malla.<sup>7</sup> When he reached there, he stayed in the Jata garden.<sup>8</sup>

"At that time, there was a person, Cunda by name, son of an artisan. He heard, that the Buddha had come over to the city from Malla, so he immediately dressed himself up and went to the Buddha's place. There he saluted the Blessed One's feet with his head and face. After the salutation, he seated himself on one side. Then, the Lord Buddha gradually instructed, preached, inspired, and gladdened him with the Dharma and other suitable teachings.

"When Cunda heard the religious discourse of the Buddha, he was very happy and showed his devotion by inviting the Blessed One to dine at his house the next day, and Buddha accepted his invitation in silence. Then he rose from his seat, saluted the Blessed One and went back to his own residence.

<sup>1</sup> Nanjo Catalogue of the Buddhist Tripiṭaka in China and Japan (Oxford 1883) No. 543.

<sup>2</sup> See Nanjo Catalogue. Appendix II, p. 408.

<sup>3</sup> See Nanjo nos. 68, 545, 1117 and 1135.

<sup>4</sup> See Chisen Akanuma: The comparative catalogue of Chinese Āgamas and Pāli Nikāyas, Tokyo.

<sup>5</sup> Nanjo no. 545. Shanghai Tripiṭaka Edition, bundle 15, vol. III, p. 76.

<sup>6</sup> This is another name for Pāli Bhoganagara. See M. Przyluski: Le parinirvāṇa et les funérailles du Buddha. Journal Asiatique, Nov.-Déc. 1918, pp. 423-424.

<sup>7</sup> This seems to be a village or a sub-town between Bhoganagara and Pāvā. It is also possible that such a place was inhabited by the Mallas, hence comes this name.

<sup>8</sup> This garden differs from the Pāli Ambavana.

"The same night Cunda prepared different kinds of food and he went to the Buddha on the following day and addressing him said.

'O Blessed One, the meal is ready.'

'Then, the Blessed One robed himself, and taking his bowl, and accompanied by a great company of the brethren, he proceeded to Cunda's residence, and there he seated himself on the seat prepared for him. After their arrival, Cunda immediately served the Buddha and the brethren with different kinds of food. Among these there was one prepared from a separate stew of ears of the sandal-wood tree, which was considered a great delicacy in those days, which he offered only to the Blessed One. For, Buddha told him not to give that preparation to any of the bhikṣus. But in the great company of the brethren, there was an old bhikṣu, who had entered into the Order only lately, who rising from his seat drank out of the dish of the 'ear-stew' preparation.'<sup>1</sup>

What does the phrase 'the ears of the sandal-wood tree' mean? The explanation is, there is a kind of fungus which is in shape like an ear on a sandal-wood tree. It is still a common practice in China, that whatsoever fungus grows on the tree is called 'tree-ear'<sup>2</sup> (shu-er) or 'wood-ear' (mu-er); while those grown on the ground we call mushrooms (chūn). So when Buddhayaśas rendered this word, he was obliged to observe the distinction between the two, hence we find the word 'tree-ears.' It is evident then, that 'Sākara-maddava' is not 'dried boar's flesh' but a kind of fungus.

Another point, which should be borne in mind, is that this text was translated into Chinese in A. D. 312-413 while Buddhaghosa was still in India, and had perhaps not even written on Buddhism. As according to Rhys Davids, he went to Ceylon in about A. D. 430, the time of his writing commentaries could not be earlier.<sup>3</sup> It is therefore, after all, not improbable that he did not know, that the word 'Sākara-maddava' could also be taken in the sense of 'fungus.'

<sup>1</sup> This translation may be compared with the S. B. E., vol. xi., pp. 70-73 for having a clear idea of both the texts.

<sup>2</sup> There are two kinds of 'wood-ears' or fungus: one is white and the other black. The former one is ten times more costly than the latter. People usually take it as a kind of tonic.

<sup>3</sup> Also see B. C. Law: The life and work of Buddhaghosa p. 11.

17 [Annals, B. O. R. I.]

People may be inclined to think that the Chinese translator may have changed the meaning of the original text and instead put in something else.<sup>1</sup> This is not impossible, but Buddhayaśas was not a scholar of this type. The following passage is an illustration of his faithfulness and another proof of our statement that Sūkara-maddava is not 'pig-flesh.'

"Now," the Blessed One told Ānanda and said :

"Henceforth I shall allow the bhikṣus to take five kinds of food, i. e., rice, wheat, biscuit, fish, and meat. And let them be fully satisfied with them."

Here, we find 'meat' and 'fish' mentioned at the same time. It shows clearly that he was not at all influenced or affected by opinions held by the Chinese Buddhist Society in his own time, and inclined to change these words into names of vegetables. In the present case, therefore, if Sūkara-maddava were really the word for 'pig-flesh,' then he would not have hesitated to put it into Chinese accordingly as he did in the above mentioned translation; since that is not so, it must have been correctly interpreted as a kind of fungus grown on a sandal-wood tree.

Here is then a fundamental difference between the interpretations of Buddhaghosa and Buddhayaśas. There is one point which we can not quite understand. When Buddhaghosa wrote his commentary, there were already three different interpretations in existence before him, why did he prefer the 'pig-flesh' interpretation? Was it because he was himself a non-vegetarian? or did he simply take it faithfully to mean 'the soft of a pig,' as he had done in his Sumaṅgala-vilāsinī?<sup>2</sup>—viz.:

"Sūkara-maddava means that the pig-flesh is of a pig, which is neither too young nor old, it is excellent, soft and oily, and nicely prepared and properly cooked."

If his explanation were faithful I am afraid he might have been misinformed.

<sup>1</sup> This idea is expressed by A. Waley in his article: "Did Buddha die of eating pork?" See Mélanges Chinois et Bouddhiques, I, 1932, p. 343-54.

<sup>2</sup> Dharmagupta-Vinaya. See Nanjo no. 1117. Shanghai Tripiṭaka Edition, bundle 15, vol. III, p. 76.

<sup>3</sup> See Devamitta's Sinhalese edition, p. 395.

"Sūkara-maddavaṃ 'ti nāti taruṇassa nāti jīṇassa eka-jetṭhaka-sūkarassa pavattamaṇṣaṃ taṃ kira muduṃ o'eva siniddhaṃ ca hoti, taṃ paṭiyādaṃpetvā sūdhakaṃ pacāpetvā'ti attho."

The different meanings of Sūkara-maddava

We have examined the different interpretations of Buddhaghosa and Buddhayaśas. Now let us look at the term 'Sūkara-maddava' from the linguistic point of view, which may enable us to throw some further light on its meaning.

The word 'Sūkara' means pig, and hog; and 'maddava' means mild, gentle, sweet and soft as the Pali dictionary of the P. T. S. explains it.<sup>1</sup> But according to A. Waley's opinion this word is capable of at least four interpretations.

"Granting that it comes from the root MRD 'soft' cognate with Latin Mollis, it is still ambiguous, for it may mean 'the soft of a pig's soft food' i. e. food eaten by pigs. But it may again come from the same root as our word 'mill' and mean 'pig pounded,' i. e. 'trampled by pigs.' There is yet another similar root meaning 'to be pleased,' and as will be seen below one scholar has supposed the existence of a vegetable called 'pig's delight.'<sup>2</sup>

Regarding his last point Waley says, that Neumann took 'Sūkara-maddava' to mean 'pig's delight' and assumed that that was the name of some kind of truffles. (Preface to the Majjhima-Nikāya. p. xx.).<sup>3</sup>

Further, it is stated in the Udāna, that the word 'Sūkara-maddava' in the great commentary (now lost) was said to be the flesh of a pig made soft and oily; but that some said it was not pig-flesh but the sprout of a plant trodden by pigs.<sup>4</sup>

Thus, if we compare all these different interpretations and classify them, we shall realize that the 'pig-flesh' interpretation is hardly tenable.

It is a sound maxim, that whenever we come across some difficult words in the old text, which are liable to have at least half a dozen interpretations, we should employ the method of reading the context carefully, finding out the most suitable mean-

<sup>1</sup> See P. T. S. Pali dictionary. p. 180 and p. 142.

<sup>2</sup> See Mélanges Chinois et Bouddhiques, I, 1932, p. 344.

<sup>3</sup> See Mélanges Chinois et Bouddhiques, I, 1932, p. 346.

<sup>4</sup> Ibid., p. 345. When last summer I was staying in Poona, Prof. N. K. Bhagwat showed me a kind of grain called 'Dukari' (दुकरि) in Marathi. This word may mean 'luscious to the pigs'. It is not improbable that this is a substitute for 'sūkara-maddava'.

ing for that particular word or passage and then, draw a conclusion.

If we read the passages about the Buddha's visit to Cunda in the Mahā-parinibbāna-sutta,<sup>1</sup> we get the following important points which go against the 'pig-flesh' interpretation.

I. When Cunda invited the Buddha to take a meal at his house, he had already become his disciple; because he was instructed, aroused, inspired, and gladdened by the religious discourse of the Blessed One. Now, it is not idle to suppose, that in this religious discourse, Cunda should have heard at least one of the five precepts for all Buddhists, i. e. 'not to kill life.'<sup>2</sup> If that be so, how would he dare to kill a pig<sup>3</sup> when inviting the Blessed One to take a meal at his house?

II. In the history of India, perhaps the Buddha was the first person to preach the doctrine of equality and brotherhood among men. Therefore he shared everything with others down even to the contents of a begging bowl.<sup>4</sup> Then, why did he ask Cunda to serve him alone with the 'dried boar's flesh'? Was he fond of meat-eating? Were there any special reasons for it?

III. And again why did he ask Cunda to bury the remnants of the prepared 'boar's flesh' in a hole and say to him:

"I see no one, Cunda, on earth, nor in Māra's heaven, nor in Brahma's heaven, no one among Samāpas and Brāhmapas, among gods and men, by whom, when he has eaten it, that food can be assimilated, save by the Tathāgata."<sup>5</sup>

Was the flesh of a pig so difficult to digest? Was this the usual opinion in India in the time of the Buddha? or was it perhaps a kind of poisonous plant which was very harmful to the human system?

<sup>1</sup> See Digha-Nikāya, vol. II, pp. 126-128. P. T. S. or see S. B. E., vol. xi., pp. 70-73.

<sup>2</sup> 'Pāṇātipātā veramaṇī sikkhāpadaṃ' Amongst the five precepts for lay-disciples, this is the first one. See 'Khuddaka-pāṭha'.

<sup>3</sup> Cunda made all his preparations at night, therefore, there was hardly any chance for him to buy things from outside. Even if he could do so, how was it possible that the flesh of a pig which was neither too young nor too old could be sold in the market place just at that particular moment? Since it was soft and oily, it also could not be dried boar's flesh.

<sup>4</sup> See S. B. E., vol. xi., p. 10.

<sup>5</sup> Ibid., p. 72.

Pork-eating in China is as common as milk-drinking is in India. There, people never find any difficulty in digesting pig-flesh nor do they suffer from any troubles after eating it. How was it then that after his taking the pig-flesh of Cunda, the Buddha was attacked with the dire disease of red dysentery,<sup>1</sup> and such acute pain came upon him, that it caused his death?

Conclusion

From what I have said above<sup>1</sup> there is a greater likelihood of Sākara-maddava being a plant or fungus liable to poison the body sometimes, rather than 'bear's flesh', particularly as older Chinese sources, indicated above, are definitely in favour of the vegetarian interpretation.

---

<sup>1</sup> Lobhita-pakkhandikā. See Dīgha-Nikāya, vol. II, p. 127. P. T. S.

INDRA THE REPRESENTATIVE OF THE HIGHEST PHYSICAL ASPECT OF NATURE*

BY

V. A. GADGIL

It is noteworthy to point out that the two most important factors or corner-stones of Indo-Āryan or Vedic culture that deserve very close attention are firstly the Gods and secondly the Rta, the Institution of Sacrifice. In fact the whole of Vedic culture is mainly centred on these two points. It has already been shown by me in a paper contributed to the Oriental Conference held at Tirupati in 1940 that the conception of Rta stands for the Institution of Sacrifice, the one law governing the whole of the Universe and Gods are the guardians of this Rta. Four Gods viz. Varuṇa, Mitra, Indra and Agni stand out conspicuously in their relation to Rta. Of these four, Mitra being merely a replica of Varuṇa, the remaining three are chiefly known as Rtasya gopā. Of these three again, Varuṇa's intimate relation to Rta has been fully discussed in the paper referred to above. Next in importance to Varuṇa stands Indra whose relationship to Rta is calculated to throw some light on the nature of his activities. That almost all the Vedic Gods represent some aspect of nature either moral including spiritual and ethical or physical seems to be generally accepted by scholars. If then Varuṇa represents the highest aspect of Monotheism on the moral side as has clearly been shown in the same paper, Indra stands out prominently as the most important representative of the highest physical aspect of nature; nay, he appears to represent in fact the most powerful natural phenomenon on the physical side next in importance or even equal to the role of Varuṇa on the moral side in the Vedic Pantheon, (cf. RV. IV, 43; VII, 28, 4; 82, 2; 84, 2; VIII, 85, 6),

When one thinks of Rta and its relation to the three main Vedic Gods i. e. Varuṇa, Indra and Agni, the urgent necessity to know the exact significance of these constituents of Vedic culture becomes so evident as to need no further emphasis. The role of Agni is equally too obvious to need any more elucidation. He is the only messenger of Gods and friend of mortals (Mitra) on the one hand and on the other the sole representative of Gods on Earth as the guardian of Rta. In brief, he is the indispensable link between the Gods and the mortals. Varuna, as said above, is the highest and the oldest Vedic God (cf. RV. II, 27, 10; V, 85, 2; VI, 68, 9; VII, 87, 5; etc.), the eternal lord and upholder of the Universe and as such represents the highest aspect or principle of Monotheism. One is however confronted with the highly baffling and difficult problem of finding out what physical aspect of nature is precisely represented by Indra who figures prominently in the Vedic Pantheon as the great counter-part of Varuna being his equal on the physical side. To get a proper perspective of his nature and role it is deemed expedient and in a way necessary too to take first into consideration those Vedic passages in which Varuna and Indra are jointly invoked. In the nine hymns of the Rgveda jointly addressed to these two Gods (cf. I, 17; III, 62; IV, 42; VI, 68; VII, 82-85; X, 24) many points of contrast emerge showing clearly that Varuna is the one God whom all Vedic Gods follow and whose Ordinances have a binding force over the whole of the Universe and who is thus a God of peace and quiet whereas Indra loves battle, kills Vṛtra and makes room for Gods and men (cf. IV, 42, 2, 5; VII, 82, 5 and 6; 83, 9; 84, 2). In short, if Varuna stands for a passive moral principle, Indra stands for an active physical element of nature representing conflict and indomitable war-like spirit, even though both are equally guardians of Rta in their own spheres of activity.

---

* Paper read at the Eleventh All-India Oriental Conference, Hyderabad session, 1941.

In the life of the world two principles stand out conspicuously above all, governing our activities viz. that of peace and that of strife or conflict. Vedic scholars have been trying their best to explain Indra's nature but their attempts were unfortunately not crowned with success which they deserve because in our humble opinion they all the while were thinking of the isolated acts attributed to him as divorced from this general principle of nature of which he in fact forms as integral a part as Varuna does. It will be interesting to consider in this connection various theories put forward by scholars to explain the nature of the phenomena underlying Indra's sphere of activity. According to Roth, for instance, he is a sky God during day time from the Sun-rise to the Sun-set. Benfey would have us believe that he represents that aspect of the sky which just precedes rain-fall. In the opinion of Maxmüller he is a rain God embodying most of the traits of Jupiter, while other scholars like Bergaigne would consider him as a God of War. Oldenberg's point of view, however, that he is a storm God sending thunder and lightning appears to be a synthesis, as it were, of various points of view mentioned above and as such makes a further advance over them. It no doubt explains partially the element of strife but it is to be remembered that the phenomenon of storm is only one of the many cases of conflict in nature all of which can hardly be explained by assuming that Indra is a storm God. For instance, the conflict between light and darkness which should have been really speaking the most prominent feature of his sphere of activity is not properly explained by Oldenberg's theory. Then again to maintain with Bergaigne that Indra is a God of War does not take us any way further in as much as it does not give us a clear idea about Indra's nature as the only counter-part of Varuṇa. Hillebrandt's view, on the other hand, that Indra must have been originally a Sun-God and that Vṛtra, his enemy, must have represented a winter giant in a Northern climate, is certainly calculated to explain the Vṛtra myth from one point of view. But Hillebrandt himself seems to admit the limited scope of application of his theory when he further says that to suit Indian climatic condition Indra, originally the Sun-God, got transformed into a storm God or merely a Rain-God. Apart from the failure of his theory to explain varied nature of Indra's role, it must be admitted that his is the most cogent and preferably the most practical point of view. Nevertheless it does not fit in well with the scheme of nature either on philosophical or scientific grounds nor is it satisfactorily corroborated by Vedic passages. As pointed out above Indra stands on a par with Varuṇa on the physical side. It is difficult to understand how the Sun can hope to attain that position; for he can hardly be considered as the highest God on the physical side, representing the highest physical aspect of nature. Besides like Indra and Varuṇa the Sun or Sūrya is not primarily known as ṛtaśya-gopā and therefore does not stand in the same relation to Rta as Indra does. Varuṇa, Indra and Agni form as it were a triangle whose central point is Rta, the Institution of Sacrifice whereas Sūrya nowhere in the Vedas occupies this position. On the other hand he is the mighty eye of Varuṇa (cf. VI, 51, 1). Moreover it is pointed out in the Rgveda that Indra has raised the Sun on high in Heaven and that he gave light to the Sun, Dawn and Heaven (cf. I, 32, 4; 7, 3). It is further said that a thousand Suns would not equal Indra nor both Worlds and that Indra surpasses in greatness Heaven, Earth and air (cf. III, 46, 3 VIII, 59, 5). All these Vedic passages can hardly be interpreted in support of the Sun's identification with Indra. The Māyā of the latter just like that of Varuṇa is too well-known a fact to need further comment (cf. II, 53, 8; VI, 47, 18). This Māyā which is nothing but the mysterious power (Śakti) only attributed to the highest manifestation of the Almighty in the moral and the physical sphere, is generally not attributed so conspicuously to any other Vedic God except Varuṇa and Indra. The Sun as is well-known does not possess this Māyā of Varuṇa or Indra.

All these theories set forth above have thus turned out to be inadequate for the purpose of knowing Indra's essential nature. It is, therefore, necessary to probe into the mystery of nature with a view to get at that highest physical aspect which will correspond with the description of Indra who is primarily the representative of conflict in nature. It is needless to say that the greatest conflict in nature on the physical side is that between Tejas and Tamas representing also the forces of good and evil respectively on the moral side. The whole of Āryan Culture bears an eloquent testimony to this fact in so far as it refers to this conflict in some form or other and to the ultimate victory of the forces of good physically represented by Tejas over those of evil represented by Tamas. This is the situation as far as Āryan Culture is concerned. Even philosophically speaking Tejas is the first actual manifestation of mighty power and lustre in nature. Coming further to the latest researches in Science especially, in the field of atomic research, the smallest electric spark or flash discernible in the final dissection of the atom resulting in the discovery of electrons is nothing but a form of Tejas in which the first unmanifest cause of the Universe makes itself manifest. Without going further into the details of this intricate as well as enticing problem in the field of science, suffice it to say here for our purpose that Tejas and Tamas stand for the two elements essential in any conflict in nature. The latter, in fact, is not in the nature of an entity in the strict philosophical sense; nevertheless it remains still the most powerful element of hindrance or obstruction in nature. Indra may be said to represent the Tejas whereas Vṛtra stands for the Tamas. The vivifying or animating power of the former is very well-known, and equally evident is the obstructing nature of Tamas. In this connection it is very interesting to note that Yāska while trying to derive the word Indra mentions bhūtāni indhe as one of the possible derivations. We are inclined to think that he has hit the point properly though rather accidentally. The same authority gives the derivation of Vṛtra also as yadavṛot tadavṛasya vṛtratva-miti. Vṛtra has the power to obstruct, to surround or envelop and this trait is possessed by Tamas. Later on anything that surrounds and thus is a potent cause of hindrance, is called by the name of Vṛtra whether it be a cloud or winter-snow or any such mystifying object. The primary and essential function of Indra is, on the contrary, to animate, to give light and to make room by dispelling darkness or removing any other form of hindrance (cf. I, 6, 3; VIII, 6, 17 and 28-30). It is a well known fact that these are the functions of Tejas and the Sun is one of the most powerful forms in which this Tejas (Indra) manifests itself. A flash of lightning or an electric spark is another form of its manifestation. The part this Tejas in the form of the Sun plays in the formation of clouds and the ultimate discharge of waters is not difficult to understand. Similarly the fact that the rise of strong winds resulting in storms is also ultimately to be traced back to the power of Tejas which is thus primarily responsible for currents of wind, is also a thing of common experience. It is this Tejas which is the cause of all luminaries including the Sun in heaven (cf. I, 102, 2; X, 138, 6). Vṛtra, the obstructor, is the formidable adversary of the Tejas. The epithet aśi given to him in the Vedic literature refers to his deceptive nature as he appears in many forms according to the nature of the legend. He is the first born of the dragons, (cf. I, 32, 3) and is described as footless and handless (cf. I, 32, 6 and 7; III, 30, 8). Such Vedic passages go to show that he stands for darkness, a dark cloud, the winter-snow and all such forms of evil, enemies human or otherwise of Āryan progress. Indra (Tejas), on the other hand, stands as the national hero fighting all our battles either in the physical sphere or even in our social and political sphere of activities. There are many Vedic passages which reveal Indra's sphere of activity as mainly concerned with the release of heavenly as well as earthly waters. For instance, the hymn I, 32 describes vividly the scene when he smote down Vṛtra and released heavenly waters. His relation to waters in any form is well brought out in the well known Viśvāmitra hymn III. 33.

Closely connected with the Vṛtra episode and the release of heavenly as well as earthly waters is Indra's most important function viz. the winning of light. He freed the Sun from darkness (cf. V, 40, 6). In this passage there is a clear reference to Tamas as an adversary of the Sun whom Indra helps. He created the Sun and the Dawns (cf. II, 12, 7). Again it is he who manifests the light (cf. X, 27, 24) and produced the lightnings of the sky, the Sun, Heaven and morning (cf. II, 12, 3; 13, 7; VI, 30, 5, ). He along with Viṣṇu generated Sūrya, Dawn and Agni and thus made spacious room for sacrificing (cf. VII. 99 4). Sūrya does not transgress the ordered limit set by Indra (cf. III, 30, 12). It is Indra who scattered the blinding darkness so that man saw clearly (cf. IV, 16, 4). He carried forward the Sun's chariot at the close of the night (cf. V. 31, 11; X, 171, 4) and released the wheel of Sūrya from the great oppressor (cf. IV, 28, 2). He and Soma gave morning her light and led the Sun on high (cf. VI. 72, 2). These Vedic passages and many more not cited here to avoid repetition show unmistakably Indra's intimate connection with the winning or manifestation of light and further indicate clearly that neither the Sun nor the flash of lightning can be justifiably said to be that physical aspect of nature which Indra in fact respects as he is their creator. Much less still a vague conception of Indra as a representative of the phenomenon of storm is calculated to explain properly these Vedic passages. It is, therefore, Tejas that Indra may aptly and correctly be said to represent. Really speaking the winning or manifestation of light should have been originally his main function. How Vedic passages, on the contrary, repeatedly refer to the release of heavenly as well as earthly waters as the most important exploit of Indra may perhaps be explained by the fact that Indra who just like Varuṇa belongs to the Indo-Iranian or even to the Indo-European period and was primarily concerned with the winning of light and secondarily with the release of waters, later on came to be extolled by the Vedic Āryans as the winner of waters and cows in view of peculiar climatic conditions of India exercising powerful influence over their minds. Under the circumstances it is very probable that Vedic scholars were erroneously led to look upon the Vṛtra myth resulting in the release of waters as the only important sphere of Indra's activity which can serve as the only reliable criterion for judging the nature of the physical aspect underlying his various activities. That is how different theories trying to explain isolated acts of Indra ultimately failed to take the most comprehensive view of various phases from a synthetic point of view.

Further it may be interesting at this stage to take into consideration Indra's relation to the Maruts, his companions, who are said to be the offspring of Rudra (cf. II, 33, 1). Many Vedic passages reveal clearly that the Maruts most probably represent roaring winds accompanied by flashes of lightning (cf. I, 85; V, 54, 11; 57, 5 etc.). Rudra, the father of these Maruts, is called the best of the physicians (Cf. II, 33, 4). In this connection the following facts deserve careful consideration as throwing much needed light on the physical aspect of nature represented by Rudra and the Maruts. The former as said above is very closely associated with medicines and other healing remedies and is later on identified with Śiva, who is intimately connected with mountains. On the other hand the power of Tejas in the form of Sun-light in animating all the beings and in preserving their health and in exercising powerful influence on plants and herbs is so remarkable that one will hardly fail to notice the close relationship between Tejas, plants, waters, roaring winds and the mountains.

All these facts make it probable that Rudra seems to be a mountain-God as Oldenberg rightly points out in so far as plants, herbs, and waters so essential for the health of all beings are abundantly found on mountains with whom even the Maruts representing the roaring winds are so intimately connected. Rudra's relation to the Maruts and Indra can thus be properly understood in view of the fact that the Sun-light ( a form of Tejas represented by Indra ) possesses in a remarkable degree marvellous health giving properties and that plants, herbs, waters and the storms are the contributory causes in this mysterious phenomenon of nature.

It may be pointed out that in the light of this discussion concerning Indra's identification with Tejas, obscure allusions in the Indra-hymns may now perhaps be explained more satisfactorily than any other previous theory made it possible. For instance, in the thirty-eighth Sūkta of the third Maṇḍala which appears to be a cosmological Indra-hymn, the poet starts on a mental expedition to celestial post-sages (probably of ancient times) with a view to elicit some information from them about the process of creation etc. ( ṛks 1 and 2a ). Accordingly he learns from them that they being inspired by a mental vision fashioned the Heaven and their mental effort aided by a fine spirit tended to abide by the law ( ṛk 2bcd ). Keeping their secrets, they decked the Rodasi for the sake of rule. They then measured out the two broad worlds, regulated them and placed between them the Asura ( i. e. Indra standing for Tejas ) for their support ( ṛk 3 ). All surrounded him when he stood up clad in splendour, the self-refulgent God ( Indra i. e. Tejas in the form of the sun ) moves along. The mighty Asura bears a great name; assuming many forms he stood above the immortal ones i. e. Gods ( ṛk 4 ). The ancient Bull possesses, indeed, many invigorating forms of nourishment. Varuṇa and Indra rule over the entire Universe from ancient times ( ṛk 5 ). Both these Gods pervade all the three worlds. The Vedic poet saw in a mental vision the Gandharvas following their ordinance ( ṛk 6 ). The ancient poets thus invested whatever belongs to this Bull ( Indra ) with names and supplied forms to every Asura aspect in which he manifested himself i. e. Tejas appearing in many forms got various names ( ṛk 7 ). Indra ( Tejas ) now appears in the form of the Savitr, the all impelling God, with his lustre and being praised covers both the worlds as a woman covers her children i. e. Tejas in the form of the Savitr becomes the supporter of both the worlds (ṛk 8). This vision about the creation and Indra's part therein which the ancient poets revealed in their moment of inspiration corresponds quite appropriately with Indra as the representative of Tejas, the first and foremost physical manifestation in nature.

In the eighteenth hymn of the fourth Ṛgveda which describes Indra's birth and his killing of his father, one comes to know Indra (Tejas) in another aspect viz. that of lightning. Macdonell explains rather partially the incident about Indra's birth in an unnatural way through the side of his mother (cf. IV, 18, 8) when he says that this trait may possibly be derived from the notion of lightning breaking forth from the side of the cloud. It will, however, be better and more reasonable to assume in this connection that Tejas (Indra) in the form of the lightning comes out from the side of the heavenly waters (Indra's mother) which take the form of a cloud (Indra's father). The epithet apām napāt may with propriety be applicable to both Agni and the flash of lightning; for the heavenly waters are the mother of Indra (in the form of lightning) and the cloud is here conceived as his father whom he is said to kill (IV. 18, 12). The idea underlying this poetic description will be explained by the fact that the cloud disappears when the heavenly waters are discharged in the form of rain after the appearance of lightning. Again at VI, 59, 2 Indra and Agni are said to be twins. It is now easy to explain this reference as both are forms of Tejas.

It is hoped that this discussion of different points of view, culminating in Indra's identification with Tejas supported by relevant Vedic passages, critically examined, will considerably help our understanding of the nature of Indra's activities and will further facilitate Vedic research as far as other Vedic Gods are concerned.

MANUSMṚTI AND SAGOTRA MARRIAGES

BY

K. B. GAJENDRAGADKAR

The verse invariably quoted in support of the proposition that Manusmṛti prohibits the marriages between persons of the same gotra is as follows :—

असपिण्डा च या मातुः असगोत्रा च या पितुः ।
सा प्रशस्ता द्विजातीनां दारकर्मणि मेधुने ॥

( Manu. III. 5 )

Strictly translated the first line of the verse would mean " one who is not the Sapinda of the mother, and who is not of the same gotra of the father " such a girl is praiseworthy in the case of the twice-born for the duties of the house hold wife.

The famous commentators like Kullūka, Medhātithi and others accept this reading of the first line. For Medhātithi says मातुः या असपिण्डा पितुः च या असगोत्रा सा दारकर्मणि प्रशस्ता.

This strict interpretation of this first line would lead us to some absurd conclusion. It would mean that the girl of the Sapinda relationship of the father is not prohibited. To avoid this Kullūka very ingeniously says that by the word ' च ' the expressions असपिण्डा and असगोत्रा are to be connected both with मातुः and पितुः. According to him the girl must not be of the Sapinda of the mother and Sagotra of the mother and must not be of the Sapinda and Sagotra of the father also. He says.—चञ्चद्वात् मातृसगोत्रापि मातृवंशपरंपरान्मनोः प्रत्यभिज्ञाने सति न विवाह्या तदितरा तु मातुः सगोत्रा विवाह्या इति संयुहतिश्च ।.....पितुः या सगोत्रा न भवति चकारात् पितृसपिण्डादि ॥

This interpretation put on the word च appears rather far-fetched ; for the particle 'च' ordinarily connects only the two expressions. Here in this line it only connects the expressions असपिण्डा च या मातुः and असगोत्रा च या पितुः. According to Kullūka the expression असगोत्रा is to be applied to मातुः also and then it would mean, that even the girls of the gotra of the family of the mother of the girl also are prohibited for marriage.

At present in the case of Yajurvedi Brahmans, the gotra of the father and mother also is to be ascertained and the Sagotra girl on the mother's side and father's side is prohibited. These Brahmans alone, it must be said, are strictly following the tenets of Manusmṛti in this respect.

Curiously enough Kullūka himself perhaps saw that his interpretation goes too far when it prohibits generally all marriages of the girls of the gotra of the mother. He therefore qualifies his statement thus. मातृवंशजन्मपरंपरान्मनोः प्रत्यभिज्ञाने सति न विवाह्या तद्वितरा तु मातृसमीक्षा विवाह्या इति संख्यीतम्. He means to say that those girls, the gotra and the traditional name of the family of whose mother is known should not be married. Other girls who are sagotra with the mother i. e. whose gotra is the same as that, of the (father) of the mother can be married. One fails to understand how Kullūka deduces this interpretation. What are the words in the original line of Manusmṛti on which Kullūka is commenting, which are capable of this interpretation put on them by Kullūka?

Kullūka apparently puts this interpretation just to avoid the conflict of the teaching of Manu with that of Vyāsa. For he quotes the verse of Vyāsa in support of his interpretation by saying 'तथा च व्यासः'. Thus, Kullūka instead of giving exact interpretation of the original verse of Manu on which he is commenting, has put in his exposition an additional matter relying upon the passage in the Smṛti of Vyāsa just to show probably that the views of Manu and Vyāsa are in consonance with each other and there is a sort of samanvaya between the two Smṛtis. It can be said, therefore, that Kullūka has not cared to see the spirit and real intention of Manu but has tried to put the meaning of Vyāsa in the verse of Manu. According to the strict interpretation of Kullūka those persons then who marry at present girls of the same gotra as that of the family of the mother are ingeniously supposed not to know the traditional name and gotra of the mother of the girl!!!

The text of Manusmṛti relied upon by Vijñāneśvara, the famous commentator of Yājñavalkya does not make mention of असमीक्षा, in his commentary Mitākṣarā. His reading of the first line in question is "असविष्ठा च वा मातुः असविष्ठा च वा पितुः इति मनुः ( Vide the Mitākṣarā on verse 53 of the ścārādhyāya of Yājñavalkyasmṛti ). Serkar also regards that Mitākṣarā has this reading of Manu. (Hindu Law Page 89). This reading gives prominence and stress upon the Sāpinda relationship and not on Sagotra relationship. It is possible that this substitution of the word असगोत्रा for असविष्ठा before वा पितुः must have been done by some one to suit the general attitude of his own times. The remarks of Prof. P. V. Kane in his "History of Dharmasāstra" Vol. I are noteworthy. He says "The Manusmṛti contains the earlier and later strata. The original Manusmṛti in verse had certain additions made in order to bring it in line with the change in the general attitude of the people on several points." ( Page 149 ).

It would not be wrong, therefore, if it is presumed that the reading in the Manusmṛti known to the author of Mitākṣarā was असविष्ठा instead of असगोत्रा and the Manusmṛti then did not prohibit marriages between the husband and wife only on the ground that both belong to the same gotra. Even taking the present reading and the traditional meaning put upon it, it appears clear that Manu says that such marriages are commendable, thereby indicating that they are not altogether condemned. The statement of Manu should therefore be taken as recommendatory rather than obligatory as is done at present. Let scholars throw more light on this.

NILAKAṆṬHA CATURDHARA, THE COMMENTATOR OF THE MAHĀBHĀRATA--HIS GENEALOGY AND DESCENDANTS

BY
P. K. GODE

In April 1938 Mr. Sadashiv Vishnu Chaudhari, the present Registrar of the Law College, Poona, approached me with a request that I should investigate the tradition current among his family members about their direct descent from Nilakaṇṭha Caturdhara, the celebrated commentator of the Mahābhārata. He further told me that he was unable to link up his known genealogy with that of Nilakaṇṭha Caturdhara as we find it recorded in his works partially. I gladly agreed to investigate the above tradition as I was then preparing a paper<sup>1</sup> on the identification of Nārāyaṇatīrtha, the author of the work Bhūṭabhaṣāprakāśikā with Nilakaṇṭha's guru in Mīmāṃsā of the same name. Some information<sup>2</sup> given by Mr. Chaudhari about his family together with what I could collect from a study of the works of Nilakaṇṭha has already been recorded by me incidentally in the above paper, though I could not then record the full evidence in support of

---

<sup>1</sup> This paper was published in June 1938 in the now extinct Mīmāṃsā Prakāśa, Poona ( Vol. III, No. 6, pp. 65-71 ) edited by the late Pt. V. R. Kinjawadekar.

<sup>2</sup> I note here for ready reference the dates recorded by me in my paper on Nārāyaṇatīrtha as also those discovered by me subsequently :—

A. D.

1680—Nilakaṇṭha composed his Sivadīpikā-(ikā).

1687—Date of a Ms. of आदिपर्वटीका by नीलकण्ठ ( folios 120 ) dated Śaka 1609 = A. D. 1687 ( vide p. 94 of Cata. of Vāṅṭya Sahitya Pariṣat Calcutta, 1935 ).

1691—Date of Berlin Ms. of मा. मा. द्वीप belonging to गोविंद चतुर्थ ( Weber, p. 107 ).

1696—Nilakaṇṭha composed his गोपेश्वरगीताटीका at Benares.

1746—Śivadīpikā, the grandson of Nilakaṇṭha composed his धर्मतत्त्वप्रकाश at प्रतिष्ठावतीर्थ or Paithan.

1748—Gaṅgārāma Dīpikā, the great grandson of नीलकण्ठ received a grant from King Shahu.

my statements based on the information supplied by Mr. Chaudhari. I, therefore, propose to record here the full evidence regarding the genealogy of Nilakanṭha Caturdhara as reconstructed by me on the basis of my study of his works and the information supplied by Mr. Chaudhari.

In all the colophons of Nilakanṭha's works he is called the son of Govinda Sūri.<sup>1</sup> We may, therefore, take it that Govinda was the father<sup>2</sup> of Nilakanṭha Caturdhara. This parentage of

<sup>1</sup> शिष्याण्डपटीका ( Ms. No. 994 of 1884-87—B. O. R. Institute fol. 20b and 10b——“ चतुर्धरवंशावतंसगोविंदसुखिनोर्नालिकण्ठस्य कुतौ ” etc. ), —गणेशगीताटीका ( Ms. No. 110 of 1899-1915—B. O. R. I, fol. 140b—“ चतुर्धर-वंशावतंस गोविंदसुखिनोर्नालिकण्ठस्य कुतौ ” etc. ),

—भारतभाषाटीका ( Ms. R No. 26—Trisen. Cata. Govt. Ori. Mss. Library Madras 1913—Page 44 of Vol. I, Pt. 1—Sanskrit A—colophon as above ).

—रुद्रसागसंग्रहव्याख्या—रुद्रमीमांसा ( Ms. R No. 2070 p. 2803 of Vol. iii, Pt. I—Sanskrit A—Trisen. Cata. Madras, 1912—colophon as above ).

—वेदान्तकान्तक ( Ms. No. 348 of 1894-1915—B. O. R. I—fol. 6b—colophon as above ).

—मन्त्रभाष्यव्याख्या ( Vide p. 588 of Ind. Office Cata. Pt. III—Ms. No. 1798—colophon as above ).

—सौरपौराणिकमतसमर्पण ( Vide p. 1024 of I. O. Cata. Pt. V—Ms. No. 2885—colophon as above ).

<sup>2</sup> Śiva Dikṣita, the grandson of of Nilakanṭha in his पुनर्नवप्रकाश records the following verses in which he mentions his genealogy :—

“ विख्याते कविकचमध्ववर्ति
गोविंदकृतीरे नगरमक्षिणिकूर्परारुये ।
गोविन्दः श्रुतिनयसिन्धुपाहन्वा
श्रीचातुर्थरकुलमण्डनं पुरासत् ।
श्रीकण्ठं मनसि दिभाष्य नालिकण्ठ-
स्तस्मिन्नुः श्रितवदकाननं सुरशा- ।
वेदोक्तैः शमनदिगामनं धुतीनां
व्याख्याने किल चतुराननो यम् ।
गोविन्तस्तद्वपुर्गुः श्रुतिहृदयमुनिः सर्वतन्त्रस्वतंत्र-
(स्तब्ध)स्तच्छिष्यतार्थः शिष्यमिदमकरोद्धर्मतत्त्वप्रकाशः ।

( continued on the next page )

Nilakanṭha is further supported by the following genealogy,<sup>1</sup> of the family recorded by Śiva Dīkṣita in his Dharmatattvaprakāśa composed by him at Pratiṣṭhāna or Paithāna in A. D. 1746 (Śaka 1668):<sup>2</sup>

गोविंद (चतुर्थ) of कूपरनगर or Kopargaum on the banks of the Godāvari.

|
Son

नीलकंठ

|
Son

गोविंद

|
Son

शिव

author of धर्मतत्त्वप्रकाश, composed at Paithāna in 1746 A. D. He calls himself by the epithet "वाराणस्यानन्यन्मा" or born at Benares.

The gotra of Nilakanṭha Caturdhara was Gautama<sup>3</sup> and his mother's name was कुलाम्बिका. He had three brothers: (1) शिव, (2) व्यम्बक and (3) कृष्ण as pointed out by Holtzmann.<sup>4</sup> The above genealogy recorded in A. D. 1746<sup>5</sup> is further supported by con-

(continued from the previous page)

भूयः प्रीत्ये शिवालये समदमिनि महानैत्रिकब्रह्मचर्यं
वाराणस्यानन्यन्मा सुरसरिदमले श्रीप्रतिष्ठानतार्थे
नामांगिरसभूषाके बालो(लि)बाह्वने क्षये ।
नगरस्य तित्तुर्व्यङ्गि चत्थोऽयं पूर्णमां मनः ॥ ६ ॥"

(Vide p. 73—Ms. No. 81—Cata. of Sanskrit Mss. Pt. II. R. A. S. B., Calcutta. See also p. 192 of H. P. Shastri's Cata. of Nepal Mss., Calcutta, 1905).

<sup>1</sup> Ibid.

<sup>2</sup> Vide p. 73 of Cata. of Sanskrit Mss. (Calcutta Sanskrit College, Part II)—Ms. No. 81.

<sup>3</sup> Vide p. 154 of Hall's Bibliography, Calcutta, 1859. Ms. of वेदान्तकतक—"By Nilakanṭha Caturdhara, Son of Govinda and Phullāmbikā. Nilakanṭha was of the gotra of Gautama. He resided at the village of Kūpara, now called Kohpar—, to the west of the river Godāvari, near the temples of Śukreśvara and Kaceśvara in Mahārāṣṭra.

<sup>4</sup> Vide p. 75 of The Mahābhārata by Dr. Adolf Holtzmann, 1894, Kiel. (North Indian Recension).

<sup>5</sup> Besides the Nepal and Calcutta Mss of the धर्मतत्त्वप्रकाश there is a Ms. of it recorded by Hultzsch. See Report in Sanskrit Mss in South India, No. III, Madras 1905 (Ms. No. 1780, 263 leaves)—P. 5.—"Śiva Dīkṣita of Benares, Son of Govinda of the Caturdhara family wrote the धर्मतत्त्वप्रकाश (No. 1780) at प्रतिष्ठान in A. D. 1746."

temporary records<sup>1</sup> of the priests at Tryambakesvara near Nasik so far as the names of Śiva Dikṣita and his father Govinda Dikṣita are concerned. Both the father and the son are described<sup>2</sup> in these records as bearing the surname चौधरी<sup>3</sup> and having Shrīgonda as their native place, but residing at Vārānasi or Benares. It appears that नीलकण्ठ, गोविन्द and शिव normally resided at Benares and were educated at this seat of learning, though the family hailed from Kopargaum in the Ahmadnagar district of the Bombay Presidency.

Like Nilakantha an author of the name कमलाकर went to Benares from कूर्परग्राम and composed there a work called आचारप्रदीप ( B. O. R. I. Ms. No. 84 of 1884-86 ). कमलाकर seems to have been a contemporary of नीलकण्ठ and possibly his neighbour at Kopargaum. He quotes Bhaṭṭoji Bhaṭṭa in the above Ms. which is dated A.D. 1729 and refers to gods शुक्रेश्वर and कचेश्वर at Kopargaum ( " ग्रामे कूर्परसंज्ञिके ..... पत्रास्ति शुक्रेश्वरः । गोदा पश्चिमवाहिनी विजयते देवः कचेश्वरः परः " )

The genealogy of Nilakantha's family so far reconstructed may now be linked up with the subsequent genealogy of the family as filed on 2nd September 1854 with the Inam Commissioner, Poona, by Vaman Shiv Dikshit Chaudhari of the village Pathardi<sup>4</sup>

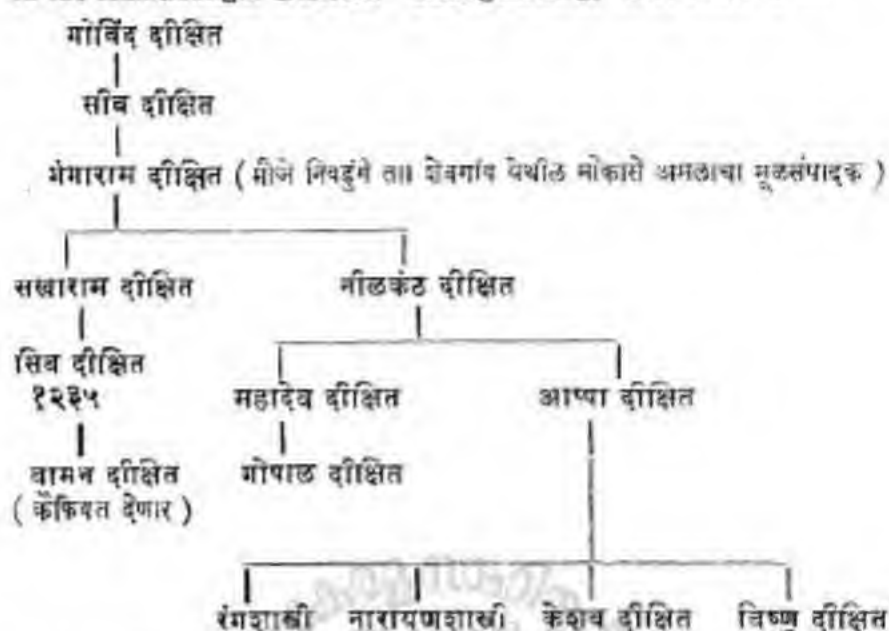

<sup>1</sup> Mr. Vasudeva Vishnu Meghashyam of Tryambak near Nasik has kindly furnished the pertinent extracts of these records to Mr. S. V. Chaudhari, from which I am quoting in this paper.

<sup>2</sup> The record reads " गोविन्द दीक्षित पु. शिव दीक्षित. उ. चौधरी नाम श्रीगण्डी मुकाम पाराणरी. " We already know from चर्मनक्षत्रकाण्ड that शिव दीक्षित was born at Benares. It appears that at the time of their visit to Tryambakesvara both the father and son must have been residing at Benares as stated in the above extract.

<sup>3</sup> In verse 10 at the beginning of his शिवनाण्डवटीका composed in A. D. 1680 Nilakantha refers to his surname चौधरी in the expression— " श्रीमच्छौधरी-नीलकण्ठप्रशिना. " This statement shows that the surname चौधरी was current in Nilakantha's time, if not earlier. ( Vide folio 2a of Ms No. 994 of 1884-87 of शिवनाण्डवटीका— B. O. R. Institute )—Historian V. K. Rajwade derives the surname चौधरी from the Sanskrit word चक्रधारी ( = चक्रधारी = चक्रधारि = चक्रधारी = चौधरी ) Vide p. 72 of B. I. S. Mandal, Itihasa, for 1913—Note No. 14— " चौधरी. "

<sup>4</sup> Vide p. 644 of Bombay Gazetteer XVII ( Ahmadnagar ) Bombay, 1884—The villages Pathardi and Nivafsaṅge belong to Shevgaon Pargana of 161 villages in the Ahmadnagar District. The members of the Chaudhari family migrated from Kopergaum in the Ahmadnagar District to Shrīgonda and Pathardi in this district and Paithana ( पतिष्ठान ) on the left bank of the Godavari river in the Nizam's territory, 2 miles east of the Ahmadnagar frontier and about 50 miles north-east of Ahmadnagar ( Ibid, p. 351 ).

in the Ahmadnagar District. This genealogy is as follows :—

A comparison of the above genealogy with that given by Śiva Dikṣita in 1746 A. D. shows that the names of गोविंद and his son शिव are common to both these genealogies. The earlier and the later fragments of the genealogy being thus riveted at two joints, the accuracy and continuity of the genealogy of the Chaudhari family from Govinda ( c. A. D. 1600 ) the father of Nīlakaṇṭha Cāturdhara upto A. D. 1854 is now proved beyond challenge.

Three days before the composition of the work Dharmatattva-prakāśa by Śivadikṣita at Paṭhaga the Maratha King Shahu gave a village as inām to Gaṅgarāma Dikṣita, the son of Śiva Dikṣita on Wednesday, 6th August 1746. <sup>1</sup> The Sanad in respect of this inām is reproduced in the Appendix to this paper from a certified copy of it furnished by the Alienation Record Office, Poona, to Mr. S. V. Chaudhari on 16th December 1927. In this Sanad Gaṅgārāma Dīkṣita is described as the son of Śiva Dīkṣita, of the surname Chaudhari, gotra Gotama, Sūtra Āśvalāyana, hailing from Benares, then resident at Paithan. Gaṅgārāma Dīkṣita obtained this Sanad through the good offices of Fattasing Bhosale ( A. D. 1707-1760 ) who was regarded by Shahu as his own son.

<sup>1</sup> Shahu's Sanad is dated Rājyābhīṣeka Śaka 73, Kṛṣṇa Sankranti, Bhādrapada, Suddha Pratipada, Saumyavāsara-Wednesday, 6th of August 1746. धर्मतत्त्वप्रकाश was completed on the 4th day (तुर्थाह्नि) of the bright fortnight (शुक्ले) of the Bhādrapada month (वसति) of Śaka 1663 ( नाम, अष्ट, रत्न, पु ) the name of the year being ( सुव, सुवे ). These details correspond to Saturday 6th August 1746. Thus while the work was completed at Paṭhaga on Saturday the Sanad was issued on Wednesday of the same week. ( Vide p. 295 of Indian Ephemeris Vol. VI ).

The names in the genealogy reconstructed and recorded above are supported and supplemented by the Tryambakeśvara Records<sup>1</sup> referred to by me already. Mr. V. V. Meghashyam who possesses these records states in his letter to Mr. S. V. Chaudhari dated 30th April 1941 that he has in his possession some writing of Nilakanṭha Dīkṣita, son of Gaṅgārāma Dīkṣita dated Śaka 1706 = A. D. 1784. This date is consistent with King Shahu's Sanad to Gaṅgārāma Dīkṣita issued in A. D. 1745.

Hall in his Bibliography<sup>2</sup> states that Nilakanṭha "resided at the village of Kūrpara, now called Koṃpar to the west of the river Godāvari, near the temples of Śukreśvara and Kaceśvara in Mahārāṣṭra." The above statement occurs in Hall's descri-

<sup>1</sup> I reproduce below the extracts from these records kept at my disposal by Mr. S. V. Chaudhari :—

- " शिव दीक्षित व. शंकर दीक्षित उ. चौधरी "
- " उमाबाई अ. शंकर दि. दीर शिव दि. पु. मल्हार दि. व गंगाराम दि. सून रमाबाई उ. चौधरी गा. श्रीगोंदे मु. पैठण. "
- काशिनाथ दि. मल्हार दि. आ. शंकर दि. प. गोविंद दि. चु. गंगाराम दि. बं. विन्वनाथ दि. चु. ब. विन्वेश्वर दि. व नीलकंठ दि. गोप गीतम उ. चौधरी गा. श्रीगोंदे मु. वाराणसी. "
- " गंगाराम दि. पि. शिव दि. आ. गोविंद दि. बं. मल्हार दि. व चिंतामणि दि. सु. शंकर दि. मा. आकाबाई उ. चौधरी गांव श्रीगोंदे. "
- " नीलकंठ दि. पि. गंगाराम दि. आ. शिव दि. प. गोविंद दि. बं. मल्हाराम दि. उ. चौधरी गांव श्रीगोंदे, मु. प्रतिष्ठान. "
- " आपा दि. ऊर्फ रुष्ण दि. चु. बं. शिव दि. उ. चौधरी गांव श्रीगोंदे इ. पैठण "

The value of the above entries for the reconstruction of a complete genealogy of the family will be easily recognized.

ption of a Ms. of the Vedāntakataka. I have no means of verifying it but presuming that the topography of the residence of Nilakanṭha at Kopergaum recorded above is based on any references in the Vedāntakataka itself, I have to point out that in the description of Kopergaum in the Bombay Gazetteer<sup>1</sup> we find a reference to the temple of Kaceśvara as follows:—

"In the elbow of the Godāvari and surrounded on three sides by its bed stands a fortified out-stone enclosure (65'×58'×60) with massive black walls. It has one gate but the side towards the river is open. In the centre is the cenotaph or thadge a very small work of timber and brick upon a coarse stone plinth with no writing or ornament. Near the site of the old palace in the island stands the temple of Kaceśvara a set of plain modern buildings held in great honour." The editor of the Bombay Gazetteer in a footnote on the above passage records "the local story of the Kaceśvara temple," which is the same as the story of Kaca and Devayāni found in the Purāṇas. This footnote is concluded with the remark: "To this day a stone Shukra and Kach sit side by side on the island and receive much worship."

If the images of Shukra and Kaca are still worshipped on the island at Kopergaum they must be identical with those in the temples of Kaceśvara and Shukreśvara referred to by Hall in 1859. If Hall's remarks are based on Nilakanṭha's own statement we shall not be wrong in supposing that the residence of Nilakanṭha at Kopergaum was near these temples situated on the island in the elbow of the Godāvari. This tentative suggestion regarding the topography of the house of the Chaudhari family at Kopergaum say about A. D. 1650 needs to be verified on the strength of other contemporary evidence.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Vol. XVII (Ahmadnagar) 1884, p. 723—Kopergaum is 60 miles north of Ahmadnagar. It is on the north bank of the Godāvari. It was the favourite residence of Raghunatha Rao Peshwa. In an island in the Godāvari there were two palaces which have been pulled down and sold. Raghunatha Rao Peshwa died at Hingani three miles off and his cenotaph is still at this place.....In 1818 Kopergaum was occupied by Madras troops.—In the Marathi Ballads (लावण्या) by Parāśarama (Ed. by V. N. Kolharkar, Bombay, 1924) there is a reference to कच and शुक at Kopergaum Vide Pp. 38-39 (लावणी २६)—"एक शुक कचेस्वर रूची गोदातीरवाली," This ballad refers also to the garden of Ragheba Dada Peshwa on the island. Parāśarama belongs to the last quarter of the 19th century.

We have already referred to the three brothers<sup>2</sup> of Nilakanṭha viz. (1) शिव, (2) कृष्ण and (3) इन्द्रवक्त्र. All these brothers were younger than Nilakanṭha. It remains to be investigated if these brothers left any descendants whose lines could be traced among

<sup>1</sup> Siva Dīkṣita in his धर्मनिरूपण composed in A. D. 1746 states in the following verse that Govinda Caturdhara the father of Nilakanṭha lived at Kūroṣara town on the bank of the Godāvarī, where stood in the centre कवि and कवः—

“दिल्याले कविकचनध्ववर्ति- मोदोदकतीरे नगरमहिम्नि कूर्परस्थे
मोर्विदः श्रुतितयस्त्रिधुपारद्वया
श्रीचातुर्वैकुण्ठमण्डनं पुरासीत् ॥”

This reference to कवि (= शुकाचार्य) and कव by the grandson of Nilakanṭha leaves no doubt that the Chandhari family had its residence near the temples of Kaceśvara and Śaṅkareśvara on the island at Kopergaum referred to in the Bombay Gazetteer.

<sup>2</sup> Vide Ms. No. 1523 of Nilakanṭha's commentary on the Harivamśa described by Weber in his Catalogue of Berlin Mss., Vol. II (1886) pp. 112-113. In the following verses Nilakanṭha refers to his native place कूर्परग्राम, his gotra गौतम, his surname चतुर्वै, his father मोर्विद, his mother कुलाम्बिका and his younger brothers शिव, कृष्ण and इन्द्रवक्त्र :—

“ज्ञानाचार्यमिवोत्तमोत्तमकचास्या तदप्या गौतमी
यं पश्यकपवणा प्रसूय कतनी(!) सिद्धेश्वरभामवत् ।
विद्वद्रत्नसुवर्णवर्णचदितं संभूयणं कूर्पर-
ग्रामं यं समुपाश्रयन्ति सुधियो दुरास्तसंवत्सरम् ॥ १ ॥
तत्र ब्रह्मकुलं महद्विजयते गोत्रेण पञ्चीतमम्
धर्मज्ञानविरागवैभवं चतुर्वैरेण चातुर्वैरम् ।
मोर्विदः स्वयमत्र जन्म धृत्वा यो नीलकण्ठं शिवम्
कृष्णं इन्द्रवक्त्रमित्यमृतं अजनयत् कुलाम्बिकायामुनाम् ॥ २ ॥
तेषां ज्येष्ठो नीलकण्ठः काश्यां निवेशातुष्टये ।
ज्येष्ठनोद्भूते भावदीपमान्यविभाषणम् ॥”

The above verses have been discussed by Wilhelm Fritzsche in his Inaugural Dissertation: “Bühn-Wörter in Nilakanṭha's Bhāratabhāṣadīpa etc.” Berlin, 1910, p. 9. I am thankful to Dr. V. S. Sukthankar for drawing my attention to these verses.

the present members of the Chaudhari family residing either in the Mahārāṣṭra or outside.<sup>1</sup>

From the data recorded above the following facts regarding Nilakapṭha's family and its subsequent history become clear :—

(1) Nilakapṭha mentions his own gotra "Gautama" which is the gotra of Mr. S. V. Chaudhari, the present Registrar of the Law College, Poona. This gotra has been recorded in King Shahu's grant of A. D. 1746 to Gaṅgārāma, the great grandson of Nilakapṭha.

(2) The genealogy of Nilakapṭha's family as given by his grandson Śiva Dikṣita has been linked up with the genealogy filed with the Inam Commission in A. D. 1854 by Mr. Vāmana Śiva Dikṣita who is the 6th in descent from Nilakapṭha Caturdhara.

(3) The surname Chaudhari now current in the family was also current in Nilakapṭha's time as Nilakapṭha in his work composed in A. D. 1680 calls himself "श्रीमच्छीधरि नीलकण्ठ."

(4) The place of residence of Nilakapṭha's father Govinda was somewhere near the temples of Śukreśvara and Kaceśvara on the island of the river Godāvari at Kopergaum. Śiva Dikṣita the grandson of Nilakapṭha refers to these images of कवि (=शुक्र) and कच in his work composed in A. D. 1746. The memory of this residence may have then been fresh in the mind of Nilakapṭha's grandson.<sup>2</sup>

(5) From Kopergaum the members of the family of Nilakapṭha Govinda Chaudhari migrated to Shrigonde, Pathardi, Nivādunge and Paithana in the Ahmadnagar district or near its border and settled there. The education of the early descendants of Nilakapṭha upto A. D. 1750 or so appears to have been carried

<sup>1</sup> Mr. S. Chitrav states that the descendants of Nilakapṭha are now residing at Benares. (Vide p. 499 of Madhyayugina Caritrakosa, Poona, 1937).

<sup>2</sup> Even Nilakapṭha seems to refer to शुक्र and कच on the island of the Godāvari in following line of verse 1 from his commentary on the Harivamśa which I have quoted above :—

"ज्ञानाचार्यमिवोत्तमोत्तमकचास्या तद्वया गीतमी"

Here ज्ञानाचार्य=शुक्राचार्य=कवि mentioned by Śiva Dikṣita, गीतमी=river Godāvari. कच mentioned in the above line is also mentioned by Śiva Dikṣita. So in Nilakapṭha's line the images of शुक्र and कच stood on the bank of the Godāvari.

out at Benares. Perhaps the contact with Benares lessened after Shahu's grant of the village Nivādunge to Gaṅgārāma in A. D. 1746.

(6) It remains to be seen if any member of this Chaudhari family composed any important work after the composition of the Dharmatattvaprakāśa by Nilakanṭha's grandson Śiva Dikṣita<sup>1</sup> in A. D. 1746. Perhaps with a settled life in the Ahmadnagar District the ambition for achieving eminence in the literary sphere, so characteristic of Nilakanṭha's life, did not stir up the Chaudharis to take to learned pursuits in the manner of their illustrious ancestor.

P. S.—After this paper was completed I happened to read a letter<sup>2</sup> of A. D. 1683 addressed to one नारायण दीक्षित by हरि दीक्षित from Benares. In this letter one “गोविंद दीक्षित चौधरी” is mentioned as the son-in-law<sup>3</sup> of the addressee नारायण दीक्षित. This letter is addressed to नारायण दीक्षित then in Konkon according to Mr. Pimputkar. In the preamble of this letter the writer informs नारायण दीक्षित the father-in-law of “गोविंद दीक्षित चौधरी” as follows:—

“I took your leave and came to Benares. Thereafter your son-in-law Goviṇḍa Dikṣita Chaudhari was approached by certain Vaidika Brahman Pandits who bore some rivalry to him. They said to him that they would no longer bear any feelings of rivalry to him if he gives a dinner to 100-200 Brahmins. Then myself

<sup>1</sup> Vide Aufsicht CCI, 647.

<sup>2</sup> “शिव दीक्षित, son of Goviṇḍa Dikṣita of the Caturdhara family:—

Jagavidhi

Dharmatattvaprakāśa

Namasāraṇī

शिव Son of Caturdhara:

Ṣaṇṇavatiśraddhanirṇaya”

Vide also List of Ujjain Mss., 1936, p. 29—Ms. No. 759.

—2350—पञ्चविंशतित्तुर्विंशति (leaves 8) by शिव गोविंद चतुर्विंश copied by Cātāmācī Bhadrakankar in Śaka 1745 = A. D. 1823.

<sup>3</sup> Vide p. 82 of चित्तरे मङ्ग प्रकरण by R. S. Pimputkar Bombay, 1926.—परिशिष्ट 3 dated Śaka 1605 = A. D. 1083.

<sup>4</sup> Ibid. “उपरि सुमची आसा पैऊन वाराणसीन आल्यानंतर तुमचे जांबई गोविंद दीक्षित चौधरी” etc.

and Govinda Dikṣita Chaudhari considered the proposal and brought about the dinner in question. All Mahārāṣṭra Brahmins attended the dinner, Sahvat 1740 Śaka 1805, Rudhīrodgūri Sainvatsara, Āśvina Kṛṣṇa Dvītiyā, Guruvāra"<sup>1</sup> After this preamble is recorded a list of Brahmins.

I am inclined to identify गोविंद दीक्षित चौधरी of the above letter of A.D. 1683 with गोविंद चौधरी the son of नीलकण्ठ चतुर्धर who composed one of his works in A. D. 1680. If this identification is accepted it shows that in A. D. 1683 Nilakantha's son Govinda was already a married man, holding some status in Benares society of Mahārāṣṭra and other Brahmins. The letter also reveals for the first time the name of the father-in-law of Nilakantha's son. This man was obviously in Konkop as stated by Mr. Pimputkar and his name was "नारायण दीक्षित."

<sup>1</sup> This date corresponds to Thursday, 27th September 1885 (vide p. 169 of Indian Ephemeris Vol. VI).

APPENDIX I

Genealogy of Nilakantha Caturdhara, the commentator of the Mahābhārata :—

शिव ( brother )—गोविन्द चतुर्धर ( of Kopergaum ) × कुलाम्बिका
( c. A.D. 1625 )

The above genealogy has been reconstructed by me on the strength of manuscripts of the works of Nilakantha Caturdhara and other members of his family. It is correct so far as the main line is concerned but needs more evidence for the verification of names in the branch-lines. Some names have been inserted in the above genealogy on the strength of extracts from the records of priests at Tryambakesvara as they were sent to me by Mr. Sadashiv Vishnu Chaudhari, the present Registrar of the Law College, Poona. It will be seen from the above genealogy that there is unbroken continuity of descent from Govinda Caturdhara ( c. A. D. 1625 ) to Sadashiv Vishnu Chaudhari ( 1943 ).

APPENDIX II

The Sanad from King Shahu to Gaṅgārāma Dīkṣita A. D. 1746

नक़ल

श्री

INAM
A COMMISSION

श्री
वर्षिष्णु रविक्रमा
विष्णो सामुनिरिव
वामनी शंभुसुमो
रसो मुद्रा शिवरा
जस्य राजते

स्वस्ति श्रीराज्याभिषेक शके ७३ क्षयनाम संवत्सरे माद्रपद शुद्ध
प्रतिपदा सौम्यवासर क्षत्रियकुलावतंस श्रीराजाशाहु छत्रपती स्वामी याणी

श्री
राजा शाहु
नरपती हर्षनी
धान बाळाजी
बाजीराव प्र
धान

श्री
श्रीभाई आदिपु
वप श्रीराजा शाहु छ
त्रपति स्वामि कृपानिधि
तस्य जगज्जीवन परशु
राम मतिनिधि

वेदशास्त्र संपन्न राजश्री
गंगाराम दीक्षित बीन
सीव दीक्षित उपनाम
चौधरी गोत्र गौतम
सुत्र अधलायन कासीकर
हल्ली (वा)स्तव्य पैठण

यासी दिल्ले ईनामपत्र ऐसेजे तुम्हाविसी चिरंजीव राजश्री फत्तेसिंग भोसले
याणी शाहुनगर नजिक किल्ले सातारा येथील मुक्कामी स्वामीसनीधि विनंती
केली की हे भले सत्पात्र यांचे चालवीलीया श्रयस्कर ऐसे जाणुन यासी आपले-
कडून मौजे नीचडुगे येथील मढीयात्रा कान्होबा ताा सीसगाव पाा सेवगाव
सरकार आमदानगर हा गाव ईनाम दिल्ल्या आहे तो माहाराजांही याचे वंश-
परंपरेने ईनाम करून देऊन चालवीला पाहिजे म्हणून विनंती केली त्थावरून
मनास आणुन तुम्ही भले सत्पात्र तुमचे चालवीलीया श्रयस्कर ऐसे जाणून
स्वामी तुम्हावरी कृपालु होऊन मौजे मजकूर पेशचीच्या मुकासीयाकडून करून
हाली देलील यात्तामढी कान्होबाची कुलबाब व कुलकानु हालीपटी व पेस्तरपटी

खेराजि हकदार व ईनामदार करून तुम्हास व तुमचे वंशपरंपरेनें नूतन ईनाम करून दिला असे तरी तुम्ही मौजे मजकूर सदरहूप्रमाणें आपले हुमाला करून घेऊन तुम्ही आपले पुत्रपौत्रादी वंशपरंपरेनें ईनाम अनमऊन सुखरूप राहणे जाणीजे लेखनालंकार

मयां
देयं रा अते

रुजुसुरु

नीची सामंत सुमंत मंसी सरकार

तारीख २९ माहे रजब सु॥

सब अवेन मया अलफ

बारसुद्रसुरु सुद्र बार बार बार बार

सदरहुचे असलेस बंद दोन त्याची चीकटवणी एक तीजवर -लेखनसीमा
—या अक्षराचे एक मोर्तब असे.

नकल करणार आत्माराम रावजी कारकून

ता॥ ४ माहे शपटवार सन १८५४ इ॥

रुजु पाहाणार बामन कृष्ण कारकून ता॥ ७

सपटवार सन १८५४ ईसवी

Copied by
Y. L. Thakar

Compared by
H. R. Guraji

सदरहू खरी नकल मीळणेबद्दल सदाशिव विष्णु चौधरी याणी ता.
२०।१०।२७ चे अर्जाने मागणी केल्याबद्दल खर्चबगैरेबद्दल फी ४९८६ व्ही.
पी. ने मागवून त्यांस देण्यांत आली आहे. ता. १५।१२।२७

J. R. Barve

H. R. Guraji

असी॥ कमीशनर मध्यभाग
इंनचार्ज अेलिनेशन ऑफीस रेकार्ड

Genealogy of the Chaudhari family

नक़ल

कैफीयतचि तेरोवे जबाबाप्रमाणें

वंशावळ वामन दीक्षीत बिन सीव दीक्षीत चौधरी रा. मौजे पायडी ता॥ सेवगांव जिल्हानगर याणी मौजे निवडुंगे ता॥ सेवगांव जिल्हानगर येथील मोकासे अमलावद्दल अलाहिदा कैफीयत लिहून देऊन त्याजबरावर ही वंशावळ मुळ संपादकाचे आज्यापासून लिहून दिली असे तारीख २ सप्टेंबर सन १८५४ इ॥ मुकाम पुणे.

वस्तुर बापूजी विठल हुजूर कारकून ता. सरकार

सही तारीख १६ सप्टेंबर १८५४

सहि ब्रामन बिन सिव दिक्षित वस्तुखुद

Signed before me at Poona on the 16th September 1854

Sd. Thos. a. Cowper

Captain Inam Commissioner

Copied by
Y. L. ShahaCompared by
H. R. Guruji

सदरह खरी नक़ल मीळणेवद्दल मि. सदाशिव चौधरी याने तारीख २० आक्टोबर सन १९२७ चा अर्ज केलेवरून सदरहू नक़ल ली....वगैरे फीवद्दल ४५४९ व्ही. पी. नें मागवून त्यास देण्यांत आली आहे

तारीख १६ मोहे डिसेंबर सन १९२७

H. R. Guruji

J. R. Barve

असीस्टंट कमीशनर मध्यभाग

इंचार्ज एलीनेशन रेकार्ड ऑफीस

MĀLATĪMĀDHAVA-LAGHUVIVARAṆA BY PANDIT
DHARĀNANDA : HIS DATE AND OTHER WORKS
WRITTEN BY HIM

By

N. A. GORE

A systematic and well-planned study of the vast commentary literature in Sanskrit is bound to be productive of results very valuable to a comprehensive and accurate history of Sanskrit literature. The commentaries, while explaining the text before them disclose a wealth of information of historical and literary value; they refer to and often quote from earlier writers particularly lexicons and rhetorical works. Now, when the date either of the commentator or of an author or work quoted by him is definitely known, the lower chronological limit at least, of the several authors and works quoted in that commentary can be fixed. When such evidence would accumulate and would be systematically recorded many knotty problems in the chronology of Sanskrit Literature would be solved, and many authors and works that are now assigned merely to a particular century only, can be safely placed within yet narrower chronological limits. Similarly when the several commentaries on a given work are properly studied, then only their relative merit, originality or otherwise could be properly assessed. It is in this spirit that the writer of the present paper proposes to make a study of all the available commentaries<sup>1</sup> on the Mālatīmādhava, in the first instance and next of those on the other two plays of Bhavabhūti.

---

<sup>1</sup> Dr. M. Krishnamachariar mentions the following commentaries on the Mālatīmādhava, in his Classical Sanskrit Literature p. 622:—

"There (are) commentaries on it by (1) Dharānanda, (2) Jagaddhara, (3) Tripurāri [for acts I-VII and Nāyadeva for acts VIII-X] (4) Mānūka, (5) Rāghavabhaṭṭa, (6) Nārāyaṇa, (7) Prākṛtācārya, (8) J. Vidyāsāgara, (9) Pūrṇasarasvatī and (10) Kuṣajavihāri." In foot-note 1 on the same page, he says that Nāyadeva has written a commentary on the whole of the drama too, and refers to Tri. Cat. II, 2220. To

( continued on the next page )

According to Aufrecht's Catalogus Catalogorum<sup>1</sup> only two Mss. of Dharānanda's commentary on the Mālatīmādhava are available. Though I have referred to all the Descriptive Catalogues in the Bhandarkar O. R. Institute, I have not been able to trace any more manuscripts of the commentary. But by a lucky chance the only two extant manuscripts of the commentary are both found in the Govt. collection of Mss. deposited in the Bhandarkar O. R. Institute. They are No. 430 of 1892-1895 and No. 438 of 1887-1891. They will be referred to in the remaining part of the paper as A and B respectively. Both of them are written in the Devanāgarī script and were collected in the Gujarat division of the Bombay Presidency.

Ms. A consists of 26 folios, of which 1a and 26b are blank except for a line in Hindi giving the names of the commentary and the owner of the Ms. and the number of the folios.<sup>2</sup> Though the Ms. is neatly and carefully written, its scribe was not aware of the confusion in the arrangement of the leaves of the Ms. from which he was preparing the copy. For, on a careful examination of the Ms. A, it is discovered that the correct sequence of the text of the commentary is disturbed in seven places and the proper sequence is established only when we read the Ms. in the following order: fol. 1<sup>a</sup>-4<sup>b</sup>; 18<sup>a</sup>-18<sup>b</sup>, 17<sup>a</sup>-17<sup>b</sup>; 7<sup>a</sup>-16<sup>b</sup>; 6<sup>a</sup>-6<sup>b</sup>; 5<sup>a</sup>-5<sup>b</sup> and 19<sup>a</sup>-26<sup>a</sup>. It must also be noted that it is written on double leaves from fol. 3 onwards i. e. 3<sup>ab</sup> is attached to 4<sup>ab</sup> and so on. This feature of the Ms. will be useful when we come to consider the other Ms. The Ms. begins directly with a salutation to god Gaṇeśa<sup>3</sup> and the colophon of a single sentence does not tell us this list must be added the com. by ( 11 ) Harihara, represented by a single Ms. in the Library of the Asiatic Soc. of Bengal. It must also be noted that there is no com. on the Mālatīmādhava by an author named Prākṛtācārya. I have checked both the references to the Catalogus Catalogorum by Dr. M. Krishnamachariar and found that there is no mention at all of a com. by Prākṛtācārya at CC I. 453 and at CC II 104 occurs the mention of a Ms. of the Prākṛtācārya—Rgb 451 and no com. by Prākṛtācārya is mentioned at CC. II. 104 also !

( continued from the previous page )

<sup>1</sup> CC. III. 98—Bd. 438, Peters, 5. 430.

<sup>2</sup> Viz. पुस्तक वलदेवदत्तका पत्रसंख्या २६ ॥

<sup>3</sup> श्रीगणेशाय नमः । सानन्दमित्रादिना अष्टपदा नाम्दी । etc.

anything more about the author except his name and the name of the commentary.<sup>1</sup>

If would have been valuable, if the only two extant Mss. of the commentary were independent of each other. But unfortunately they are not; on the contrary Ms. B is a very carelessly and hurriedly made copy of the Ms. just described above. That B is a poor and worthless copy of A is seen from the fact that this Ms. presents identically the same confusion in the sequence of the text as is found in the other. Another fact, too, corroborates the same conclusion. As observed before, Ms. A is written on double leaves and as is sometimes noticed in the case of other Mss. also, the two halves of a joint-leaf (3<sup>ab</sup> and 4<sup>ab</sup>) were sticking together due to their being folded before the ink had dried off. The scribe of B did not even notice this fact with the result that after writing the last word on fol. 3<sup>a</sup> he quietly turned the sticking joint-leaf and immediately after the last word on fol. 3<sup>a</sup>, he copied out the first line on fol. 4<sup>b</sup>, thus omitting 16 lines altogether from A. Apart from this, his carelessness is seen from numerous other mistakes of his own commission and omission, e. g. श्वेरप्रदयाकलनाद् for श्वेरदयाकलनाद्, "मधुकर" for "मधुर", प्रता for प्रस्थिता; शोभाविता for शोभाविभाविता; सन्न for सन्न; प्ररामेद for प्ररानंद. He provides instance of ditto-graphy also by copying over again two lines on fol. 8<sup>a</sup> of A. The Post-colophon endorsement by the scribe gives us his name as Lakṣmīnārāyaṇa a Gauda Brahman.<sup>2</sup>

The name of the commentary is given as Laghuvivaraṇa in the concluding remarks at the end of seven acts; it is not mentioned at all at the end of two acts (III and IX) and only at the end of the name Saṁkṣipta-tippaṇa (which is nothing but a paraphrase of Laghuvivaraṇa) is mentioned. So from the frequency of use, Laghuvivaraṇa may be taken as the correct name of the commentary.

When from this examination of the manuscript material of the commentary we turn to the internal examination thereof, we are disappointed to find that as a commentary it is of a very meagre value. The bulk of it is devoted to supplying the Sanskrit Chāyā of the Prakrit passages of the play and explanatory material is only occasionally to be met with. It also contains a few quotations from the Nāṭyaśāstra and other works. Even as such it would have been useful had it given the text of the drama. But the Mss. or rather the Ms. (B being a mere copy of A) omits the text altogether. Moreover, when we compare the Laghuvivarana with Jagaddhara's commentary on the same play, we are driven to the conclusion that Pandit Dharānanda's commentary hardly deserves to be called an independent commentary. It is nothing but a drastic abridgment with a few changes in the wording here and there, of Jagaddhara's commentary. If we divide a commentary on a play into (1) The Sanskrit Chāyā of the Prakrit passages, (2) quotations from lexicons, rhetorical, dramaturgical and such other works and (3) explanation and appreciation if any, Dharānanda has borrowed all these three portions from Jagaddhara—Chāyā, he has taken over, whole sale,<sup>1</sup> without a change; he has given a few quotations all of which are found in Jagaddhara's commentary, but in many cases he omits the names of authors and works. As for explanations he has borrowed only a few of them, either in full or in an abridged form. To illustrate this statement, I shall give below the entire explanatory portion from the Laghuvivarana on the whole of the first act and compare it with Jagaddhara's commentary.<sup>2</sup>

<sup>1</sup> इति पंडितधरानंदकृते मालतीमाधवप्रकरणस्य संक्षिप्तटिप्पणे दशमोऽंकः समाप्तः शुभं भवतु ॥

<sup>2</sup> लिख्यकृतं लक्ष्मीनारायण ब्राह्मणगौड अस्ति शु ॥

धरानन्द

जगद्धर

- |  |   |
|--|---|
| 1 सानन्दमित्यादिना अष्टपदा नान्दी ।( fol. 1 <sup>b</sup> )             | इह तावदष्टपदां नान्दीं विदधानः...मङ्गलं...निबध्नाति । सानन्दमित्यादि । ( p. 1 ) |
| 2 अये इति सम्भ्रमेऽकस्माद्वयेरुदयाकल-नात् ।( fol. 1 <sup>b</sup> ) | अये इति निपातो -- अकस्मात्तुयोदयाकल-नात् ।( p. 7 )                          |

<sup>1</sup> It is to be regretted that Dr. Bhandarkar's and the Nirnayasagara eds. of the play omit the Chāyā from Jagaddhara's com., thereby creating the wrong impression that J's com. did not contain the Chāyā at all. Dr. Bhandarkar, however, notes, the variants from the Chāyā in the apparatus Criticus. But all the Mss of J's com. at the B. O. R. I. examined by me do give the Chāyā. It is usually prefaced by the words अत्रलोकितवाक्ये, लघुविवरणादये etc.

<sup>2</sup> For Dharānanda references are to Ms. A and for Jagaddhara to Dr. Bhandarkar's 2nd ed. ( 1905 ) of the Malatimadhava.

- 3 सूत्रधारोक्तनिर्वाहसहिष्णुमूर्तिरो मतः ।
( fol. 1<sup>b</sup> ) नारिण एव मर्षणान्मार्गः । सूत्रधारोक्त-निर्वाहसहिष्णुमूर्तिर्यः । ( p. 9 )
- 4 पूज्ये मिश्रपदं नित्यं बहुवचनान्तम् ।
( fol. 1<sup>b</sup> ) पूज्ये मिश्रपदं नित्यं बहुवचनान्तम् । (p. 10)
- 5 दक्षिणाग्निमा[ग]र्हपत्याहवनीयसम्भाव-
स्यस्यस्यपाग्निपञ्चकोपासकाः । ( fol. 1<sup>b</sup> ) दक्षिणाग्निमा[ग]र्हपत्याहवनीयसम्भावस्य-स्यस्यपाग्निपञ्चकोपासकाः । ( p. 12 )
- 6 सोमयागयाजिनः ( expl. of सोम-याजिनः ) ( fol. 1<sup>b</sup> ) अनेन सोमयागयानित्वमुक्तम् । ( p. 12 )
- 7 अयं च श्रीरोदात्तः । 'सेनापतिरमात्यश्च
प्रीतिरुदात्तौदीरितौ ।' ( fol. 2<sup>a</sup> ) अयममात्यत्वादीरोदात्तो नायकः । यदाह
'सेनापति' etc. ( p. 20 )
- 8 योगिनीप्रभावेनासंबन्धिनोरपि मालती-
माधवयोः संबंधः । वसन्ते मालत्यनुरागा- भावात् (?) वर्षायां तत्सत्त्वादन्यथा बोधः ।
( fol. 2<sup>a</sup> ) ननु मालतीबहुभवं माधवस्य न योग्यं
माधवेन वसन्तेन समं वर्षाकालीनाया
मालत्या जातेः संबंधाभावात् । मैवम् ।
अपूर्वमेव हि पदार्थसार्थं योगिनीप्रभावात्
संप्रदायमासाद्य सहृदयहृदयचमत्कारका-
रिणी वेदनीमेव कविरपमुत्प्रेक्षितवा- नित्यदोषः । ( p. 19 )
- 9 उदात्तनिभृता मालती । उदात्तनिभृता
चेव भवेत्तु कुलजां गतेत्युक्तेः । ( fol. 2<sup>a</sup> ) नायिका च मालत्युदात्तनिभृता कुलस्त्री-
त्वात् । यदाह भरतः, 'उदात्त' etc. ( p. 21 )
- 10 वर्णिका मयी । ( fol. 2<sup>a</sup> ) वर्णिका मयी । ( p. 22 )
- 11 प्रस्तावना । नित्येति शेषः । ( fol. 2<sup>a</sup> ) प्रस्तावनेति । नित्येति शेषः । ( fol. 22 )
- 12 नाम संभावनायाम् । ( fol. 2<sup>a</sup> ) नाम संभावनायां तेन भवेद्वीत्यर्थः । (p. 23)
- 13 सौगतयतिवासः श्रीधरं । ( fol. 2<sup>a</sup> ) श्रीधरं सौगतपरिव्राजकवासः । ( p. 24 )
- 14 भिक्षाभ्रमणेन भोजनं पिष्टपातः ।
( fol. 2<sup>a</sup> ) पिष्टपातो नाम बौद्धानां भिक्षाभ्रमणेन
भोजनम् । ( p. 25 )
- 15 आन्वीक्षिकी तर्कविद्या । तेन चोरिका-
विवाहकुशलवम् । ( fol. 2<sup>a</sup> ) आन्वीक्षिकी न्यायशास्त्रं तत्र तर्कचलादि- निष्ठकृतेन तद्व्यासनाम्नाधवस्य चोरिका- विवाहे कौशलमुक्तम् । ( p. 26 )
- 16 कापालिकास्तु घण्टान्तनामानः सह-दाहता इत्युक्तेः । ( fol. 2<sup>a</sup> ) कापालिकास्तु घण्टान्तनामानः सहदाहता
इति भरतः । ( p. 35 )
- 17 नायिकानायकयोर्मनोरथं ज्ञात्वा संमत्या
(?) कार्यसाधनं नित्यदार्थः । ( fol. 3<sup>a</sup> ) नायिकाया नायकस्य वा मनोरथं ज्ञात्वा
स्वमत्या कार्यं साधयति सा नित्यदार्थां
हृती । ( p. 36 )
- 18 योगिनीप्रभावात्कलहंसाममम् ।
( fol. 3<sup>a</sup> ) कलहंसो राजहंसः स च शरदि विराज-मानोपि योगिनीप्रभावाद्गतो मिलित
इति नामाभिप्रायः । ( p. 38 )

- 19 यत्तु सर्वगतं न ब्राह्म्यं तत्सर्वगतम् । 'यत्तु ब्राह्म्यं न सर्वस्य स्वगतं तदिहोच्यते'
( fol. 3<sup>b</sup> ) इति भरतः । ( p. 64 )
- 20 आसक्तिरूपो मनःपराभवोऽभिपद्यते । अभिव्यक्त आसक्तिरूपो मनःपराभवः ।
( fol. 3<sup>b</sup> ) ( p. 64 )
- 21 यत्तु सर्वजनब्राह्म्यं तत्प्रकाशमिहोच्यते । 'यत्तु सर्वजनब्राह्म्यं प्रकाशं तदिहोच्यते' इति
( fol. 3<sup>b</sup> ) भरतः । ( p. 64 )
- 22 अतश्चिकित्स्वमप्यर्पातिः । ( fol. 3<sup>b</sup> ) अप्यर्पातिरन्यथचिकित्स्वम् । ( p. 67 )
- 23 विज्ञानं शिल्पकौशलम् । ( fol. 3<sup>b</sup> ) अत्र विज्ञानं शिल्पकौशलम् । ( p. 75 )
- 24 संख्यायः सखिवेशः । ( fol. 4<sup>a</sup> ) 'संख्यायः सखिवेशे च संघातेऽपि च दृश्यते
इति मेदिनीकरः । ( p. 77 )
- 25 निष्क्रान्तेत्यनेन बीजार्यता उक्ता । निष्क्रान्ता इति बीजार्यं युक्तं कृत्वा निष्क्रमो
( fol. 4<sup>z</sup> ) भवति । ( p. 81 )

From the complete analysis of the explanatory portion of Dharānanda's commentary on the first act of the Malatīmādhava, it becomes abundantly clear that it is entirely derived from that of Jagaddhara. As already pointed out the Chāyā and the quotations are also taken over from Jagaddhara. There is not a line, therefore in the whole of the commentary on the first act which Dharādhara can claim as his own. And this remark holds good in the case of the remaining nine acts. I have carefully compared the Laghuvivaraṇa on the remaining acts with the commentary of Jagaddhara and without an exception I have noticed that Dharānanda has borrowed the entire Chāyā, all the quotations and the whole of the explanatory portion in his Laghuvivaraṇa from Jagaddhara's commentary. Consequently we cannot look upon the Laghuvivaraṇa as an independent commentary on the Malatīmādhava but only as an abridged recension of Jagaddhara's commentary. As we shall see later on, Dharānanda was a highly learned man and he taught to a circle of pupils who came to him to study various branches of Sanskrit literature, and it is likely that he prepared this 'brief exposition' of the Malatīmādhava by using Jagaddhara's commentary for their sake just as, according to his own statement,<sup>1</sup> the Mṛcchakaṭikāvivaraṇa was written for the use of his pupils. One only wishes that he should have mentioned his wholesale indebtedness to Jagaddhara.

<sup>1</sup> शिष्याणामुपकृतये तेन सुबुद्ध्या विरचिता रम्या ।

प्राकृतयोधसमर्थो विवृतिरिषे मृच्छकटिकायाः ॥

In another paper of mine,<sup>1</sup> published in the Annals in Vol. XXII, pp. 38-44 I have conclusively shown how Jagaddhara himself was indebted to an earlier commentator, Harihara; and in this paper I have proved that Dharānanda's commentary is nothing but an abridged recension of Jagaddhara's commentary. Thus, in short, the relative position of the three commentaries has been fixed on the strength of the internal evidence and this is corroborated by their chronological position also.

The date of Harihara's commentary on the Mālatīmādhava is definitely known from the Post-colophon of the commentary as A. D. 1216. Jagaddhara must have flourished, as shown by Mr. Gode,<sup>2</sup> between A. D. 1300-1400. Dharānanda's date is not very difficult to establish, for in the colophon of one of his works, the date of its composition is mentioned<sup>3</sup> as Wednesday, the 10th day of the Bright half of Caitra Samvat 1872. This corresponds with 7th April 1816 A. D.<sup>4</sup> But this latter falls on Sunday while the original statement mentions Wednesday. This discrepancy of 4 days would greatly be diminished if the reading in the Ms. were युग्मा° instead of युग्मा°. For, in that case the date of composition of the 10th day of the work would be Bright half of Caitra, Samvat 1884, corresponding with Thursday, the 16th April 1818 A. D. For want of any other evidence of a more precise nature, on the strength of this date supplied by Dharānanda himself, he may be said to have flourished between A. D. 1775 and 1850.

Dharānanda gives a few autobiographical details in colophons of two of his works.<sup>5</sup> He belonged to the family of Brahmans

<sup>1</sup> "Jagaddhara's indebtedness to Harihara: an ancient commentator of the Mālatīmādhava."

<sup>2</sup> "Date of Jagaddhara: The commentator of the Mālatīmādhava and other works—between A. D. 1300 and 1400." Jou. of the Univ. of Bombay, Vol. IX, part 2.

<sup>3</sup> वस्तरे विक्रमार्कस्य युगाब्देभ्यन्दुसंज्ञिते ।

चैत्रशुद्धे दशम्यां च शुद्धे पूर्णिकता ध्रुवम् ॥ Mrechakatika Vivarana.

<sup>4</sup> Acc. to B. P. Modak's Ephemeris (1889 A. D.).

<sup>5</sup> वसिष्ठगोत्रजातस्य ठाकुरस्य सुताख्यः ।

पूर्णदासो रामबलो देवीदासश्च विश्रुताः ॥

( continued on the next page )

of the Vāsiṣṭha gotra, residing in Bharatapura, modern Bharatpore in the U. P. His grandfather's name was Thākura, who had three sons viz. Pūrpadāsa, Rāmabala and Devīdāsa. Dharānanda was the son of Rāmabala, and had studied under one Paramānanda Mītra. Dharānanda was a devotee of Śrī Hanumān. He seems to be a very learned man as the colophon of a Ms. of one of his works<sup>1</sup> says that Dharānanda was a Mahāmahopādhyāya, a title bestowed on eminently learned men only. He must have kept a Pāṣaṣūṭā, for, in the concluding stanzas to his Mycchakāṣikāvivaraṇa he informs us that it was composed expressly for the use of his pupils and the same appears to be the case with the Malatīmādhava-Laghuvivaraṇa.

In addition to the commentary on the Mātatīmādhava Aufrecht records one more work of Dharānanda, a commentary (called Sudhā) on the Cītramīmāṃsā by Appayya Dīkṣita. Whereas Aufrecht records one Ms. only of the Sudhā, from the Govt. Oriental Library, Madras, the Descriptive Catalogues of the same collection disclose two more Mss. of the Sudhā and two works not recorded in the Catalogus Catalogorum viz. a commentary on

(continued from the previous page)

लक्ष्मजन्मा रामचन्द्राद्वयोरपि संपादितः ।

श्रीगुरोः परमानन्दाद्वयेशो भरते पुरे ॥

आस्ते नाम्ना धरानन्दो मास्तेः पदसंस्थितः ।

तेनेयं चित्रमिमांसा सुधाव्याख्या प्रकाशिता ॥ Colophon to the Sudhā and गोत्रे वसिष्ठसंज्ञे रामजनि निपुणः स्पष्टचित्तो वरीचान्

धीमान् श्रीठाकुराख्यः सकलगुणनिधिस्तस्य पुत्रप्रयं चत् ।

अष्टोः श्रीपूर्णदासो हरिविहितमतिमिथ्यमो राचलाख्यो

देवदासस्तृतीयो बहुगुणनिकषा काश्यपीसंप्रतिष्ठः ॥

पुत्रो रामचलस्य निप्रपरमानन्दान्नतरपागमो

भूमौ तत्कपचा युचेपु विदितः सच्छास्त्रशीलो द्विजः ।

श्रीमद्वायुसुतस्य सेवनरतो नाम्ना पतिद्वौ धरा-

नन्देनेति चकार शास्त्रविषयेष्वभ्यासमन्याद्वान् ॥

and इति भरतपत्तननिवासिनो रामचलस्य सूनोः धरानन्दस्य कृतौ etc.

Colophon to the Mycchakāṣikāvivaraṇa

<sup>1</sup> इति श्रीमहामहोपाध्याय पण्डितधरानन्दविरचिता चित्रमिमांसाव्याख्या सुधाख्या संपूर्णा ।

Ms. No. 12886 of Govt. Oriental Mss. Library, Madras.

the Anaragharūghava of Murāri, called the Gūḍhārthadīpikā and another on the Mṛcchakaṭika named the Mṛcchakaṭikāvivaraṇa. All these four works of Dharānanda are unpublished. The Gūḍhārthadīpikā breaks off in the second act and no complete Ms. of the work is known to exist. The Mṛcchakaṭikāvivaraṇa is preserved in complete in a single Ms. and is similar to the Laghuvivaraṇa on the Mālatīmādhava; the main concern of Dharānanda here also is to give the Sanskrit Chūyā of the Prākṛit portion of the play. The Sudhā, however, seems to be a more ambitious work, if we are to judge from the short extracts given in the Descriptive Catalogue. The commentary extends to the end of the Atisaṃśodhya-lakṣṇa i. e. it is available for the whole of the extant portion of the Clramīmāṃsā.

ON THE SEARCH FOR MANUSCRIPTS IN THE DECCAN

BY

R. G. HARSHE

More than forty years have elapsed since the regular work of the collection of Manuscripts in this part of the country had completely stopped. Government used to spend about Rs. 8000/- every year for this excellent and most useful work and the names of Bühler, Kielhorn, Peterson and Bhandarkar are associated with it so that as the result of frequent tours in the country we have a fine collection of about 20,000 Mss. at the Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute, Poona, dealing with a variety of subjects and going as far back as the 13th century of the Christian Era. The work was probably discontinued because the collectors themselves did not think it worthwhile to pursue this task any longer, as there was in their opinion no possibility of unearthing any new material or else, no pressing demand on Government was made by any of their successors in office. Somehow the work has still remained incomplete and although several institutions have since followed in the footsteps of Bhandarkar and Rajwade in the work of collecting manuscript material, a thorough and systematic search all over the country still remains a thing to be desired.

It is possible to do this kind of work now with better chances of success. Oriental research was in its infancy then and the caste prejudices of the learned Pandits were very strong against its European sponsors. Pride of the family traditions had not died out and ideas of sanctity regarding Sanskrit and Sanskrit learning had still their sway on the minds of the people. Stories are told of how men like Bühler and Peterson were obliged to sit some twenty feet away from the Brahman Pandit who was induced to part with some of his collection by appealing to his love of money and poverty stricken condition. Selling Mss. at a rate a little higher than that of the waste paper was supposed to be the last means of adding to the family income. Most of these Brahmans with ancestral pride as their only heritage, were incapable of understanding the contents of their treasured possession, much less their value. Despite all this, it required a good deal of effort and persuasion on the part of the collector to induce them to sell away their Mss.

Now circumstances have changed. Education which was then a privilege of the few, has now become almost common. Oriental Research has made long strides in its progress and people have begun to understand and appreciate the value of research. Circumstances have forced people to leave their proper native places in search of service and city life does not afford any space for unnecessary storage. The Mss. and family records are perishing in dust at their village homes and sharing the same fate as the houses themselves. People are therefore more willing to part with their Mss. and family records than allow them to be worm-eaten, if they could be properly preserved by a respectable public institution and made available to genuine scholars. They would not even care for any monetary return.

Our recent experiences at Puntambe, district Ahmadnagar, strongly bear out this fact in as much as we have been able to secure as donation from Mr. V. M. Gorhe about 127 Mss. for the Deccan College Postgraduate and Research Institute, Poona and record 465 others that are lying with only three Śāstri families of the place. Within a week's time it was possible only to have a cursory glance at the collection of three or four families and it could by no means be said that the work was thorough and exhaustive. For instance, Mr. Nidre, who is supposed to have the largest collection of Mss. in Puntambe, had not revealed to us his entire stock but allowed us to take down the names of a few Mss. A thorough search, granting that all facilities for work could be obtained, would require a couple of months' strenuous work.

But such a work would not go without its reward. The view that there is no possibility of unearthing any new material has no foundation in fact. Even this small collection of 127 Mss. contains no less than 17 Mss. that are not recorded in Aufrecht's Catalogus Catalogorum and as many as 32 which are not to be found in the Government Collection of Mss. at the Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute. The importance of this work cannot therefore be gainsaid. No cultural History of the Marathi speaking province can ever be written unless and until a thorough and systematic search of the Sanskrit, Prakrit and Marathi cultural traditions is made by competent scholars.

For centuries together Maratha Pandits have distinguished themselves by their great learning, their versatility and their acuteness of intelligence and left behind them hosts of literary works—a complete history of which is yet to be written. Contribution of the Marathi Pandits to Mediaeval Sanskrit is a thesis worth attempting but the required material is enveloped in a chaotic mass for the clearer vision of which work as outlined above is a condition precedent. Besides, a careful gleaner of manuscripts in this part of the province would reap a very rich harvest of Marathi literature of immortal poets and writers belonging to different religious sects, such as the Nāthapanthīyas, the Mahānubhāvas, the Vārakarīs and the Rāmādāsīs, etc. The Marathas were the last to make history in modern times and bits of that history are still to be found in the nooks and corners of this country. It is therefore suggested that the work of the search for manuscript material should again be undertaken under Government patronage by a Joint Board of competent scholars who have specialised in Indology, Marathi Literature and Mediaeval and Maratha History, with a modest annual recurring grant of Rs. 15000/-. Ten years' intensive work would put into our hands all the necessary material that would enable us to know what kind of literature would be available throughout the Marathi speaking districts of the Bombay Presidency.

The Mss. in the V. M. Gorhe collection of the Deccan College Postgraduate and Research Institute, Poona, were at the time of their presentation merely a heap of loose folios, tied in extremely old and worn out bundles and so mixed up that it took more than a month for the writer to re-arrange them in a proper form of Ms. complete or fragmentary. In 127 Mss., rescued from oblivion, as many as 82 are complete and the rest incomplete. Classified under several subject-heads, we find that they present a good variety :

Veda 3, Itihāsa 21, Purāṇa 17, Dharmaśāstra 25, Vedānta 8, Jyotiṣa-Graha and Phala 10, Tarka and Nyāya 7, Tantra and Yoga 3, Vyākaraṇa 3, Gaṇita 1, Kośa 1, Kāvya 24, Nāṭaka 2, Gadya-Campū 1, Total-125+2 Marāṭhī=127.

Though the collection does not represent the entire collection owned by the Family, it is fairly rich and contains some valuable Mss. not yet recorded by collectors of Mss. and the curators of Manuscript Libraries. This fact itself shows the importance of carrying on this work of collection from year to year and from village to village. It must be remembered that even those Mss. were collected out of the so-called refuse. If a thorough search be made many more Mss. will come to light.

To review briefly this collection, section by section, we find that the Vedic Section contains, besides a portion of Samśtvādhayāya Bhāṣya of Mahidhara, a work called Śakhāvivēka, which describes the importance of the Kānvaśakhā<sup>1</sup>

In the Itihāsa Section we find some very old Mss. of some of the parvans of the Mahābhārata. Recently, 8 Mss. out of 20, have been selected by Dr. V. S. Sukthankar for his collation work at the Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute, Poona.

Under the Purāṇas are classified several Mss., dealing with the Māhātmyas of Gods, Vratas, Months, places of pilgrimage, etc., but the notable ones are those of Śrīmadbhāgavata Purāṇa-Canto X, Harivijaya, Bhānnārādiya-purāṇa and Purāṇasāroddhara. Most of these, though of a bulky size, are wanting in some folios and are incomplete.

Dharmaśāstra claims to have the highest number of Mss. in this collection, dealing with the domestic rites and sacraments, the different kinds of vows and religious practices, the duties of the Saṁnyāsins, the decisions regarding clans and pedigrees, etc. The following might be mentioned as important works :—Chāṅga-bhāṣyam on Pāraskara-Snānasūtram, Prayogaratnam by Kāśī-dīkṣita, Kriyāpaddhatiḥ—by Viśvanāthabhaṭṭa, Smṛtikaustubhaḥ by Anantabhaṭṭa, Ācārārkah-by Divākara, Vratārkah-by Śaṁkarabhaṭṭa, Nīrpayābharanam-by Bhaṭṭa Mayūreśvara, Yatidharmaprakāśa by Vāsudevāśramamuni etc. It might be mentioned here that Anantabhaṭṭa, in his work Smṛtikaustubha, gives important details of his patron Bājabāhāduracandra and of his ancestors beginning from Ekanātha.

<sup>1</sup> "Māhātmyam Kānvaśakhāyāḥ Kasyate Viṣṇuśayāḥ || 1 || - Date of the Ms.—Śaka 1772.

Among the Vedānta Mss., mention might be made of the Īśāvāsyabhasyam by Mahidhara, Pañcīkaraṇavārttikam by Sureśvarācārya and the Prapañcamithyātvānumānapañcīkāvyākhyā by Śrīnivāsa, all of which are complete.

All the Mss. of Jyotiṣa are more or less important, some of them being two hundred years old. There is an undated Ms. in this collection dealing with prognosticating dreams and their consequences. It is illustrated and contains pr̥ṣṭhamātrās and pen and ink pictures, against a general back ground of red colour. They are unaffected by Muslim or Rajpute style of drawing and painting. The Ms. might belong to the fourteenth or fifteenth century.

Most of the Mss. belonging to the Tarka-Nyāya section, are copies of the well-known treatises like Tarkasaṃgraha, Saptapadārthī and Nyāyamālā. But a criticism of Saptapadārthī by name Saptapadārthiyādāna-khaṇḍanam by Nāganātha is important. This Nāganātha was the preceptor of Yādavabhaṭṭa who was a versatile scholar and whose work on Jyotiṣa, namely, Grahaprabodhasya udāharāṇam, dated Śaka 1685, is available in our collection. Unfortunately, the Ms. of Saptapadārthiyādāna-khaṇḍanam is incomplete.

The Tantrasārasaṃgraha of Anandatīrtha, is incomplete and the other two Mss. in the Tantra-yoga section, viz., Śivayogadarpaṇasaṃgraha and Śivayogasāra-saṃgraha together make 25 folios of the size 5/2, x 3 3/4.

The commentary of Puṣṭarāja on the Sārasvatavyākaraṇa is complete and the other Ms. is that of Śaḍlingarūpāvalī, evidently meant for beginners.

The Paṭṭaṇṭādhyāya of Bhāskarācārya is the oldest dated Ms. in this collection, complete, bearing the date Śaka 1583 and written by Nṛharīdaivajña, the son of Viśvanāthabhaṭṭa who was a great exponent of the works of Gaṇeśadaivajña.

The one Kōśa Ms. is the Ekākṣaranighanta of Vararuci, complete and containing in all 41 verses.

Leaving aside the copies of the well-known Kāvya such as the Rāmāyaṇa, the extracts from the Mahābhārata and the Bhāgavata, as well as those of the celebrated five *Mahākāvya*s, the following are among the rare ones.

Śṛṅgāravilāsa and Ghaṭakharparakāvya by Kālidāsa (only one canto, complete, of the latter with a commentary by Śaṅkara) Nītiśatapātram by Acyuta and commented upon by Śrīhari; Rāmaśaṭam of Keśavabhaṭṭa Laugākṣi and Rāmāyā aṣṭottaraśaṭam of Mahāmudgalabhaṭṭācārya.

The Ms. of the Hanūmannāṭaka and a commentary called Tippaṇi are both incomplete. The Bhojaprabandha mentioned under the last section is the only Ms. of the variety called Gadya-Campū and that too incomplete.

Besides these Sanskrit Mss., there are two Marāṭhī Mss. namely, that of the Śivalilāmṛta and the Samaśloki of Vāmana Paṇḍita of which the latter is complete and belongs to Śaka 1583.

Thus, it will be seen that a more thorough work of collection would be extremely profitable to Indological, Literary, Cultural and Historical Studies and if Government undertake to provide for a modest sum of Rs. 15000/- per year, regular work of cataloguing these various Mss. lying with different individuals at different places,<sup>1</sup> might be started on a more scientific basis in which University and Research Institutes would surely interest themselves. It would moreover be the continuation of the noble work of Dr. Bhandarkar so enthusiastically undertaken and so thoroughly carried out, within the prescribed limits, at the end of the last century.

<sup>1</sup> Out of 465 Mss. which I have been able to record, Mr. Shankar Vinayak Nidre has got 31, Shankar Balkrishna Lumpathki 116, and Gangadhar Ramkrishna Dharmadhikari 318. They could be classed under the following heads:—Ayurveda 3, Itihāsa 2, Kāvya 39, Kośa 4, Jyotiṣa 13, Tattvajñāna 20, Tarka-Nyāya 11, Tantra-Yoga 4, Purāṇa 37, Dharmaśāstra 265, Vedā 11, Vyākaraṇa 4, Sāhitya-Alaṅkāra 10, Śloka 30, miscellaneous 10 and Marāṭhī 2 = 465. Of these the majority of Mss. are complete and not more than a dozen are incomplete. There are in all 79 dated Mss., the oldest going as far back as Sathvat 1118. This is a very valuable collection containing several Mss. so far unknown to us.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF FLUX

An analogous Study in Heraclitean and Indian Thought

BY

BETTY HEIMANN

In my "Indian and Western Philosophy: A Study in Contrasts"<sup>1</sup> I clearly took up the position of non-analogy between India and the West which latter trend of thought started with Greek philosophy. In this case, however, a study in analogy between a Greek thinker and Indian philosophers is undertaken. There is no change of attitude, because Heraclitus was a pre-Socratic, or rather, pre-Sophistic, thinker. He still, on the main, apart from some personal and topical remarks, was occupied with some cosmic thought. His work had the title "Peri Phýseōs" ("De Natura") and as such, as the later expositions will prove, he had his footing on a basis near to the constant Indian outlook. It may well be that this study may turn out to be a defence, simultaneously of Heraclitus' and of India's philosophy. For the same reproaches which the later Greeks, from their fundamentally changed standpoint, made against H. are generally made by Western thinkers against the whole of Indian philosophy. Heraclitus is called the "Skoteinos", the obscure and the unsystematic thinker. One external reason for this censure may be found in the accidental fact that H.'s work is only handed down to us in patchy fragments. Another external reason is that he used a manner of expression unusual to average language by employing the form of aphorism and also by his attitude of an inspired seer. (Significantly he laid down his work in the temple of Artemis as a kind of religious offering to the Divine). But more important are inner reasons why his work remained unintelligible for the masses of later Greek thinkers and, more or less, for the West up to recent times. His main dogma that everything is in continuous motion irrelevant of direction, that all opposites, the "Hodos anō and katō", the upward and downward movements, are essentially the same, does not fit into the rigid frame work of Western logical thinking. Since the slogan of the Sophists that "Man is the measure of everything", human reasoning with its definite canon of values and of careful avoidance of contradictory statements holds sway over the West. Since then a reluctance has arisen towards the loose elasticity of thought and its resulting ambiguity. But that is exactly what Heraclitus intended to impress on his fellow thinkers as Nature's law. "Everything moves in a circle, up and down, from growth to decay and vice versa" (Fragm. 112). "Nature strives after the opposite" (Fragm. 10). "Union is only possible through primary dissension, through the struggle of opposite tendencies" (Fragm. 8). "Wakening is destructive, sleep is constructive while co-operating on world events" (Fragm. 75). "Birth is misery and consequently turns into death" (Fragm. 20). "Good and bad are the same" (Fragm. 58). Heraclitus is conscious of being liable to be misunderstood (Fragm. 34) by taking away all fixed determinations to which human reason clings.

---

<sup>1</sup> London 1937. (G. Allen and Unwin, Ltd.).

23 [Annals, B. O. R. I.]

The same holds good for the basic thoughts on which all Indian philosophical systems are founded. Through trying to insert the human being into the cosmic thought, considering Man as only one expression of the vital life-force which indiscriminately permeates the whole Universe and all its phenomena, through emphasizing the ever changing flux upwards and downwards, from construction to destruction and vice versa, Indian thought represents the same difficulty for human reason as Heraclitus' teachings provide.

All Indian systems, too, emphasize the vagueness of direction but the fundamental idea of motion, the oscillating and alternating, the undulating and reverse movements which correlate everything and take away singleness and fixation. The idea of relation between everything results in the assumption of relativity and momentariness of everything. Every phenomenon has an ambiguous significance. As a manifestation of the universal vital force within, and behind, all phenomena each single one is significant, but at the same time insignificant as only one transitory moment of fixation. The concept of a hidden unity between them all does not admit of a strict separation of opposites; it simultaneously views reverses and accepts paradoxes. The only constant factor which remains for the Indian thinker is the continuity of flux, the unbreakable interrelation between analysis and catalysis, the continuous metabolism and transformation.

As such Indian ontology in the Vedānta and Sāṃkhya system teaches a perpetual emanation and reabsorption out of, and into, Brahman or Prakṛti. As such Jainism in its cosmology speaks about the rising and falling movements of world formation (ut-sarpiṇī and avasarpiṇī, an almost literal equivalent of Heraclitus' term "hodos anō and katō").

A quasi-ethical or theological expression of this biological law is given in the Upaniṣads. Not only in the pre-existential and post-existential periods of the world, but also in the empirical stages an interchange of the "hodos anō and katō" is taught. The doctrine of the devayāna and pitṛyāna indicates that the human being after this present form of existence is moving upwards ("hodos anō") to moon and sun according to his merits, but then again comes down to earth ("hodos katō") in the transformed shape of rain and food and through that again returns to a human or animal body which is built up together with all its physical or psychic functions by the quasi-neutral comic substance which continuously changes form.

The underlying biological idea of the karma theory, common to all Indian systems, emphasizes that karma-bīja grows into karma-phala; but the moment of the highest fulfilment of the seed in the fully developed fruit is the very beginning of decay. The fruit drops after having absorbed in itself as much as possible of the vital force of its bearer and has now no more participation with the ever flowing vital sap. Its only way of survival is in transformation, either in the shape of consumed food or in the disintegrated form of manure which provides substance to a new outgrowth. We may understand in this way Heraclitus' Fragment 36, "Death of the transformed is the birth of a new form."

Nothing comes from nothing, but each action results into an adequate re-action. This is the underlying idea of early Vedic sacrifice and magic and the often misunderstood doctrine of "do-ut-des." Performance of a rite, the concrete substance of libation and the will-power invested in the ceremony inevitably attracts the wanted result from the Gods or through direct influence on the cosmic parts.

Indian thought as well as the teaching of Heraclitus is based on the acknowledgment of the existent facts of actual phenomena which function freely according to their specific laws. Not an externally imposed order, but an immanent functional order underlies the course of development. Significantly, already the Rgveda finds an expression for this dynamic law. Rta, lit. the going, is the ancient name of the universal order which governs the function of human and extra-human beings alike. Rta (or rather Varuna, the servant of Rta) sees to it that the sun, moon and stars, the rivers and men, function in their appropriate places and at their appropriate time. Compare this concept of Rta with Heraclitus' idea of Dikē. "If the sun could deviate from its prescribed course, the Erinyes, the guardians of Dikē, the inevitable immanent order, would find it out and would forcibly drive it back to its dutiful function" (Fragm. 23).

Heraclitus starting point of thought, too, is the plurality of objects with their fixed functions, but ever changing manifoldness of conditions. While taking their starting point of investigation in the actual dynamic flux of the empirical world, no space is allotted by these thinkers to a creator out of the nihil. It is no accident that Rgveda 10, 129 emphatically teaches that the God or the Gods being themselves but single forms are on this empirical side of the world. Again, it is no accident, but a consequence of the fundamental idea, that H. assigns no personal God or Gods other than a somewhat elevated stage among all individual beings.

But it is a natural urge to seek within this embarrassing manifoldness of actual phenomena for an underlying unity. Thus India postulates, in a way of assumed accelerated motion, the lying-together of all emanations of the basic life-force at the beginning, or their falling-together at the end, in a kind of unifying receptacle. Pre-or-post-empirical unity is a deduction from empirical plurality observed. Thus the idea of motion and empirical flux (Heraclitus "Panta rei") results in its last consequence into its opposite, unity as opposed to, and yet connected with, plurality; continuity, as opposed to, and yet connected with constancy.

Unity is the coincidentia oppositorum. This holds good not only in the sphere of visible empirical phenomena; also the two ends of the immense, the transcendental "hodos anō and katō," are essentially the same. The immeasurably great and the immeasurably small are in Sanskrit termed śūna and śūnya (both derivatives of the same root: śūn). The All and the None are essentially the same and between those correlated opposites lies embedded the world of the Finite. As such śūnya, zero, can become a synonym for Nirvāṇa; the not-yet-a-thing is essentially the same as the no-more-a-thing. Both are no things. The Vaiśeṣika system accepts beside the finite physical forms the two opposites implied in the idea of the Adṛṣṭa, the Unseen, which can be conceived either as the infinitely small atom, the anu, or as the infinitely great, but equally ungraspable, ākāśa, the immeasurable ether.

The deduction of the fundamental assumption of the ever changing condition of things is drawn by Heraclitus and his follower Kratylos. Nobody can enter more than once, nor even once, the same stream, because both the bather and the stream, change from moment to moment. This idea which takes away all safe fixation certainly embarrassed the later so-called systematics of Greek and Western thinkers. Their antidote was to ridicule it. But the very same concept underlies serious Indian doctrines. Its last theoretical consequence is to be found in the kṣāṇa theory of Buddhism which teaches that no things except in interrelation (sambhāna) of moments. But yet, even in this seemingly nihilating kṣāṇa theory some kind of constant factor remains. Even the nihilistic schools of Buddhism accept the idea of a though continuously changing, but in its very change permanent, bundle of psychic experiences. The karma bearer, retains from one form of existence to all following ones its psychic predisposition.

Heraclitus propagates that union or harmony can only be produced by the falling together of opposites. The male and the female elements are essentially opposed, but complementary to each other. Hinduism in texts and figural representations emphasizes the same idea. God Śiva cannot be thought of apart from his female Śakti. The Sāṃkhya system represents the male element as the principle of Puruṣa, the female as the principle of Prakṛti. While working against, and for each other, the male and female elements are together the creative powers of the world formation. It is no accident that the different Indian systems (Vedānta and Sāṃkhya) use frequently the metaphor of sexual union. Later Hinduism depicts this idea in its last consequence in the concept of the ardhanārīśvara, introduces a double being in which the left half of its body is representative of the female, the right half of the male element.

Indian psychology, as represented in the Yoga system, makes use of the basic doctrine of immanent counter-movements. The karma, the activity, directed towards external functions, has to be counter-balanced by pari-karma, inverted karma (Yoga-sūtras 1, 35 Comm.). Each saṃvedanā, external consciousness, is counter-acted and such complemented by prati-saṃ-vedanā (cf. prati-aśh-vedān, Yoga-sūtras 1, 29 Comm.). Similarly the psychological aim of the study of history, of external action, is recommended for psychic training. Not for the sake of acquiring single facts of knowledge, but for the attainment of a liberated mind, history shall be studied. The study of action shall lead to indifference towards action; study of history shall lead to the śāntarasa, to the pacified mind of the hermit. Nothing stands for good on the crest of a wave, nothing for good in the trough of a wave. Reviewing the undulating events as momentary and transitory happenings, that is the aim of the Rājatarāṅgī, the chief historical text of ancient India. The literal translation of this programmatic title is "the waves of dynasties."

All values of human super-imposed ethics are irrelevant. Good and bad, i.e. black, white or karma of a mixed colour is suitable only for the average man; the Yogin has neither black nor white karma (cf. Yoga-sūtras 4, 7 and Bhagavadgītā 2, 50). Pure accomplishment lies beyond that sphere of distinction. The same concept seems to underly Heraclitus' Fragment 56. "Good and bad are finally the same." God Śiva in his highest aspect is beyond the ethical range of his destructive and constructive powers. As such he is the indifferent Yogin and is represented as the Natarāja. He performs his dance of world-destruction with the smiling expression of neutral duty. While destroying and trampling down the world into a formless mass, he provides the predisposition for a new formation.

From the social point of view, distinctions, too, are assumed as natural necessities, but not as final aims. The divisions of caste are not based on the law of independent and static difference, but on that of common cause. The human community is conceived as a huge social organism in which all members have to play their specific part. The scheme of the caste system is essentially a division of labour, or rather, a specification of labour. Only, when each single caste performs its specific dharma ( duty and right ) it serves as a useful member of the whole. And yet another seemingly paradoxical law can be observed in this concept of caste. The caste itself, the genus, is fixed, but within this fixation of the genus a continuous development takes place within each species belonging to the genus. While strictly adhering to the fixed order of a caste in the course of generation physical and psychic progression takes place; capacities once acquired are developed and improved through their repeated exercise strengthened by inheritance.

These ambiguities already observed in all the other disciplines of thought have significantly left their marks also in the field of logic and epistemology. Even so-called formal Indian logic in its distinctive reasoning has to take into consideration natural ambiguity and elasticity of thought. Indian terms are never fixed "termini" in the Latin sense, i. e. static limits, but maintain ambiguous meaning, or even combine opposites. Prasaṅga, for instance, is a definite logical term, but ambiguously fixed. As such it means logical consequence or wrong association. Other terms like mukti and yoga are in one and the same context used in their distinct terminological meaning but also in their wider significance. As such yoga indicates "union" of any kind and mukti "loosening power" in general. Thus Yoga-sūtras 3, 22 comm. speak of the unguarded fire as mukta. Significantly Indian formal logic introduces also a dynamic term for the inseparable connection between the bearer of characteristics and its essential characteristics. Vyāpti designates the process of mutual penetration between the līngin and the līnga. Fixed relations are not static data, but physical or psychic processes. Things are interrelated through mutual participation of certain qualities. And once more the term "quality" has in Indian logic a wider sense than in the formal logic of the West. Spatial relationship results in in-fluence. Divisibility into the same number of parts results in similarity of the things which have participation with the quality of the same number. Similes and metaphors state a relationship (similarity) between the things compared which may result, in case of a relatively high number of comparable qualities, into identification. From this point of view rhetoric can be inserted into the Indian system of logic. statement implies possible counter-statement; pakṣa conditions prati-pakṣa. As such Indian logic cannot be thought of apart of discussion. A puzzle in Indian logic for the Western interpreter is its theory of the positive research in the a-bhāva, the non-being. The former perceiving of a pot in a certain place leads to the investigation of the "non-pot" on the spot where previously a pot was seen. Each bhāva implies the existence of its a-bhāva each bheda equally explains a potential a-bheda; difference can only be perceived, if from another aspect non-difference is assumed.

The same ambiguous relationship is given for the concepts of subject and object. They are continuously changing places. In the act of perception subject and object are equally active (perhaps) the object, while having a wider range of efficiency in influencing more than one subject simultaneously or subsequently, is the more active of the two. Not only in the Vedānta, but throughout all later systems, the state of super-consciousness, the condition of non-more distinction between the Ego and the outer world, is considered the highest. Suṣupti, the dreamless sleep, where no distinctive form and no separate consciousness of the waking stage and of its reflection in dream-sleep is anymore assumed, is the highest form of consciousness and as such a super-subjective-objective bliss. Here once more one may quote Heraclitus who voices the same idea, though not in the developed form and refinement of India's long tradition. H. speaks of the constructive stage of sleep ( Fragm. 75 ). We have to add of " dreamless " sleep.

While taking into consideration the wider range of Indian logic which thus transgresses the narrow limits of Western formal logic, we may try to understand the programmatic saying of Nyāya-sūtra 1, 1. All the logical intricacies of discussion, all the 16 categories of rational proceedings claim to lead to the end of irrational bliss or salvation.

After all the former expositions it is not surprising that even in the sober realm of Indian linguistics a reflection of the basic concept of flux, i. e. of super directional motion, can be observed. The prefixes, the gaṭis, the motors, of the noun or verb to which they are added suggest in their basic meanings either ambiguous or even reverse, functions. The prefix sam indicates psychologically concentration, physically compilation, logically comprehension. The prefix ā is an indicator of reverse motion; it represents, as it were, a " hodos anō and katō " in the horizontal, instead of the vertical, direction. Ā-piṅgala means reddish, i. e. going towards the red colour, ā-gam ( root gam, to go ), on the other hand, is used to indicate the reverse direction; as such ā-gam means to return or to come.

The prefix prati is even a stronger representative of this double motion. Whenever it is used, it indicates counter-movement. Each pakṣa implies a possible prati-pakṣa. Pratyakṣam is accordingly a significant term for sense perception. Its literal meaning is going towards to, or backwards from, the eye and thus it depicts the influence from the object into the subject and vice versa.

The same ambiguity, or even contradictoriness, of meaning can be observed in simple nouns or verbs. Varṇa means colour and sound, i. e. it indicates the visible or audible product of the sense ( eye or ear ). Similarly, khyā is: to see or to say. This vagueness of meaning is extended beyond the mere verbs of sense perception. Kṣi means: to rule and to destroy. Hā is: to attain and to give up. Either these latter verbs indicate different stages of a process or a general ambiguity of meaning. Other words show the last consequence of fundamental neutrality of meaning in indicating even contradictory functions. Rj means:

to move and to stand still. Abhaya, lit. which has no bhaya, no empirical being, means accordingly nothing or immense (cf. the above mentioned jñāna and śūnya). As in the sphere of the Finite also in the realm of the Infinite reverse motion is assumed. Nabha is the absence, or the matrix, of all numbers.

Heraclitus is for the later Westerner who has limited himself by his rigid reasoning "Skoteinos," obscure or unsystematic. In the light of comparison with the productive tradition of Indian thought we appreciate the richness and promise, i. e. the elasticity, of mind of this original and fertile thinker.

THREE HEADED ANIMALS IN MOHENJO DARO

BY

H. HERAS

On a few seals found in Mohenjo Daro, instead of the usual symbolic animal, which may represent one of the tribes into which the proto-Indians were divided, there is the representation of a three-headed animal. Thus in one of them we see the animal with the heads of a bull, an unicorn and an ibex. (fig. 1).<sup>1</sup> The bull's head is placed low as in the attitude of eating grass. The Unicorn's head is the middle one and appears as it were the proper head of the animal. Finally, the ibex's head springs from the union between the neck and back of the animal and turns backwards. We have called this head, the head of an ibex because the horns appear to be the horns of this Himalayan goat. Yet we must say that the horns are turned forward, which is not the ordinary position of the horns of the ibex. Moreover, its head itself might not be recognised as the head of an ibex by a zoologist.

The representation of this animal is also found on another seal<sup>2</sup> with inscription above, about which we shall speak below.

On another seal<sup>3</sup> (fig. 2) the three heads seem to belong to the same animal but for the horns. The lowermost head has two horns which might be the horns of a bull, while the upper two heads once more have the horns of an ibex, the middle one having the horns turned forward and the uppermost head having them turned in the natural backward direction. Otherwise, the position of the heads is the same as in the preceding case, though the lowermost head is perhaps still more bent towards the ground than in the other case.

Amongst the seals described as Hittite, in the Ashmolean Museum, Oxford, there is again a seal (fig. 3) showing a double-headed animal, one being the head of a bull which appears as the natural head of the animal, and the other head rising over the neck and turned backwards in the same position as the uppermost head in the preceding two cases. This second head apparently is the head of a ram, its horns being represented in the characteristic wavy shape of the rams in the Mohenjo Daro representations<sup>1</sup> and also in Egyptian carvings and paintings.<sup>2</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Mackay, Further Excavations at Mohenjo Daro, II, Pl. XCVI, No. 494.

<sup>2</sup> Mackay, Further Excavations at Mohenjo Daro, Pl. LXXXIII, No. 24.

<sup>3</sup> Marshall, Mohenjo Daro and the Indus Civilization, Pl. CXII, No. 382.

What was the meaning of these three-headed animals of Mohenjo Daro, and incidentally of the two-headed animal of the Hittites?

The reading of the inscription which accompanies the first three-headed animal described above made me advance a theory about the nature of these quaint representations, embodied in the two following questions: "Is the monster having three heads a symbol of the divine triad of the Mohenjo Daro Religion?<sup>3</sup> Are these three animals the Vāhanas of the 'three great gods'?<sup>4</sup> The doubt expressed when proposing this theory is not yet fully removed after nearly three years since I wrote those lines. Yet I readily acknowledge the possibility of the theory owing to the following arguments.

Though among the objects discovered in the Indus Valley there is no representation of any god standing or seated on any animal as a Vāhana or in any way connected with any, yet it seems likely that the idea of ascribing a Vāhana to each god must come from the very early proto-Indian period. In point of fact we find a number of gods represented on animal Vāhanas in Sumer (and consequently in Babylon and Assyria), among the Hittites and among the Phoenicians. In other Mediterranean nations we come across certain animals associated with some definite gods though not actually represented as vehicles of the

<sup>1</sup> Hogarth, Hittite Seals, Pl. IV, No. 101. (Oxford, 1920).

<sup>2</sup> Cf. for instance, Wallis-Budge, From Fetish to God, pp. 14, 76 and passim.

<sup>3</sup> Cf. Heras, "The Religion of the Mohenjo Daro People according to the Inscriptions" Journal of the University of Bombay, V, pp. 15-17.

<sup>4</sup> Heras, "Further Excavations at Mohenjo Daro" The New Review, Vol. IX, p. 75.

FIG. 1.

FIG. 2

FIG. 3

FIG. 4

FIG. 5

By kind permission of the Director of Archaeology, H. E. H. The Nazari's Domination.

FIG. 6

latter. But the most interesting circumstance of this custom is that a number of these vehicles perfectly correspond in some cases to the Indian vāhanas and their respective gods.

In Sumer, for instance, the God Enlil, who has taken the place of the Supreme deity, is intimately associated with the ram, in whose zodiacal house he is supposed to dwell.<sup>1</sup>

In Egypt, the god Amon-Rā, who is the first deity of the triad of Thebes, is often represented with the head of a ram<sup>2</sup> or simply as a ram.<sup>3</sup> Similarly the goddess She-Khet, who is the Mother Goddess in another Egyptian triad, is shown with the head of a lioness.

On the large rock of Insally-Kaya, near the Hittite capital, the first god of the Triad, Istanu, corresponding to the proto-Indian Āp, is shown next to a ram. In front of him, the Mother Goddess Andā is represented standing on a lioness which is walking over mountains, a perfect equation of the future mother goddess of India, Pārvatī whose vāhana is a lioness.<sup>4</sup>

A Phœnician cylinder seal shows likewise the first god Āp with a trident-like thunderbolt, standing on a humped bull which reminds us of Śiva's Nandi while the mother goddess is once more shown represented on mountains.<sup>5</sup>

In Syria and Phrygia the main god, later called by the Romans Jupiter-Dolichenus is always represented standing on a bull. On the coins of Hierapolis he is shown seated on a throne flanked by two bulls, while the mother goddess is to his left on a similar throne flanked by two lions.<sup>6</sup>

Among the seals discovered in the palace of Minos in Crete, there are several representations of the Mother Goddess associated with the lion. Yet we shall only refer to one on which she is shown on the top of mountains next to which are two lions with

<sup>1</sup> Radan, Sumerian Hymns and Prayers to God Nis-ib, pp. 34-35.

<sup>2</sup> Shorter, The Egyptian Gods, p. 126.

<sup>3</sup> Ibid. pp. 11 and 140.

<sup>4</sup> Garstang, The Hittite Empire, Pl. XXIV.

<sup>5</sup> Delaporte, Catalogue des Cylindres Orientaux de la Bibliothèque Nationale No. 251.

<sup>6</sup> Garstang, op. cit., p. 304, fig. 43.

their paws on the mountains so as to have their heads on the same level as the feet of the goddess.<sup>1</sup>

This persistent tradition of the vāhanas of some of these gods agreeing in some cases if not all, with the vāhanas of the corresponding divinities of the later Indian Pantheon, seems to imply that they existed already in India before the migrations of the Mediterranean branches of the nation. If that were so, we might perhaps suggest that the bull of the three-headed monster under study was the vāhana of Āp, the future Śiva; the ibex was the vāhana of Āpīl, the proto-type of Subrahmanya in India and of Enlil in Sumer. The remaining head of a unicorn would thus correspond to the vāhana of Amā, the future Umā-Pārvatī. The fact that these last two vāhanas were exchanged for a peacock and a lioness, respectively seems to go against our theory.<sup>2</sup> Yet we must remember that a lioness or a lion appears already in connection with the Mother Goddess in other Mediterranean nations and that Zeus-Jupiter is associated with a bird, viz. an eagle. This eagle as well as Subrahmanya's peacock might be the final development of another bird of early times. This bird was very likely a cock which was Subrahmanya's first vāhana.<sup>3</sup> In point of fact we also find an eagle as the vāhana of another God in the historic period of India, viz., Garuḍa as the vāhana of Viṣṇu who though being a Vedic god is not shown associated with this vāhana in the Rgveda.

As regards the other three-headed animal, we do not find a plausible explanation of its three heads, nor have the two signs carved on that seal any apparent relation to the figure. Was it perhaps the representation of a sort of a demon or evil spirit? Good spirits are represented in the Mohenjo Daro seals with combined human and animal forms.<sup>4</sup> In the same way, we find good spirits represented in Sumer, Elam and among the Hittites and Minoans. The combination of animal forms only seems to be something more uncanny and consequently suggesting evil. In

<sup>1</sup> Evans, The Palace of Minos, II, p. 809; IV, p. 608, cf. Ibid., I, p. 505.

<sup>2</sup> As regards the unicorn it is doubtful whether it really existed in the Zoological kingdom at any time. Yet since the animal is generally supposed to be a sort of a monster in the full historical period this might have been the reason why the lioness, a real and well-known animal finally substituted the mythical unicorn.

<sup>3</sup> Sivaraja Pillai, Chronology of the Early Tamils, p. 202.

<sup>4</sup> Marshall, op. cit., Pl. CXL, Nos. 356-357.

point of fact in later Hindu iconography rākṣasas or devils are very often represented as an ugly combination of animal forms.

In this connection we may refer to two very interesting representations which we have lately discovered in Raichur, in H. E. H. the Nizam's Dominions.

One is a square block of granite which belonged to an early building, now kept in the premises of the State Guest House, round the central fountain in the garden. This block has a three headed monster sculptured on one of its faces.<sup>1</sup> This relief as all the other reliefs found in this garden, has unfortunately been tarred, perhaps for its preservation, but certainly with very bad effect as regards its aesthetic appearance. One of the effects of tarring was the difficulty of obtaining a good photograph of it; because a black surface placed under the shadow of some bushes did not reflect any rays to impress a photographic film. Finally, one of my companions thought of a successful device. He obtained a mirror from the servant of the Guest House by means of which the reflected light was thrown upon the block sculpture thus obtaining a pretty decent photographic reproduction which is published herewith.<sup>2</sup>

The representation found on this block of granite is one thoroughly parallel to that of the third Mohenjo Daro seal studied above. It is a quadruped with three heads, apparently belonging to a ram; the horns are very long and straight. The three heads are placed in absolutely the same position as the heads of the Mohenjo Daro monster, one bent towards the ground, the middle one in its natural normal position and the third one springing up from the latter's neck and turned backwards. The parallelism of the three heads in their respective poses is indeed very striking. The only difference between this and the seals being that the latter had heads of at least two different animals while in this case all the heads belong to the same zoological species. The fact that the block of stone is now separated from the building for which it was destined, does not unfortunately allow us to advance any theory about the meaning of this monster.

<sup>1</sup> Fig. 4.

<sup>2</sup> Unfortunately, the lowermost head of the monster did not fully come within the range of the camera. Fig. 4.

The other representation of a similar monster discovered at Raichur may give us some clue as regards its significance. It is found on a beautiful graffito on a flat stone probably of basalt which had undoubtedly belonged to an old Hindu temple of the 12th or 13th century, as the garland hanging round the neck of Hanumān shown in the graffito discloses. This very interesting Archaeological specimen is now embedded in the wall of the central square of the Navrang Darwāzā, under the arches, of the lower Raichur Fort. When I saw this graffito for the first time in December 1937, it was very clear and distinct but unfortunately I had not then a camera with me. When I wrote about it to the Archaeological Department of the state, they officially replied that they had no photograph of this monument among the department records. Last December, before proceeding to the Hyderabad Oriental Conference, I proceeded to Raichur with a party of my research students in order to obtain a good photograph of it. The wall where the graffito is embedded had in the meantime been whitewashed and a portion of the graffito was covered with white-washing. With a wet handkerchief and with great care we removed all the white-washing from over the graffito and three of my research students competed in the difficult enterprise of taking a photograph of that blackish stone in that shady spot. The competition was won by Mr. L. B. Keny. The photograph obtained by him is published herewith (fig. 5), but since it is still dark as it reproduces the blackness of the stone itself, he has supplied me with a beautiful enlarged drawing made by his friend Mr. Narayan Śiva, which will enable our readers to appreciate the beauty of this unique graffito. (fig. 6).

In the central portion of it, a plant which pseudo-botanists might perhaps classify as a banana or plantain tree, rises between the Cakra and Śaṅkha, two symbols which might suggest that the stone had belonged to a Vaiṣṇava temple. To the left of the tree, one sees the image of Hanumān, the great wonder-working vānara of the Rāmāyana, with lifted tail and in an exultant mood. His left foot is lifted from the ground and his right hand is raised above the level of his head in a dancing pose. On the side of the central plant there is another figure in a somewhat similar pose. His left hand is raised as the right one of Hanumān is, and his left foot is being lifted from the ground, its heel actually being raised. The whole figure stands on a hill or a mountain, the top of which is flat. The identification of this figure is somewhat puzzling. A pair of wings appears from behind his back one on each side and a snake is entwined in his right arm, its head being on a level with his face. These two circumstances seem to suggest that the image may represent Garuḍa, the eagle of Viṣṇu supposed to be the lord and annihilator of snakes. Yet, the representation of the face of this personage is against such an identification. His face is the face of a monkey not very different from that of Hanumān. He wears a peculiar head-dress bearing a sort of a crutch from the middle of which a pointed leaf majestically rises. Nevertheless it is interesting to note that his monkey tail does not appear. The final identification of this personage may be obtained after having identified the whole scene.

After Lakṣmaṇa, Rāma's brother, was mortally wounded in front of the walls of Lankā, the courageous Hanumān flew to the Kiṣkindhā forest to bring the herb named Viśalyakaravī (destroyer of diseases) from the Gandhamādana, following the advice of the physician Suśeṇa, after the medical examination of the patient.<sup>1</sup> It is well-known how Hanumān, instead of wasting time in search for the herb, himself not being an expert in its knowledge, detached the whole top of the mountain and flew back with it to Lankā.<sup>2</sup> On reaching Lankā, Suśeṇa spotted the herb without difficulty and crushed it with a stone so that its smell would revive the dying hero.<sup>3</sup>

The graffito under study seems to represent this last touching scene. Hanumān appears exultant over his having found the required remedy. Suśeṇa, the great physician, climbs to the top of the mountain as the text itself states.<sup>4</sup> This is graphically represented in the scene under study. The herb itself not yet smashed rises between both vānaras.

A serious objection, nevertheless, may be proposed against this identification of Suśeṇa. He certainly looks like a monkey.

<sup>1</sup> Rāmāyaṇa, Ch. 52, Vv. 28-58. (References given here, are to the Bengali rendition of the poem).

<sup>2</sup> Ibid., Ch. 53, Vv. 21-42.

<sup>3</sup> Ibid., Vv. 53-55.

<sup>4</sup> Ibid., V. 53.

25 [Annals, B. O. R. I.]

His head-gear suggests princely rank as befits the Father-in-law of Sugrīva, the vānara chief.<sup>1</sup> But he has wings and is associated with snakes. I cannot explain satisfactorily this extraordinary iconographical development unless the designer was to adapt these two elements to the famous physician, which were poetically described as characteristics of Hanumān in his flight to the Kiśkindhā forest. He is said to have flown like the wind whose son he was supposed to be, for which he would naturally require wings. And the movement of his hands resembled coiling snakes.

After having identified this scene so beautifully depicted in this graffito, we may now study the figure<sup>2</sup> that appears behind Hanumān. It is a three-headed monster totally similar to that carved on the other Raichur stone described above, but of much more delicate design. The three heads of the animal have horns of the same kind as the other and the position of the three heads is the same but for the fact that the lowermost head is much more bent towards the ground and is actually eating the herb. This seems also to be what the third head rising from the base of the neck of the middle one, is doing. The animal in this case looks like a deer, rather than any other animal. Its anatomical perfection and gracefulness of design reveals a first class artist. What is the meaning of this three headed monster in the scene described above?

In the course of the battle relentlessly fought round the walls of Laṅkā, after the rising of Lakṣmaṇa owing to the smell of the salutiferous herb brought by Hanumān, a colossal fight ensues between the latter and a son of Rāvana, called Trīśira, because of his three heads.<sup>3</sup> He is now generally represented as a three-headed man. But we suspect that in ancient times when it was supposed, following the Purāṇic tradition that Laṅkā was a kingdom of Rākṣasas or demons, the ancient sculptor, following the old artistic tradition of representing demons in the shape of monstrous animals, depicted Trīśira as a three headed animal. Therefore this three-headed and graceful deer, in spite of its attractiveness and aesthetic appeal, may probably represent the monstrously described son of Rāvaṇa, waiting for the engagement with the vānara hero soon after Lakṣmaṇa's recovery.

<sup>1</sup> Ibid., Ch. 82, V. 113.

<sup>2</sup> Rāmāyaṇa, Ch. 50, Vv. 29-42.

The popularity achieved by this monstrous son of Rāvaṇa, which the local tradition of Trichanapally, associated with the ancient name of the city, Trisira-pally, may perhaps strengthen our view concerning the identification of this figure.

If our identification of this three-headed monster is correct, we have in this figure a confirmation of this suspicion that the three-headed monsters of Mohenjo Daro, or at least some of them may be the representations of demons or evil spirits. In any case the two three-headed monsters found at Raichur are a magnificent proof of the continuation of the artistic traditions of the proto-Indians of the Indus valley, in the historic period of Hindusthan. We must admit that behind this continuous artistic tradition there must be a continuous ideal which though perhaps not in agreement with the above explanation given by us, is a portion of the inheritance of that race which permeates historical India.

THE HOME OF THE ŚĀTAVĀHANAS

BY

S. A. JOGLEKAR

The question of the home of the Śātavāhanas has engaged the attention of scholars for a considerable time and they are not nearer the solution of the problem than they were when the Śātavāhanas were assigned to the Āndhra-deśa, ostensibly in accordance with the statement to that effect in the Purāṇas. It was at one time believed that this theory was tottering as a result of recent investigations of several scholars<sup>1</sup>; but that position no longer holds good. Several attempts have been made, of late, to connect them with the Āndhra-deśa<sup>2</sup>. In the latest work on the subject,<sup>3</sup> Mr. Gopalachari still clings to the shreds of a tattered theory and fondly believes that Āndhra-deśa was the land of the birth of the Śātavāhanas, who, as fortune hunters, passed into the service of the Mauryas and so moved up to western Deccan, where Simuka started his career of conquest. This makes a fresh study and a renewed attack on the old theory necessary.

While identifying the Śātavāhana kings of Mahārāṣṭra with the Telugu speaking Āndhras and placing them about the mouths of the Godāvari, Dr. Bhandarkar has not put forth any reasoning. Bhandarkar, Rapson and Smith built up the theory of the eastern origin of the Āndhras and in course of time it fossilized into an orthodox dogma. Dr. Barnett, in the body of his chapter on the Early History of the Śātavāhanas, states that their home, then as now, was included in modern Telingana<sup>4</sup>; in the foot-note, however, he states that one is tempted to

---

<sup>1</sup> V. S. Bakhle, "Śātavāhanas & Contemporary Ksatrapas". J. R. S. R. A. S. Vol. III, p. 49.

<sup>2</sup> Aravamuthan, in "Kaveri the Maikharins and the Sangama Age", tries to identify the Śātavāhana king with Nuruvar Kannar or the Hundred Aryan kings of the Silappadikaram.

<sup>3</sup> Mr. Gopalachari, Early History of the Āndhra Country, pp. 9 and 27.

<sup>4</sup> Cambridge History of India, Vol. I, p. 599.

connect the Satiyaputas with the Sātavāhanas and suggests that if this identification is right, it would seem that the Sātakarnīs were originally a tribe living outside the borders of the Āndhra country, perhaps to the west of it, who about a generation after Aśoka made themselves masters of the Āndhra-deśa and played in it the part of the Normans in England. Mr. P. T. Shrinivas Aiyanger, was the first to attack the theory<sup>1</sup>. He has shown the utter worthlessness of the data upon which reliance was placed by Smith. The conclusions arrived at by him are that the Āndhra power extended from the west to the east, down the Godāvari valley, that Āndhra was first a tribal name, then the name of a dynasty and thereafter the name of a language. Dr. Sukthankar's spirited attack had almost levelled the orthodox theory to the ground.<sup>2</sup> Mr. Bakhle also does not accept the old theory; but unlike Dr. Sukthankar, he does not put forth any fresh theory about the original home of the Sātavāhanas. I believe that the Sātavāhanas can more conveniently be placed in the region about the source of the Godāvari than about the mouths of the river; and that a convincing reason can also be assigned for the Āndhra label that they were given.

The earlier kings of the dynasty do not appear to have had any connection whatever with the Āndhra-deśa. Their earliest inscriptions and coins as well are found only in Mahārāṣṭra. The alphabet in which their inscriptions are inscribed is north-Indian and the language is proto-Mahārāṣṭri. Their coins are of the Malwa fabric<sup>3</sup>, the legends are in Brāhmī and on their reverse appears the well-known Ujjain symbol. Their bow and arrow coins are found only in the Kolhapur region. Āndhra coinage is northern and western in its affinities and has nothing in common with the peculiar coinage of south India<sup>4</sup>. In their own inscriptions they do not refer to themselves as belonging either to the Āndhra-deśa or to the Āndhra-jāti. Tradition and inscriptions connect them with Pratiṣṭhāna and Nasik the cultural centres of ancient Mahārāṣṭra. Prakrit (Mahārāṣṭri) authorship

<sup>1</sup> Ind. Ant., 1913, p. 276.

<sup>2</sup> B. O. R. I. Annals, Vol. I, pp. 21-42.

<sup>3</sup> Rapson, Coins of the Andhra Dynasty etc., p. xcii.

<sup>4</sup> Smith, Z. D. M. G., 1903, p. 607.

is ascribed to one of them and for intimate conversation in their harems, where one would be expected to use his mother-tongue only, they are said to have used Prakrit. Their relatives were the Mahārathis, chieftains of ancient Mahārāṣṭra. Neither in Mahārāṣṭra nor in the Āndhra-deśa prevail any traditions of Āndhra invasion or conquest. Outside the bare statement in the Purāṇas, therefore, that after the Kāṇvas the land will be ruled by the Āndhras or by the Āndhra-jātiyas, and the correlation of the names of the kings named as Āndhras with the names of the kings in the Sātavāhana dynasty, there is nothing to connect the earlier Sātavāhanas with the Āndhra-deśa. Later Sātavāhanas, no doubt, were pressed to the south and in the country which later on came to be known as the Āndhra-deśa; but that is no reason why the dynasty itself should be labelled as Āndhra.

The Aitareya Brāhmaṇa (VII. 18) speaks of the Āndhras, Puṇḍras, Śābaras, Pulindas and Mūtibas, as people living in the south, beyond the borders (udāntyaḥ) of the Āryan settlements. Of these five non-Āryan (dasyu) tribes, the Puṇḍras are placed in the Dakṣiṇāpatha by the Mārkaṇḍeya Purāṇa. Dr. Bimala Churn Law is inclined<sup>1</sup> to place them in the east, because the town Puṇḍravardhana, to which extended the southern boundary of the Madhya-deśa and Magadha<sup>2</sup> is situated in Bengal, in the Bogrā District. We do not know if the founders of the town were the Puṇḍras of the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa. If they had been so civilised a people, the expelling of the progeny of his fifty sons by Viśvāmitra into the Puṇḍra country would not have amounted to a curse. It may be that in later times the Puṇḍras of the Vindhyan region were pressed to the east, became civilised and were included in Buddhist legend. Bāṇa, in his Kādambarī, places the Śābaras in the Vindhya. Ptolemy places the Pulindas along the Narmadā. Their capital Pulinda-nagara has been placed to the south-east of Daśārṇa.<sup>3</sup> The five tribes have thus to be placed along or to the south of the Vindhya and in Western Deccan. There is thus no reason to go as far east as the mouths of the Godāvari for the placement of the Āndhras during the age of the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa. The next reference to the peoples of the Deccan is by Pāṇini. According to him, the southernmost Āryan settlements were Kacchaa, Avanti, Kosala, Karūṣa and Kalinga. His reference to Kosala is to the Kosala of the south, better known as Dakṣiṇa-or Mahā-Kosala. It was bounded on the north by Magadha and on the south by Kalinga. Along the Vindhyaḍri it extended up to Burhanpur on the west and to Chhattisgarh on the east. Karūṣa was situated on the back of the Vindhyas. Kalinga corresponded to the Northern Circars.<sup>1</sup> The Northern Circars included the Districts of Ganjam, Vizagapatnam, Godāvari, Kriṣṇā and Guntur<sup>2</sup>. The territory now known as Āndhra-deśa was thus included in Kalinga, and it appears, that the country now known as the Āndhra-deśa was not a separate entity in the age of Pāṇini. If the Śātavāhana kings had belonged to Kalinga, they should have written their inscriptions in their own alphabet; that the Kalingas had an independent alphabet is borne out by the statement in the Lalita-Vistara<sup>3</sup> that the Bodhistava had mastered the alphabet of Kalinga.

<sup>1</sup> Geographical Essays, Vol. I, p. 154.

<sup>2</sup> Divyāvadāna, pp. 21-2.

<sup>3</sup> Prof. Raychaudhuri, Political History of Ancient India, p. 79.

The earliest epigraphic reference to the people of the Mahārāṣṭra is in the rock edicts of Aśoka. He sent his religious ministers for propaganda and philanthropic activities in the land of the Rastikas, Āndhras, Palindas, Petenikas and in the Aparānta. According to the statements in these edicts, the Bhojas, Āndhras, Petenikas and Palindas were, it may be inferred, included within the sphere of influence of the Mauryas; but nothing is said therein about the location of these tribes. In the edicts, the Petenikas have been associated with the Bhojas and the Satiyaputas. The Satiyaputas have been identified by Dr. Bhandarkar with families in Mahārāṣṭra bearing the surname Satpute. This theory has not been very favourably received. Dr. Barnett suggests their identification with the Śātavāhanas themselves. The Rastikas (Rāṣṭrikas) are the majority tribe of Mahārāṣṭra that have given their name to their mother-country. The Petenikas were the residents of the Godāvari valley in the territory around Paithan. Aparānta has been conclusively identified with northern Konkan. The Petenikas are associated with the Rastikas and also with the Bhojas. I am inclined to believe that the Rathis were the residents of the Bhīmā valley, which, in ancient times, was called the Bhīmā-Rathi.<sup>1</sup> The Bhojas are associated with Berars and also with western Mahārāṣṭra. Pargiter associates the Kunti-Bhoja territory with Mahārāṣṭra. Inscriptions referring to the Mahā-Bhojas have so far been found only at Bedsa and Kuda; and those referring to the Mahā-Rathis at Bedsa and Nana-Ghat. It appears that the Rathis began to call themselves Mahā-Rathis after they became more powerful than they were in the age of Aśoka; and that thereafter the new style was adopted by the Bhojas. The major tribes of Mahārāṣṭra have thus been mentioned by the Aśokan edicts and this lends support to the view that on account of this association the Āndhras may definitely be placed in Mahārāṣṭra. The next historical reference to a king of this dynasty is in the Hāthi-gumpha inscription, wherein Khāravela, the king of Kalinga, claims to have sent his army westward, as far as the Kanha-betta, disregarding the power of the Sātakarpi, "the protector of the west," and ravaged the city of Mūśika and forced the Rāṣṭrikas and Bhojas to fall at his feet. Khāravela does not refer to Sātakarpi as an Āndhra, and even according to Gopalehari, this conclusively proves that the earlier Sātavāhanas had no connection with the Āndhra-deśa in the third and second century B. C., though he vitiates his statement by mentioning the Āndhra-deśa as the land of their birth. Even Rudra-dāman, the Mahā-Kṣātrapa, does not refer to the Sātakarpi king as an Āndhra, though he was closely related to this dynasty and claims to have twice defeated the Lord of the Dakṣiṇāpatha. In his Sudarśana Lake inscription he has given a list of his conquests and we can see therefrom that he does not appear to have advanced further south than the Konkan. It appears therefore that till the time of Rudra-dāman the Sātakarpi do not appear to have received the Āndhra label.

<sup>1</sup> Bhandarkar, Early History of the Deccan, p. 6.

<sup>2</sup> Thurston, The Madras Presidency, p. 11.

<sup>3</sup> Lalita-vistara, p. 125-6.

Pliny, in his Natural History describes the Dachinabades (Dakṣiṇāpatha) as extending from Barygaza (Broach) along the coast. Periplus mentions Paithana and Calliena (Kalyāna) as the two principal market towns of the Dakṣiṇāpatha. Pliny refers to the Sātavāhanas as Rex Andrarum and the Ptolemaic Tables speak of Andra Indi. Classical authors thus appear to have been the first to call them Andrae. Megasthenes mentions Āndhras and the Kalingas as separate powers and gives details of their military power. According to Lassen, when Megasthenes gives such particulars, he means to say that they were independent powers. Dr. Thomas accepts this inference with caution, though he says that the inference is undeniably valid as regards the kingdoms south of the Vindhya.<sup>1</sup> It does not appear reasonable to expect that two so powerful kingdoms could have flourished in the narrow region between the mouths of the Krishna and the Godavari.<sup>2</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Vāyu-Purāṇa, 43-103.

A point worthy of note is that the Purāṇas have referred to the Sātavāhanas as belonging to the Āndhra-jāti and not as specifically belonging to the Āndhra-deśa. According to the scheme of the Manu-Saṁhitā regarding the genesis of castes, the Āndhras are the descendants of a Vaideha father and a Karavari mother. A Vaideha is a descendant of a Vaiśya father and a Brāhmaṇī mother. A Karavari is a descendant of a Nisāda father and a Vaidehi mother. A Nisāda is a descendant of a Brāhmaṇa father and a Śūdra mother. The Nisādas lived by killing fish. The Karavaras lived by working in leather. The Vaidehas were "touchables" and their profession was the service of women. The Āndhras dwelt outside the villages and their profession was the killing of wild animals.<sup>3</sup> The Manu-Saṁhitā classification may not be accepted as reasonable or probable; and all that it leads to is only this, that at the time of this classification the Āndhras ranked very low in the Brāhmanical hierarchy. The traditional account of the origin of the Sātavāhanas also states that the founder of the family was

<sup>1</sup> Cambridge History of India, Vol. I, p. 473.

<sup>2</sup> According to Megasthenes the king of Kalinga had a guard of 60,000 foot soldiers, 1000 horsemen and 700 elephants; while according to Pliny the Andhra army consisted of 100,000 foot soldiers, 2000 horsemen and 1000 elephants.

<sup>3</sup> Dinesh Chandra Sircar, "The Āndhras and their Position in Brāhmanical Society." I. H. Q. Vol. XVI, No. 3.

26 [Annals, B. O. R. I.]

of an impure origin. He was born of the incest of a Brāhmaṇa virgin with a Nāga prince, while she lived in exile at the house of a potter of Pratiṣṭhāna. Later on, the word Sātavāhana appears to have acquired the meaning Jārāja-Santati.<sup>1</sup>

Dr. Sukthankar's theory of the Sātavāhani-Āhara (in the modern Bellary District) being the original habitat of the Sātavāhanas is untenable, in view of the fact that the records of the earlier kings of the dynasty are not found in that tract. The solitary inscription found here is the record of the last king of the dynasty. It is likely that the territory was named or renamed by the dying dynasty in its last spasms. Many tracts in India were so renamed by the Muslims, expecting that they were laying the foundations of eternity. If only the empire of the Marathas had been nipped in the bud when Rajaram retreated before the Muslim hordes as far south as Jinjee and had rotted in the far south, he would have degenerated into a feudatory chieftain in the land of his exile and would very probably have renamed the territory around Jinjee as Marāṭhāvādā, and that would not have proved the far southern origin of the far famed but short lived Maratha dynasty.

These facts have been given and this resume has been taken in order to appreciate the conclusion that we must look for the early habitat of the Sātavāhanas in the regions around the Karle Bedsa area; or in the Nanaghat-Junnar area; or in the neighbourhood of Nasik; in the regions of their earliest inscriptions. Karle seems to be the southernmost limit of Nahapāna's dominions. In this region, his power is commemorated in one inscription only.<sup>2</sup> It is likely that the Kṣaharāta power received its first set back in this region. In those days Junnar was an important place. Though there are about 150 caves and about 32 inscriptions in the caves around Junnar, there is only one inscription connected with Kṣaharāta power.<sup>3</sup> In the Nanaghat caves there are no Kṣaharāta inscriptions. These caves however contain one of the most important of the earlier Sātavāhana inscriptions and more important still, their statues<sup>1</sup>, in the Hall of Ancestors (pratimā-grha). The most important Kṣaharāta and Sātavāhana inscriptions appear in the caves at Nasik. It seems that it was in the Nasik region that the final battle was fought between the Kṣaharātas and the Sātavāhanas, in which the former were extirpated. The Kṣaharātas thus appear to have been pressed up from Karle to Nasik, via Junnar. That they were exterminated by the Āndhra-Sātavāhanas is common ground. We must therefore look for the original habitat of the Sātavāhanas around Karle.

<sup>1</sup> Pandit Baldeo Prasad Misra, Nepālaka Itihāsa (Hindi), p. 78.

<sup>2</sup> Inscription No. 13. Bombay Gazetteer, Vol. XVIII, Part 3, Page 461.

<sup>3</sup> Inscription No. 3. Ibid., Page 167.

I believe that the Āndhras were so called, not because they belonged to the territory now known as the Āndhra-dēśa, but because they belonged to the Āndhra Valley in the Poona District and that they were Mahārāṣṭriyas.

The Āndhra river has been described in the Gazetteer<sup>2</sup> as follows:— "The Āndhra rises in the Sahyādris near the Sālvē pass, about 2250 feet above the sea. Its source is at the head of a broad valley which runs west to the crest of a scarp whose base is in the Konkan. It flows south-east along a bed 100 to 150 feet below the cultivated land, through one of the openest valleys in the District, for 18 miles and joins the Indrayāni on its north bank near the village of Rajapuri." Rajapuri is at a distance of about 8 miles from Karle and is about 3 miles to the north of Wadgaon and Talegaon Dabhada. The valley is included in the Maval Taluka of the Poona District. The Āndhra Valley was one of the Mavals of Mahārāṣṭra and was called the Andar Maval; together with the Nane Maval and Pavan Maval, the Andar Maval used to be controlled from Lohagad fort,<sup>3</sup> in the Kārle-Bhājā region. It is well known that the best and hardiest soldiers of Mahārāṣṭra used to be recruited from the Mavals. Andar is obviously a corruption of Āndhra.

People deriving their tribal names from the valleys of the rivers in which they resided are many. The Daśārṇas lived in the valley of the Daśārṇa river; the Śātadrus in the valley of the

<sup>1</sup> Ibid., p. 230 f.

<sup>2</sup> Bombay Gazetteer, Vol. XVIII, Part I, Page 8.

<sup>3</sup> Rajwade, Marāṭhyānchya Itihāsa (Marathi), Vol. IV, p. 78 f.

Sātradu, modern Sutlej. The Rathis belonged to the valley of the Bhīma-Rathi. The Sārasvatas lived in the valley of the Sarasvatī. The Hindus were so called by the Persians because they resided in the valley of the Indus; the Behistan inscription refers to the river Indus as the river Hindu (= Sendhu). Instances can be multiplied by a reference to the map of ancient India.

The connection between the Āndhras and the Āndhra Valley does not stop here. There is a village named Vadale, near Chakan in the Khed Taluka of the Poona District. It is at a distance of about 10 miles from Rajapuri and very near the Āndhra Valley. Here dwells a family of Marathas who bear the surname of Āndhre, (Andræ of the classical authors?). Very near this village, at Bhamchandra Mahadeo are very old Buddhist caves.<sup>1</sup> Members of this family are found in the Poona District also. I am inclined to connect them with the imperial family of the Āndhras. I believe that the Sātavāhanas were called Āndhras, because they belonged to the Āndhra Valley. If the reading-Mahārathi Ganaka Yiro-in the Nana-Ghat Devakula is correct and if its meaning-Champion and Saviour of the Marathas<sup>2</sup> is correct, the placing of this statue in the Hall of the Ancestors of the Sātavāhanas, would be further proof of the Maratha origin of the dynasty.

It appears that the Āndhras organised a new nation by the unification of the Āndhras, the Mahā-rathis, the Mahā-Bhojas, the Petenikas, the Pulindas, the Pundras, the Śabarās, the Mūtibas the Aparāntas and other tribes. It appears to me that it was on account of this new organisation that Mahārāṣṭra came to be called Nava-Rāṣṭra<sup>3</sup> and that therefore, the Sātavāhanas began to call themselves Nava-Nara-Svāmis.<sup>4</sup> Dr. Bhagavanlal Indraji has translated Nava-Nara-Svāmi in Inscription No. 3 in the

<sup>1</sup> Bombay Gazetteer, Vol. XVIII, Part 3, p. 440.

<sup>2</sup> Bombay Gazetteer, Vol. XVIII, Part 3, Page, 221.

<sup>3</sup> The Matsya Purāṇa uses the word Nava-Rāṣṭra to indicate Mahārāṣṭra (114-47). Also see A. P. Karmarkar, "Boundaries of Ancient Mahārāṣṭra and Karmātaka". J. H. Q., Vol. XIV, p. 779.

<sup>4</sup> Inscription No. 3 in the Pūndu Lenā Caves, p. 15.

Pāṇḍu Lenā Caves as "the new lord." A more appropriate translation would be "the Lord of the New Nation, Mahārāṣṭra."

It would thus be clear that the foundation of Sātavāhana power by the Āndhras was not the case of fortune hunters carving out a kingdom for themselves by conquests in a foreign land but that of the leaders of a revolutionary movement overthrowing and extirpating foreign domination. The foreign Keśharātas tried to obtain acquiescence to their rule in Mahārāṣṭra by large donations and by construction and maintenance of charitable and public works. Under Sātavāhana leadership the people saw the futility of it all and organised themselves into a new and powerful nation. That is why the Sātavāhanas enjoyed such high repute amongst the kings of ancient India. The esteem in which they are held in Mahārāṣṭra is unique, and this is so, not because Sīri Sātakaṇi was an Āndhra who conquered Mahārāṣṭra but because he was a true leader of the independence loving peoples of Mahārāṣṭra, who under his rule enjoyed for the first time, the fruits of freedom and prosperity. Rāya Simuka and Sīri Sātakaṇi may well be compared with Raja Shahājī and Chhatrapati Shivājī.

The Āndhras appear to have moved along the Āndhra valley into the plains and towards the Karle-Bedsa area; and then crossed the Sahyadris into the Konkan and Aparānta and moved to Kanheri, which appears to have developed as a religious centre under Kṛṣṇa, the second king of the dynasty; under Sīri Sātakaṇi they seem to have reached Junnar through the Nana-Ghat and there-after swooped upon Nasik, and became the masters of the Dakṣiṇāpatha.

THE MEANING OF 'ĀCĀRYAH'

BY

P. V. KANE

In several works inspired by a study of the Artha-śāstra of Kauṭilya the views put forward as those of the ācāryas are supposed to have been held by the teacher of Kauṭilya himself. For instance, Prof. K. V. Rangaswami Aiyangar in his recent work 'Rajadharma' states on p. 91 'Kauṭilya cites the views of his teacher to whom he shows reverence in Hindu style by referring to him not by name, but by the word ācārya in the honorific plural as many as thirty-nine times' and each citation is for the purpose of dissenting from the teacher's views.' It is proposed in this article to examine the correctness of his opinion by reference to the usage of writers and works earlier and later than Kauṭilya.

The word 'ācārya' is derived by the Āpastambadharmasūtra<sup>1</sup> (I. 1. 1. 13 and 15) as 'ācārya is he from whom he (the pupil) gathers the (knowledge) of religious duties; he (as if) gives birth to him (the pupil) through (the transmission of) Vedic learning'. Gautama (Dharmasūtra I. 10-11) states 'He is the ācārya who performs the upanyana of a pupil and teaches him the Veda'. Manu II. 140, Vasiṣṭha II. 4 and III. 21, define ācārya in similar terms. Therefore the first meaning of the word ācārya is 'teacher of the Veda' (in the case of a pupil).

Another sense arose from this meaning of the word. The founder of a Śāstra or any great teacher of any Śāstra is called ācārya by subsequent writers. For example, Patañjali<sup>2</sup> when dealing with the two vārtikas 'bhave' and 'proktādayaśca taddhitāḥ' states that the ācārya (meaning Pāṇini) first composed the sūtra 'tatra bhavaḥ' (IV. 3. 53) and then composed the sūtra 'tena proktam' (IV. 3. 101) and that ācāryas after first composing individual sūtras do not give them up. On the vārtika 'siddhe śabdārtha-sambandhe', Patañjali<sup>1</sup> speaks of the vārtikakāra as 'ācārya'. There are numerous places in the Mahābhāṣya where the epithet 'ācārya' is applied to Pāṇini or to the Vārtikakāra according to the exigencies of the discussion (e. g. vol. I. p. 481, vol. II. p. 163, II. 349, 359 for its application to the Vārtikakāra). Neither Pāṇini nor Kātyāyana is deemed by any one to be the teacher of Patañjali.

<sup>1</sup> Kauṭilya cites the 'ācāryas' at least 54 times and not 39 times only.

<sup>2</sup> यस्माद्वर्तमानाचिनोति स आचार्यः । स हि विद्यासं जनयति । आप. व. I. 1. 1. 13 and 15 ; नद्यस्मात्स आचार्यः । वेदावृत्तनाथ । गो. I. 10-11.

<sup>3</sup> बुरस्तादिदमाचार्येण हर्षं भवे तद्वित इति तत्पठितम् । तत्र उच्यते कालमिदं वृत्तं प्रोक्तादयश्च तद्विता इति तदपि पठितम् । न वेदानामाचार्याः स्वराणि कृत्वा निवर्तयन्ति । महाभाष्य (ed. by Kielhorn vol. I, p. 12.) Similar words occur in several places e. g. vol. III, p. 393.

Śabara in his bhāṣya on Jaimini III. 4. 13 states the view of the ācārya that<sup>2</sup> "the base and the termination together convey the sense of the termination and further that the ācāryas lay down in such sūtras as 'kartari śap' (Pāṇini III. 1. 68) that the termination denotes the agent or the object." Here the word ācārya is applied to Patañjali and the same word (in the plural) is applied to Pāṇini. In the same context a little later on Pāṇini is styled Sūtrakāra and Patañjali simply 'ācārya.'

Some passages from very ancient works where the word 'ācāryāḥ' occurs may now be profitably set out. The Aitareya-Āraṇyaka (III. 2. 6) states<sup>3</sup> that the ācāryas held that 'these Saṃhitās should not be imparted to one who is not a pupil, nor to one who does not stay (with the teacher) for a year, nor to one who may not or will not himself be an expounder.' Here by the word 'ācāryāḥ' Śāyana does not understand the direct teacher of him, whoever he may be, that had the revelation of the Āraṇyaka, but 'great men who are endowed with the qualities of an ācārya.' Similar rules about imparting some esoteric lore occur elsewhere also (without 'ācāryāḥ' being added).

<sup>1</sup> माहुरादिक आचार्यो महतः शास्त्रोचरं ननुलार्थं सिद्धशब्दवाचितः प्रयुज्ते । महाभाष्य vol. I. p. 7

<sup>2</sup> प्रकृतिप्रत्ययौ प्रत्ययार्थं सह झूत इत्याचार्योपदेशात् कर्ता शब्दार्थः कर्म चेत्प्रयगम्यते । कर्तारि शप् कर्मणि यमिति प्रत्ययार्थं कर्तारि कर्म च समाप्तमन्याच्चार्याः । तस्माच्छब्दार्थः कर्ता कर्म चेति । उपपत्तेः । आचार्यवचनासुत्रकावचनाद्वा शब्दार्थो भवति । प्रत्ययादसौ गम्यते । शबरभाष्य on जैमिनि III. 4. 13. The words प्रकृतिप्रत्ययौ ... वृत्तः occur in the Mahābhāṣya on vārtika 3 on Pāṇini III. 1. 67 ( महाभाष्य vol. II. p. 58 ). That Śabara refers to passages of the Mahābhāṣya in several places will be shown in another paper.

<sup>3</sup> ता एताः संहिता नामन्तेवासिने प्रशुयान्नासिंयन्मरवासिने नापवन्त इत्याचार्याः । ऐतरेयारण्यक III. 2. 6 ; compare वृह. उप. VI. 3. 12 एतं नाहुषाय वानन्तेवासिने वा श्रूयात्.

In the Nirukta there is a discussion<sup>1</sup> about Vaiśvānara. 'Then who is Vaiśvānara? The ācāryas say that he is the (fire) in the intermediate regions, since (the vedic sage) praises him on account of his action of sending down rain. The ancient Yājñikas hold that Vaiśvānara is the Sun and Śākapūṇi holds that he is this (terrestrial) fire only.' Yāska does not state his own view, but as Śākapūṇi's opinion is placed last he most probably approved of that view. It is well-known that Yāska names numerous predecessors and also quotes the views of several schools of Vedic exegesis such as the Nairuktas, Naidānas, Vaiyākaraṇas, Āitiḥāsikas. It is very natural to hold that Yāska refers to his predecessors on the subject by the word 'ācāryāḥ.' The two commentators Durga and Maheśvara support this view.

The Hārta Dharmasūtra<sup>2</sup> as quoted by Aparārka (p. 221) states "a man should therefore be pure and should take a proper (requisite) and limited quantity of food. The ācāryas say 'purity of mind results when there is purity in the food taken.' " The words quoted as voicing the view of the ācāryas are found in the Chāndogya-upanishad VII. 26.2. Therefore it follows that Hārta is quoting the view of the inspired teachers of the Upanishads and it is impossible to hold that he is stating the view of his own teacher only.

In the discussion about āśramas the Gautama-dharmasūtra (III. 36)<sup>3</sup> states 'But the ācāryas prescribe one āśrama only, because the order of householders is explicitly enjoined (in the Vedas).' Haradatta explains the word 'ācāryāḥ' as 'all teachers.' Maskarin also holds that the word 'ācāryāḥ' means 'Some teachers.' The same sūtra occurs in the Baudhāyana Dharmasūtra (II. 6.29). If by 'ācāryāḥ' the writer's own teacher is meant, then we shall have to suppose that the teachers of both Gautama and Baudhāyana held the view mentioned or that both had the same teacher. It is possible that Baudhāyana borrows Gautama's words. Even in that case it is not probable that Baudhāyana would have borrowed that sūtra if in his opinion it embodied merely the view of one single and so far obscure teacher of Gautama. But if in Baudhāyana's opinion 'ācāryāḥ' meant 'some or many predecessors' he may naturally quote the very words of Gautama. In another place Gautama<sup>1</sup> (IV. 18) states the view of ācāryas that the descendants of anuloma marriages 'reach another varṇa owing to the superiority or inferiority (of the male or female in each generation) in the 7th or 5th generation.' Here also Maskarin understands that it is the view of some ācāryas (and not of the teacher of Gautama) that is referred to.

<sup>1</sup> तत्को वैश्वानरो मध्यम इत्याचार्या सर्वं कर्मणा क्षेत्रं स्तौति ... अग्रासावादिभ्य ईति पूर्वं मातृकाः । ... अयमेवाभिर्ब्रह्मण इति शाकल्यः । निरुक्त VII. 22-23.

<sup>2</sup> हर्तितः । ... तस्माच्छुचिर्वायस्यमित्याहारः स्यात् । आहारशब्दो सत्त्वशब्दिरित्याचार्याः । अपरार्क p. 221.

<sup>3</sup> ऐकाग्र्यं त्वाचार्याः प्रत्यक्षनिधानाद्गृहस्थस्य । गौतम III. 35; ऐकाग्र्यं त्वाचार्या अग्रजन-त्वादितरेषाम् । बी. थ. सू. II. 6. 29; वैश्वानरसंज्ञाया इदानीमेकीयमेतन्नाश्रमवाचकं सक्तुकाम आह । ऐका० । गार्हस्थ्यमेवाचार्या इच्छन्ति । मरकटिभाष्य on गौतम. The words अग्रजनत्वा-दितरेषाम् occur in गौतम III. 3.

It is well-known that Pāṇini mentions by name at least ten predecessors viz. Āpīśali, Kāśyapa, Gārgya, Gālava, Cakravarmaṇa, Bhāradvāja, Śākaṭāyana, Śākalya, Senaka, Sphoṭāyana. He also refers to eastern and northern grammarians and in two places to 'ācāryas' (VII. 3. 49, VIII. 4. 52). It is often said by the commentators<sup>2</sup> of Pāṇini that the individual authors are named only to show respect (pūjārtham) and not for the purpose of showing dissent from their views. No commentator says that by 'ācāryāpām' Pāṇini refers to his own teacher. The sūtra 'dīrghādācāryāpām' (VIII. 4. 52) comes after two sūtras expressly mentioning Śākaṭāyana and Śākalya. Therefore it is reasonable to suppose that by the word 'ācāryāpām' Pāṇini refers to some teachers other than the two expressly named. The Kāśikā comments 'dīrghād-uttarasya ācāryāpām matena na dvitvam bhavati.' It does not say that the word is employed in the plural to show respect and its way of commenting shows that the sūtra refers to the view of some ācāryas. On 'dīrghādācāryāpām' the Nyāsa states that the word 'ācāryāpām' is mentioned 'pūjārtham.' Granting that it is so, it does not follow that it is the teacher of Pāṇini that is referred to. If by the word 'ācāryāpām' Pāṇini refers to his teacher and that too 'pūjārtham,' there is no adequate reason why the teacher should be referred to only twice among thousands of sūtras, particularly when some predecessors like Śākalya (I. 1. 1. 16, VI. 1. 127, VIII. 3. 19, VIII. 4. 51) and Śakatyāna (III. 4. 111, VIII. 3. 18, VIII. 4. 50) are named three or four times. Therefore it must be held that Pāpini refers to his predecessors generally by the word 'ācāryāṇām.'

<sup>1</sup> वर्णान्तरगमनमुत्कर्षापकर्षार्थं सप्तमे पञ्चमे वाचायाः । गौतम IV. 18 ; पञ्चमेनेव युगपरिवर्तनेन वर्णान्तरगमनं भवतीति केचिद्व्याख्यां वर्णयन्ति । मत्स्यपुराणम् । For detailed explanation, vide History of Dharmasāstra Vol. II, part I, pp. 62-64.

<sup>2</sup> Even Patañjali on Pāṇini I. 2. 25 (द्विगुणिकृतोः काश्चपस्य) states that Kāśyapa is mentioned for showing respect 'काश्चपस्यार्थं किमर्थम् । काश्चपस्यार्थं पूजार्थम् । इत्येव हि वर्तते ।' महाभाष्य vol. I, p. 201.

The Śāntiparva (59) describes how Brahmā composed a vast work on the four puruṣārthas and states that the ācāryas speak of four vices arising from kāma viz., hunting, gambling, drinking wine and women, which were proclaimed by Brahmā in his work.<sup>1</sup> Here it is impossible to hold that ācāryāḥ refers to the teacher of the author of the Mahābhārata. Manu (VII. 50) speaks of the same four vices.

The Kāmasūtra of Vātsyāyana is a work that, though some centuries later than the Kauṭīliya, is quite similar in style, method and outlook to the Kauṭīliya. Vātsyāyana informs us that several ācāryas like Cārāyana, Suvarṇanābha, Gonardiya wrote on individual topics of the Kāmasāstra, that the latter as a complete śāstra had become well-nigh lost, that he put into a small compass all the topics dealt with in works on distinct topics like those of Dattaka and in the comprehensive work of Bābhavya and composed the Kāmasūtra.<sup>2</sup> It is important to note that he refers to eight predecessors (mentioned in I. 1. 10-17) as ācāryas (I. 1. 18) and names no teacher from whom he learnt the Kāmasāstra. The Kāmasūtra several times states the views of ācāryas and dissents from them. For example, the view of ācāryas was that as sexual desire was observed even in lower animals and as it is a constant tendency, no useful purpose is served by propounding a śāstra dealing with sexual desire. Vātsyāyana dissents from this view.<sup>3</sup> Here, as the com. Jaya-

<sup>1</sup> श्रुतवाक्येनैवार्थं सिद्धं नान्यथा ।

कामजान्नाहुराचार्याः प्रोक्तानीह स्वयम्भुवा ॥ शांतिपर्व 59. 60

vide also प्रागेषोक्तसु दोषेयमाचार्यैर्नृसेविनाम् । शांतिः 82. 23

<sup>2</sup> एवं बहुभिराचार्यैस्तच्छास्त्रं खण्डशः प्रणीतमुत्सन्नकल्पमभूत् । तत्र दत्तकादिभिः प्रणीतानां शास्त्रावधानामेकदेशेनात्, महद्भिर्न च शास्त्रवीर्यस्य दुर्ध्वेयत्वात् संक्षिप्य सर्वमर्थमलयेन ग्रन्थेन कामसूत्रमिदं प्रणीतम् । कामसूत्र I. 1. 18-19 (ed. in Kashi S. Series).

<sup>3</sup> तिर्यग्योनिष्वपि तु स्वयं प्रवृत्तत्वात्कामस्य निवृत्तत्वाच्च न शास्त्रेण कृत्यमस्तीत्याचार्याः । ... सा चोपाययतिपत्तिः कामसूत्रादिति वास्तव्यम् । कामसूत्र I. 2. 21 and 23.

maṅgalā rightly explains, the word 'ācāryaḥ' refers to great teachers on dharma, artha and mokṣa. It is impossible to hold that 'ācāryaḥ' here at least contains a reference to Vātsyāyana's own teacher on Kāmasāstra, who, if one really existed, could not have told his disciple that the śāstra the latter was going to study was purposeless. Another view of the ācāryas<sup>1</sup> viz., that as women have no adhikāra nor ability (or opportunity) for the study of śāstra, no purpose is served by giving directions in this śāstra that are meant exclusively for women, is controverted by Vātsyāyana. Here also ācāryaḥ can hardly stand for his own teacher. In Kāmasūtra II. 1. 70 he employs the word 'ācāryaḥ' to convey the view of all writers on Erotica.<sup>2</sup>

Another example may be cited from a much later but famous writer. Varāha-mihira (6th century A. D.) tells us, in the last chapter of his Brhat-jātaka, that he learnt astrology from his father (verse 9), that he received knowledge from the Sun, the sages (like Vasiṣṭha) and his father and then does obeisance to former expounders (verse 10). In his Brhatsamhitā (105. 6) he has the same verse as Brhat-jātaka 28. 10 and asserts that in composing his śāstra he has not discarded the works of former ācāryas. In the Brhatsamhitā (chap. V) Varāhamihira refutes the view of those who hold that Rāhu is the cause of eclipses, states in a concise manner the real cause of solar and lunar eclipses (V. 8) and remarks that the ācāryas that had a divine perception thus declared the real cause of eclipses and that śāstra states the real truth to be that Rāhu is not the cause of eclipses.<sup>3</sup> We find from the Āryabhaṭṭya (Golapāda 37), the Sūrya-siddhānta IV. 6 and other works more ancient than Varāhamihira that they give the same explanation of eclipses as Varāha does. The words 'śāstra-sadbhāva' and 'divyadṛggbhīr-ācāryaiḥ' cannot refer to his teacher of Jyotiṣa who was his father Āditya-dāsa and in whose name no śāstra has come down to us and who has never been mentioned by any known commentator as an author.

<sup>1</sup> येषां शास्त्रप्रवृत्तयामावाप्त्यर्थकमिह शास्त्रे श्रीशास्त्रमन्त्रिणाचार्याः । प्रयोगप्रवृत्तयामावाप्तिं प्रयोगस्तु न शास्त्रप्रवृत्तयामिह वाच्यमयम् । कामसूत्र I. 3. 4-5.

<sup>2</sup> प्राप्नुवन्माह ताः श्रीनिमित्तिनाचार्या अवस्थिताः ॥ कामसूत्र II. 1. 70 : 'सर्वेणामेतेषां मतमन्यमिवास्तिवात् ।' जयमङ्गल

<sup>3</sup> एषमपरागकारणमुक्तमिदं दिव्यदृग्भिराचार्यैः । राहुकारणमस्मिन्नित्युक्ताः शास्त्रसङ्ग्रहाः ।

बृहत्संहिता V. 13

who had married the woman with Vedic mantras and that according to Uśanas it belongs to both if it is produced on the wife of another with the mutual agreement of the husband and the person appointed.<sup>1</sup> We know from the Kauṭīliya that among the schools on Politics there were two viz. the Bārhaspatya and the Auśanasa. Śāṅkha-Likhita probably refer to the works of Bṛhaspati and Uśanas in the above passage. The very fact that Kauṭīliya employs the word 'apare' with regard to the 2nd view leads irresistibly to the conclusion that in 'ācāryāḥ' he refers to the view of 'eke' and not to that of his teacher. If it is once accepted that in the above two passages 'ācāryāḥ' does not refer to the teacher of Kauṭīliya, then it will have to be presumed, until the contrary is proved, that Kauṭīliya must have followed a uniform practice and in all other places he employs the word in the sense of 'some teachers.' The other numerous places where the views of ācāryas are cited and controverted cannot be discussed here for limitations of space. There is a further argument. It is somewhat difficult to understand why, if Kauṭīliya employs the plural 'ācāryāḥ' to show veneration for his teacher, he should have so many times, so vehemently and emphatically dissented from that honoured teacher, while he expresses dissent from seven predecessors only once and from others, only a few times. Later writers whenever they have to differ from the views of their father or teacher use very mild and halting expressions e. g. vide Nilakanṭha in his Śrāddha-mayūkha (quoted in my Introduction to the text of the Vyavahāra-mayūkha p. XXXVII. n. 1.).<sup>2</sup>

The foregoing discussion, it is hoped, establishes that 'ācāryāḥ' in Kauṭīliya should not be taken as referring to the author's teacher, but to previous great writers, since the usage of ancient writers and the traditional interpretation of such eminent commentators, as Durga, Haradatta, Maskarin, Śāyana and others, is quite clear on the point.

<sup>1</sup> नियते क्षेत्रिणामपत्यामीनि वेदवाद्: ... । शङ्खल्लिखितौ quoted in विवादरत्नाकर p. 581; 'मन्त्रसंकाकटुपत्तापत्त्याङ्गिरसो भीमिसेनिकबोरुमते तद्विज्ञं पकीरिते तद् द्विषा शङ्खमितुशनाः । शङ्खल्लिखितौ quoted in विवादरत्नाकर p. 537.

<sup>2</sup> अत्र कुलद्वयेषु चोच्छिदे लोभिः कानां नृपक्रिया इति वाक्ये लक्ष्मिदुर्णं भार्यावरमिपामिष्य मातुलाग्रमापे आमुरादिविवाहोहा क्रियाकारिणीति तात्पर्येणः । प्रमाणं तत्र न ज्ञाते ।

SOME NUDE GODS IN HINDU PANTHEON

( Their Proto-Indian origin and Development )

BY

A. P. KARMARKAR

The problem of the nude Gods in Hindu pantheon is at once of immense and absorbing interest. The recent discoveries made at the various sites of Mohenjo Daro, Chanhü Daro, and Harappa, have really opened a new avenue of thought in the history of ancient Indian art and architecture. Among other equally important finds, especially, the nude representation, of the various gods and goddesses, either carved on the soap-stone or inscribed on the seals, are of great interest. It should be noted in this connection, that, immediately after this period onwards, down to this day, we do not find the existence of the representations of nude gods on such a large scale. Perhaps, the Aryans, in their act of assimilating these gods into their own pantheon, seem to have added their own refinements, and thus dressed them after their own fashion.

For the present we find that the various figures of Lakulīśa, or those of Śiva in Bengal and Orīssa, those of Bāla Kṛṣṇa in the various parts of India, or those of Madanakais ( Rati ) in the Chennakeśava Temple at Belur, or those of Yakṣis, all these are represented in a nude posture. It is proposed to deal here with the question of the origin of these nude representations, and if possible to find out whether we are in a position to link them with their nude brethren of the proto-Indian times.

I. Śiva

In his recent work "Some Aspects of Ancient Indian Culture," Dr. D. R. Bhandarkar has partly dealt with this problem. In the Province of Bengal, Bihar and Orissa, the tradition of representing Śiva in a nude form is to be found ' whatever the variety may be, whether it is Naṭarāja, Kalyāṇa-sundara, Pārvatī-Pariṇaya or Ardha-nārīśvara. ' In fact in the images of Śiva at Paharpur in Bengal, or of Mahēśvara in the representation of Umā-Mahēśvara at Chauduar in Orissa, the ūrdhva-līṅga characteristic is prominent.<sup>1</sup> Further as Dr. D. R. Bhandarkar rightly observes, the Gudimallam icon of Lakulīśa in the South, or any image of Lakulīśa in other parts of India, is always represented in the above fashion.

In our opinion, the idea of the representation of the various forms of Śiva in an ūrdhva-līṅga posture was not at all new to the Indian pantheon in the post-Mohenjo Daro period, and it was of common vogue even long before the advent of the Aryans in India. The various images of Āp, the proto-type of Śiva, obtaining in the so-called Indus Valley sites are sufficient illustrations to elucidate the point.

Śiva in the Proto-Indian Period

The most interesting representation of the proto-type of Śiva or Āp, inscribed on some of the seals of Mohenjo Daro and Harappa is that of the three-faced nude figure, which is described by Marshall as the Paśupati of Mohenjo Daro.<sup>2</sup> As it has been described by Father Heras: 'the god here is seated in a low throne and is surrounded by animals, a buffalo, a rhinoceros, an elephant, tiger, and an ibex. This image is represented in a male form, completely nude in a prominently ūrdhva-līṅga posture. His legs are so situated as to have the soles of the feet touching each other. Round his waist there is a zone or ribbon. Hanging from his neck he wears a huge necklace that takes a triangular shape with the point below. Eleven armlets are round his arms; three of them in the wrist, in the elbow and near the shoulder are larger than the rest. His hands rest upon the knees. His face looks emaciated as it befits a Yogi. The front nose is prominent.'<sup>3</sup>

Recently Dr. D. R. Bhandarkar<sup>4</sup> and Prof. Nilakanta<sup>5</sup> Sastri contended that the image could be that of Lakulīśa. However, we

<sup>1</sup> A. Ghosh, J. C., Vol. II, p. 766, n. 3.

<sup>2</sup> D. R. Bhandarkar, Some Aspects of Ancient Indian Culture, p. 45ff.

<sup>3</sup> Marshall, M. D., and the Indus Civilization I, 50.

<sup>4</sup> Heras, Plastic Representation of God amongst the Proto-Indians, Sardesai Com. Volume, pp. 223-4.

<sup>5</sup> D. R. Bhandarkar, op. cit., p. 43.

<sup>6</sup> Nilakanta Sastri, The Cultural Heritage of India, Vol. II, p. 22, n. 2.

shall not go into the *pro*s and *con*s of the problem as it does not at all affect our main treatment, namely, regarding the nude representation of Gods.

There is another representation of the same God inscribed on one of the seals, wherein he is represented in the same way, though no stool or throne is shown under him. He is nude, but wears the waist-ribbon. He is given a prominent pot-belly. His chest is bare, but arms are also covered with bangles. A trident of a fanciful shape appears above his head.<sup>1</sup>

Another interesting representation is that of  $\bar{A}p^2$  ( $\dot{S}iva$ ), which as Father Heras rightly observes, "is wrongly designated by Marshall as 'a female spirit of the tree'. But the figure does not possess any breasts. And as regards the sign of the male sex it may be said, that it is not traceable mostly on account of the fact that the figure is very small and roughly portrayed."<sup>3</sup>

Further, one of the statues is described by Sir John Marshall as a proto-type of the youthful dancing  $\dot{S}iva$ .<sup>4</sup> As he rightly observes it, "the figure was ithiophallic since the Membrum virile was made in a separate piece." The twisted representation of the torso and the lifted position of the left leg, as also the head and hands were movable as the holes in the arm and the neck show.<sup>5</sup>

There are also other representations of this nude God. One of the figures is surrounded by the branches and leaves of the Pippal tree;<sup>6</sup> and another is represented with the Pippal tree forming an arch over the head of the God.<sup>7</sup> Another figure has two devotees seated in a kneeling posture by either side of  $\bar{A}p$  and they are shown to be protected by the Nāgas.<sup>8</sup>

Traces in Vedic and post-Vedic Literature

The fact that all the portraits of  $\bar{A}p$ - $\dot{S}iva$  were represented in an ithiophallic fashion in the proto-Indian times becomes vivid

<sup>1</sup> Heras, op. cit., p. 227; cf. also Photo. M. D., 1930-31, No. 7997.

<sup>2</sup> Marshall, op. cit., III, M. D.

<sup>3</sup> Heras, op. cit., p. 233.

<sup>4</sup> Ibid., p. 233.

<sup>5</sup> Ibid., pp. 232-33.

<sup>6</sup> Photo. M. D., 1931-32, Bd. 3089.

<sup>7</sup> Marshall, op. cit., I, pl. 12, No. 12.

<sup>8</sup> Photo. M. D., 1929-30, No. 7901, cf. also, Heras, op. cit., p. 227.

and clear from what is contained in the Vedic literature and the traditions depicted in the Purāṇas and the Epics. The earliest reference made to Śiva in the Rg-veda is through the word Śiśna-deva.<sup>1</sup> The word Śiśna-deva has been variously interpreted by Sayana and other scholars. But, as we have argued it elsewhere, the word could also possibly mean 'a nude God' (the compound being solved as Śiśnayutaḥ devaḥ.<sup>2</sup> Moreover the learned scholarship at the command of the Vedic bards could not have possibly allowed them to use the word in a round-about fashion as meaning 'those (worshippers) who had the phallus as their God.' If at all they wanted to convey the sense of 'worshippers' they would have done so merely by using another word instead. Further, the word Śiśna itself seems to have been derived from the Dravidian word Śunni, which also strongly corroborates our statement from another point of view.

That all the images of Rudra were represented in a nude fashion becomes evident from the fact that he is always referred to as nude e.g. nagna, ūrdhva-lūṅga,<sup>3</sup> in both the epics and the Purāṇas. The Brahmandā and some other Purāṇas make the matter still more clear, whilst describing the progeny of Rudra. The version of the Brahmandā Purāṇa is as follows:<sup>4</sup>

Brahmā is said to have asked Rudra to procreate. Thereupon Rudra did it conjointly with Sati. The description of his progeny is given as follows:

(निर्गमे) नाभिकाजं च हीनास्तान्मानसानात्मना समान् ॥
 सहस्रं च सहस्राणाममृजत्कृत्स्निवाससः ॥ ६९ ॥
 तुल्यानेवात्मना सर्वांस्वरूपतेजोबलधृतेः ॥
 पिङ्गलान्तनिषङ्गांश्च कपर्दी नीललोहितान् ॥
 विशिखान्हीनकेशांश्च दृष्टिर्द्वान्स्तान्कपालिनः ॥
 महारूपान्विरूपांश्च विश्वरूपांश्च रूपिणः ॥ ७१ ॥
 रश्मिनो वर्मिणश्चैव धन्विनोऽथ वरूथिनः ॥
 सहस्रशतबाहुंश्च दिव्यभीमान्तरिक्षगान् ॥ ७२ ॥

<sup>1</sup> Rgveda, VII, 21.5; X, 99, 3.

<sup>2</sup> Karmarkar, Fresh and Further Light on the Mohenjo Daro Riddle, Annals of the Bhandarkar O. R. Institute, Vol. XXI, pp. 115ff.

<sup>3</sup> Mahabharata, XIII, 17, 46.

<sup>4</sup> Brahmandā P. Prathama Pāda, Adh. 9.

28 [Annals, B. O. R. I.]

आतमेद्रूपकापांश्च शितिकण्ठोग्रसन्धुकान् ॥
 मानिषकृतनुत्रांश्च धन्विनो ह्यसिचर्मिणः ॥ ७४ ॥
 नीलग्रीवान्तहस्ताक्षान् सर्वाश्चैव क्षमाचरान् ॥
 अदृश्यान्तर्बभूवतां महायोगान्महीजसः ॥ ७५ ॥

But Brahmā wanted Rudra to create beings which were subject to death. Therefore he asked Rudra to do the same accordingly. But Rudra refused to do so. It is said, that, thence-forward Rudra did not create beings and stood in an ūrdhva-līṅga posture. The passage goes on :

ऊर्ध्वरेताः स्थितः स्थाणुर्यावदाभूतसंप्लवम् ॥ ८८ ॥
 यस्मात्प्रोक्तं स्थितोऽस्मीति तस्मात्स्थाणुर्दुपैः स्मृतः ॥ ८९ ॥

It should, however, be noted in this connection, that the derivation of the word Sthāṇu (as a name of Śiva) in the above passage exactly denotes that the nude images of Śiva were a matter of common occurrence in those days.

Thus all the earlier records and traditions of the country convincingly prove that the earlier representations of Śiva were in a nude posture. The reference made by Patañjali to the images of Śiva, Skanda and Viśākha,<sup>1</sup> though not a conclusive evidence of their nudity are of immense importance mainly from the point of view, that they must have been the only images in the field then.

Further, the recently discovered copper images at Khajajae (Sumer) indicate how the idea of the nude representation of An-Śiva also travelled there.<sup>2</sup>

Bīlakṛṣṇa

The next contribution of the proto-Indians to the school of sculpture was that of the Ābhīras who were the propagators of the cult of the cowherd boy Kṛṣṇa. Up-till-now the origin of the Ābhīras was being traced by a batch of scholars to some foreign land. But the various traditions mentioned in the Purāṇas and other allied literature prove that they formed one of the proto-Dravidian tribes.

The word Ābhīra is now current in the form of Āhīr or Ahēr (-Gavalis). The word at once suggests itself of a Dravidian origin. In fact it seems to have been derived from the Dravidian 'Āyir', which means a 'cow-herd.' That the tribe of 'cows' or 'cowherds' existed in ancient India becomes clear from the fact that the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa refers to Vaśāḥ<sup>1</sup>, which word, however, has been wrongly interpreted as being equivalent to Vāta or Vamśa. The word 'Vaśā'<sup>2</sup> in early Vedic literature meant generally a 'cow' though it acquired the sense of 'a barren cow' in later times. We herewith adduce some of the other grounds on which we have based our main conclusion:

<sup>1</sup> Patañjali on Pāṇini, V. 3. 39.

<sup>2</sup> Haras, 'The Plastic Representation of God etc.,' Sardesai Com. Volume, Figs. 3 and 4 opp. p. 224.

1 That the Ābhīras were the same as the Gopas or Ballavas of Mathurā becomes evident from the fact that the Padma Purāṇa relates that Viṣṇu informed the Ābhīras: 'I shall be born amongst you, O Ābhīras, at Mathurā in my eighth birth.'<sup>3</sup> The same Purāṇa mentions that the Ābhīras were great philosophers also.<sup>4</sup>

2 That the origin of Kṛṣṇa, the cowherd king of Mathurā, was non-Aryan becomes evident if we accept the most shrewdly logical argument put forth by Dr. D. R. Bhandarkar in regard to the interpretation of a Rgvedic passage. According to him, the word Kṛṣṇa referred to in the expression Kṛṣṇa-drapsaḥ in the Rgveda, denotes the very same Kṛṣṇa in the later literature. Accordingly, he mentions that, the Rgveda refers to the fight between Indra and Kṛṣṇa thus: 'Kṛṣṇa is said to have arrived with his army to the Amśumatī or Jumnā and encamped himself there. Thereupon Indra addressed himself to the Maruts 'I have seen Kṛṣṇa swiftly moving on the uneven banks of Amśumatī like a cloud touching the water. Heroes, I send ye forth, go and fight the godless legion (adevyāḥ viśaḥ).''<sup>5</sup>

3 That Kṛṣṇa was a hater of the Brahmanic faith becomes evident from a passage in the Harivaṃśa. Therein Kṛṣṇa is described to have said, 'Brāhmanas perform Yajñas of Hymns, peasants Yajñas of plough-share. We are for the Yajña of the mountain. I shall surely cause the worship of cows through force (if need be).''<sup>6</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, VIII, 14.3.

<sup>2</sup> Cf. Vedic Index, Vol. II; under Vaśa.

<sup>3</sup> Padma Purāṇa 5, Śṛṅṅghayāṇa, 17, 19.

<sup>4</sup> Ibid., 17, 1.

<sup>5</sup> Bhandarkar, Some Aspects of Ancient Indian Culture, p. 82; cf. Rgveda, VIII, 85. 13-15.

<sup>6</sup> Ibid.

4 Added to this, the Harivamśa throws a wonderful light on the ancestry of Kṛṣṇa. It describes that Yadu was born of Haryāśva and Madhumatī, who happened to be the daughter of Madhu Raksasa, king of Mathurā. Madhu says that all the surrounding territory (round-about Mathurā) consists mainly of the Abhīras (Abhīra-prāya). Later it is said that all the races of the Andhakas, Vṛṣṇis, etc. belonged to this race of Yadu.<sup>1</sup> If this be so, it is evident that Kṛṣṇa belonged to a race which was mostly the race of the Abhīras.

5 Further, the Mahābhārata describes that the Abhīras formed one of the seven republics (Samśaptaka gaṇas), and were the friends of the Matsyas, who were a pre-Vedic tribe.<sup>2</sup>

Once the supposition is held as correct, that the Abhīras were of an indigenous origin and that they were not Āryans, then the whole problem becomes of an easy understanding why the story of Gopāla-Kṛṣṇa is adopted in so late a work as the Harivamśa. It should never be misunderstood when we say, that it must have taken such a long time for the Āryans or the Aryanised population to adopt or assimilate these traditions into their own fold—it being never so, that these tales, legends, or the religious traditions themselves did not exist since the pre-Vedic times. Like their contemporaries in northern India, the Yādavas incorporated this monotheistic cult of the Abhīras into their pantheon. Evidently enough, what is presented before us in the form of the Gītā is but a shrewd tale of the Āryan amalgamation of the non-Āryan lore of the Abhīras into their own philosophic teachings.

Some nude images

A few of the reminiscences of the nude image of Bāla-Kṛṣṇa may be noted in this connection. The Madras Museum possesses two images of the young boy e.g. Navanīta-nṛīta-mūrti.<sup>3</sup> There are again others e.g. the Vaṭapatra-śāyī Kṛṣṇa, an ivory image from Trivendrum; or the images of Bāla-Kṛṣṇa, holding a lump of butter in one of his hands, and with the help of the other seated in a kneeling posture.<sup>4</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Śrī Kṛṣṇa, 17.

<sup>2</sup> Mahābhārata, Sabhaparva, Adh. 32, 10.

<sup>3</sup> Gopinatha Rao, Elements of Hindu Iconography, I, Pt. I, Pl. facing p. 205.

<sup>4</sup> Ibid, Pl. facing p. 313.

There is one bronze image of Gopāla-Kṛṣṇa in the Museum of the Indian Historical Research Institute, Bombay. It is the only nude image of its kind so far as I have surveyed. It is an exquisitely modelled representation of the cowherd boy, who is here depicted in a standing posture, with an open jacket on his body. He has an axe of the later Pallava style in his left hand and wears a bunch of leaves as his head-dress.

Kāma and Rati

There are a few images of Rati, designated as Madanakais or Madanagombis used as decorations in the Chennakesava temple at Belur.<sup>1</sup> These nude representations of Rati, along with the other characteristics of Rati and Kāma, makes us to connect them with the proto-Indian school of art of the Minas.

It is a well-known fact that the origin and civilisation of the Minas or Matsyas can be traced to the proto-Indian times. The very fact that Sudāsa, one of the heroes of the Rg-veda<sup>2</sup> had to fight with the Matsyas is a direct indication of the existence of this tribe at the advent of the Aryans in India. Elsewhere, we have shown that, part of their dominions could be located in the Harappa site also,<sup>3</sup> wherein part of the discoveries in regard to the so-called Indus Valley civilisation are made. Further the whole of the Puranic evidence brings us to one conclusion, namely, that the Minas possessed a cult of their own.

The Viṣṇudharmottara Purāṇa, while describing the holy places in India, clearly refers to the holy Tirtha of the Fish-God, as being located in the country of the Matsyas. The Fish-God seems to have been identified with Śiva. The Kālikā Purāṇa refers to the Fish-form of God Śiva as having been installed on the Mapikūṭa Mountain in Assam, by Kāma in his second birth.<sup>4</sup> Again the Skānda Purāṇa speaks of Śiva as 'To Mina, the Lord of Mina (or Minas).'<sup>5</sup> In the same Purāṇa a reference is occasionally made to the three eyed fish.

<sup>1</sup> Narasimhachar, Kesava Temple at Belur, Mysore Arch. Series, Pl. XVI.

<sup>2</sup> Rgveda, VII. 18.

<sup>3</sup> Karmarkar, op. cit., pp. 115E.

<sup>4</sup> Kālikā P. Adh. 32, Vs. 50-52.

<sup>5</sup> Skānda P. Māhātmya Kāṇḍa, Adh. 17.

Besides the Pāṇḍyas of Madurā and the Matsyas of Oddadi in the historical times are said to have had the Two Fishes as their Lāñcchana.

Wonderfully enough all these facts corroborate with what has been said by Father Heras in connection with the proto-Dravidian tribe of the Minas—as read from the inscriptions of Mohenjo Daro and other sites.<sup>1</sup>

Kāma: the Fish-bannered God

Thus if the Fish or the Fish-banner possessed a sanctity of their own since the proto-Indian times, then it is just possible that the idea of a fish-bannered God must have arisen in the land of those people who held it as sacred. Kāma is described as fish-bannered (Matsya-dhvaja or Mina-ketana).<sup>2</sup> Moreover, Kāma has a certain connection with Śiva, so far as he was destroyed by Śiva for directing the darts of love against him—only to be revived to life again. The part played by him in the Atharvaveda is too well-known to the student of Vedic literature. Further the story of Pradyumna as having come out from the womb of the fish is also interesting in this connection.

Thus, is it impossible for the proto-Indians, who have shown such a keen sense in the field of aesthetics, to have promoted the cult of the Love-God also?

Fusion into Aryanism

On the advent of the Aryans in India a sudden turn, however, seems to have been given to the cultural traditions of the proto-Indians. But the process of assimilation on the other hand was rather gradual. First of all they kept Āy at a distance, then accepted him in their pantheon and offered him a share in the sacrifice. They seem to have followed the same procedure in the case of other religious and social traditions of the country. But while doing so they went on adding their own innovations to all these. Thus in the case of the nude gods they instituted the system of dress as they did it in the case of the institution of Saṁnyāsa. All the Dravidian Yatis mostly used to remain nude. But when the system was adopted by the Aryans, they introduced dress at least on many occasions which procedure was followed later on by the Great Buddha in the case of his Bhikkus.

<sup>1</sup> Heras, Religion of the Mohenjo Daro People acc. to Inscriptions, Journal of the University of Bombay, Vol. V, Pt. V, pp. 1-29.

<sup>2</sup> Kāma is also designated as Makara-dhvaja—would it do here if we take it that the word Makara is used to denote a big fish?

Besides the few illustrations cited above, we find that the whole field is vast indeed! There are the nude images of females on the ring stones, or of Apsarasas, Yakṣis and others. Moreover the whole of the Jaina iconography may form another fruitful source of information in this connection. However, we hereby leave the problem open both to the archaeologist and the historian for further investigation.

POST-SCRIPT

The recent excavations made at Rair, Jaipur State, have supplied us with very interesting data in this connection. Some of the coins obtaining therein represent the images of three persons, who are all nude and standing (Pls. xxviii, and xxx). Further there are many representations of Śiva and Pārvatī, who are almost always depicted nude (cf. Puri, Excavations at Rair, Department of Archaeology, Jaipur State).

BHŪPĀLAVALLABHA : THE WORK, ITS AUTHOR AND DATE

BY

SADASHIVA L. KATRE

The Bhūpālavallabha (lit. the King's Favourite) is an interesting metrical work of considerable volume on Jyautiṣa especially on its Phala (Astrology) branch as supplemented by Svaraśāstra or the science of omens based on a consideration of the passage of the air through the nostrils. The work has probably not yet<sup>1</sup> been put to print and is still known to scholars mainly through a few Mss thereof deposited in some public and private libraries of the country or through citations therefrom in the works of subsequent authors.

The Manuscripts Library (Prācya-Grantha-Saṅgraha) of the Scindia Oriental Institute, Ujjain, has stocked two copies of this work bearing Accession Nos. 4386<sup>2</sup> and 239<sup>2</sup> respectively. Of these, Accession No. 4386 is an original Ms consisting of 171 folios of straw paper of the size 11 × 4¾ inches with a margin of about an inch left on the four sides of each page of the folios. Each page with the exceptions of the opening and the concluding pages which are mostly blank bears about eight lines on the average, with about 38 letters on each line. The margins note the title of the work and folio Nos. on the second page of each folio and a few corrections and emendations here and there. The script is Devanāgarī, the letters अ, इ, ए, etc. being of the Hindi type. The ink used is dark-black for the main matter and red for sectional headings and colophons, border lines etc. The handwriting is tolerably good but grossly incorrect at several places. There are also a few lacunas in the Ms which is decayed, moth-eaten and torn at some places. Two folios, viz. those bearing the figures 129 and 130, are missing. The scribe's concluding metrical colophon reads as follows:—<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> My information in this respect is derived mainly from the published four volumes of the British Museum Catalogue of Sanskrit, Pali and Prakrit Books which do not go beyond the year 1928.

<sup>2</sup> Catalogue of Oriental Mss., Part II (Ujjain, 1941), p. 47, Serial No. 1060.

<sup>3</sup> Ibid., Part I (Ujjain, 1936), p. 52, Serial No. 1371.

“ विक्रमार्काद्वेते काले भूवत्सुनिभूमिने ।
 मार्गशीर्षे सिते पक्षे नवम्यां शीपती दिने ॥ १ ॥
 स्थाने पिप्पलिकाभिषे नृपवरः श्रीव्याघ्रजिद्राजते
 विद्यादानविदेकरीशुषनिधिः सन्मानदाने विधिः ।
 तस्यायं नृपवल्लभेति प्रथितो ग्रन्थः शुभो लिख्यते
 लच्छीरामद्विजेन सन्मतिपुजा भूदेवशीपुष्टये ॥ २ ॥

श्रीश्रीशिवाय नमः ॥ ॐ नमः सच्चिदानन्दरूपिणे परमशिवाय ॥ श्रीरस्तु ॥ ”

The title-page (Folio 1<sup>a</sup>) as well as the concluding page (Folio 171<sup>b</sup>) reads

“ भूपालवल्लभस्य उत्तमं ॥ महाराजश्रीखगतावतवाघजीकृत्य ॥ पत्र १७१ ”

Thus the Ms was completed on Thursday the ninth day of the bright half of the month of Mārgaśīrṣa in the year 1781 of the Vikrama era, i. e. about December 1724 A. C., by a Brāhmaṇa scribe named Lacchīrāma for his royal patron Vyāghrajit alias Bāghjī Mahārāja who belonged to the Saktavāt<sup>2</sup> line of Sisodia Rajputs and ruled at Pippalika.<sup>3</sup> The Ms is thus about 218 years old.

Accession No. 239 is only a ditto transcript of the above-mentioned original Ms made at Ujjain recently in 1933 when the previous owner was not inclined to part with the latter. The only feature worth mentioning of this transcript is that it also contains the matter <sup>1</sup> of the two missing folios of the original Ms which seems to have been intact at the time of the transcription.

<sup>1</sup> These and the other passages have been quoted here after correcting the obvious errors of the scribe so far as possible. The first half of Verse 2 of the scribe's colophon has been completely struck off and coated with dark-black ink and could be detected and restored with much difficulty.

<sup>2</sup> For the rise and spread of the Saktāvats who originated from a son of Rāṇa Udai Singh of Mewar, vide Tod: Annals and Antiquities of Rajasthan, Vol. I (Madras, 1880), pp. 200ff. Some prominent Saktāvats appear to have migrated during the Mughal and Maratha periods to Malwa where their descendants are residing and enjoying big estates even to this day. Vide Raghubir Singh: Malwa in Transition (Bombay, 1936), p. 50, Brown: Gwalior Today (Bombay, 1940), pp. 224 etc.

<sup>3</sup> I have not yet been able to identify this prince Bāghjī who is possibly not identical with Bāgh Mal who, as agent of the Maharana of Udaipur, was called upon by the Moghul governor of Malwa in 1702 for an explanation regarding the Maharana's alleged connection with Gopal Singh's rebellion. Vide Malwa in Transition, p. 50. Pippalika may be identical with Piplia, a small jagir now held by Khichi Chachha Rajputs, in the Ujjain district of Gwalior State. Vide Gwalior Today, p. 222.

The Bhūpūlavallabha, as already stated above, deals mainly with Phala-jyautiṣa and Svarasāstra. Naturally we find here treated all the relevant topics, e. g. Tithi, Vāra, Nakṣatra, Yoga, Karana, Māsa, Samkrānti, Samvatsara, Varṣamantrin, Saṣyādhi, Rasādhi, etc.; Rāsis, Grahas, Upagrahas, etc.; Muhūrta, Svāra, Omens, etc.; almanac-making, horoscope-reading etc., etc. Yet the predominating feature of the work is that it deals with these and other hosts of topics with special reference to kings, whence the justification of its title. It is not surprising therefore that we find here treated several matters of purely or mainly royal interest. Thus the work, besides dealing from the astrological point of view with the daily routine of a king's career as well as with the daily, periodical or incidental rites that he has to perform, also gives some space to a few items of state politics of by-gone days, e. g., coronation of a king, arms and weapons, equipment of armies, fighting an enemy on battlefield, arrangement of a battlefield, means of victory with or without fighting, mysterious wearing up, killing or eradication of undesirable persons, duels, wrestling, hunting, gambling, water-sports, unearthing of hidden treasures, building of temples, forts and palaces, construction of royal thrones, etc.

In most of these cases the author's treatment is non-secular inasmuch as we are simply told as to how the persons, places, articles etc. concerned are to be equipped and secured mystically or astrologically. It is only in a few places that the author displays slightly his intimacy with the technical side of the topic and in those cases his treatment is of a mixed character.<sup>2</sup> He has incidentally also dealt with a number of allied topics of Dharma, Tantra, medicine etc. in relation to kings and palaces. On the whole, the Bhāṭṭavallabha demonstrates chiefly the abnormal influence exercised by mystic sciences on every day move-

<sup>1</sup> Curiously enough, the missing portion of the original Ms dealt with such topics as Mārāṇa, Mohana, Stambhana, Uccāṭana, Vāśikaraṇa, etc.

<sup>2</sup> Some of these passages, though rendered somewhat obscure on account of the scribe's errors, may be cited here by way of illustration. Thus the treatment of the sword:—

(continued on the next page)

( continued from the previous page ) .

“ पञ्चाशदङ्गुलं श्रेष्ठं पञ्चविंशतिनोऽधमम् । अनयोन्तरे मध्ये सङ्गं पादुर्ध्वपर्ययः ॥ १ ॥
समेऽङ्गुले ऋणश्रेष्ठं त्रिलिङ्गमजाकृतिः । श्रीवृक्षवर्धमानाकजस्वस्तिकायुधकुण्डलेः ॥ २ ॥
दिव्याः क्रव्यादस्रटकदन्धैः कङ्कवृथिकैः । समानालतयो वंशातुगाभ्यामिविस्मृताः ॥ ३ ॥
हस्यं कुण्ठं छिन्नवंशं स्फुटितं विस्वनं जगुः । न दम्भनोऽनुकूलं च न भिन्नां शुभमन्वथा ॥ ४ ॥
कृणिते मरुषं कोशापवर्तनाप्रराजयः । ज्वलिते विजयः कोशान्निर्गते स्वयमाजयः ॥ ५ ॥
तत्कारणं विवृणुयान्मूलं देशं च नो वदेत् । नेष्टेतास्यं यद्येन स्पृशेन्नैवाशुचिर्नरः ॥ ६ ॥
गोजिह्वावंशपत्राङ्गफरवीरदलालयः । सूक्ष्मपद्मशः श्रेष्ठः स्यादतोऽन्यस्त्वशोभनः ॥ ७ ॥
न लेयोऽसौ विनिष्पन्नो निकषेः कारयेत्समम् । मूले छिन्ने प्रभोर्मुसुखिन्नेऽप्ये जननीमृतिः ॥ ८ ॥
यदङ्गं स्पृशति स्पृष्टं खलिनोऽस्ति घनस्तनः । कोशस्वाप्यस्य सङ्करय निर्देश्यः
शास्त्रतो युधेः ॥ ९ ॥ शनौ यत्र प्रदेशोऽस्ति वनः लङ्घ्येति तत्र तु । वनितानां यथा चक्रे
तथा गुह्ये निधं (?) विदुः ॥ १० ॥ फरवीराङ्गेभमदङ्गुलकुम्भमन्त्रकैः । पुनैर्गन्धः शुभो
नेष्टो मेदोगोमूत्रपङ्कवत् ॥ ११ ॥ वत्सामृक्छपाकारोपमः (?) स्याद्वयदुःखदः । त्रियुद्धैर्दुर्य-
वर्णामो वृद्धवारोम्यजयपदः ॥ १२ ॥ रक्तवानाश्चिद्वयः प्राप्तिः शुभातिर्पृतानतः । जलस्य
पानतो वित्तं सिद्धिः स्यादुष्टदुग्धनः ॥ १३ ॥ लपितसमृगाजविदुर्भेस्त लघुनैर्दण्डः । आर्कं
पयो मेघशृङ्गमनीयुतमतः परद ॥ १४ ॥ पारावनाश्चक्रता खल्ले लेपं प्रकरयेत् । तनस्तेलेन
मथिलस्तैलपीतो भवेद्दृढः ॥ १५ ॥ रम्भाक्षारे तक्रयुक्ते पाचितोऽपि दिनोपिते । शिलः सन्धक-
कुण्ठनां स न गच्छति शिलास्वपि ॥ १६ ॥ शखाङ्गुलं पट्टमेतं सतहृत्छेपकोऽधिपः । शख-स्वामीशोर्वरं मृष्युकार्पण्यथा शुभम् ॥ १७ ॥ etc. ” ( Folios 70-71 ) ; of the bow:-
“ ..... यस्यसौ पतितानुरागं वितर्तं शिरस्यक्षितं मस्तकं पादौ रथानुरौ विकं विनमितं
मुष्टी शुभो द्वापपि । पुष्टिलक्ष्यगता न रिक्तमुद्रं पाष्णीं कृत् संस्थितौ नासा सायकबुन्धिवी
यदि भवेत्प्राप्तं तदा सौख्यम् ॥ २ ॥ सुवृत्तः सुदृढो दीर्घः सुभिल्लो गुणहोरकः । रिनन्धः
श्लक्ष्णश्च मुत्तरो गुणस्याष्टौ गुणाः स्मृताः ॥ ३ ॥ ... .. शर्वं वार्शं दारुण्यं तृणराजो-
द्भवं धनुः । मुष्टिः शुक्रो दश नागा वजा भद्रा मूर्धिका ॥ ५ ॥ भ्रमपृष्ठं तथा वक्रं बलि- गोन्ततपर्वकम् । अनिदीर्घास्त्वपर्वणं वर्जयेद्विषमदृशम् ॥ ६ ॥ etc. ” ( Folio 71 ) ; of the elephant:- “ चाकृन्ता विभक्ताङ्गान् न स्पृष्टा नैव वा कृषाः । गात्रे वंशैः समा भद्रा पराङ्गजघना गजाः ॥ १ ॥ खलुःश्वः कंयहस्तं (?) द्विजपादा वृद्धिदाः । हस्तमेण्डा- धरकचा मृगा मिश्रेस्तु निश्चकाः ॥ २ ॥ हस्ताः पञ्चोन्नतो समदैर्घ्येऽष्टौ परिधौ मृगे । द्वाङ्ग-

( continued on the next page )

ments and activities in the Indian palaces of the age. In consonance with the main tone of the work, we find here through and through numerous mystic formulas (mantras) and diagrams (yantras) meant for the use of persons, articles etc. of royal circles in various affairs. The original Ms contains not less than 276 miniature figures, tinged or plain, portraying various Grahas, Rāsīs, etc. or embodying mystic numerals etc. to form the said yantras or depicting the topics of description, e. g. the figure of an equipped warrior in the course of the treatment of martial astrology.

The introductory portion of the work reads as follows:—

(Folio 1st ff)

ॐ श्रीपरमशिवाय नमः ॥

प्रणमामि महादेवं भवानीवल्लभं शिवम् ।

सुरासुरक्षितीरन्मन्त्रीराजितपदाम्बुजम् ॥ १ ॥

यद्गुणानाम्मदनाप्रते हृदि पुमांलोकत्रयासुभ्रुवां

यन्नुस्या विबुधावनीपगुरुणा सार्धं जडः स्पर्धते ।

स्वाराज्यप्रतिभूर्यदीपचरणाम्भोजप्रणामो नृणां

तां निःपापविलासिनीं भगवतीं स्वां नीमि योगेश्वरीम् ॥

आशापूर्ण ! नमस्तुभ्यमाशागजमदाह ।

शिरःसिन्दूरविसरसम्प्राधितनभस्तले ॥ ३ ॥

( continued from the previous page )

वृद्धा भद्रमन्दो सङ्कीर्णो नियतप्रमः ॥ १ ॥ भद्रमन्दमृगादीनां हरिष्यतिस्तता मदाः ।
संकीर्णस्य मदश्चित्रो वर्जयिद्वादिक् तथा ॥ ४ ॥ स्निग्धोन्नतायदशनाः स्थूलास्या लोहिता-
धराः । एकरोनस्यासकूर्मनिभकुम्भोन्नताह्रमयः ॥ ५ ॥ विस्तीर्णनामिश्रवणहनुगुह्यास्थ-भालकाः । वृत्तायतास्त्रिरेखाखण्डकराः सद्रन्ध्रपुष्कराः ॥ ६ ॥ निम्नचापोत्तुङ्गवशाः सज्जला-
म्भोदनिःस्वनः । वृद्धायायतवृत्तांता विशाया नखरैः शुभाः ॥ ७ ॥ द्वीनाधिकनसाङ्गत्वे कुब्जा-
लयाजविषाणकाः । विष्वगलितकक्षा दृष्ट्याण्डा द्वीनपुष्कराः ॥ ८ ॥ मत्कुणाः सण्डदशना
निर्मदा न शुभा गजाः । गजलक्षणनिमुंकां गर्भिणीं करिणीं त्यजेत् ॥ ९ ॥ दक्षिणे दशने
भवे भूपदेशचलक्षयः । वामे सुतपुरोषोऽन्वनायकाह्वयकक्षयः ॥ १० ॥ सौम्ये लग्ने तिथौ
क्षेमं विपरीते विनाशकृत् । ... .. शिक्षितः कल्पितः शूरः शूराकूटः प्रतापवान् ॥ ११ ॥
एक एव गजो हन्ति षट् सहस्राणि बाजिनाम् । etc." (Folios 73-74).

यत्कटाक्षप्रसादेन दरिद्रोऽपि नृपायते ।
 जडोऽपि वाचस्पतितां तं कटाक्षमुनिं नुनः ॥ ४ ॥
 ज्योतिःशास्त्राणि संवीक्ष्य शिष्योक्तानागमानपि ।
 स्वानुभूत्या प्रकुर्वेऽहं शास्त्रं भूपालयल्लभम् ॥ ५ ॥
 गणितं संहिता होरा त्रिष्कन्धं ज्योतिषं विदुः ।
 स्वरशास्त्रं विना ह्योतात्रितयं न विराजते ॥ ६ ॥
 सामाशुपाया दण्डेन पत्नीभराशिनो हयैः ।
 कामार्थमोक्षा धर्मेण न शोभन्ते विना यथा ॥ ७ ॥
 त्रिस्तनी गौर्यथा निन्या त्रिपदं यद्वदासनम् ।
 विप्रहीना यथा वर्णाश्रयः स्कन्धाः स्वरैर्विना ॥ ८ ॥
 सर्वत एवात्मानं गोपायेति श्रुतिः प्राह ।
 तदक्षणं विनैतस्वरशास्त्रं स्यात्कथं मुकरम् ॥ ९ ॥
 प्रजानां पालनं राज्ञां परमो धर्म इष्यते ।
 पराननिर्जित्य कथं स संभवितुमर्हति ॥ १० ॥
 सभाङ्गानां नृपो मूलं सर्वधर्माभिपालकम् ।
 अतः संरक्षिते राज्ञि तत्सर्वं राक्षितं भवेत् ॥ ११ ॥
 भोगान्भोक्तुं पराङ्मतेन समर्थो योऽवितुं महीन् ।
 नैतच्छास्त्रं येन दृष्टं स शक्नोति कथं नृपः ॥ १२ ॥
 न केवलं स्वरं ज्योतिःशास्त्रं शाकुनकौतुकं ।
 मोक्षधर्मार्थकामानां प्रसङ्गेनात्र निर्णयः ॥ १३ ॥
 आज्ञासिद्धमिदं शास्त्रं भवान्ये शम्भुनोदितम् ।
 कलौ बालावबोधस्य प्रकाशोऽयं मया कृतः ॥ १४ ॥
 नैतच्छ्रीराय हिंसाय श्रीमोक्षप्रहताय च ।
 कृतत्राय नृपत्राय वा देयं पारदारिणे ॥ १५ ॥
 यो ददाति द्विजो लोभादुपरोधाद्भयादपि ।
 स याति नरके घोरे शिवाङ्गोति सनातनी ॥ १६ ॥
 गुरुभक्ताय सत्याय सदाचाररताय च ।
 देयं सते वेदविदे सर्वभूतहिताय च ॥ १७ ॥
 यत्किञ्चिदुच्यते पुण्ये शास्त्रेऽस्मिन्नाविचारिकम् ।
 तत्पापमपि नो पापं येन कर्माभिरक्ष्यते ॥ १८ ॥
 आसीन्निःपापवासी द्विजकुलतिलकः सर्वशास्त्रेष्वधीर्षी
 काण (?) श्रीकृष्णदेवः परहितनिरतो वेदवेदाङ्गवेदी ।

तस्मिन्नुः पशुरामः<sup>१</sup> सकलगणितविच्छ्रीकटाक्षस्य शिष्यः

शिष्यैः संप्रार्थ्यमानो नरपतिद्वयितं शास्त्रमेतच्चकार ॥१९॥

Sectional colophons are found at the close of some sections only and they generally read "इति श्रीभूपालवल्लभे सारोद्धारे पशुरामोपदेशे स्वरशास्त्रे.....प्रकरणम्".

The author concludes as follows;—

(Folio 170<sup>b</sup> ff)

ज्योतिषं पृथग्भाषाणि सुनीन्द्रज्योतिषं पृथगपि स्वरशास्त्रम् ।

सर्वसाम्यपि करोतु हि कश्चित्तन्मयात्र विहितोऽपृथुयन्मः ॥ १ ॥

श्रीशालिवाहनशकेऽष्टमुनिद्विचन्द्र -

संख्ये प्रयातयति दुर्मुखनाम्नि वर्षे ।

आषाढमाससितपुष्पमतिथौ मुरेण्य-

धिष्ण्ये दिने व्यरचयद्द्विजपशुरामः ॥ २ ॥

यावच्चन्द्रो दिनमणिरुभौ राज्यहोळंकृती स्तो

यावद्धात्रीं दधति कमठाहीन्द्रकोणद्विपेन्द्राः ।

यावल्लङ्कापतिरिपुकथा वसते तान्त्रिलोक्यां

तावच्चिक्ते वसतु विदुषां पशुरामोपदेशः ॥ ३ ॥

निर्मलमतिभिर्येषां रचितानि सन्ति जगति शास्त्राणि ।

कुरुते तथापि कीतुकमेव ग्रन्थः सदोपयोगिन्वात् ॥ ४ ॥

इति श्रीभूपालवल्लभे पशुरामोपदेशे स्वरशास्त्रे नानाग्रन्थमते
सारोद्धारः समाप्तः ॥

In Verses 1 to 4 of the Introduction, salutations are made respectively to Śiva, Durgā, Gaṇeśa and one sage Kāṭakṣa who is again referred to further in Verse 19 as the author's own guru and as highly proficient in all branches of mathematics. The author came of a Brāhmaṇa family and was named Paśurāma.

<sup>1</sup> It will be seen that the author uniformly spells his name as Paśurāma which is a correct alternative form for Paraśurāma. Vide Siddhānta-Kaumudī on Upādiśtra I. 34 (आहुपरलोः खनिशृम्भो द्विच)—".....परं शृणोतीति वग्भुः । पृषोदरादिवाक्कारलोऽप्यपशुरपि ।". The Tattvabodhinī on this passage cites "पशुः परकुला सह" from Maheśvara's Vīśvakṣa. Both Apte and Monier-Williams have recorded this form in their Dictionaries but they have not cited its use in standard old works. The passages quoted above from the Bhūpālasallāha furnish three metrical instances of the use of the form Paśurāma.

His father was one Śrī-Kṛṣṇa-Deva who is described as eminently learned and benevolent. It is not possible to discern exactly what the unintelligible letters 'Kvāṇa' (=Kṛṇvaḥ?) preceding 'Śrī-Kṛṣṇa-Devaḥ' in the Ms were meant to signify. The author seems to be a Śaivite not only from the opening benediction but also from several stray salutations to Śiva inside the work.

The author's family resided in a town or village which is named in Verses 2 and 19 of the introduction as Nihpāpa and where there was probably a shrine of Goddess Yogeśvarī or Durgā. However, the name of the place appears to read as Nihpāva or Nihpāḍa in Verse 15 of the Lagnaprakarana where the author seems to note its local periods of the twelve lagnas:—

" ... ..

आद्या होरा भनाथस्य द्वितीयादशेशिनः ।

स्वदादशैकादशानां द्वेष्काणा यवनैर्मताः ॥ १४ ॥

अभ्यग्निदस्ताः कु<sup>१</sup> × पद्मजुजाश्वा-

ष्टाभाग्रयोऽष्टाश्रितदूनपायाः ।

वेदामरा दक्षरदास्तुलादी

निःपावसंज्ञे (= निःपावसंज्ञे ?) हि विलोमतोऽन्ये ॥ १५ ॥

२३४	२६४	३०८	३३८	३६४	३९२ <sup>२</sup>
-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	------------------

इष्टांशाः प्राग्वंशाद्द्विशतघ्ना लम्बलिनिकाः ।

लम्बार्कं सायनी कार्पो रात्री शेटयुतो रविः ॥ १६ ॥

etc. (—Folio 24).

As per these periods, the place should be somewhere in India about the latitude 20.13. Although we have no means to decide its longitude, it should be somewhere in north Mahārāṣṭra as appears from the author's numerous allusions to the Bhil<sup>३</sup> community and frequent mentions of 'Jhoṭīṅga'<sup>1</sup> as an evil spirit. As such, it seems reasonable to identify the place with Niphād, an old town, about twenty miles north-east of Nasik which is on this latitude and possessing a famous temple of Durgādevī. The author thus seems to come of a Mahārāṣṭra Brāhmaṇa family possibly belonging to the Kanva recension of White Yajurveda. It is not clear<sup>2</sup> if he himself had changed his residence to some other place.

<sup>१</sup> A letter is missing here in the Ms.

<sup>२</sup> Obviously this is the scribe's mistake for 322.

<sup>३</sup> Folios 61ab, 65a, 81b, 83b, etc. Bhil Kings, too, are often alluded to. The Bhils are found much more numerous in Nimar, Malwa and Rajputana, but those provinces are not situated near the latitude concerned.

1 E. g. Folios 81b (मनप्रेतपिशाचादिशाकिनीडाकिनीपद्माः । यद्दृष्टेदृष्टेतालाः कृष्माण्डा भैरवादयः ॥ झोटिङ्गेनायाः प्रणश्यन्ति श्वेतालीकनवावतः । etc. ), 86a (यद्-झोटिङ्गेनायाः भूतप्रेतपिशाचकाः । कृष्माण्डाः संमुखा नैव च यद्दृष्टुमशक्नुवन्तः ॥ ), etc. The word may have originally come from the Sanskrit form 'Joṭīṅga' which is given in some dictionaries as a name of Śiva! In Marathi, however, 'Jhoṭīṅga' primarily means an evil ghost, especially that of a dead Musalman, and secondarily a person of tyrannous temperament. Vide, for instance, Śrīdhara's Harisujaye XIII, 63 ".....आम्हा झोटिंग जखिणी । ज्योत पजेन जल बुडाले ॥" and such forms as 'Jhoṭīṅga-pūdaśāhi' current in Marathi. The word is used in these senses also in Gujarat, Nimar and Malwa, but those provinces are distant from the latitude concerned.

2 The author in the chapters entitled Kūrmāsakra, Grahayuddha, Grahasaṃgamā, etc. (Folios 54ff) mentions a number of places, regions and peoples while noting the effects of the movements of various planets on them. सकेत, मिथिला, चम्पा, निम्ब, विमरमेकला (!), कौशाम्बी, केशिकी, काशी, मध्यदेश, प्रयाग, अम्बवेदी, कान्यकुब्ज, गया, मगध, पाण्ड्यदेश, पञ्चगौड, इस्तिबन्ध, कामरूप (= कामरूप ?), वरग्री, मायपर्ण, बनवास, नर्मदा, कलिङ्ग, रेवत, लज्जी, वज्र, अङ्ग, कोशाल, कुरुकोशल, भगद, डाडल, उडुशक, महेन्द्र, दर्दूर, तापी, सिंदल, मल्ल, श्रीगिरि, लङ्का, कर्क, भीमरथी, सौराष्ट्र, नासिक, महाक्षेत्र, शङ्खपर्ण, युत, मालव, मेचक, समोटेर (!), कोङ्कण, कच्छपारात, अचुंद, खोराज्य, बर्हद्रूप, पूर्वमालव, अपरान्त, अवन्ती, गुजरातद्वय, मरुदेश, सरस्वती, जालंधर, बालुकाब्धि, मेरुशृङ्ग, वराहक, नेपाल, कीर, काश्मीर, गज्जण, सुरसाणक, मधुरा, म्लेच्छदेश, सता, केदारमण्डल, गङ्गाद्वार, कुरुक्षेत्र, श्रीकण्ठ, इस्तिनापुर, एकपाद, बाजिवक्त्र, गजकर्ण, शूरसेन, शालव, दाह्रीक, अग्निस्वचायिन्, त्रैगर्त, पार्वत, निपाद, गान्धार, मद्र, कैकय, कुलूत, पौर, शक, पौरव, केवल, etc. are among those mentioned. As these regions, peoples etc. cover almost the whole of India and even go beyond it, their mention does not shed any light on the author's current place of residence. Further, the author has in all probability borrowed these geographical allusions from earlier astrological works. There are some passages in the Bākṣavalābha which seem to suggest the

( continued on the next page )

In Verse 2 of the conclusion the author clearly states that he finished his composition of the Bhūpālavallabha on Thursday the second day of the bright half of the month of Āṣāḍha in the year 1278 of the Śālivāhana era, i. e. about July 1356 A. C. The date is rather interesting as it marks the period when the Hindu empire of Vijayanagara was approaching its zenith under the illustrious King Bukka (1353-1379 A. C.)<sup>1</sup> and his celebrated ministers Mādhava-Vidyāranya and Sāyapa. Although there is possibly nothing in the Bhūpālavallabha itself to warrant its direct connection with the Vijayanagara renaissance of ancient learning and culture, yet from this strange coincidence of dates it seems not unlikely that the author wanted it to be appreciated mainly by the court and palace of Vijayanagara. Most of the remaining verses of the introduction and the conclusion embody a eulogy of the work and its subject, possibly to press their importance on a prospective royal patron.<sup>2</sup> Of course, author's partiality for northern regions in preference to southern regions. Vide, for instance, the concluding Verses 73-76 of the chapter on Sindhāsana in connection with the setting of lions on royal thrones—"... कापीः सिंहाश्रयः चर्चिर्देवराज्यभूमिनाम् । द्वाविंशद्विंशत्यस्य चर्चिरोत्तरभूमिनाम् ॥ गङ्गोत्तरे षोडश स्युस्तपस्युत्तरतोऽष्ट च । गोदावरीचरे वेदा द्वौ सेतुत्तरभूमिनाम् ॥ समुद्रीरनव्यस्थाः केवती द्वीनजातयः । तेषां सिंहासनं नास्ति कारयेमश्विका शुभम् ॥ समुद्रीरविंशत्या योजनानां स्थिता नृपाः । चण्डालम्लेच्छमिहान्य तेषां सिंहासनं कारयेत् ॥" (Folio 65a). However, this partiality for northern India, commonly termed as Devabhūmi, Āryāvarta, Brahmāvarta, Yajñadeśa, etc., can be traced since time immemorial generally in old Sanskrit works, even in those composed in South India. Hence it alone cannot help in assigning our author's current residence to northern India.

(continued from the previous page)

<sup>1</sup> Ishwari Prasad: History of Medieval India (Allahabad, 1940), pp. 413ff.

<sup>2</sup> By the way, it may also be pointed out here that the first section of the Bhūpālavallabha, coming after the author's introduction, deals with the importance of an astrologer in the palace. Vide "अथ सांख्यस्तारमूत्रम् । कुलीनः सत्यवाग्धीमान्वेदेवेदाङ्गविद्विजः । प्रगल्भो देशकालज्ञो राज्ञां सविस्सरो मतः ॥ १ ॥ गजाश्वरथपत्तीनां लक्षणेषु विचारदः । मुद्रव्यूहाधिकुशलः शास्त्राभ्यज्ञोऽभिषारविद् ॥ २ ॥ वनं समाधिता वेऽपि निर्ममा निःपरिग्रहाः । अपि ते परिपृच्छन्ति ज्योतिषां गतिकोविदम् ॥ ३ ॥

(continued on the next page)

there were also other Hindu chiefs, big and small, who were faced mainly with the conquests<sup>1</sup> of Firoz Tughluq (1351-1388) and Hasan Bahman Shah (1347-1359) in the different parts of the country about this period, and the possibility of some of them being in our author's view cannot be ignored altogether.

The Bhūpālavalabbha has been profusely quoted as a standard work of authority in numerous subsequent works on Dharma, Jyautiṣa, etc. and the author's date can be seconded in the light of this external evidence, too. We find it cited in Mahādevavid's Kālanirṇayasiddhāntavyākhyā (1653 A.C.),<sup>2</sup> in Kamalākaraḥṭṭa's Nirṇayasindhu (1612 A.C.),<sup>3</sup> in Rāma's Muhūrtacintāmaṇi (1600 A.C.),<sup>4</sup> in Nārāyaṇa's commentary Mārtanḍavallabhā (1573) on his own Muhūrtamūrtanḍa (1571 A.C.),<sup>5</sup> in Gaṇeśadaivajña's commentary Dīpikā (c. 1528 A.C.)<sup>6</sup> on his father Keśava's Muhūrtatattva (c. 1498 A.C.),<sup>7</sup> in Pitāmbara's commentary Nirṇayāmṛta (1524 A.C.)<sup>8</sup> on his own Vivāhapātala (1522 A.C.),<sup>9</sup> in Acalaadviveda's Nirṇayadīpaka (1518 A.C.)<sup>10</sup> and in several other works, earlier or later, whose dates have not been specifically mentioned by their authors. Thus in about a century or so

(continued from the previous page)

म्लेच्छा इि यवनास्तेषु सम्यक् शास्त्रमिदं स्थितम् । कपिवन्तेऽपि पूज्यन्ते किं पुनर्देव-
विद्विजः ॥ ४ ॥ बालुरद्वेष्ट सैन्येन यत्कार्यं नैव सिध्यति । तन्नाथयति देवज्ञो हेलयैव
नृपेक्षितम् ॥ ५ ॥ कस्मान्नोपाङ्गकुशलं होरागणितनैष्ठिकम् । यो न पूज्यते राजा स
नाशमुपगच्छति ॥ ६ ॥ यः पूजयति देवज्ञं सर्वशास्त्रार्थकोविदम् । तस्य श्रीविजयः
कीर्तिश्चिरं राज्यं च नन्दति । ७ ॥ तथा न माता हितकृन् पिता न सुहृद् गुरुः । यथा सावितरी राज्ञां स्वयशोभर्मवृद्धये ॥ ८ ॥". It is to be noted that many of these verses are very old, occurring also in Vardhamihira's Bṛhat-saṁhitā.

<sup>1</sup> Ishwari Prasad: History of Medieval India, pp. 288 and 367ff.

<sup>2</sup> P. V. Kane: History of Dharmaśāstra, Vol. I (Poona, 1930), p. 520a.

<sup>3</sup> Ibid., p. 437.

<sup>4</sup> S. B. Dikshit: मातृयजुर्वेदविज्ञानाया इतिहास (Poona, 1931), pp. 218, 473 etc.

<sup>5</sup> Ibid., pp. 258, 400, 402, 473 etc.

<sup>6</sup> Ibid., p. 472.

<sup>7</sup> Ibid., p. 471.

<sup>8</sup> Ibid., p. 472.

<sup>9</sup> Ibid., p. 472.

<sup>10</sup> P. V. Kane: History of Dharmaśāstra, Vol. I, p. 573b.

after its composition the Bhūpālavallabha appears to have come to enjoy the position of a high authority on the subjects. In fact, with its date fixed and corroborated, it furnishes<sup>1</sup> an adequate upper limit for the dates of a number of works citing it.

Although in many cases these citations are given under the full name 'Bhūpālavallabha,' in other cases they occur under the abbreviated title 'Bhūpāla.'<sup>2</sup> This fact deserves special notice here as the general tendency<sup>3</sup> among scholars is to assign the citations occurring under the title 'Bhūpāla' to King Bhoja.

In Verse 1 of the conclusion the author takes to himself the credit of being the first to combine Jyautiṣa and Svaraśāstra in a single work. Although he thus claims a sort of originality for his own work (vide also Verse 5 of the introduction and Verse 5 of the conclusion in this connection), still he must have freely drawn upon the works of his predecessors as is evident from the words 'nānāgranthamate Śāroddhāre' of the concluding colophon and Verse 5 of the introduction where he expresses his indebtedness to standard older works on Jyautiṣa and to the Āgamas, possibly the Tantras dealing with Svara, attributed to Śiva. However, he mostly cites older authors and works anonymously or under general terms (e. g. kēlit.....spara.....viduh). In fact, so far as I could trace, besides a few Vedic hymns,<sup>4</sup> Yavana 5 and the Brahmayāmala<sup>5</sup> alone have been explicitly mentioned in the work. The Narapatīyayacuryā, the popular work on Svaraśāstra composed by Narapati at Anhilwada about two cen-

<sup>1</sup> Vide my paper Sivadāsa's Jyotiṛnibandha: the Work and its Date. (NJA, Vol. V).

<sup>2</sup> Vide, for instance, Sivadāsa's Jyotiṛnibandha (Anandīśrama Series No. 35, 1919), p. 4 "भूपालः—तथा न माता हितकृत् पिता न सुहृद् गुरुः । बह्वर्त्तावत्सरो राज्ञा स्वयंशोर्वमृद्वय ॥" etc. Cf. Verse 8 of the Sūhvatsaraśāstra of the Bhūpālavallabha quoted above in Footnote 2 on p. 233 continued on p. 234 above.

<sup>3</sup> E. g., Aufrecht: Catalogus Catalogorum, Vol. I, (Leipzig, 1891), p. 415a; P. V. Kane: History of Dharmaśāstra, Vol. I, pp. 278, 719a, etc.

<sup>4</sup> E. g., the Puruṣasūkta, the Rudrasūkta, (Folios 61 etc.), etc.

<sup>5</sup> ".....यह्नेधविधानं तद्यत्रगोले मचक्षते" (Folio 18b), ".....स्वर्वादेशोका- दशानां द्वेष्काणां यवनैर्मताः" (Folio 24a), etc.

<sup>6</sup> "नरनाम्नि मयेयत्र स योगोऽक्षरसंभवः । साहस्यप्रादिमो ऋण इषुर्लं ब्रह्मयामले ॥"
(Folio 90a).

turies earlier in 1175 A. C.,<sup>1</sup> has not been explicitly mentioned by our author anywhere although his work has much in common with it. Still it is not unlikely that he makes a veiled allusion to it in the last line of Verse 19 of the introduction.

Aufrecht mentions<sup>2</sup> the Bhūpālavallabha as "an encyclopaedia of Dharma, Alamkāra, Jyotiṣa etc." Kane, too, mentions<sup>3</sup> it as "an encyclopaedia of Dharma, astrology, poetics, etc." However, even on a minute perusal of the two Ms of the Bhūpālavallabha, I was not able to find the slightest trace of a treatment of Alamkāra or poetics in the work. Two of the sections are entitled 'Kavīcakra' and 'Kavīyuddhaprakaraṇa,' but the word 'Kavī' in these<sup>4</sup> and other sections does not mean a poet and the passages concerned have nothing to do with poetics. S. B. Dikshit in his Marathi History of Indian Jyotiṣa furnishes original details about several rare works on Jyotiṣa etc., but he mentions<sup>5</sup> the Bhūpālavallabha only as cited by others. Twice he also mistakes<sup>6</sup> the names Bhūpāla and Bhūpālavallabha of

<sup>1</sup> S. B. Dikshit: भारतीयज्योतिषशास्त्राचा इतिहास, p. 476.

<sup>2</sup> Catalogus Catalogorum, Vol. I, page 415a.

<sup>3</sup> History of Dharmashastra, Vol. I, page 399a.

<sup>4</sup> Vide Folios 162ff. " ... उत्सवागे प्रयागे वा विशीये मृत्याविधौ । शोकसं
व्यसनमज्ञे सैन्यघाते विनायके ॥ विवाहे मित्रसंयोगे शत्रूणां च समागमे । तीर्थे देवालये
व्यग्रे स्त्रीमयासक्तचेतसि ॥ बहुधा कविकालोऽस्ति कथितो दुर्बले नृपे । ते ज्ञाता यः कविं
कुयांसहन्ति गृहीतं परम्(?) ॥ कविचक्रं प्रकर्तव्यं चतुरस्रं त्रिनाडिकम् । ... कविः
सखी विज्ञानलिका कपोच्चक्रान्तवेशने । युद्धान्तान्तनिर्वाणे रुद्धेसी धकटी बद्धी ॥ ...
कविपुद्गे यत्र विष्णवे तदग्रहंस्ति पापकः । तदा भवेन्मार्गरोधः पार्थिवग्राहस्तु पृथगः ॥
... तीक्ष्णैः साधारणैः क्रूरैर्दृष्टयोगे विपुष्करे । कविप्रवेक्षनैः केचित्स्थानमाचक्रमुक्षिरे ॥
... ध्वजे रौद्रे कविः कार्मो विस्तु गर्भस्थिते विधौ ॥". Subsequent sections ( 'Durgacakra', etc.—Folios 164ff ), too, mention this Kavi. Vide " ...
पार्वते स्थानभेदं च भूवलं वनदुर्गके । कवियोगे वक्रभूमौ विषये ययिनो वलम् ॥ ...
निर्गमस्थस्थिते चन्द्रे तदग्रहन्तरगेनरेः । कविपुद्गे प्रकर्तव्यं रात्रौ क्षुप्ते बह्निर्जने ॥ प्रवेशमिर्गमे योगैः सैन्ययोरुभयोरपि । कविं कोटे जयस्तत्र विपरीते पराजयः ॥ etc." Possibly scholars of Tantra can shed light on the significance of the word 'Kavi' in these cases. Vide also Sivadasa's Jyotiṣnibandha, p. 333.

<sup>5</sup> भारतीयज्योतिषशास्त्राचा इतिहास, p. 472.

<sup>6</sup> Ibid., p. 472.

the work for those of authors. Evidently he had not been able to procure a Ms of the Bhūpālavallabha.

Little is known about other works by our author. A commentary on Bhāskara's Līlāvatī had been fathered<sup>1</sup> on him but subsequently his authorship was rejected<sup>2</sup> to it, as its author, another Paraśurāma, being son of one Śrīharṣa and not of Śrīkṛṣṇa-Deva, was found to bear a different parentage.

POST-SCRIPT

After my paper on the Bhūpālavallabha had been sent for press, it came to my notice, through the courtesy of Mr. P. K. Gode, that late Mr. Vishvanatha Kashinatha Rajwade, the veteran pioneer of historical research in Mahārāṣṭra, has made some allusions to this work and also cited therefrom a few passages, including the verse mentioning the date of its composition, in the Introduction to Vol. VIII of his Sources of Marāṭhā History (मराठ्यांच्या इतिहासाची साधने, खंड आठवा, प्रस्तावना). The allusions are meant firstly to prove that the use of scraps of birch-bark and cloth-pieces as sheets for writing out mystic mantras and yantras was in vogue as late as 1326 A. C. and secondly to demonstrate that Marāṭhī was absolutely devoid of Persian words as late as 1356 A. C. The relevant portions of the allusions may be extracted here from the current volume of V. K. Rajwade's Historical Introductions (ऐतिहासिक प्रस्तावना, Poona, 1928) :—

“( Pp. 373 ff. ) ... .. नजजवळ पक्षरामपंडितानें केलेला भूपालवल्लभनामक ग्रंथाचा सारभूत पक्षरामोपदेश नांवाचा एक चंज्रग्रंथ आहे. त्याच्या परिसमाप्तीचा श्लोक येणेप्रमाणें:—

श्रीशालिवाहनशकेटसुनिश्चिंद्र १२७८ ।

संख्ये गते सति च दुर्मुखनाम्नि वर्षे ॥

आषाढमाससितयुग्मतिथौ सुरेख्य ।

षष्ठ्ये दिने स्वरचक्रद्विजपक्षरामः ॥ ३४ ॥

ह्या श्लोकावरून पक्षरामोपदेश हा ग्रंथ शक १२७८त म्हणजे इ० स० १३५६त लिहिला गेला असें होतें. ह्या ग्रंथांत प्रथम शक १२४८ पासून म्हणजे इ० स०

<sup>1</sup> Aufrecht: Catalogus Catalogorum, Vol. I, p. 327a.

<sup>2</sup> Ibid, Vol. II ( Leipzig, 1896 ), page 209, etc.

१३२६ पासून प्रभवादि संवत्सरांचीं फलें दिलीं आहेत व नंतर शेंकडो यंत्राच्या आकृति कशा व कशावर काढाव्या तें सांगितलें आहे.

हरिद्रा तालकशिलामेषमूत्रसमन्विता ।

कोकिकाव्यस्य लेखन्या नीलरक्तपटे लिखेत् ॥ १६ ॥

कालेपरोचनाचंद्रैर्लज्जालुमजवारिभिः ।

मदनकुललेखन्या यंत्रं भूर्जे लिखेदिदम् ॥ १०५ ॥

रोचनाकुंकुमाभ्यां तु भूर्जपत्रे सुशोभने ।

सुवर्णमयलेखन्या पद्मगण्डलं लिखेत् ॥ १३२ ॥

व्रणहीने भूर्जपत्रे क्षरवामाश्रवांसुजः ।

वीतिगारेण संयुक्तः कृष्णोन्मत्तरत्नेन च ॥ १४३ ॥

विलिखेत् ॥ १४४ ॥

आनयेन्निर्घर्णं भूर्जे ग्रंथिहीनं सुशोभनं ॥ १७० ॥

पश्शरामोपदेशे भूपालबलभे मंत्रयंत्रप्रकरणम् ॥

हे प्लोक ६० स० १३२६ पासून १३५६ पर्यंतच्या तीस वर्षांत केव्हां तरी लिहिले आहेत. इ० स० १३१८ त सुसलमानांचें राज्य सुरू झालें. .... १३१८ त रामचंद्राचा जावई हरपाळ याला मुलतान मुबारिकानें ठार मारिलें व देवगिरी कायमची घेतली. न्यानंतर आठ वर्षांनीं पश्शरामपंडितानें आपला पश्शरामोपदेश नांवाचा ग्रंथ लिहिला. ह्या ग्रंथांत भूर्जपत्रें व कापडाचे तुफडे यांवर यंत्रें लिहाचीं असें अनेक ठिकाणीं म्हटलें आहे. ह्यावरून एवढें सिद्ध होतें कीं मंत्र व यंत्रें लिहिण्यास भूर्जपत्रें व वरुपट ह्यांचा उपयोग इ० स० १३२६ च्या सुमारास व पूर्वीं लोक करित असत. .... "

"( Pp. 390 ff. ) ... .. आतां ह्या इ. स. १३९७ व्याहि मागे जाऊन इ. स. १३५६तील एक मराठी लेख देतो. पूर्वी पश्शरामपंडितकृत पश्शरामोपदेश नांवाच्या ग्रंथाच्या उल्लेख केला होता. ह्या ग्रंथाच्या शेवटीं खालील मराठी वाक्यें आहेत:--

गत तिथि दृणा ॥ वाक चतुर्गुणा ॥ नक्षत्र मेळविजे ॥ भुवक ४ मेळविजे ॥ तिहिं भागु ॥ उरलेये शेपे लोह पाहिजे ॥ एकें जळ ॥ दाहो स्थळ ॥ हून्य आकाश ॥ स्थळीं सावली ॥ जळीं आढाळ ॥ आकाशीं सावलीये ॥ आढाउ तीर दार ॥ हे जयेति ॥ आढ वार ॥ आविण्या पासौनु ॥ नक्षत्रें ९ उत्तम ॥ दाहावें मध्यम ॥ तयापुढील २ उत्तम ॥ वरिला तिहिं खेळु पाहुं १७ उत्तम ॥ बीसा ठायीं च लोह निर्घचिल ॥ २२ ॥ लोह होईल ॥ पूर्ण यश पाविजिल ॥ हातीयेरे सांदिती ॥ पळ होईल ॥ आविष्यवारी ॥ शनिवारी ॥ वृषभ, कन्या, मकर, मिथुन, तूळ, कुंभ, हे सोचिति ॥ सोमवारि, बुधस्पतवारि मिथुन, तूळ

कुंभा पडती ॥ कर्क, वृश्चिक, मीन हे खोचती ॥ संग्रहवारी ॥ शुक्रवारी ॥ कर्क, वृश्चिक, मीन, धनु, भिषु, मेघ हे सा ६ राशी मरती ॥ वृषभकन्यामकर हे खोचती ॥ बुधवारि वृषभ, कन्या, मकर पडती ॥ मिथुन, तूल, कुंभ हे खोचती ॥ तिथिवारु जे दिशे यात्रा किजे ॥ ते दिशा येकर किजे ॥ तिहिं भाग्य दिजे ॥ उरें शेष तो ध्रुवक राशीचें जीव-नक्षत्र ॥ २७ गुणिजे ॥ ध्रुवक मेळविजे ॥ तिहिं भाग्य दिजे ॥ शेष उरें तो ग्रहो जाणिजे ॥ जयाचे राशीवरि बुध, गुरु बैसती तिये राशिचेयांकरवी ॥ यात्रा कविजे ॥ दुर्भयात्रा बुध जया दिये ॥ राशीवरि बैसे ॥ तया कवि कविजे ॥ आठ । नि । पू । वा । द् । ई । प । सूर्योदयार्चाये ठाउनु येणें कर्म ची बढिये नजन जाणावें ॥ जयाचिये पाठि पडे तो जयो पावे ॥ ६ ॥

इति श्रीभूपालवल्लभः ॥ सनातनिमुपागमम् ॥

ह्या उताऱ्यांतील सर्व वाक्यें शुद्ध चावनकशी जुनीं मराठी आहेत व त्यांना फारशीचा विलकुल गर्भ नाही. ह्या वाक्यांची भाषा बहुतेक हुबेहुब ज्ञानेश्वरी-तील भाषेतारखी आहे. बहुतेक म्हणण्याचें कारण असें कीं, इ. स. १२९०त लिहिलेल्या ज्ञानेश्वरीच्या भाषेत व इ. स. १३५६त लिहिलेल्या ह्या वाक्यांच्या भाषेत साठ वर्षांच्या अवधि मेळयामुळें किंचित् करक पडणें साहजिक आहे. ... .. इ. स. १२९०त लिहिलेल्या ज्ञानेश्वरीची भाषा १३२६ पासून १३५६ पर्यंत लिहिलेल्या ग्रंथाच्या भाषेप्रमाणे असलीच पाहिजे, इतकेंच नव्हे तर ह्या ग्रंथाच्या भाषेहूनहि ती किंचित् जुनाट असली पाहिजे. ... .."

" ( P. 396 ) ... .. सावितांच्या राश्यांतील इ. स. १३९७तील लेखांत, पर्शुरामोपदेशांतील १३५६तील लेखांत व १२९०तील ज्ञानेश्वरीत एकहि फारशी शब्द सांपडत नाही. ... .."

Evidently Mr. Rajwade possessed a Ms of the Parśurāmopadeśa which he regards to be an abbreviation, made in the year 1278 of the Śalivāhans era, of the Bhūpālavallabha. Unluckily the Ms is not before us and hence it is not possible to discern exactly its extent etc. and its relation to our two Mss of the Bhūpālavallabha. From our Mss, however, it is amply clear that the author Parśurāma, the title Parśurāmopadeśa, mentioned as an alias of the Bhūpālavallabha in some colophons, and the year of composition mentioned in the verse cited, all pertain to the Bhūpālavallabha itself and not to any abbreviation thereof. I was able to trace in our Mss, though in different enumerations and with slight variations, all the passages cited by Mr. Rajwade, excepting the concluding Marathi inscription of his Ms.

From what Mr. Rajwade writes, my impressions about his Ms are (i) that it contained only selections from the Bhūpālavalabha and did not possibly include the author's introduction and passages like the Sāmvatsarasūtra cited by me; (ii) that it does not mention the scribe's date; and (iii) that the scribe who evidently came from Mahārāṣṭra also incorporated some other interesting but foreign passages like the cited Marathi inscription which is not found in our Ms, is not at all suited at the conclusion of the work after the verse mentioning the date of composition and consequently does not seem to belong to the original work or to come from the original author.

I have tried to establish with reasons that the author Parśurāma hereditarily belonged to a place in Mahārāṣṭra. Mr. Rajwade, however, appears to take this as a self-evident fact possibly mainly due to the existence in his Ms of the said Marathi inscription which he seems to ascribe, without any reason, to the original author himself. As a matter of fact, Parśurāma's date (viz. 1356 A. C.) can have no connection with the Yādava empire of Deogiri which had been totally crushed as back as 1318 A. C.

Again, there is absolutely no mention of the year 1248 of the Śalivāhana era (i. e. 1326 A. C.) in our Mss and it does not appear reasonable to assume that the author took thirty years to finish this work, based for the most part on older works and covering barely 171 folios. Our Mss, too, after the author's introduction and the Sāmvatsarasūtra, furnish the section on the Phalas of sixty Sāmvatsaras. But there the treatment is wholly general and is not restricted to any particular cycle of Sāmvatsaras commencing with any particular year in the author's view. As such it is not possible to gather exactly the passages in Mr. Rajwade's Ms from which he asserts that the work deals with the Sāmvatsaras commencing from Śaka 1248 and concludes that the same was commenced in that year and finished in Śaka 1278. In case, however, his Ms agreed in reading with our Mss in this portion, one may try to explain how he got at Śaka 1248. The Sāmvatsaraphala section in our Mss reads:—

शाको गजाधिपूर्यो नः पट्टिहत्प्रभवादयः ।

कलानि तेषां वक्ष्यामि यथाज्ञासं पृथक् पृथक् ॥ १ ॥

क्षेमं सुभिक्षं प्रभवे विभवेऽर्घः सुवृष्टयः ।

रोगः हृद्धे प्रमोदेऽम्बु सीराज्यानि प्रजापतौ ॥ २ ॥

... ..
 दुर्मुखे वसरोऽल्पाम्बु हेमलम्बे प्रजासुतयः ।
 विलम्बे रोगदुर्भिक्षे भयं पीडा विकारिणि ॥ १ ॥
 ... .. रोगभीः परिधाविनि ॥ १२ ॥
 ... ..
 शुभं स्वादुन्दुभी नाशो रुधिरौद्धारिवन्तरे ।
 रक्ताक्षी सर्वनाशाय पीडा स्वात्कोपने क्षये ॥ १५ ॥

इति श्रीभूपालवल्लभसाराञ्जरे पञ्चरामोपदेशे स्वरशास्त्रे सांवत्सरप्रकरणं प्रथमं ॥१॥

Here the author first mentions the Śaka year 1278 of his composition of the work and then proposes to deal with the Phalas of 60 Samvatsaras, in a general manner as will be evident from the passages cited above. He does not seem to say that any cycle of Samvatsaras in his view begins with the year mentioned by him and with a view to being construed grammatically, too, Verse 1 of the above citation has to be split up into two sentences 'Śako Gajābhdhisūryo naḥ' and 'Saṣṭihṣṭprabhavādayaḥ etc.' Mr. Rajwade, in case his Ms read identically, appears to have interpreted 'Gajābhdhisūryaḥ' as 1248. It is true that conventionally 'abdhī' stands both for four and for seven. But it is most reasonable to take it here to stand for seven and not for four in the light of the fact that the Śaka year 1278 ('astamunidvīcandrasaṁkhye') is further mentioned by the author in his final metrical colophon as the year of his composition of the work. Last but not the least, Prabhava Samvatsara, so far as I can see, coincides with Śaka 1249 and not with Śaka 1248 as Mr. Rajwade seems to suppose. This is borne out by the fact that Durmukha, the 30th Samvatsara of the cycle, coincides with Śaka 1278 as mentioned by our author and further that Paridhavin, the 46th Samvatsara of the preceding cycle, coincides with Śaka 1234 as mentioned by Cāṅgadeva in the following concluding verses of his Marathi Tatvasūtra (Ujjain, 1936, Page 49) :—

वटेश्वराचा सुतु । चांग्मा म्हणे अवधुतु । सिद्धसंकेत मातु । प्रगट केला ॥ १०२५ ॥ हा प्रधु पावला समाप्ति । ते शालिवाहन शकु किती । कवण संवत्सर मासु तिथी । वारु कवणु ॥ १०२६ ॥ ... .. शके चौतिसें वारा । परिधावी संवत्सरा । मार्गशिर शुद्ध तीज रविवार । नामसंख्य ॥ १०२८ ॥ etc.

ON SOME WORDS FOR 'CHILD' IN INDO-ARYAN

By

S. M. KATRE

The present paper is offered here with the hope that it will open up a new field of enquiry in Indo-Aryan linguistics which I incidentally mentioned in my last Wilson Philological Lecture<sup>1</sup> as the science of Synonymics. It intends briefly to discuss some words for 'child - boy or girl' to be found in the entire history of Indo-Aryan. I reserve a full discussion of the problems involved and the principles to be developed in the cause of this new science for a monograph to be published at some future date. The limitations on this enquiry are dictated by the exigencies of space and time, which make it imperative that I should be as brief as possible here.

The notion of 'child' is connected with a group of vocables which indicate the different characteristics of the underlying subject such as boy, girl, son, daughter, youth, young, small, dear, etc. and the different words for these which we find in the entire Indo-European group conform to one or the other of these several patterns. Some of these vocables develop a special meaning applied to a particular class of animals, such as we find in English kid (: sheep), pup (: dog), heifer (: cow), while others have a more general sense.

Let us first consider a few examples of this type in Indo-European. For a small child or infant we notice the three forms **arbhā-*, **ken-* and **ǵ<sup>h</sup>er(e)bh-* which give us in OI-A. arbhā-, arbhā-, (and with the same sense in Slavonic), kanina-, kanā, kanyā and gārbhā- (perhaps < I-E. **ǵ<sup>h</sup>erbh-*). Other cognate forms may be seen in Walde-Pokorny's Vergleichendes Wörterbuch der indogermanischen Sprachen. For a boy or a girl the following expressions are recorded: **paljaq-*, **maghu-*, **meria-* all of which are attested in a number of I-E. languages.

<sup>1</sup> Some Problems of Historical Linguistics in Indo-Aryan, Bhāratīya Vidyā 2, 228.

We notice that OI-A. has a number of words to express these ideas having a differing range in actual usage. We have, for instance, the following words to indicate some phase of the semantic grouping involved in the concept of 'child-boy or girl,' āpatyam, ārbha- or arbhā-, arbhakā-; kanā, kanī, kaninaka-, kanyakā, kanyā, kanyānā, kanyālā, kanyikā; kīśorāḥ, kīśorakaḥ, kīśorikā; kumārāḥ, kumārakāḥ, kumārī, kumārīkā; gaurī; ḍimbhaḥ, ḍimbhakaḥ, ḍimbhikā; tānam, tānaya-; tanuja-; tāruṇaḥ, taruṇī; tokām; dārakaḥ, dārikā; nagnā, nagnikā; putrāḥ, putrakāḥ, putrikā, putrī; potah, potakaḥ; bāla-, bālaka-, bālikā; māṇavaḥ, māṇavakaḥ; māṇavikā; lagnikā (variant for nagnikā); vatsāḥ, vatsā, vatsaka-; vāsū f. śāvah, śāvakaḥ; śiśuḥ, śiśukāḥ, śiśūlāḥ; sāntatīḥ f., sāntānāḥ; suta-, sūnaḥ, sūnā, sūnīḥ; stuka-.

Besides simple vocables of the type indicated above a good number of compound expressions have come into existence in OI-A. Thus from the word stāna- 'breast,' we have the following compounds for 'infant, suckling' stanañ-dha-, stanañ-dhama-, stanañ-dhāya-, stana-pa-, stana-pāya- and stanasyu-, stanya-pa-, stanya-pāyin-, stanya-bhuj, stanā-bhūj-.

In the sense of 'being produced by oneself' we have such OI-A. expressions as aurasya- 'legitimate child,' ātmaja-, ātmanīna-, ātmajātāna-, ātmajannan-; hṛdayajā-, karīraja-, karīrajanman-. Here also belong the words mentioned above; tānaya-, tanuja-. A few other expressions like uttānakāya- indicate the particular stage in the growth of the infant.

Of the vocables indicated above puta(ka)-, śāva(ka)- and vatsa- originally applied to animals of the lower order and then gradually extended to human relationship. Particularly noticeable in this connection is the vocative vatsa comparable to tāta as a term of affection addressed to a junior and to Vedic tatā-. But both OI-A. puta(ka)- and śāva(ka)- retain their original meaning in their unextended forms. Very rarely do we observe the occurrence of such compounds like muni-śāvaka-.

Already in classical Sanskrit words such as ārbha-, arbhā-, arbhakā- are almost obsolete (the last one surviving perhaps a little later than the others); similarly tokām, generally joined with tānaya-, is never used in classical literature, while kanā, kanī and kaninakaḥ are confined only to the Rgveda.

Turning to Pāli we notice the following vocables: apacca-, kaṇṇā, kumārā-, kumārakā-, kumārī; tanaya-, tanuṇa-; taruṇa-, taluṇa-; dāraka-, dārīkā; putta-, puttaka-; poṭa-, poṭaka-; bāla-, bālaka-, bālīkā; māṇava-, māṇavaka-; māṇavikā; vaccha-, vacchaka-, vacchatara-, vacchatari (< OI-A. vatsutara-); chōpa-, chōpaka- cf. OI-A.; sāva-ka-); susu-, suta-, sutā; sīnu-. It would appear from this list that the number of vocables is very much reduced in comparison with OI-A. It is this gradual reduction which brings about new expressions for the concept in NI-A.

In the various Prakrit dialects we observe the following vocables: apacca- or avacca-; abbhaya-; kaṇṇā; kisora-, kisori; kumāra-, kumārī, kumārīyā; ḍimbha-, ḍimbhiyā; tanaya-, tanayā, tanuṇa-, tanubbhaya, tanubbhū; taruṇa-, taruṇī, taluṇī; dāra-, dāraka, dārāya-, dārīā; putta-, puttaya-, puttā, puttī; poṭa-, poṭaya-, bāla-, bālaka-, bālā, bālīā; vaccha-, vacchā; vātū<sup>1</sup> chōva-; susu-, sua-, suā, sūṇu-.

It is not necessary for us to go into further details about these MI-A. expressions as they are more or less derived from their corresponding OI-A. words. But it would be interesting to see how many of these Old and Middle I-A. vocables have survived in their inherited form in the NI-A. languages.<sup>2</sup>

Sk. apatyam: Pa. Pk. apacca- Pk. avacca-, cf. N. hacera the young of a bird, P. bacc, baec m. young of fish, reptiles; N. baccā or bacco the young (of animals), bacci a small female child, baccu term of endearment for a child; H. baccā.

Sk. kanyā f. maiden: Pa. kaṇṇā, Pk. kaṇṇā, Sdh. kaṇṇā f.—Sk. kanyā f. maiden: Sdh. kaṇṇī a prostitute, and Sk. kanyasī-, cf. kāniyas-: N. kānchi little girl, young woman: kāncho young; Ksh. kūs<sup>3</sup>, kōs<sup>4</sup>, kaś<sup>5</sup>, kōch<sup>6</sup>, youngest brother; Ku. kāso younger.

Sk. kumārāḥ boy, kumārakāḥ little boy, kumārī f.: Pk. kumāra-, kumara-, kumārī, kumārī; G. M. kūvar boy M. kūvar f. virgin, G. kūvarī f. girl; H. kūwār, kūwār Sdh. kūāro, N. kumār(o) q. v.

Sk. taruṇaḥ, taruṇī: Pa. taruṇa-, taluṇa-; Pk. taruṇa-, taluṇa-; N. taruṇī young woman, tarunu young man.

Sk. dāra- (cf. dārakaḥ): Shina dārī m. pl. boys; and in the compound **grāmadāra*- village boy: N. gamār, gāwār, gāwar a clown, boor, O. gamāra rustic, H. P. gawār, G. gamār, M. gāwār.

<sup>1</sup> Occurs only in the dialect of Śākāra in Mṛcchakaṭika.

<sup>2</sup> I have used Turner's abbreviations in his Nepali Dictionary with some modifications which are easily understandable.

Sk. putrāḥ: Pa. Pk. putta- G. M. pūt, K. pūtu, P. putt, H. pūt Ku. pūt, A. B. N. put, O. puta etc.; for further cognates see under N. put.

Sk. potṭh young of animal: Pk. pot-; A. B. po son, O. paū.

Sk. bāluka young: Pa. Pk. bāla-, M. N. bāḷ, O. bāla, H. P. bālā, L. bāl, Sh. B. bāl Sgh. bal; v. s. v. N. bālakha (small) child.

Sk. vatsāḥ, vatsakāḥ: Pa. vaccho, vacchako, Pk. vaccha-m; Ku. N. bācho, B. B. H. bāchā, P. bacchā, P. L. vacchā, Sdh. vacha, Sgh. vasu, all in the sense of 'calf'; with -r- extension in B. bāchur, O. bācharā colt, bāchuri calf. G. vāchrū, vācharḍū. Sk. vatsaurūpam M. K. vāsrū.

Pa. chāpo young of an animal (cf. Sk. śvavāḥ): Pk. chāva-; Rom. cavo son; O. chuā young of an animal; B. chā, chā, H. chāwā, N. chāwā; extensions of this in N. chāuro the young of a bear, dog, cat etc.: Ku. chyauro boy, H. chāurū young of an animal;—Rom. arm. colā girl; A. sauḍ male child, B. chāoyāl; B. chānā young of an animal, H. chāunā.

In addition to these survivals from OI-A. vocables indicating the concept of 'child' NI-A. has developed a large number of inherited vocables from Old and Middle I-A. in this particular sense. Some of these, in fact, seem to go back to Indo-European, but as matters stand at present, the subject still awaits further investigation. We shall not consider all the vocables found in NI-A. to express this idea, but only the most important of them, and in particular the Marāṭhī form por, porḡū, mūl, mūlgū.

For 'girl' Nepali celi, K. calli, celli; 'boy' N. celo, K. callo for which we have B. O. H. P. celā, Ksh. cēlo, Sdh. G. celo G. celko (cf. K. cērka) boy, M. celā < **cella-* on whose affiliation see Turner, Nepali Dictionary 183a. Connected with this group is K. cērḍu, calḍū child, M. ceḍrū < **ceṭarūpam* and the other dialectical forms quoted by Turner s. v. celo. This Sk. ceṭa- itself in the sense of disciple, pupil, servant, is < Sk. **ṛṭa-*, **ṛṭta-* according to S. K. Chatterji.<sup>1</sup> On the other hand, if we accept Bloch's derivation from Dravidian *cū- 'small' we shall note the parallelism found in Romance languages where words indicating smallness have often developed the significance of 'child.' On this see below.

<sup>1</sup> Some Etymological Notes, New Indian Antiquary, 2, 421-27; cf. my Prakrit Uccidima and Uccudai in Kane Festschrift pp. 258-59 and Indo-Africa I in Bulletin of the Deccan College Research Institute 1, 153-56.

H. chokrā, O. chokarā, N. chokarā, B. P. chokrā, Sdh. chokaru, G. chokro, M. sokrā all indicate 'boy' just as N. chokari, H. chokri etc. signifies 'girl.' Compare these forms with N. Ku. choro boy, son: Rom coro poor, orphan: Sdh. choro: N. chari girl, daughter: H. G. chori. Turner connects the first group with I-A. **chokkara*;<sup>1</sup> the other forms quoted by him under the entry choro such as H. chokrā, O. chokar, chokrā, chokri, L. chokur posit an I-A. **chokkara*: similarly G. choṣi f. girl < **choṣikū* while N. choṣo small, short and its cognates in NI-A. all derive from **choṣin*.<sup>2</sup> Thus on the one hand we observe **chokkara*- and **chokhara*-, and on the other **choṣa*- (in **choṣikū*) and **choṣṭa*-. The MI-A. form choyara which Turner quotes for basing the etymology of N. choro may be derived in its turn from Sk. kṣaudra- (cf. kṣudrā-, kṣulla): PMI-A. **kṣaudra* or **kṣaudara* > choyara-, again showing the extension of 'smallness' to indicate 'child, boy or son.' The origin of the other forms is not quite clear at present but the significance is definite: 'small or smallness' extending to mean 'child, boy or son: girl or daughter.'

Turner gives N. keṣi, Ku. keṣi girl, daughter: N. Ku. keṣo boy, son, without any etymology; but on the analogy of N. choṣo < **choṣṭa*- we should posit N. keṣo < **keṣṭa*- but still we would be far from explaining the origin of these words. We might even compare them to Sk. caṣa- without arriving at any further explanation of the NI-A. forms.

On the other hand the above forms lend themselves for comparison with Pk. bittā-, bittī: N. Ku. G. beṣo, A. B. H. P. beṣū, Sdh. beṣo, M. beṣū; N. B. A. beṣi, H. P. L. G. M. beṣi Sdh. beṣi, the first indicating 'boy, son' and the second 'girl, daughter.' The e-colouring in NI-A. must be due to an original e in **beṣṭa*- beṭṭi preserved as i in the extant Prakrit forms quoted above. But what is the original significance of this **beṭṭa*-?

<sup>1</sup> **chokkara*- might conceivably be derived from **chukkara*- < Sk. **kṣat-kara*- (cf. kṣudrā-) from the base √ kṣud-, indicating smallness, minuteness, with kṣ > ch. Actually from the base √ kṣu- with the t-formants we have kṣu- f. 'sneezing', kṣutkari f. black mustard. The **kṣu*- in **kṣut-kara*- may be from √ kṣud- with zero suffix.

<sup>2</sup> **choṣṭa*- might similarly be derived from **chulṭa*- < **kṣut-lvam* 'smallness' extended to mean 'small' after kṣudrā-.

H. P. larā, N. larā girl, daughter; N. larā boy, son; H. P. larā, A. larā, H. larā < **larā*- with -akka- extension; this **larā*- is compared by Turner with Sk. dhātupāṭha larāṭi is a child larāṭi plays. But G. lārā, M. lārā darling < **larā*-, thus giving a parallel to **choṭa*- and **choṭṭa*- indicated by N. choṭa and G. choṭi. There seems to be thus in I-A. a large number of alternate forms not derived from I-E. or OI-A. but formed during the Indian development of I-A. either through incorporation from non-Indo-Aryan languages or through hypersanskritizations of MI-A. forms (cf. larāṭi: larāṭi).

Similar to the above are the Hindi forms laurā boy, laurī girl, lauriyā daughter; if there is connection between the forms laurā and laurī then we may refer to Sk. nagnikā as one of the epithets of a small girl. On this other form see Turner under laurā stick.

Turning to the special Marāṭhi forms por, porā, pori: mūl, mūlgā, mūlgi and the dialect forms jhāl, jhālgā we notice at once the suffix -ga- in its extended form. Thus we have to deal in reality only with the bases por-, mūl- and jhāl- in order to discover their etymologies. The etymology of por- is easily connected with Sk. pota- with -ra- extension as Turner suggests under Nepali pothi 'hen, bird': here we have such cognate expressions as Ku. pothā any young animal, H. poṭi young female of any animal, but their relationship is not clear with Sk. pota-: Pa. pota, Pk. poṭa; A. po son, B. po son, poṭi young plant; O. po son puā young plantain or bamboo; H. poṭi young plant or animal; M. poṭi young snake, Sgh. pō young animal. As cognate with M. por we have G. pori little girl, poro insect. Although there is nothing exceptional in Turner's deriving M. por as a -ra- extension of Sk. pota- for it is quite a normal development, we have to observe here that Sk. pota- itself is an extension in -t- of I-E. **po-*, and it will not be unreasonable to consider here the extension in **-ro-* of this I-E. base attested for instance in Gk. pauros small, Lat. parvus, and which we notice also in Sk. **-pora-* as a second member of a compound in nīla-pora- śatapora- a species of sugar-cane. And this inherited form with the extension in **-ro-* might conceivably give us the M. and G. forms.

The matter of accepting direct I-E. origin with the t-formans and then with I-A. -ra- extension will only be a matter of personal faith, until the balance of probabilities is proved to be on one particular side.

The second word mūl with its dental -l- indicates a MI-A. **mulla*- which could be easily connected with Sk. mūla- in its derived form mūlya- 'being at the root' (i. e. 'beginning' by extension, hence start 'of life'), just as Pk. molla- < Sk. maulya- and here the matter might rest. Now several Christian dialects of Kōṅkaṇi have the words burgo, bhurgo, burgi, bhurgi respectively for 'boy' and 'girl,' and they are separable into a base bur- or bhur- with a suffix -go- corresponding to -gā- and a suffix -gi- corresponding to -gi- of Marāṭhī. It is not possible to connect this bur- or bhur- with any known variant of por- or mūl- considered above; and yet both the form as well as the meaning indicate that we have here to deal with one set of forms only. Is it possible to connect these different expressions as deriving from a common source?

Initially we may observe that the alternation bh-: m- has been claimed as an Austro-Asiatic characteristic by Przyluski in his discussion regarding the origin of such double forms in Sanskrit like bharu-: maru-,<sup>1</sup> bhalla-: malla-.<sup>2</sup> But in the present case it is difficult to posit any such origin, as the chances appear more favourable in the direction of Indo-European. Already in the Romance languages, which offer such a unique parallel to Indo-Aryan, we find that corresponding to Latin puer- itself being connected with I-E. **pu*-, one of the modifications of I-E. **pōu*- discussed above in connection with Sk. pota-. Similarly M. K. pīl 'young of an animal,' H. pillā, P. pillā 'pup' is connected with Lat. pullus. Thus K. b(h)urgo appears to be derived from this Pistoian burchio through the Portuguese connection with Goa. Thus por- and bhur- can ultimately be connected with I-E. **pōu*- or one of its modifications like **pzu*-: (**pau*-) **pū*-. Whether M. mūl- can be connected with the same base in I-E. must depend upon the change of p- to m- as a possible factor in I-E. or any of its cognate descendants. The formation with the NI-A. formans -gā-, -gi- for M. or -go-, -gi- for K.

<sup>1</sup> BSL 90. 197; bh-: m- ibid. 196-201.

BSL 90. 196; Turner, Nepali Dictionary 652b.

suggests the close parallelism existing between these three expressions.

In certain dialects of Marāṭhī and Konkani we find the vocabularies jhil- and jhilgā or jhilgo for 'son, boy.' This can only go back to a MI-A. **jhulla-*, perhaps in the sense of 'small' as in N. jhillā 'small fragments of sweetmeats.'

Closely connected with each other seem M. lāk, lākṛī and G. dīkṛī, dīkro and dikū 'a small stick (for cattle driving?),' the first four indicating 'child - boy or girl.' The MI-A. origin suggests forms like **lūka-* (: **lekha-*), **dikha-*, **dikka-* beyond which we cannot go at present.

There are a large number of other expressions which indicate this idea in NI-A. but they will not be discussed at this juncture. But there are two words in Sanskrit, kuppi- and golaka-, for an illegitimate child while the husband is still living. The first word goes back to I-E. **kurno-* (or **k. gurno-*) found in Gr. kurnoi. Old Icelandic hornungr. The idea seems to be connected with kupdam 'a round hole' just as golaka- signifies 'roundness.' Compare this with Sk. śiśu- 'child' < I-E. **keu-* 'to swell' and Sk. sāva-.

For the development of meaning from 'small' to 'child' we may now compare the following examples from Romance languages.<sup>1</sup>

1. Latin mīn a pet term for cat: Castellan miño 'small' but dial. of Hennegau minet 'delicate girl' Besranian menit 'child,' Spanish menino, -a 'page,' Jursian miña 'young girl' Catalanian minyó, boy, minyona 'maid' etc.

2. Latin parvulus 'small': Catalanian parvol 'child.'

3. Latin **pikk-* 'small': Abruzzian pīccerille 'boy,' Rumanian piciu 'young boy,' Canavese cel 'son,' pčita, četa 'daughter.'

4. Lat. pit 'small': Campidian pisterku 'boy.'

On the other hand an original 'small boy' tends to develop the concept of 'smallness': Lat. pūllus 'small boy' in Rumanian puchios 'small.'

<sup>1</sup> Meyer-Lübke Romanisches etymologisches Wörterbuch, s. vv. For Indo-European reconstructions reference is to be made to Walde-Pokorny indicated above.

THE ORIGIN OF NĀRĀYANA

BY

LILADHAR B. KENY

In the Mahābhārata the word Nārāyaṇa is explained as follows :

आपो नारा इति प्रोक्तास्तासां नाम कृतं मया ।
तेन नारायणोऽप्युक्तो मम तत्त्वयनं सदा ॥<sup>1</sup>

which can be translated thus : " Waters were called ( formerly )<sup>2</sup> as Nārā ; ( and ) by me is assumed their ( तासां )<sup>3</sup> name ; ( and ) moreover ( अपि ) that being my abode ( अयन ),<sup>4</sup> forever, I am called on that account, Nārāyaṇa . "

As the verse itself suggests, there is in the above passage, more of the Dravidian element than the Āryan. It says " Āpa " was formerly called as " Nārā ". Monier Williams, who apparently did not know Dravidian languages, says, while explaining the word ' nārā ', that it is " probably only a form

<sup>1</sup> Vana Parva, CXCH, 3. ( Kumbhakopam Ed. ). According to Dutt, it means " In days of yore, I called the waters by the name of Nāra, and because the waters have ever been my Ayana ( abode ), I am called Nārāyaṇa " : Mbh. Vana Parva, CLXXXIX, 3. ( Dutt's Tr. ). The same derivation of the word Nārāyaṇa is given in the Monumēnti, I, 10.

<sup>2</sup> This idea seems to have been embodied by Dutt in the expression ' In the days of yore '. The verb used in the text is in past tense which clearly refers to a past age.

<sup>3</sup> अप् and नारा are used in the feminine gender, here. And so this तासां, which is the genitive plural, refers to them, namely waters.

<sup>4</sup> Dutt explains the word अयन as ' an abode '. But the ordinary Sanskrit word for it is आश्रयन and not अयन. The word अयन, seems to be found twice only in Sanskrit literature, in the two passages referred to above ( cf. Apte and Monier-Williams ). This fact and the intimate connection of this word with the Dravidian word nārā, as well as its derivation from a clear Dravidian root leaves no doubt about its origin. This is very likely another Dravidian word which has passed to the Sanskrit vocabulary, just as अदधि, अग्नि, कल, कुटि, नीर, मीन, etc. ( cf. Caldwell, Comparative Grammar of the Dravidian Languages, pp. 567-575 ).

invented to explain Nārāyaṇa.<sup>1</sup> Caldwell thinks the word to have been derived from 'nir', which in Dravidian languages means 'water'.<sup>2</sup> Kittel and Beschi call it a Dravidian word.<sup>3</sup> Therefore the words themselves, of this verse, show that they explain an old Dravidian tradition.

Moreover as the Rṣi Mārkaṇḍeya narrates in this passage one of "the sacred events of ancient ages" (पुरावृत्ताः कथाः गुप्ताः),<sup>4</sup> we seem justified to state that the story of these events is a portion of the ancient pre-Āryan lore.

The name of the supposed Āryan god is a combination of three distinct and pure Dravidian words, namely, nār-ay-an. 'nār' or 'nir' (ā/i), as we have already seen, means in Dravidian languages 'water'; 'ay' in Tamil means 'to lie in a place';<sup>5</sup> and an is the male personal termination, in Dravidian. The word thus would mean 'one lying (residing) on waters'.<sup>6</sup> This seems to have been a Dravidian god of the seas.

<sup>1</sup> Monier Williams, A Sanskrit-English Dictionary, p. 479.

<sup>2</sup> "Nira, water; assumed derivation nī, to guide. This derivation shows that the word was not familiar to the Sanskrit Pandits. Bopp derives it from nūra, water "....." nira and nūra may have been originally identical, but a reference to the Dravidian languages will show that nira must have been the older form. The Dravidian nīr may perhaps be traced to nira, Tam.-Mal. 'to be level'....." "I have little doubt that to nira a Dravidian origin should be ascribed. The corresponding Dravidian word is nīr or nira; and as this is the only word properly signifying 'water' which the Dravidian dialects possess, they cannot be supposed to have borrowed it from Sanskrit." Comparative Grammar of the Dravidian Languages, p. 371.

<sup>3</sup> Kanarase-English Dictionary, pp. xxvii, 157; Beschi, Saturakarati p. 204 (Pondichery 1872).

<sup>4</sup> Mahābhārata, Vana Parva, CLXXXV, 46; of CLXXXVI, 2; CXCI, 2, 3, 15-18.

<sup>5</sup> I owe this information to the Rev. Fr. S. Gnana Prakasar, O. M. I., of Nallur, Jaffna, Ceylon.

<sup>6</sup> In the Bible, also, it is said that "the spirit of God moved over the waters": Gen. I, 2. It has already been shown how identical are some of the ancient Dravidian religious dogmas with the dogmas of the Hebrew nation. Cf. Heras, "The Religion of the Mohenjo Daro People according to the Inscriptions", Journal of the University of Bombay, V, p. 3. (i. n.); Heras, "La Tradición del Pecado del Paraíso en las Naciones proto-Indio-Mediterráneas" Revista Española de Estudios Bíblicos, I, pp. 1 ff.

It can be seen from the Mahābhārata that the passage we have quoted above, just follows the account of the Flood, which shows that they are two parts of the same account and so are connected with each other. But the story of the flood is not referred to at all in the R̥gveda and it is admitted that the Indo-Aryans never knew it. In this connection M. Burnouf concludes, as stated by J. Muir, that "although, as related in the Mahābhārata and the Purāṇas, the legend of the deluge has received in some respects an Indian character, it is not in its origin Indian."<sup>1</sup> By Indian Burnouf always supposes Āryan. Even Peake, after having studied all the accounts of the flood, comes to the conclusion that "The story can hardly be of Āryan origin, for it does not occur as we have seen, in the earliest religious books of this people, nor in those of the closely allied Persians." "It seems to have been a myth of some pre-Āryan inhabitants of India."<sup>2</sup> This also accounts for the passage of Nārāyaṇa, as given in the Mahābhārata, as originally being non-Āryan, but incorporated later on by the Brāhmapas while writing the 'great epic. They have, in fact, aryanised a non-Āryan God, probably of the people who had a high-sea commerce, and identified him with the present Viṣṇu of the Āryan pantheon.

It is well known that the Dravidians were a great sea-faring people,<sup>3</sup> quite in apposition with the Āryan tillers of the land.<sup>4</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Muir, Original Sanskrit Texts, I, p. 216.

<sup>2</sup> Peake, The Flood, New Light on an Old Story, p. 25.

<sup>3</sup> Auzan, Mithra, Zoroastre et la pré-histoire Aryenne du Christianisme, pp. 63, 103; Heras, "What was the original name of the proto-Indians?" The Eleventh All-India Oriental Conference, 1941. Summaries of papers, pp. 123-125; Hewitt, "Notes on the Early History of Northern India" Part II, Jour. Royal Asiatic Society, XXI, pp. 199-201; Heras, "Mohenjo Daro, the people and the Land" Indian Culture, III, p. 768; Herodotus, I, 173; VII, 92; Heras, "The origin of the round proto-Indian Seals discovered in Sumer" B. E. & C. I. Rly. Annual, 1938, pp. 47-48; Heras, "The Tirayars in Mohenjo Daro". Jour. of the Bom. Branch, Royal Asiatic Society, (N. S.), XIV, p. 73.

<sup>4</sup> It is admitted by Indo-European philologists that there is not a common word meaning 'sea' in the Indo-European languages, from which fact many authors deduce the consequence that the Āryas did not know the sea before their migration from their home land. Gordon Obblde, The Āryans, p. 89; Schrader, Pre-historic Antiquities of the Aryan Peoples, p. 353; Dutt, History of Civilisation in Ancient India, p. 8. cf. Heras, "The cradle of the Āryans" The New Review, V, p. 316. Cf. Hornell, "The Shank Shell Cult of India," Antiquity, XVI, p. 114.

The Phoenicians, who were a Dravidian tribe, the same as the Papis of the Rgveda,<sup>1</sup> had even a god Aleyan meaning 'the one of the waters'<sup>2</sup> or 'the one of the sea' for aley in Tamil, and ale in Tulu and Kannada languages mean 'wave' or 'sea' or 'water' and an is the male personal termination, as we have already seen. It seems to be the most appropriate name for the god of a sea-faring nation. In the poem of Ras Shamra, Aleyan is called 'the house of the sea' and even 'the sea' itself.<sup>3</sup> In one of the proto-Indian inscriptions referring to the 'tribe of the Tirayars (those of the sea)' the God of the Tirayars<sup>4</sup> is being mentioned.<sup>5</sup> This god of the Tirayars, being themselves the people of the sea, cannot be other than the 'God of the sea' which is being referred to in another inscription of the same period.<sup>6</sup> This god of the sea seems to be the same as the one described in the above passage, though we do not know his name as yet.

The Avadāna-śataka gives a story which says that the wife of a merchant of Rājagṛha, the capital of Magadha, worships and promises Nārāyaṇa, a golden wheel, on the safe return of her husband, who had gone to the sea. And, accordingly, on the safe arrival of her husband, she goes, with a golden wheel and incense, to the temple of Nārāyaṇa.<sup>7</sup> This is a very clear indication that Nārāyaṇa was worshipped by the people of Magadha (South Bihar) as the god of the seas. Now the Māgadhas were a non-Āryan people.<sup>8</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Autran, op. cit., pp. 67-68; Ludwig, Translation of the Rgveda, III, pp. 213-215; Cambridge History of India, I, p. 82.

<sup>2</sup> Montgomery-Harris, The Ras Shamra, Mythological Texts, pp. 33 ff.

<sup>3</sup> Desnaud, Les Découvertes de Ras Shamra (Ugarit) et l'Ancient Testament, p. 70.

<sup>4</sup> Heras, The Tirayars in Mohenjo Daro, J. B. B. R. A. S. (n. s.) XIV, p. 74.

<sup>5</sup> Ibid., p. 75.

<sup>6</sup> Avadāna-Śataka, I, p. 129; नृप नारायणस्य धामिष्वयं प्रतिष्ठितं यदि मे भर्ता इति-मागच्छति अहं ते सौवर्णचक्रं प्रदास्यामीति ।

<sup>7</sup> Oldenberg, The Buddha, p. 400; Satapatha Brāhmaṇa, I, 4. 1. 10. of S. B. E., XII, p. 104 (f. n.); Maltra, Fick's Social Organization, pp. 8-9; Heras, "New vistas of Indian History", What India Thinks, p. 118; cf. Macdonell and Keith, Vedic Index, I, p. 159. Banerji, Pre-historic Ancient and Hindu India, pp. 30-35; Vaidya, Epic India, p. 187; Modern Review, XXXVII, p. 639; Aiyangar, Ancient India, p. 6.

This probable Dravidian origin of Nārāyaṇa is the reason of the representation of Śeṣa-śāyī being supported by a Nāga residing on the seas.

The very word Śeṣa-śāyī corroborates the Dravidian character of Nārāyaṇa. The word means 'one sleeping (resting) upon Śeṣa. Śeṣa-nāga is the king of the under-world known as Pātālam, which is explained in the Mahābhārata as :

यस्मादलं समस्तास्ताः पतन्ति जलमूर्तयः ।

तस्मात्पातालमित्येव रुपायते पुरमुत्तमम् ॥<sup>1</sup>

It means " Since all those objects, having the form of water, fall on it; therefore is this excellent region known by the name of Pātālam " ( Udyoga Parva, XCIX, 6-10; Dutt's trans ). As we see here जलम् is explained as ' water '. We do not come across this or a similar word, meaning ' water ', in Sanskrit, but on the contrary ālam in Tamil or ala in Malayalam means ' water '.

The tradition of Brahmā springing from the navel of Nārāyaṇa seems to be due to the intention of brahmanizing the old deity. Thus the representation of Nārāyaṇa or Śeṣa-śāyī, without Brahmā rising from the navel, is probably the stepping stone to this brahmanization.

The representation of a pure Āryan god with a Nāga, would not seem quite suitable, Śeṣa being the king of the Nāgas, who were a Dravidian tribe.<sup>2</sup> It was the aryanisation of a Dravidian deity of the sea. He was identified, later on, with Viṣṇu and thus incorporated in the Āryan pantheon.<sup>3</sup>

But who is this Dravidian god of the waters (sea)? In the chapter prior to one from which we have quoted the reference to the origin of Nārāyaṇa, there is a passage describing the exact state in which Nārāyaṇa was found, after the flood, by the ṛṣi Mārkaṇḍeya. The passage says :

ततः कदाचित्पश्यामि तस्मिन्सलिलसंनिधी ।

न्यग्रोपं सुमहान्तं वै विज्ञातं पृथिवीपते ॥

ज्ञात्वायां तस्य वृक्षस्य विस्तीर्णायां नराधिप ।

पर्यङ्के पृथिवीपाल दिव्यास्तरणसंस्तुते ॥

<sup>1</sup> Udyoga Parva, XCIX, 6.

<sup>2</sup> Keny, ' The Nāgas in Magadha ' J. B. O. R. S. XXVIII, p. 163, n. 1.

<sup>3</sup> Hornell, op. cit. loc. cit.

उपविष्टं महाराज पद्मेन्दुसदृशाननम् ।

कुलपञ्चविंशालाक्षं बालं पश्यामि भारत ॥<sup>1</sup>

The representation of Nārāyaṇa on the tree, which is being said to be standing in the midst of waters all around, has a remarkable parallellism with the Supreme Being of Mohenjo Daro which is also represented as being on a tree.<sup>2</sup> And more striking still is a later passage of the Mahābhārata which identifies Nārāyaṇa with Viṣṇu, Brahma, Indra, Vaiśravaṇa, Yama, Śiva, Soma Kāśyapa, Dhātā, Vidhātā, the Sun, the Fire, the Stars<sup>3</sup> and even Kṛṣṇa.<sup>4</sup> Not only that but he is "...प्रभवः शान्त्वतोऽप्ययः । विधाता सर्व-भूतानां संहर्ता च..."<sup>5</sup> meaning "the source of all things, the eternal, the unchangeable...creator of all things and also the destroyer of all." Who else can this be, but the Supreme Deity of the Dravidians with whom the epic writers were so very interested in identifying all the Aryan<sup>6</sup> gods?<sup>7</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Mahābhārata, Vana Parva, CXCI, 91-93; Dott translates it as follows "I saw in that great expanse of water a great and wide extending Banian tree"....."I then saw seated on a cot overlaid with a celestial bed attached to one of the far extending boughs of that Banian tree A boy with a face as beautiful as the lotus or the moon:....." (Mahābhārata, Vana Parva, CLXXXVIII, 90-92). The idea, here, of representing god as a child is quite akin to that of the Mediterranean nations where the god of fertility is represented as a young boy (Telepinu, Adonis, Zeus, Jupiter) sometimes shown also over a tree (e.g. Zeus Volcanus, cf. Cook, Zeus, II, p. 946, fig. 638, 841) which is an evident symbol of fertility. In India there is a literary and iconographical tradition of representing god as a child or with a beautiful child-like face. Even the following chapter of the Mahābhārata, in continuation of the passage quoted, says that Nārāyaṇa is in the form of a boy though he is in fact old (".....अशिशुः शिशुरूपेण....." op. cit., CXCI, 41).

<sup>2</sup> Marshall, Mohenjo Daro and the Indus Civilisation, I, Pl. XII, No. 18; cf. Heras, "Tree Worship in Mohenjo Daro", Journal of the Anthropological Society of Bombay, Jubilee Volume, p. 37.

<sup>3</sup> Mahābhārata, Vana Parva, CXCI, 5-7, 51.

<sup>4</sup> Ibid., Vana Parva, CXII, 31.

<sup>5</sup> Ibid., Vana Parva, CXCI, 4.

<sup>6</sup> Among these Aryan gods mentioned in this passage the name of Śiva is also found. It might be well possible that this name of a Dravidian god should have been added to this catalogue of deities at a later period. Yet we may point out that though Śiva is a Dravidian god, his name seems to have been used by the Aryans for the first time. Cf. Heras, "The Aryan in India and Egypt" A paper submitted to the 5th Conference of Indian History, Hyderabad, Deccan; Banerji Sastri, Amra India, p. 18.

<sup>7</sup> This is only an individual instance of what is said in the first Maṇḍala of the R̥gveda एकं सद् विद्या यदुवा चक्षन्ति । I, 161, 45.

Thus this Nārāyaṇa of the Āryan pantheon seems to be the Supreme Being of the Mohenjo Darrians, a god who was probably styled Ān,<sup>1</sup> a name still kept in Tamil literature as Āndivānan, the proto-type of the historic Śiva.<sup>2</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Heras, Religion of the Mohenjo Daro People according to the Inscriptions, Journal of the University of Bombay, V, pp. 2-4. Heras, "The Plastic Representation of God amongst the Proto-Indians" Sardesai Commemoration Volume, (1936) p. 223.

<sup>2</sup> In a Śloka (Venba) of Oṭṭamaṇi Pulavar, a poet of the Saṅgam Period (1st century A. D.) we read the following expression in which Āndivānan is spoken of as adorned with a crescent on his head as befits Śiva. While addressing the king of Madura, Vananṅhamudi Pāṇḍya, the poet says: "O Pāṇḍya, thou who never bowest thy head to any body, art not thou perhaps prostrated at the feet of Āndivānan, while the progenitor of thy sacred race—the cool-rayed moon, at the touching of whose rays the lotus flower opens its petals and the nymphaes flower closes—rests upon his shining hair?" Thamipaddatirattu, Oṭṭamaṇi Pulavar, No. 19, (Madras, 1923). As may be easily deduced from the above passage the Pāṇḍya kings of Madura were supposed to belong to the Lunar race, that is the reason why the poet calls the moon, the progenitor of the race of the king.

A NOTE ON THE FAMILY RECORDS OF THE PESHTWA'S AGENTS AT DELHI

BY

G. H. KHARE

In the month of May 1942, while I was on tour in the Nasik district in search of historical material, I happened to visit Chāndōr, a village in the same district, from which hailed the Hingape family, many members of which acted as Peshwa's agents with various powers in the North some time or other in the last three quarters of the eighteenth century and the first quarter of the nineteenth century. There in the old house of Mr. Nilakanthrao alias Bhayyāsāhib Hingape, the Jagirdar of the place, I saw a big heap of old papers, account books, etc. out of which Sardar N. Y. Mirkar, his deceased father-in-law, after a continuous labour of three weeks had selected about 1500 documents for careful examination. Mr. Bhayyāsāhib Hingape, on my request, readily handed over to me all those documents. But as about 250 out of them were not directly concerned with historical events, being only private sale-deeds, receipts, etc., I left them there and brought with me to the Bharata Itihasa Samshodhaka Mandala remaining documents for careful study and publication if necessary and possible. On examining them, I find that at least 300 documents deserve immediate publication.

The pedigree<sup>1</sup> of the family runs thus :

<sup>1</sup> Based on original published and unpublished papers.

Padmaśkerabhaṭṭa and Govindabhaṭṭa, who must have lived in about the last and the first quarters of the 17th and the 18th centuries respectively, as is evident from sale-deeds etc., never seemed to have gone beyond their hereditary profession of a priest of pilgrims who used to flock at Nasik, before both the Peshwa and the Hingape families came into prominence, even as an offshoot of the family does the same even now.

Mahādevabhaṭṭa also followed probably the same profession for a long time before he arrested the attention of Bājirāo I, who took him into his service and sent him as his agent at the courts of Jaipur, Delhi, etc. He seems to have done his duties very well till a little before the 6th of February 1744 A. D. when he died of wounds received in an action fought between his and the exasperated sepoys formerly in the service of Savāi Jaisingh of Jaipur. At this time he was representing at Delhi both the Peshwa and the Ishvarsingh of Jaipur, a queer coincidence indeed.<sup>1</sup>

After him his three sons Bāpūji, Dāmodara and Puruṣottama acted as the agents of the Peshwas and exerted considerable influence with several powers in the North. But at home, their services did not bring them, it seems, much credit; for there are letters in this lot which clearly show that they were several times reprimanded for not representing the Peshwas and their generals at the various courts according to expectations.<sup>2</sup> It was for the same reason that their jagir, estate, inams etc. remained confiscated probably for one year (1757-58 A. D.). During this period they were continued in their offices and after taking a nazar of twenty lakhs, their estate etc. were returned to them.<sup>3</sup> In 1757 A. D. when Abdālī had been to Delhi, the three brothers fled away and took refuge at Zansi and other places, where died the second brother Dāmodara.<sup>4</sup> Now the fourth brother Devarāo took his place and came into prominence. All these brothers worked as

<sup>1</sup> Forandare Daftar Vol. I, no. 154.

<sup>2</sup> This lot nos. 992, 993, etc.

<sup>3</sup> Ibid and nos. 873, 1037.

<sup>4</sup> Selections from the Peshwa Daftar Vol. XXI, no. 103. Rajwade: महाद्वयं इति ह्येवं साधये (M. I. S.) Vol. I, no. 63.

Peshwa's agents till 1766,<sup>1</sup> 1782<sup>2</sup> and 1794<sup>3</sup> A. D. respectively ; for we see letters addressed by and to them till those years which were most probably the years of their deaths also.<sup>4</sup> We find the last brother Devrāo often mentioned as Divākara whose identity, however, is undoubted.<sup>5</sup> The sons of these brothers also took to this very profession ; but they did not seem to have risen very high in the esteem of the Marāṭhā Court.

The late R. B. Parasnīs had published in his now defunct magazine Itihāsa Saṅgraha hundreds of letters, written by Puruṣottama and Devarāo, which he found in the archives of Manavalli, the native place of Nānā Fāḍnavīs. But these refer to the post-Panipat period on which there is already a vast amount of first hand material. The late Mr. V. K. Rajwade, the great Savant of Marāṭhā History, indeed had an access to these family records as is apparent from about 275 documents published by him in his Sources of Marāṭhā History ( M. I. S. ) vol. VI. There are some stray letters of this family also published ;<sup>6</sup> but this lot excels all these in importance.

Most of these letters were sent by the several members of the Peshwa family as well as of Shinde, Holkar, Jādhava, Pawār and other sardar families and their dharmas and as such carry first rate importance. They throw a flood of fresh light on the aims of the Marāṭhā empire, the methods of achieving them, the drawbacks of various personages contributing towards the growth of the empire and a number of other points. Then there are drafts of letters sent by the members of the family to the Peshwas and to their sardars as also some letters written by various Rajput powers.

These letters supplement in many places what is already known ; sometimes they rectify false impressions ; at other times they reveal altogether new facts and help us to form a better estimate of the important personages of those times.

<sup>1</sup> Rajwade : M. I. S. Vol. VI, no. 435.

<sup>2</sup> Ibid no. 434.

<sup>3</sup> Ibid no. 438.

<sup>4</sup> This lot nos. 710, 493 show that Puruṣottama died on 27-3-1782 A. D.

<sup>5</sup> Ibid no. 112 and Rajwade : M. I. S. Vol. VI, no. 415.

<sup>6</sup> In the Selections from the Peshwa Daftar.

Owing to the difficulty experienced in fixing the dates of Marathi letters, I cannot tell with certainty which is the earliest letter among these; but a letter of Mahādevabhaṭṭa Hīngane from Delhi asking Rāpoṭi Shinde to retreat from Ujjain which he had captured while negotiations were in progress through him with the Mughal prime minister in Delhi in 1728 A.D. appears to be the earliest.<sup>1</sup> The latest documents belong to the beginning of the British regime in Delhi when some members of the family were still residing there.

As usual each letter contains at the beginning a long summary of the letter to which the former forms a reply and therefore fills in the deficiency caused by the absence of the original letters. The importance of this system of letter-writing can be easily realized from the fact that whereas about thirty letters of the pre-Panipat period addressed by the father and his four sons have by this time come to light, about four times this is the number of letters of the Peshwas etc., addressed to these persons, many of which contain the summaries of the original letters sent by them.

As a specimen I produce here a short letter<sup>2</sup> addressed to Bāpūji Mahādeva and his younger brother Dāmodara Mahādeva by Malharji Holkar and Jayaji Shinde on behalf of Balaji Bajirao Peshwa for which reason it bears his (B. B. P.) seal and signet generally used by his deputies. Though it is defectively dated as the 29th of Jumād II, it can be easily ascribed to the year 1749 A.D. and hence its date is the 4th of June of that year. Early in this year Nāsir Jang, the successor of Āsaf Jah Nizām-ul-Mulk I in the Dekkan under the pretext of an imperial order was trying to penetrate his way to Delhi with a view to chalk out a plan in concert with other nobles there for ousting the Marāṭhās from their acquisitions in the North and the South.<sup>3</sup> With this intention he even crossed Narmadā at the Akbarpūr ford. But as the Marāṭhās thought this action of his, harmful to their aim of expanding their own territory, the above two deputies blocked his way near Kota. Násir Jang thereupon under the same pretext began his return marches on the 19th of Jumád II (25-5-1749 A. D.) towards Burhanpur. Though the present letter supplies only partly the information given here, the lot contains a very long letter of Malhārjī Holkar addressed to the same persons which is replete with details bearing on this very subject.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> This lot nos. 1217, 1218.

<sup>2</sup> Ibid no. 741.

<sup>3</sup> Selections from the Peshwa Daftar Vol. II, no. 13; Maṣṭhūr-ul-Umarā Vol. III, pp. 850, 851.

The original letter runs thus :

श्री

राजश्री बापूजी माहादेव व राजश्री दामोदर माहादेव गोसावी यांसि

दे अखांडितलक्ष्मीआलंकृत राजमान्य

श्री मल्हारजी

होलकर व जयाजी सिंदे दंडवत विनंति उपरी येथील कुशल जाणौन स्वकीये कुशल लिहीत जाणे विशेष इकडील वर्तमान तर नवाब अकबरपूरच्या घाटावर आला आहे घाट उत्तरोन दिलीस जात आहे हे वर्तमान आइकिलीवर मनसबा पाहाता कदाचित् दरकूच जात असेल हे ध्यानात आणून बुलगे पेढारी व गौली वगैरे बाणी बकाल यास खेचीच्या रानात टाकून सडे लस्कर कोट्याच्या सुमारे आडवे व्हावे या विचारे आले असियास हे बातमी नवाब नासरजंग यास ठीक जाताच छ १९ जमादिलाखरी कूच करून माघारे बन्हाणपुराकडे रोल घरिला आहे बरकड सविस्तर आलाहिदा पुरवणी पत्रावरून कलेल छ २९ जमादिलाखर [ In different hand-writing* ] बहूत काये लिहिणे हे विनंती [ signet with the legend* ] लेखन सीमा

पो छ १३ रजब

[ The seal bears the following legend* ] श्रीराजा शाह नरपति

हर्षनिधान बाळाजी बाजीराव प्रधान

<sup>1</sup> This lot no. 1168.

ICONOGRAPHY OF CANDRA AND CANDRASEKHARA IMAGES

By

M. R. MAJUMDAR

To the average uninitiate of the West, Indian art, especially the figures of gods and goddesses in their numerous poses and functionings with their activities and qualities symbolised as hands, heads, weapons and mudrās (poses) appear a little out of the common if not uncanny or monstrous, and do not yield that pleasant feeling of intellectual repose which they derive by gazing at a figure of Apollo or Venus d'Medici; whereas, in the case of an Indian, their importance as religious objects for adoration and devotion is intensified by this very fact of extra limbs and weapons, and serves to focus his mind better as a preliminary to his enraptured ideal of silent contemplation (dhyāna).

The tall spire of the Hindu temple is one of the first objects to arrest the attention of the observant foreigner and excite his curiosity as he travels throughout India. On going to the temple, he meets with a number of what may perhaps appear to him to be grim and meaningless images in stone and bronze and other materials, some with two, others with four or more arms, holding a variety of weapons and other more or less curious articles in their hands. The innumerable gods and goddesses, comprised within the tolerant and all inclusive fold of the Hindu religion, are full of interest to him alone who cares to know and study their significance in their proper environment.

The Sanskrit texts on Iconography mention that the five planets—Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn,—along with the ascending and descending nodes of the Moon called Rahu and Ketu, with the Sun and the Moon, are collectively known as the Navagrahas.

The nine planets are worshipped by the Hindus and their images are generally found in all important Śaiva temples in South India. They are invariably placed in a separate maṇḍapa having a pediment of about three feet in height; and no two of them are made to face each other. While describing the respec-

PLATE I

Image from Sūrya-Kuṇḍa at Moḍherā, North Gujarāt.

PLATE II

Rājshāhi, Pabārpur, Śiva with crescent moon over head.
( Pabārpur Memoir, Pl. XXX, 6. )

PLATE III

Candra from Vajhnagar,
North Gujarat.

PLATE IV

Candra and Sūrya on one stone from Vajhnagar, North Gujarat.

PLATE V

Head of Moon-God from Bhilsa
(now in the Gwalior Archaeological Museum.)

PLATE VI

Candra, mounted on a chariot with ten horses from Central Museum, Nagpur.

PLATE VII

Candra.

From 16th Century Nava-graha painting on cloth from Gujarāt. The harina as vāhana, the prabhā-maṇḍala and the gada in one hand are remarkable.

tive positions of the various planet-images in a Sun-temple with the twelve forms of Sūrya, it is stated in the Rūpamaṇḍana that the Moon should be on the east of the temple. (पूर्वस्यां दिशि चन्द्रमाः । - रूपमण्डने श्लो. ६७).

The Navagrahas, including Soma or Candra, in varying orders are found carved on the lintel of some of the Hindu temples in India; but they are rather in a miniature form. Beautiful, separate and striking images in marble of Sukra, Śani, Rāhu and Ketu are found in the collection of the Rajputana Museum, Ajmer, although the image of Candra is missing.

Candra or the moon is also known as Soma; and is identified with the glistening drops of Soma-juice so well known in the Vedic period. His figure, according to the Amṛtamaṇḍalāgama, may be represented either as standing or sitting. In the latter case, the seat, upon which he is to sit, should be a siṃhāsana. The colour of Candra should be perfectly white and his head should be surrounded by a halo or prabhāmaṇḍala. He should also be adorned with various ornaments and a garland composed of all sorts of flowers and should be clothed in white garments. He should have two hands each of which should hold a white water-lily (kumuda). On his chest should be shown a golden yajñopavīta and his countenance should be beautiful and possess a peaceful (saumya) look.<sup>1</sup>

The Silparatna requires that the figure of Candra should be shown as seated in a chariot drawn by ten horses, that this deity should hold a gada in the right hand, and that the left should be held in the varada pose.

In the Rūpamaṇḍana, the Sanskrit text on Iconography, popular in Gujarāt and Western India during the glorious period of Hindu rule, references are available regarding the colour,<sup>2</sup>

- 1
 सोमस्तिहासनासीनः कुम्भशङ्खसमवृत्तिः ।
 प्रभामण्डलसंयुक्तो दिग्भवरसौम्यवक्त्रकः ॥
 आसीनो वा स्थितो वापि कुमुदीपवल्कलं करः ।
 देवपद्मोपवीताङ्गरसर्वभरणभूषितः ॥
 शृङ्खलवस्त्रधरदशान्तसर्वपुष्पैरलंकृतः । सोमं पर्वं समाकलयतः ॥

— भंशुमदभट्टनामने

2 श्वेतः सोमः । श्लो. १६.

the conveyance<sup>1</sup>, and the hands<sup>2</sup> of the Soma-image. Regarding the diadem and<sup>3</sup> ear-rings<sup>3</sup>, the references common to all the planet-images, apply to Soma also.

According to Agni Purāṇa, Candra should be shown as holding kamaṇḍalu and akṣasūtra which is actually the representation in the joint marble-image of Candra and Sūrya on one stone situated at Vaḍanagar, North Gujarāt. The Pahārpur image, to be referred to later, has also akṣasūtra in the right hand, and not exactly a kamaṇḍalu but something like a citron (mātulaṅga) in the left.

In the Varāha-panel at Mahābalipuram, up above the heads of Brahmā and Śiva to the right and left respectively of the Varāhamūrti are represented probably the Candra and the Sūrya, worshipping Varāha with folded hands, here represented only upto the middle of the body, the lower portion being left unsculptured evidently to suggest that they are up and unsupported in the sky. The figure of Sūrya is represented with a prabhā-maṇḍala round about the head, the edge of the lower circumference touching the chin of the image. The image of Candra here represented, however, does not help us in getting any knowledge about its iconography.

The Moḍherā image (to compare notes with the description of the Moon-image as given in the Āṇḍumadbhedāgama), has

- (1) a face which is shown surrounded by a halo (प्रभाजडलसेवुकः); and
- (2) is beautiful and shows a peaceful temperament (सौम्यवन्नकः).
- (3) It has two hands (द्विभुवः); but it is not possible to know what things were held by them as they are broken.
- (4) It is also not known whether it was a sitting (आसीन) or a standing (स्थित) figure, as only the upper portion of the body is available.
- (5) It has a golden yajñopavita (हेमयज्ञोपवीताहः).
- (6) It is adorned with various ornaments and garlands (सर्वाभरणभूषितः); and
- (7) it has a diadem (किरीटी), and has
- (8) ear-rings (रत्नकुण्डलशोभितः).

1 चन्द्रो दशहवः स्तुतः । अं. ६४.      2 पञ्चदशो नवेस्तुतः । अं. ६२.      3 ग्रहाः किरीटिनः कार्यो रत्नकुण्डलशोभिताः । अं. ६६.

The identification of this image (Plate I) noticed by me at the Sūrya Kuṇḍa, facing the famous Sun-temple at Modhera, North Gujarāt, and published in the Journal of the Bombay University in Vol. V, Part VI, May 1937, as Soma, requires reconsideration; as a great authority like Rao Bahadur K. N. Dikshit, the Director-General of Archaeology for India writes to me in a private letter that he is disposed to identify this image as being that of Candras'ekhara Śiva and not as of the planet Candra.

It was through his kind offices that the Superintendent, Eastern Circle, sent me a print of the photograph of a Candras'ekharamūrti (Plate II) found from Pahārpur excavations (Bengal), verily the oldest of the sculptures that are reproduced here.

Let us first consider the dhyaṇa of Candras'ekhara. Candras'ekharamūrti is one of the twenty-five Līlā-mūrtis of Mahēśa, who manifests himself to the devotees in different forms, performing several sports (līlās) as seated or standing, dancing or riding upon vehicles, as terrific (ugra) or pacific (śauṇḍya) and so on. The name Candras'ekharamūrti implies an image which has Candra (moon) as its head-ornament.

The generic form of Mahēśa has one face set with three eyes, the head adorned with a jatā-mukuta, four arms, and is standing on padmāsana. In two of his hands are the mṛga and the paraśu, and the remaining two hands are held in the abhaya and the varada poses. Śaśaśiva or Mahēśa may be conceived as having only one face set with three eyes which represent the Ichhāśakti, Jñānaśakti and the Kriyāśakti. Candraśālā (the crescent moon) stands as a symbol of jñāna (wisdom) picked up in the jatāmukuta and adorned with all ornaments such as the yaśuopastita. The Pās'upatamūrti is very much identical to the Candras'ekharamūrti in description<sup>1</sup>.

The Aṅgumadbhedāgama says that the Candras'ekara-kevalamūrti should have one of his right hands held in the abhaya pose, one of his left hands in the varada pose: the other

1 लघु पाशुपतं वक्ष्ये कन्दरशस्त्रवर्धितम् ।
चतुर्भुजं त्रिनेत्रं चाप्युर्वर्धितं महातनुम् ॥
दक्षिणेऽनवपक्षे बालं त्रपालं वरदं परे ।
प्रबालसङ्घातप्रसव्यं सर्वोत्तरणभूषितम् ॥ —शिवरत्ने

right hand should carry the ṭaṅka and the remaining left hand a black buck; Śiva should be standing erect, without any bends in his body, i. e. in the attitude known as samabhāṅga which is said to be expressive of the rājasa guṇa of the image.

He should be shown as wearing on his head a jaṭāmukuta ornamented with a crescent moon which may be attached to the right or the left of the jaṭāmukuta; also, he should have three eyes, a beautiful face and be adorned with all ornaments.

In the left ear of the image of Śiva Candras'ekhara there should be either the ear-ornament (rainakunḍala, śaṅkhaśāstra or padmapātra), whereas in the right ear there may be either the ornament makarakunḍala, siṃhakunḍala or patrakunḍala. The curls of hair should hang at the back as far down as the ear, while the jaṭā (braids or plaits) should hang on the right and left of the shoulders.

The figure should also be ornamented with several necklaces (muktāhāra, ratnāhāra); and there should also be yajñopavīta. Besides, there should be keyūras and other bracelets (bāṭakas) on the arms, the fingers should be adorned with rings and the waist with a zone, and the ankles with anklets. The figure should be standing upon a padmapīṭha.<sup>1</sup>

१ चंद्रशेखरमूर्तिः ।	समस्ततरणपाशाद्यकुचिनालनदामभिः ।
“हस्तमौलीपतिष्ठां तु वक्ष्ये लक्षणपर्विकां ।	संयुक्तद्विगुणोद्भूतपादनालकस्तंयुतः ॥
चतुर्भुजहिनेनश्च तमपास्तानके स्थिताः ॥	चंद्रशेखर एवं स्वादेभ्या च सहितो न वा ।”
सुराभक्तमायुक्तपूर्वैरक्षरपत्तवं ।	— उत्तरकामिकाधमे
वरदं वामहस्तं स्वादमर्षं दक्षिणे कोरे ॥	केवलमूर्तिः ।
... ..	“अमर्षं दक्षिणे हस्तं वरदं वाममुच्यते ।
पद्मपत्रिभ्या वापि शोभितं वामकर्णिकम् ।	वरदं वामहस्तं तु अधोमुखं प्रवलयेत् ॥
सर्वं मकरसिंहाख्यं पद्मकुण्डलकैर्युतम् ॥	जटामुकुटस्तंयुक्तं दक्षिणापेक्षुसंयुतम् ।
पृष्ठतः कर्णपर्यन्तं केशवर्तिविलम्बनम् ।	वामेन्दुशेखरं वायु प्रवालस्तदुदग्रमम् ॥
पार्श्वोर्वाङ्गमूलान्तु जटाश्रगां विलम्बनम् ॥	विनेषं सौम्यवदनं सर्वांगरजमण्यम् ।
हारचुम्बोक्तंयुक्तं तथा कर्णिकयाम्भितम् ।	पीताम्बरचरं देवं वज्राग्रौ नलकान्तरी ॥”
वक्षस्त्रयलं प्रकटैर्षं भुजाः केनूरसंयुताः ॥	— अंशुमद्वेदागमे शिवारत्ने च
मुपपन्नवलयोपेतास्तवैराज्योपशोभिताः ।	“अमयवरद्वहस्तं सौम्यशृङ्गारभावं ।
मुखाग्रामविलम्बाश्च तदग्रं मणिभूषणम् ॥	विपुलवदनमेतं चन्द्रविम्बांशुमौलिम् ॥
जटाग्रं जटकोपेतमङ्गुल्यो मुद्रिकान्विताः ।	कजुतनुतमुपादक्षानकं विद्वुषाम् ।
छत्रवीरोचरीषोपवीतस्तोदरवन्धनं ॥	हरिणपरशुसि पद्मपीठोपरिस्थम् ॥”
	— श्रीतरवनिधी

The Sanskrit texts quoted above are taken from T. A. Gopinath Rao's "Elements of Hindu Iconography", Vol. II, Part II, pp. 54, 55, 56 (1915).

The image from Pahārpur is rather unique in that the crescent moon is fixed on the jaṭāmukuta as in the case of the image at Moḍherā above-referred to; even though the Sanskrit texts require that the Candrakalā may be fixed either on the right or the left side of the jaṭāmukuta, and not on the top as in these two uncommon cases. (Vide Plate XIII, T. A. Gopinath Rao, Elements of Hindu Iconography, Vol. II, Part I. p. 109).

The two trunks of trees visible on each of the two sides of the image from Pahārpur appear to be some variety of palm, from which intoxicating juice like the Soma-juice of the Vedic times used to be extracted. This fact leads us to revise the identification of the image to be Soma (moon-god); and we are constrained to believe that it cannot be Candras'ekhara Ś'iva. Moreover, the two objects visible in the two hands of this image are exactly identical with those held by the image found from Vaḍanagar, North Gujarat (Plate III) where the image of Śūrya is also carved on the same marble pedestal upon which the sculpture of Candra is executed. This fact leaves no doubt regarding the identification of Candra (Plate IV) in case of the Vaḍanagar sculpture owing to the close proximity of Śūrya.

Of course, the representation of the crescent moon on the jaṭā in the case of the Pahārpur image and in the Moḍherā image is, however, quite identical; and is the principal feature which leads one to think of them as being connected with Candras'ekhara Ś'iva; but the Moḍherā fragment can be distinguished from this by its unique prabhā-maṇḍala.

The only surviving head of the Moon-God (Plate V)<sup>1</sup> from Bhilsā (Central India) now in the Gwalior Archaeological Museum, has a prabhā-maṇḍala worked out in the same way as in the Vaḍanagar image of Candra, the lower edge of the circumference touching the chin of the image.

An image of Moon-God has been illustrated and described by the late Mr. Natesha Aiyar in the Descriptive List of Exhibits in the Archaeological Section of the Nagpur Museum: "Sculpture (Plate VI) (ht. 2' 2") of greyish buff-coloured sandstone, is in good preservation representing Candra, the Moon, seated cross-legged in an arched niche surrounded by a border of leaves probably meant for rays. The seat consists of a chariot drawn by ten-horses, five on each side, and provided with two wheels. The god holds a lotus-bud in his right hand. His left hand, which rests on his lap, is partially damaged, and must have been held down originally in the boon-granting attitude (Skr. varadamudrā). He wears a peculiar cap, hemispherical in shape, as well as a necklace. There is a headless animal sitting on his right thigh which can be identified with his cognizance, a hare. In front of him is his charioteer with mutilated head.

1 Photo kindly lent by Mr. N. B. Gande, Director of Archaeology, Gwalior state.

The Sculpture is said to have come from Mandla.

The following description of this god occurs in the S'ilparatna,

चंद्राधिपे विधातव्यः श्वेताम्बरसमावृतः ।
दशश्वेताश्वसंयुक्तमारुहः स्यान्दनं शुभम् ॥
दिग्भुजो दक्षिणे पाणौ गदां विभ्रतृभूदरीम् ।
वामरथवरदे हस्ते शशाङ्कश्च निरुप्यते ॥

Again in a quotation from the Natsyapurāṇa contained in Hemādri's Caturvargaśāstramāṇi, the description runs thus:—

चन्द्रः श्वेतवपुः कार्यः श्वेताम्बरधरः प्रभुः ।
चतुर्बाहुर्महावेजाः सर्वभरणभूषितः ॥
कुमुदौ च सितौ कार्यौ तस्य देवस्य हस्तयोः ।
कान्तिर्भूर्लिमती कार्यौ तस्य पार्श्वे तु दक्षिणे ॥
वामे शोभा तथा कार्यौ रूपेणाप्रतिमा मुवि ।
विहङ्गं तथास्य लिङ्गाङ्गं वामपार्श्वेऽर्कवज्रवेत् ॥
दशाश्वश्च रथे कार्यौ द्वे चक्रे वरसारथिः ।
श्वेतः श्वेताम्बरधरः श्वेताश्वः श्वेतभूषणः ।
गदापाणिर्द्विबाहुश्च कर्तव्यो वरदः शशी ॥<sup>1</sup>

This variety of the image-making of Candra is according to Sanskrit texts; however, he is represented as seated, and though it has two hands, there is very little in common with the illustrations described above.

The points common to the lions of Candra and Candras'ekharamūrti, as well as those of dissimilarity between them can be better appreciated when collected together as under:—

Candra and Candras'ekharamūrti are (1) standing, (2) in the śamabhaṅga (erect) pose, (3) with ornaments on various parts of the body (4) and a yajñopavīta (5) with udarabandhana (girdle)<sup>1</sup> (6) and the figure of crescent moon on the head (7) the face being serene—saumya (derived from Soma).

1. This relevant quotation with the photograph Plate VI is due to the courtesy of the Curator, Nagpur Museum.

The points of difference as can be gathered from the Sanskrit texts are as under : (1) Candra has two eyes ; Candras'ekhara S'iva is everywhere mentioned with three eyes ; (2) Candra has two arms (excepting the Viṣṇudhāramottara text which mentions four arms) ; Candras'ekhara has always four except we rely on the descriptions of Sadyojāta and Tatpuruṣa given in the Rūpamaṇḍana ; (3) Candra has a halo-prabhāmaṇḍala-according to texts as well as in actual sculptures ; Candras'ekhara has none ;<sup>2</sup> (4) Candra is mentioned white in colour like a conch ; Candras'ekhara reddish white like pravāla ; of course, both are compared with products from the ocean ; (5) Candra may be represented either seated or standing ; Candras'ekhara as always standing in an erect pose ; (6) things held in two hands, in examples where hands are in fact, are almost identical, the akṣasūtra being common in the right hand ; but the other hand in case of Candramūrti holds a kamaṇḍalu, and in the Candras'ekhamūrti holds a citron (mātulūṅga,) or it may be a broken kamaṇḍalu. (7) Candra has the plaits of hair worked up in a jāṭmukuta ; Candras'ekhara from Pahārpur has the plaits of hair spread on both the shoulders.

The descriptions given of Tatpuruṣa S'iva<sup>3</sup> (Rudra) and of Sadyojāta S'iva (Rudra) in the Rūpamaṇḍana, lead us partly to identify the Pahārpur image as that of Candras'ekhara S'iva. Whereas the description of the former tallies with the actual

1 The grudhina or the girdle in case of the Pahārpur image is very simple as contrasted to the elaborately ornamented one of the Vadanagar Candra image, suggesting a pretty early date for the former.

2 In two examples, the crescent moon is on the top of the jāṭā, in the other two instances, it circumscribes the lower end of the face, touching the chin, and forms a part of the prabhāmaṇḍala. T. A. Gopinath Rao notices on page 121 of Vol. II, Part I that : "In case of Candras'ekhamūrti whether in company with his consort or not, it should have around him the prabhāmaṇḍala. It must also be noted that this image of S'iva should always be a standing one." No text, however, has been traced regarding the prabhāmaṇḍala for Candras'ekhamūrti.

3

पीताम्बरस्तपुरुषः पीतवस्त्रोपवीतवान् ।

मातुलुङ्गं चरे वामेऽक्षमाला दक्षिणे तथा ॥

—रूपमण्डने तपुरुषः । अ. ८, सू. १२.

sculpture as far as it has a yajñopavīta, a pitāmbara-cloth wrapped round the body, and it holds akṣamāiā in the right hand and may be a mātulaṅga (citron) in the left ; but it does not make mention of the crescent moon, the main convincing item for such an identification.

In the description of Sadyojāta Śiva<sup>1</sup> over and above the white cloth, the image has white garlands, plaits of hair with crescent moon on its top, three eyes, a peaceful look. kuṇḍalas in the ear, and the two hands in the varada and abhaya poses. But then, this differs from the actual sculpture as far as the holding in the two hands is concerned ; there is also no trace of the third eye.

Thus, anyway, there is no text directly and fully helpful in identifying the Pabārpur image as being that of Candras'ekhara Śiva, to my knowledge.

Scholars are invited to throw more light on the dubious identification of these and the like Candra and Candras'ekhara-mūrtis in interests of the study of Hindu Iconography.

MANVANTARA-CATURYUGA METHOD

(as employed in Purāṇas for chronological computations)

By

D. R. MANEAD

In my papers on 'The Yugas'<sup>1</sup> and 'The Manvantara'<sup>2</sup>, after examining the question of Yugas and Manvantara, I have based the following conclusions. (1) All the Yugas, at first, had equal number of years, each having 1000 years at first and then 1200 years, the total of four Yugas being at first 4000 years and then 4800 years. (2) Yugas were computed at various figures, so were caturyugas. (3) Manvantara was used in two senses: (a) period from one Manu (Manu being a generic dynastic title for a king) to another Manu, or (b) period from a Manu (starter of a dynasty) to any king of his line. (4) Caturyuga in the usual Puranic formula 'caturyugāṇaṃ hi saṃkhyatā sādḥikā hyekasaptatiḥ manvantaram' was computed at 40 years. (5) I have further suggested that the Purāṇas employ what I call Manvantara-caturyuga method for longer chronological computations. The method was employed thus. They took a unit of 40 years (termed as caturyuga) and in a given dynasty they kept as many kings as the units of 40 years were required. If a dynasty lasted for 200 years and even if during these 200 years there ruled ten kings of that dynasty, the Purāṇas would keep only five prominent names and omit others, for they would require five units of 40 years (i.e. five caturyugas) each. Thus in our Puranic genealogical tables of Solar and Lunar branches, the kings who are enumerated are really speaking caturyugas or king-units or regnal units of 40 years each (of course, on an average). This is what I mean by Manvantara-caturyuga method. (6) I have also shown that such Manvantara-caturyuga computations were made particularly in the days of the 71st, 72nd and 73rd kings, and more particularly in the days of 72nd king. It is, therefore, that we have Manvantara (=total regnal period of a dynasty upto a particular point) equal to 71 caturyugas.

I shall, here, show how this method is actually used in our Puranic genealogies.

---

1. See Poona Orientalist April 1942.

2. See IHQ (article appearing shortly).

2. Manvantara of 71 Caturyugas

Let us see if manvantara computations were made in the reign of the 72nd king.

This tradition of 71 kings or caturyugas in one manvantara is found in the Purāṇas in one other connection also. In most of the Purāṇas, which give full lists of Solar and Lunar dynasties, the dynasties stop with Sumitra and Kṣemaka respectively. But after all the dynastic lists are over, there are certain general concluding remarks made in almost all such Purāṇas. They are important. I shall quote relevant portions of these remarks from two or three sources.

In Matsya it is said in these concluding remarks: (273rd)

एवं राजर्षयोऽतीताः शतशोऽथ सहस्रशः ॥१४
 मनोर्वैवस्वतस्यासन्वर्तमानेऽन्तरे विभो ।
 तेषां तु निधनोत्पत्तौ लोकसंस्थितयः स्थिताः ॥१५
 न शक्यो विस्तरस्तेषां संतानस्य परस्परम् ।
 तत्पूर्वोपरयोगेन वक्तुं वर्षशतैरपि ॥१६
 अष्टाविंशत्सुगाख्याता गता वैवस्वतेऽन्तरे ।
 एते देवगणैः सार्धं शिष्टा ये तावन्निबोधत ॥१७
 चत्वारिंशत्त्रयश्चैव भविष्यास्ते महात्मनः ।
 अवशिष्टा युगाख्यास्ते ततो वैवस्वतो ज्ञेयम् ॥१८

In Vayu similar verses are found; the last two verses read thus: (99th).

अष्टाविंशदुगाख्यास्तु गता वैवस्वतेऽन्तरे ।
 एता राजर्षिभिः सार्धं शिष्टा यास्ता निबोधत ॥४५९
 चत्वारिंशच्च वैः चैव भविष्या सह राजभिः ।
 युगाख्यानां विशिष्टास्तु ततो वैवस्वतक्षये ॥४६०

In Brahṁaṇḍa (3,74) these verses read thus:

अष्टाविंशदुगाख्यास्तु गता वैवस्वतेऽन्तरे ॥२१२
 एते राजर्षिभिः सार्धं शिष्टा यास्ता निबोधत ।
 चत्वारिंशत्त्रयश्चैव भविष्या सह राजभिः ॥२१३
 युगाख्यानावशिष्टास्तु ततो वैवस्वतक्षयः ।

It will be seen that Brahṁaṇḍa reading is the best. These verses say that, so far 28 yugākhyās have elapsed and 43 more yugākhyās are to elapse yet. Here yugākhyā is the same as caturyuga.<sup>1</sup> Thus it is said that 28 caturyugas have passed so far and 43 more are to pass. Then there will be 'vaivasvatakṣaya'. This evidently means that 28 caturyugas of a manvantara have passed and 43 are to pass. Thus a manvantara had 71 caturyugas.

On reading the above statements of the Purāṇas that 28 caturyugas have passed, we are at once reminded that according to our traditional calculation, we are, now, in the 7th manvantara's 29th caturyuga, 28 caturyugas having already passed. Of course, traditionally it is said that at present 6 manvantaras, 28 caturyugas and 3 yugas have passed. This will again remind us that according to Āryabhaṭṭa 6 manus, 27 caturyugas and 3 yugas have passed.

Why is it so universally believed that 28 or 27 caturyugas of the 7th manvantara have passed? Let us see.

When were the 28 caturyugas over according to the above verses? These concluding remarks are put after Solar and Lunar lines are all over; and the obvious conclusion is that before Sumitra and Kaemaka, who are pronounced to be the last of the Aikṣavākus and Ailas, 28 caturyugas were over. Taking caturyuga to be a ruling generation it would mean that before Sumitra 28 kings had passed. But of which manvantara 28 kings had passed? The calculation cannot be from Manu Vaivasvata, for, according to Purāṇas, as we find them to-day, Sumitra was about 120th from Manu and not 28th or 29th.

My explanation is this. I suggest that when the 71st king from Manu Vaivasvata was dead, one manvantara was actually taken as closed and another Manvantara was taken as started. I shall later give my evidence for this statement, but taking for the present that after the reign of the 71st king was over, a new manvantara was taken as started, we can say that Sumitra should have been the 29th king of that manvantara or, in other words, he should have been the 29th king after the 71st king from Manu Vaivasvata. Then it would be said that of this new manvantara (which would be taken as started with the accession of the 72nd king) 28 caturyugas or ruling generations had passed before Sumitra. But from which king was Sumitra the 29th king? When was the new manvantara taken as started? Who was the 71st king after whom Sumitra was 29th?

1 Cp. Mbh. (Vana, 186, 33) एषा द्वादशाहली युगास्व परिकीर्तिता, where yugā-khyā is clearly used in the sense of caturyuga.

We shall examine Sumitra's descent. Starting from the close of the Mahābhārata war, we get the following genealogy of the Solar line in different Purāṇas.

TABLE I

№	Vāyu	Viṣṇu	Matsya	Bhāgavata	Bhaviṣya	Garuḍa
1	Bṛhadbala	...*	...	...	...	...
2	Bṛhatkṣaya	...	...	...	Bṛhadaiśāna Maukṣepa	...
3	Kṣaya	Urukṣaya	Kṣaya	Urukriya	Vatsapāla	Kṣaya
4	Vatsavyūha	...	Vatsadroha	...	...	...
5	Prativyūha	...	...	...	...	Bṛhadaiśa
6	Divākara	...	...	...	...	...
7	Sahadeva	...	...	...	...	...
8	Bṛhadaiśva	...	Dhṛvāśva	...	...	...
9	Bhānuratha	...	Mahābhāga	...	...	...
10	Pratibāśva	...	...	...	...	...
11	Supratīta	...	...	...	...	...
12	Sahadeva	Maruḍeva	...	...	...	Maruḍeva
13	Surakṣatra	...	...	...	...	...
14	Kicnara	...	...	...	...	...
15	Antarikṣa	...	...	...	...	...
16	Superna	...	Suṣena	...	...	...
17	Amitrājīta	...	...	...	...	...
18	Bharadvāj	...	...	...	...	...
19	Dharmī	...	...	...	...	...
20	Vrāta	Kṛtāñjaya	...	...	...	...
21	Raṇāñjaya	...	...	...	...	...
22	Samjaya	...	...	...	...	...
23	Sākya	...	...	...	...	...
24	S'uddhodana	...	Siddhārtha	...	...	...
25	Rāhula	...	...	...	...	...
26	Prasenajit	...	...	...	...	...
27	Kṣudraka	...	...	...	...	...
28	Kaulika	...	...	...	...	Sammitra
29	Suratha	...	...	...	...	...
30	Sumitra	...	...	...	...	...
	30	30	29	28	29	25

* Three dotted lines show that the same name occurs in the Purāṇa.

From this table we find that according to Vāyu and Viṣṇu, Sumitra was 30th from Bṛhadbala, according to Matsya and Bhaviṣya he was 29th, according to Bhāgavata he was 28th and according to Garuḍa he was 25th from Bṛhadbala who was killed in the Mahābhārata war. Mr. Sita Nath Pradhan, who has tried to reconstruct this line, puts Sumitra as 28th from Bṛhadbala, but he admits that both Vrata and Rapañjaya ruled separately and thus even according to Mr. Pradhan, taking the ruling generations, Sumitra was 29th from Bṛhadbala.<sup>1</sup> I, however, suggest that according to Purāṇas, as Vāyu and Viṣṇu have it, Sumitra was 30th from Bṛhadbala. The discussion that now follows is by itself the proof of this.

Now let us take the Lunar line from Mahābhārata war. From Abhimanyu to Kṣemaka we have 26 to 30 kings (both inclusive). I shall give the table.

TABLE II

No.	Viṣṇu	Matsya	Garuḍa	Bhāgavata	Vāyu
1	Abhimanyu	...	...	...	...
2	Parikṣit	...	...	...	...
3	Janamejaya	...	...	...	...
4	Sātānika I	...	...	...	...
5	Advamedhadatta	...	...	Sahasrānika	...
6	Adhisīmākṣa	...	...	...	...
7	Nicaknu	Vivakṣu	Kṛṣṇa	Nemicakra	...
8	Uṣṇa	Bhuvī*	Aniruddha	...	...
9	Vicitraratha	...	...	...	...
10	Suciratha	...	...	Kaviratha	...
11	Vṛṣṇiman	...	...	...	Dhṛtiman
12	Suśeṣa	...	...	...	...
13	Sunītha	...	...	...	Sutīrtha Ruca
14	Nṛpaśakṣu	...	...	...	...
15	Sukhibala	...	...	...	...
16	Pariprava	...	...	...	...
17	Sunaya	Satapā	...	...	...
18	Medhāvi	...	...	...	...
19	Ripañjaya	Purañjaya	Nrpañjaya	...	...
20	Mṛdu	Urva	Hari	Durvā	...

1 See his chronology of Ancient India, pp. 250-259. Mr. Pargiter's text accepts 30 kings.

* Named as Bhūmi in a Ms. of Mt. (Int of Pargiter.)

21	Tigma	...	...	Timi
22	Brhadraha	...	...	...
23	Vasudāna	...	...	Sudāna
24	S'atānika II	...	...	...
25	Udayana	...	...	Dardamāna
26	Ahinara	Vabinara	...	...
27	Daṇḍapāṇi	...	...	...	...
28	Naramitra	...	...	...	...
29	Kṣemaka	...	...	...	...
	29	28	26	27	22+8=30

It will be seen from this that from Abhimanyu, who, like Brhadbala, died in the Mahābhārata war, to Kṣemaka, the last of the line, we have 29 according to Vn, 28 according to Mt, 27 according to Bg, 26 according to Gd and 22 according to Vy. But in Vāyu there is a gap of eight kings from Ripuñjaya to Ahinara. Therefore, according to Vāyu there were 30 kings. Moreover, Vāyu is explicit about this. It explicitly declares that there will be 25 future kings, i. e. 25 from Adhisīma to Kṣemaka (for Adhisīma was the sāmprata king) both inclusive.<sup>1</sup> Thus even in this line, we have 30 kings from Abhimanyu, i. e. from the close of the Mahābhārata war.

Both Brhadbala and Abhimanyu were killed in the great war. From them the last kings in their lines viz. Sumitra and Kṣemaka were 30th in number. In both these lists, Divākara and Adhisīmākṛṣṇa are taken as sāmprata kings, i. e. Purāṇas were closed in their days. From Divākara to Sumitra and from Adhisīma to Kṣemaka there were 25 kings (both inclusive).

Now according to Purāṇas, as quoted above, with Sumitra and therefore also with Kṣemaka, 28 caturyugas, i. e. ruling generations had passed and 29th was passing. This was in the new manvantara. That is, both Sumitra and Kṣemaka should be 29th after the death of the 71st king with whom one manvantara would be over and another would start. Now in order that Sumitra and Kṣemaka should be 29th after the death of the 71st king, Brhadbala and Abhimanyu should be taken as 71st kings. Therefore, manvantara was taken as closed with the end of the Mahābhārata war or with the death of Brhadbala and Abhimanyu.

1 See Vy. 99, पञ्चविंश नृपा द्योते भविष्या पूर्ववंशजाः । २११

Therefore in the Solar line, I take Bṛhadbala to be the 71st and in the Lunar line, Abhimanyu to be the 71st. Sumitra thus will be 29th after Bṛhadbala, 25th from Divākara the sāmprata king and 100th from Vaivasvata Manu.<sup>1</sup> Similarly, Kṣemaka will be 29th after Abhimanyu, 25th from Adhisimakṛṣṇa and 100th from Vaivasvata Manu. I know that according to the present Purāṇas the actual numbers of Bṛhadbala and Abhimanyu are not what I have given above. But I have shown elsewhere<sup>2</sup> that Bṛhadbala's number was originally 71st. This will apply to Abhimanyu also.

Thus it would be said that with Sumitra and Kṣemaka 28 caturyugas had been over and 29th was passing (or three quarters of the 29th had passed)

Now Āryabhaṭṭa, who takes manvantara to have 72 caturyugas, is bound to say that of the new manvantara, 27 caturyugas and 3 yugapādas had elapsed. If after the death of the 71st king, 28 caturyugas had gone after the death of the 72nd king, 27 caturyugas had gone. Thus it will be seen that the usual calculation is made after the death of Abhimanyu, while Āryabhaṭṭa's calculation is made after the death of Parikṣit. But both come down to the same point i.e. Sumitra. Thus the discrepancy of one caturyuga seen in Āryabhaṭṭa's statement is due to the fact that he took the manvantara as closed after the death of the 72nd king and not after the death of the 71st king as the usual calculation does.

It may be here objected that Āryabhaṭṭa's calculation is from the beginning of the Kalpa to the Mahābhārata war and not from the Mahābhārata war to Sumitra as I have suggested. That is how his statement is usually interpreted. Let us see how the matter stands. Here is his statement :

कादो मनवो ढ (२४) मनुयुगादस्व (१२) गतास्ते च (६) मनुयुगह्ना (२७) च ।
कल्पादेर्युगपादा ग (१) च गुरुदिवसाच्च मारतात् पूर्वम् ॥

This may be construed as कल्पादेः भारतात् गुरुदिवसात् पूर्वम् । and that is how it is usually done. But let us put this in proper prose order :

1 Cf. Vy. 99 ऐलवंशस्य ये क्वातास्तपैर्देवाकृतां नृपाः ।

तेषामेकहस्तं पूर्णं कृत्वा नामनिर्देशिणाम् ॥ ४५१

2 See D. R. Manaké : Pre-Mahābhārata Solar Dynasty in Bhāratiya Vidyā 1942 2nd issue.

कादो? मनवो द, मनुयुगास्त्र पूर्वम्, कल्पादेः ते च, भारतात् गुर्वदिवसात् च, मनुयुगज्ञाना च, युगपादा ग च गताः ।

I would translate this thus: "What is a day? 14 Manus. There are 72 Manuyugas. From the start of Kalpa they 6 (i. e. manus 6), and from the Bhārata Thursday, manuyagas 27 and yugapādas 3, have passed previously i. e. before now."

If we do not translate as I have done, what will be the force of 'ca' after 'gurudivasāt'? Why is that 'ca' put? Therefore, Āryabhaṭṭa means: "Previous to this, i. e. before now (pūrvam), from the kalpādi and from the Bhārata Thursday, 6 manus, 27 caturyugas (which are here significantly called manuyagas) and 3 yugapādas have passed." That this is the only sense that can be given to this statement, will be clear to every reader from what I have said previously and from what I shall say now. Kalpa here will mean the start of Svāyambhuva Manu's manvantara.

Thus on examining why we take the present caturyuga to be the 29th of the 8th manvantara, we have incidentally proved that a caturyuga was taken as a ruling unit, that a manvantara was taken as closed after the death of the 71st king, that a new manvantara was taken as started after the 71st king and that with this 71st king Mahābhārata war ended.

2. Yuga of 1000 years

Now let us consider one other point which arises from this discussion. We have said that a yuga was first computed at 1000 years and later at 1200 years, as a caturyuga (bigger) was first computed at 4000 years and later at 4800 years. We shall now proceed to see if there are any positive proofs for this.

It will be seen that in the reign of Parikṣit and Janamejaya, there was a lot of Puranic activity. Bhārata was written. Purāṇas were recast. Vedas were finally arranged. It was at that time that 71 caturyugas from Vaivasvata Manu were over i. e. 71 ruling units were over. We have taken Abhimanyu as the 71st, so Parikṣit was the 72nd. It was in the 11th regnal year of Parikṣit that this reconstruction was made.<sup>1</sup> One man-

1 I have based this statement on the fact that according to Romaka theory a yuga had 2850 years. Now Romaka theory does not recognise manvantara, kalpa etc. See [Bhāratīya Jyotiṣaśāstra, by S. B. Dikṣit, p. 155]; vantara was closed and, as I hope to show in future, there was a traditional reason to close the line at the 71st king, from Manu, so a new manvantara was taken as started with Parikṣit, the 72nd king. This activity of revision and reconstruction seems to have continued in the reign of Janamejaya also. Still we find that the genealogical lists were closed finally in the days of Adhisīmākṛṣṇa, as he is taken as the sāmprata king. Why was it so? Adhisīma is not a famous king otherwise. He was the great-grandson of Janamejaya and thus removed by only two degrees from him. And as all was practically recently reconstructed, what was the reason of taking Adhisīma as the sāmprata king and of closing the king-lists in his days? I shall answer.

(continued on the next page)

Taking Abhimanyu to be 71st king-unit, Adhisīma will be 76th from Manu and taking that, as yet, a yuga of 1000 years only was in vogue, we shall see that the third yuga or the Dvāpara closed with the death of the 75th king named As'vamedhadatta ( $75 \times 40 = 3000$ ). Just as manvantara was closed after Abhimanyu, Dvāpara was over after As'vamedhadatta. Thus Dvāpara was over five ruling generations or 200 years after the manvantara was over. Lists were closed in the days of Adhisīma and Divākara, because such an important event as the closing of a yuga had happened then.

If this is true i. e. if a yuga was computed at 1000 years and if Dvāpara was over with the reign of As'vamedhadatta, whom we have taken to be 75th from Manu Vaivasvata, then Kali should have been over 25 ruling generations after As'vamedhadatta or with the 100th king. We have seen that both Sumitra and Kṣemaka were 100th kings. Thus the Kali should have been over in their days or with them. Is there any indication of Kali closing in the days of Sumitra and Kṣemaka?

(continued from the previous page)

युगमन्वतरकत्वाः कालपरिच्छेदकाः स्मृतावुच्यते ।

वरमात्र रोमके ते स्मृतिपादो रोमकस्तस्मात् ॥

This means that Romaka did not recognise the manvantara, yugas and kalpas as known to others. Therefore, his yuga of 2500 years is distinct. I suggest that his yuga is here equal to manvantara. If so, according to Romaka, manvantara was closed 2500 years after Manu i. e. according to our key ( $2500 \div 40 = 62.5$ ) in the 72nd king's reign or to be exact after 10 years had passed of the rule of the 72nd king i. e. of Parikṣit.

I have to submit that Purāṇas very clearly declare that Kalki had closed with both these. I shall quote from Vayu :

ईक्ष्वाकूनामयं वंशो सुमित्रान्तो भविष्यति
यतस्तं प्राप्य राजानं संस्थां प्राप्स्यति वै कलौ । (कलिः)
(99, 992-93)

and again धेमकं प्राप्य राजानं संस्थां प्राप्स्यति वै कलौ (99, 279)

And apart from these definite statements there is a very strong corroborative proof for this in the Purāṇas. I have shown elsewhere<sup>1</sup> that Sumitra and Kṣemaka were contemporaries of Kalki. And all our literature loudly proclaims that with Kalki Kaliyuga ended and Kṛtayuga started. I shall only give two quotations :

Agni (16th) कल्की विष्णुवशः पुत्रो दाशवत्क्यपुरोहितः ।
उत्सादयिष्यति भ्लेष्छान्दहृतास्त्रः कृतानुधः ॥ ८
स्थापयिष्यति मर्यादां चातुर्वर्ण्यं यथोचिताम् ।
आश्रमेषु च सर्वेषु प्रजाः सिद्धवर्त्मनि ॥ ९
कल्किरूपं परित्यज्य हरिः स्वर्गं गमिष्यति ।
ततः कृतयुगं नाम पुरावत् सम्मविष्यति ॥ १०

Here it is said that Kṛta started with the death of Kalki. Bhāgavata (12, 2) :

शम्भुलपाममुखस्य ब्राह्मणस्य महात्मनः ।
मयने विष्णुवशसः कल्किः प्रादुर्मविष्यति ॥ १८
अश्वमाशुगमारुह्य देवदत्तं जगत्पतिः ।
असिना साधुदमनमद्वैश्वर्षगुणान्वितः ॥ १९
विचरन्नाशुना शोण्यां हवेनाप्रतिमनुतिः ।
नृपलिङ्गच्छदो दस्त्रून्कोटिशो निहनिष्यति ॥ २०

... ..

यदावतीर्णो भगवान्कल्किर्धर्मपतिर्हरिः ।

कृतं माविष्यति तदा प्रजासूतिश्च सात्त्विकी ॥ २३

Here Kṛta is said to have started with the birth of Kalki. Therefore, Kali was over with Kalki who was a contemporary of Sumitra.

And as Sumitra and Kṣemaka were 25th kings (i.e. king-units) from the present kings, a yuga of 1000 years (25 × 40) was over with them. This will, therefore, show that upto the end of Sumitra's reign, yuga was computed at 1000 years and therefore caturyuga at 4000 years. We have already seen that Sumitra and Kṣemaka both were at one time, taken as 100th kings from Manu Vaivasvata. So, with them or 10 years after them the mahācaturyuga also was over.

<sup>1</sup> See D. R. Mankad; Kalki—the Earliest check to Buddhism in New Indian Antiquary, January, 1942.

Now I submit that just as there was reconstruction of our traditions in the reigns of Parikṣit and Janamejaya, so was there another readjustment in the reign of Sumitra. It was at this time, i.e. when one mahācaturyuga of 4000 years was over, that a yuga was taken to have 1200 years and caturyuga to have 4800 years. The reason for this change was the following.

Parāpakāras in or after Sumitra's time found that a manvantara was closed with the death of the 71st king, but the yuga (dvāpara) was closed five generations later i. e. after the death of 75th king.

Now Brahmapurāṇa preserves a tradition<sup>1</sup> that a manvantara was over after 70 caturyugas or ruling generations. Thus manvantara was either closed after Arjuna i. e. Yudhiṣṭhira (70th) or Abhimanyu (71st). That it closed after the 71st king was the general belief. But now in the days of Sumitra they found that between the close of the manvantara and the close of the yuga (dvāpara) there was a gap of 4 or 5 generations i.e. of 160 or 200 years. Usually it was expected that with the close of the manvantara the yuga also should close. But it had not been so. Yuga had ended 200 years too late. What was to be done? The simple thing was to say that the yuga had 1200 years instead of 1000 years; and thus it was taken that each yuga had 1200 years and caturyuga 4800 years.

But Kali had closed in the days of Sumitra. Now we shall call the Kali of 1000 years the real Kali and Kali of 1200 years the amended Kali. Thus the real Kali had started 1000 years before Sumitra i.e. with the reigns of Divākara and Adhisīma, the sāmprata kings. But now this amended Kali should start 200 years earlier. Thus the amended Kali was taken as started after the 70th king or with Abhimanyu and Bṛhadbala. 70 kings ruled before Bṛhadbala and Abhimanyu i. e. 2800 years had passed before them. But if the amended Kali started with Bṛhadbala and Abhimanyu, the other three yugas, i.e. the amended three yugas, should have 3600 years before Bṛhadbala and Abhimanyu. Actually only 2800 years had passed before him but 800 years more were added to that and thus it was that 3600 years (i.e. 3 yugas each of 1200 years) had been taken as over before Abhimanyu the 71st king. From Bṛhadbala and Abhimanyu to Sumitra and Kṣemaka there will be 1200 years (Bṛhadbala and Abhimanyu being 71st and Sumitra and Kṣemaka 100th).

<sup>1</sup> See Br. V, 54-55.

36 [Annals, L.O.R.L.]

In my paper on 'Pre-Mahābhārata Solar Dynasty' I have shown that Bṛhadbala's original number was 71st from Vāivasvata Manu, but it was brought down to 91st by the Vāyu school by inserting eight kings between Manu and Rama and by appending eleven or twelve kings of the Lava-branch after Vyūṣṭās'va. I shall here explain why Vāyu school has done this.

We have just seen that in the days of Kalki and Sumitra, priests pushed back the beginning of Kali by 200 years, and in order to adjust these 200 years, said that the yuga had 1200 years and the caturyuga (bigger) had 4800 years. But this adjustment was not so easy. On pushing back Kali by 200 years and putting its beginning at Mahābhārata war, they found that there were 30 ruling units from Bṛhadbala to Sumitra. That gave them the necessary 1200 years for Kaliyuga (and also the advantage that manvantara and yuga closed together). But they found that in actuality only 2800 years had elapsed before Bṛhadbala (70 ruling units) and they now wanted 3600 years to have elapsed in order to make every yuga of 1200 years. Thus they found that they were short by 800 years at the end of the 70th generation. How were these 800 years to be adjusted? At the rate of 40 years for a ruling unit, the genealogies would require  $(800 \div 40) = 20$  more kings. How should they be produced? Already Vyūṣṭās'va or S'ankhana and S'rutāyu were taken as 71st kings. Bṛhadbala, as belonging to Lava branch (minor branch), was not taken into account both by Br. school and Mt. school and upto now also by Vy. school. So the Vāyu school now thought of making use of this branch of Lava and just appended the kings of that line to the line which ended at S'ankhana or Vyūṣṭās'va. Originally Bṛhadbala was 71st. Now they found that he should be 91st as 20 kings had to be inserted between Manu and Bṛhadbala. They added about 12 or 13 kings of Lava line just at the end of the lists and inserted 7 or 8 other kings earlier before Rāma. Thus these Purāṇas of Vāyu school came to have their present Aikṣavāku genealogy which otherwise substantially agrees with other Purāṇas of Bṛ. school.<sup>1</sup>

Thus 1200 years after the Mahābhārata war it was settled that 3600 years should be taken as elapsed before that war, though actually only 2800 years had elapsed before that war (of course, from Manu Vaivasvata).

This tradition gained ground and in later days, i. e. in days later than Sumitra, all chronology would naturally proceed on the basis that a yuga had 1200 years, that from Manu 3600 years had elapsed before the Mahābhārata war and that 1200 years had elapsed from Mahābhārata war to Sumitra. Thus in all 4800 years were taken as elapsed from Manu to Sumitra (though in reality only 4000 years had elapsed, between them).

3. Yuga of 1200 years.

That such a tradition of a yuga of 1200 years etc., was known to Purāṇas in 325 B. C., is proved from the following.

There are two places in the Fragments of the Indika of Megasthenes which are helpful to us in this connection.

First is the Fragment L. C. (Pliny, Hist. Nat.) which runs thus:<sup>2</sup>

"From the days of Father Bacchus to Alexander the Great their kings are reckoned at 154 whose reigns extended over 6451 years and 3 months."

Second is from Solin which runs thus:<sup>3</sup>

"Father Bacchus was the first who invaded India and was the first of all who triumphed over the vanquished Indians. From

1. General tradition took a difference of one yuga between Rāma and Kṛṣṇa, that is, there were 1000 years or 35 king-units between them. But Rāma was really 57th and Kṛṣṇa 70th. There were only 13 king-units between them. So, they put 12 kings between Rāma and Kṛṣṇa and 8 more before Rāma, and thus added 20 in all. And this is what we actually find in Vy. It adds Bala and 11 others from Paga to Bṛhadbala and 8 more (viz. Anarāya, Trasadāśva, Haryas'va, Vasumana, Kṛṣṇaroma, Viśvamahat, Dṛghabāhu and Allavida) before Rāma.

2. Tr. by MacCrindle, Calcutta, 1926, p. 116.

3. Ibid p. 115.

him to Alexander the Great 6451 years are reckoned with 2 months additional, the calculation being made by counting the kings who reigned in the intermediate period to the number of 153."

Now taking Megasthenes' statement to refer to 325 B. C., Bachhus, according to the calculation given by him, will have lived in  $(6451 + 325 =)$  6776 B. C. And as all our post diluvian chronology starts with Vaivasvata Manu, so Vaivasvata Manu's time was taken to be 6776 B. C. in the days of Megasthenes.

But were there 153 or 154 kings and 6451 years between Manu and Alexander? Fergusson tried to explain this number 153 thus: According to him (History of Indian and Eastern Architecture p.712) "this number is eminently satisfactory as it seems clear that we possess in the Puranas the same lists as were submitted to the Greeks in the fourth century B. C. In the solar lists we have in the Tretāyuga 62 reigns from Ikṣvāku to Rāma. For the Dvāpara age we have three solar lists: one from Kus'a to Bṛhadbala, 35 reigns; another from Diṣṭa to Janamejaya, 33 reigns; a third from the son of Śiradhvaṇa, the father of Śita to Mahabasi, 34 reigns. In the Kaliyuga we have no complete solar lists, but the lunar list gives fifty descents from Jarāsandha to the last Nanda. This gives 145 or 146 reigns."

This apparently means that Fergusson has added the number of kings from Sahadeva to Nanda to the total number of kings of the Solar dynasty which, according to him, will have about  $62 + 33 = 95$  kings. Thus he gets  $95 + 50 = 145$ . But Fergusson is wrong when he takes 50 kings from Sahadeva to Nanda. According to the unanimous verdict of the Purāṇas, Candragupta Maurya is 40th from Sahadeva (cf. Table III), and not 50th. Fergusson's error is possibly due to taking 32 kings for the Bṛhadratha dynasty according to Vāyu. But there were only 22 kings in that line after the Mahābhārata war, though there were 32 kings from Bṛhadratha to Ripuñjaya. Thus Fergusson's number should have been 136 and not 146 and 136 falls short of 153 by 17.

Let us, therefore, inquire ourselves about this. Candragupta, at whose court Megasthenes lived, was Candragupta Maurya according to most of the scholars, but some Indian scholars take him to be Candragupta I of the Gupta dynasty. Let us see when these two kings flourished according to the Purāṇas,

Following the Solar line we find that the number of Bṛhadbala who died in the Mahābhārata war, as actually found in the Purāṇas to-day, varies from 80th to 95th. Therefore, Candragupta Maurya, who was 40th after Mahābhārata war, will be  $(80 + 40) = 120$ th or  $(95 + 40) = 135$ th from Manu Vaivasvata. Thus between Purāṇas and the statement of Megasthenes there is a difference of about 20 kings. That will not do.

Let us then, consider the case of Candragupta I. According to Kaliyugarājavyūttānta of Bhavish'yottara<sup>1</sup>, after the Mahābhārata war, the following dynasties ruled for the periods noted against them :

TABLE III

Dynasty	No. of kings	No. of total regnal period
Bṛhadratha	22	1006
Pradyota	5	138
Saisunāga	10	360
Nanda	9	100
Maurya	12	316
Sūnga	10	300
Kanva	4	85
Andhra	32	506
	104	2811 - 4 = 2807

Thus, according to this Purāṇa 104 kings ruled after the war and before the beginning of the Gupta dynasty. Therefore, Candragupta I will be 105th from Sahadeva. If we now add 80 or 95 (the Solar kings before the war), we find that Candragupta I will be 185th or 200th, both of which figures do not tally with Megasthenes' figure.

Let us then follow the Lunar line. In fact, we should not follow the Solar line, as the Kali dynasties in all the Purāṇas are always put in direct continuation of the Bṛhadratha dynasty which is a Lunar dynasty. Now Sahadeva of the Magadha dynasty, is 43th from Manu according to Mt. 38th according to Bg. 46th according to Vy. and 41st according to Va.

1 As quoted by M. Krishnamacharier in his Classical Sanskrit Literature page lxxviii and also by Jagannath Rao in his 'Age of Mahābhārata War.'

Now Candragupta Maurya, in order to be 153rd from Manu, will require  $(153 - 40 \text{ his own number after the war}) = 113$  kings before the Mahābhārata war. So, he could not have been a contemporary of Megasthenes, for the Lunar line does not show more than 57 kings in any of its branches before the war. But Candragupta I will require  $(153 - 105) = 48$  kings before the Mahābhārata war. And we find that according to Matsya Sahadeva was actually 48th. Thus according to Purāṇas, Candragupta I was 153rd from Vaivasvata Manu.

Therefore one who was the contemporary of Megasthenes and Alexander and was 153rd from Bachhus, was not Maurya Candragupta but Candragupta I of the Gupta Dynasty. Even Megasthenes testifies to it, or in other words, that was the Puranic tradition supplied to Megasthenes.

Thus we find that Megasthenes' statement about 153 or 154 kings intervening between Bachhus and Alexander is in complete agreement with the Puranic traditions.

Now let us see if 6451 years elapsed between Bachhus and Alexander. According to Megasthenes, Bachhus will be put in  $6451 + 325 = 5776$  B. C. From the table that I have just given, it will be found that, 2807<sup>1</sup> years had elapsed from the close of the Mahābhārata war to the beginning of the Gupta dynasty, i. e. upto the end of the Āndhra dynasty. But the post-Mbh genealogical calculations in the Purāṇas start with the accession of Parikṣit. Now Parikṣit was 72nd according to caturyuga method; therefore,  $2840 (71 \times 40) + 800$  (of the amended yugas) = 3640 years were taken as elapsed from Manu to Parikṣit. Adding these 3640 to 2807 we get 6447. Thus there is a difference of 4 years between Megasthenes' figure and the Puranic figure. Therefore, Megasthenes' statement calculates upto the 5th regnal year of Candragupta I.

Now let us apply this to Candragupta Maurya. After the war, we have 1006 years for Bhadrathas, 138 for Pradyotas, 360 for Śaśunagas and 100 for the Nandas. Thus we will have 1604 or 1600 years from Sahadeva (who was 72nd) to the 1 I have taken 2807 years, though the table shows 3811 years, for the total of the first three dynasties, according to this table, is 1504 years, but as according to the very clear evidence of all other Purāṇas (which I shall detail in my future papers) these first three dynasties had 1900 years in all. Therefore, I have deducted four years from its total.

accession of Candragupta Maurya. Adding 3640 years (from Manu to Sahadeva) we get 5240 years, which is nowhere nearer the figure of Megasthenes. Therefore also Candragupta Maurya was not a contemporary of Megasthenes.

This will show that the tradition which Megasthenes notes is absolutely in keeping with the Puranic genealogies as we have them to-day, both in the number of years and in the number of kings. It thus shows that most of the Puranic tradition was the same then as it is now. It further proves that in 325 B. C. Purāṇas took a yuga to have 1200 years and not 1000 years (for the figure of Megasthenes will tally with the Puranic figures only if we take 3600 years for the first three yugas and not 3000).

But it may be objected that I have here relied upon Bhaviṣṣyot-tara which may not be very reliable. But in a future article<sup>1</sup> I have examined the question of the chronology of the Kali dynasties upto the start of Guptas, and proved that in reality there is no difference between the various conflicting figures seen in different Purāṇas.

4. Caturyuga of 40 years.

Thus they amended the yuga system and to suit it they amended the genealogies. But, it will be seen that when in later days, this matter of the amendments was not clearly remembered, dim memories of a bygone system may sometimes cause confusion and sometimes preserve the true tradition.

Caturyuga of 40 years was long known, but after the yuga was taken to have 1200 years, it, very conveniently, became a sub-yuga of a bigger yuga. Let us see how. Caturyuga of 40 years will have four basic yugas each of 10 years called Kṛta, Tretā, Dvāpara and Kali, and the caturyuga of 4800 years will have four basic yugas each of 1200 years. Now we shall name the sub-yugas of the caturyuga of 40 years as laghukṛta, laghutretā, laghudvāpara and laghukali and the sub-yugas of the caturyugas of 4800 years as mahākṛta, mahātretā, mahādvāpara and mahākali. Laghukṛta etc. will have 10 years each, mahākṛta etc. will have 1200 years each. Caturyuga of 40 years will be called laghu-caturyuga and the caturyuga of 4800 years will be called mahācaturyuga.

<sup>1</sup> To appear shortly in Poona Orientalist.

Now each of the mahāyugas will have 30 laghu-caturyugas (1200 ÷ 40 = 30). That is, in mahakṛta etc. there will be 30 laghukṛtas, 30 laghutretās, 30 laghudvāparas and 30 laghukalis. Thus laghukṛta etc. will have 10 years each, laghu-caturyuga will have 40 years, mahā-kṛta etc. will have 1200 years and mahācaturyuga will have 4800 years.

Keeping in mind that such a system is possible only after the amended yuga system (of 1200 years) came in vogue, if we read the Purāṇas, several passages seem to corroborate such a system.

There are Puranic passages<sup>1</sup> in which Devāpi and Maru are described as the founders of new kṣatriya lines in the 29th caturyuga. These passages, for some reasons which I shall explain in future, take Devāpi and Maru as contemporaries of Sumitra. Therefore, this is obviously the laghu-caturyuga of the amended mahākali. It refers to the 29th caturyuga after the 28 caturyugas or yugākhyās were over with or after Sumitra. Thus this mention of 29th caturyuga positively proves that the yuga of 1200 years had come into existence, for in a mahāyuga of 1000 years, the 29th caturyuga (of 40 years each) will never be possible.

But we have another reference. Almost all the Purāṇas, in one or the other way, say that Vyāsa Dvaipāyana lived in the 28th dvāpara. There are some Purāṇas which give avatāras, where they point out that Vyāsa Dvaipāyana and Kṛṣṇa also lived in the 28th dvāpara and Vyāsa Parāśara in the 26th dvāpara.

Now which dvāpara is this? Dvaipāyana Vyāsa lived at the Mahābhārata time and we know that real Kali ended 200 years later than Mahābhārata war. 28th dvāpara of this real Kali of 1000 years is not possible, as a mahāyuga of 1000 years will have only 25 laghuyugas. Therefore, this dvāpara refers to the amended yuga system.

Now amended Kali started and amended Dvāpara ended in 3176 B. C. So the 28th dvāpara of the preceding mahādvāpara will close 80 years earlier, i. e. in 3256. This is a possible date (of birth) for both Dvaipāyana and Kṛṣṇa if we take their lives to have been of more than 80 years. Similarly, 26th dvāpara of the mahādvāpara

<sup>1</sup> Cp. Ml. 273rd, 50-53; Vy. 103th, 437-440; Bḍ. 3, 74, 250-253.

(i.e. 80 years earlier than Yudhiṣṭhira and Kṛṣṇa) is possible for Parāśara, as he was a contemporary of Vicitravīrya who was three degrees senior to Abhimanyu.

Thus both these calculations are based on amended yuga-system.

Again it is said that Rāma (Dās'arathi) lived in 24th or 27th tretā (more probably 27th tretā). This too refers to the amended yuga system, Rāma is usually placed in Tretā, i. e. in the 37th laghutretā of mahātretā. Therefore, according to the amended yuga system, Rāma will be removed from Manu by (30 laghu-caturyugas of mahākṛta and 27 laghu-caturyugas of mahātretā i. e. in all by) 57 laghu-caturyugas. And we have found that in the genealogies his real number was 57th<sup>1</sup>. Again between Rāma and Kṛṣṇa usually one mahayuga is believed to have elapsed. If Kṛṣṇa and Dvāpāyana were in the 28th dvāpara of the mahādvāpara, Rāma must be in the 27th tretā of the mahātretā. (Of course, actually the difference between Rāma and Kṛṣṇa was not of 1200 years but of  $(70 - 57 - 13 \div 40 = 520)$  about 500-525 years, as Kṛṣṇa, along with Yudhiṣṭhira was 70th. Thus, Rāma's actual date will be  $(3201 - 525 = 3726)$  cir. 3725-50 B. C.

But it is said that Māndhātā was in the 15th yuga, i. e. caturyuga. Now here the calculation is based upon the yuga system when the number of kings was not harmonised with the number of caturyugas. Thus Māndhātā, though 20th from Manu, was in the 15th caturyuga from Manu i. e. was removed from Manu by about  $15 \times 40 = 600$  years. (It is, therefore, possible that the kings of the mahākṛta, i. e. the first 25 kings of the Ikṣavāku dynasty are kept in tact. No king is omitted from them, 2nd method of samāsa and vyāsa being applied only from the kings of Tretā i. e. mahātretā downwards.) Thus, Māndhātā's real date will be  $5976$  B.C. (Manu's real date)  $- 600 = 5376$  B. C.

These pieces of evidence should, I believe, prove beyond all doubts, that at some time of our Purāṇic traditions, a yuga of 1200 years and its sub-divisions into smaller yugas of 40 years were in vogue. This time must have been from Sumitra to the Gupta period at least.

1 In my paper on Pre-Mahābhārata Solar Dynasty already referred to.
87 [Annals, B. O. E. I.]

Thus it will be seen that what looked as bold presumptions on my part in the beginning of this undertaking, have been proved to be solid facts. We have seen that yugas were of equal lengths—first of 1000 years (upto the days of Sumitra) and then of 1200 years (at least upto the rise of the Guptas); that cataryuga of 40 years was utilised for the purposes of chronological calculation, that this cataryuga of 40 years, which was the basis of Manvantara computation, was taken as a king-unit and that the king-lists of the Purāṇas preserve the names of these king-units.

And this is what I call Manvantara-Cataryuga method. I shall show in my future article<sup>1</sup>, that this method was used by the Purāṇas upto the end of the Mauryas and then abandoned, though its nature was thoroughly known to them even upto the end of the Āndhras.

---

1 To appear shortly in Poona Orientalist.

GĀNGEYADEVA OF TĪRABHUKTĪ

BY

V. V. MIRASHI

In his historical introduction to Mm. Haraprasad Sastri's Catalogue of the Nepal Durbar Library,<sup>1</sup> Prof. Cecil Bendall first drew attention to the colophon of a Ms. of the Kiṣkindhā-kāuḍa of the Rāmāyaṇa which mentions Gāṅgeyadeva of Tīrabhukti. He transcribed the colophon as follows<sup>2</sup>: Samvat 1076 (१०७६) āṣāḍha badi 4 mahārājādhirāja puṇyāvaloka soma-vamśodbhava- Gauḍadhvaja-śrīmad- Gāṅgeyadeva-bhujyamāna- Tīrabhuktau kalyāṇavaijayaarājye Nepāla-deśīya-bhānu-kālīka- śrī-Ānandasya pātakāvas'hita-(Kāyastha)<sup>3</sup>-paṇḍita-śrī-śrīkura-sya-ātma-śrī-Gopati-śleṣh-īdam. Bendall took this to mean that 'in samvat 1076 Gopati, son of Śrīkura, (Kāyastha) Paṇḍita belonging to the country of Nepal and living in Ānanda's pātaka belonging to Bhaṇu Sālī (?), copied this during a victorious reign in Tīrhut, when it was ruled by Gāṅgeyadeva, the great king, beholder of holiness, sprung from the lunar race and banner of Gauḍa'. On account of the archaic nature of the writing, Bendall referred the date to the Vikrama era and took it to be equivalent to A. D. 1019.<sup>4</sup> He identified this Gāṅgeyadeva with the Kalacuri Gāṅgeyadeva of Cedi who was known to be reigning in A. D. 1030 from Alberuni's Kitāb-ul-Hind. Bendall's afore-mentioned introduction was not accompanied by a facsimile of the colophon. There was, therefore, no means available to verify his transcript. Taking it to be accurate, many scholars have discussed the historical information furnished by it.<sup>5</sup> Most of them have accepted Bendall's view that Gāṅgeyadeva mentioned therein was the homonymous Kalacuri

1 J. A. S. B., Vol. LXXII (1903), pp. 1 ff.

2 Ibid., p. 18.

3 This word was added in a different hand.

4 The colophon does not specify the era to which the date belongs. As it does not mention any week-day etc., it does not admit of verification.

5 R. P. Chanda, Gauḍarājyamāli, p. 41, ff. n.; E. D. Banerji, Bhāgavata Itihāsa (second edition), Vol. I, p. 252; H. C. Ray, Dynastic History of Northern India, Vol. I, p. 317 and Vol. II, p. 774.

king of Tripuri. M. Sylvain Levi, however, has questioned the identification on the following grounds:—<sup>1</sup>

(1) The titles ending in avaloka are not known to have been used by the Kalacuris. They were borne by the Rāṣṭrakūṭas.

(2) The title Gauḍa-dhvaṇa indicates some political authority of Gaṅgeyadeva in Gauḍa, but the Kalacuri king had no pretensions to suzerainty over Bengal.

(3) The Kalacuri king is not known to have ruled over Tirhut.

Levi suggested, therefore, that this Gaṅgeyadeva belonged to a local branch of the Kalacuris like the one ruling over the adjoining country of Gorakhpur. He pointed out that a prince of this branch named S'amkaragana is said to have won a victory over the king of Gauḍa while another assumed the biruda of Mugdhatunga which recalls similar birudas of the Rāṣṭrakūṭas.

Mr. Ramaprasad Chanda has added another argument to those mentioned by Levi.<sup>2</sup> He says that as Magadha was under the Palas and the country to the west under the Candellas, Gaṅgeyadeva could not have extended his rule to Tirhut.

Dr. R. C. Majumdar also has lent his support to Levi's objections against the identification of Gaṅgeyadeva of Tirabhukti with the Kalacuri king of the same name.<sup>3</sup> He has suggested that the date 1076 of the Rāmāyana Ms. should be referred to the S'aka era and taken to be equivalent to A. D. 1154. He identifies Gaṅgeyadeva with Gaṅga, the son of Nānyadeva of Mithila.<sup>4</sup> As Nānyadeva began to reign in A. D. 1097 and enjoyed a rule of 50 years (A. D. 1097-1147), this date A. D. 1154 falls in the reign of his son Gaṅga. From Nānyadeva's commentary called Bharatavṛtīka or Sarasvatīdayālamkāra, which has recently been described by Mr. M. Ramkrishna Kavi,<sup>5</sup> we learn that Nānyadeva, who is evidently identical with the well-known king of Mithilā, had the biruda of Dharmāvaloka. His son Gaṅga may have assumed a similar one viz. Paṇyāva-

1 Sylvain Levi, Le Nepal, Vol. II, p. 202, ft. n. 1.

2 Gauḍarājyaśilā, p. 42, ft. n.

3 Ind. Hist. Quart., Vol. VII, p. 681.

4 He is mentioned in a Nepal inscription dated in the year 769 of the Newar era (A. D. 1649). Ind. Ant., Vol. IX, p. 128.

5 J. A. H. R. S., Vol. I, pp. 55 ff.

loka<sup>1</sup> as mentioned in the Rāmāyaṇa Ms. The same commentary states that Nānyadeva had broken the power of Vaṅga and Gauḍa. This explains, according to Dr. Majumdar, the title Gauḍadhvaḥja assumed by his son.

When I attended the fourth session of the Indian History Congress held at Lahore in 1940, I noticed a photostat copy of the afore-mentioned colophon which was exhibited as the oldest Ms. of the Rāmāyaṇa<sup>2</sup> in the Historical Exhibition of the History Congress. It attracted my attention at once and I found to my great surprise that Bendall's transcript of the colophon was incorrect in one important respect. At my request Dr. Raghu Vira very kindly supplied me with a photostat copy of the pages of the Ms. containing the colophon. It is reproduced in the accompanying facsimile.

I give below my reading of the colophon: Samvat 1076 Āṣāḍha vadi 4 Mahārājādhirāja-Puṇyāvaloka-soma-vanś-odbhava-Garuḍadhvaḥja-Śrīmad-Gāṅgeyadeva-bhūjyamāna-Tirabhuktau kalyāṇa-vijayarājya Nepāla-deśīya-Bhāluśālīka-Śrī-Ānandasya kṛte Pālaka-āvasthita-(Kāyastha)-Paṇḍita-Śrī-S'rikurasy-ātmaḥja-Śrī-Gopatin-ālekh-idaṁ. I translate this as follows: 'In the year 1076 on Āṣāḍha va di. 4, during the auspicious and victorious reign in Tirabhukti which is being ruled by the Mahārājādhirāja: Puṇyāvaloka, the illustrious Gāṅgeyadeva, who is born in the family of the moon and has the Eagle standard, this has been written by the [Kāyastha] Paṇḍita, the illustrious Gopati, the son of the illustrious S'rikura who resides at Pālaka for the sake of the illustrious Ānanda, the Bhāluśālīka of the country of Nepāla.'

This transcript will be found to differ from Bendall's in one important respect, viz., in the epithet Garuḍadhvaḥja applied to Gāṅgeyadeva. Bendall read in its place Gauḍadhvaḥja which he translated as 'the banner of Gauḍa'. This gives no satisfactory meaning. Other scholars have understood the expression to mean 'one who has planted his banner in Gauḍa'. This has been taken to indicate Gāṅgeyadeva's occupation of Bengal. The facsimile now clearly shows that the correct reading is Garuḍadhvaṇja which signifies 'one who has the Eagle standard'.<sup>1</sup>

1 This lōka is borne by a king of Mithilā named Bāmalōka whom M. M. Chakravarti identifies with the homonymous great-grandson of Nānyadeva (J. A. S. B. 1915, pp. 418 ff.) But the date V. S. 1446 (A. D. 1390) given by him from the Ind. Govt. Ms. (4741) goes against the identification.

2 The photostat copy of the Ms. of the Rāmāyaṇa was presented by the Government of Nepal to the International Academy of Indian Culture, Lahore.

From the colophon of the Rāmāyaṇa Ms. we thus get the following particulars about this Gāṅgeyadeva :—

- (1) He was ruling in Tirabhukti in the year 1076 of an unspecified era.
- (2) He bore the title Mahārājādhirāja and the biruda Puṇyāvaloka.
- (3) He belonged to the lunar race.
- (4) His standard had the figure of the Eagle on it.

Let us next examine the several theories which have been advanced so far about the identification of this Gāṅgeyadeva.

(1) Bendall's view that this Gāṅgeyadeva belonged to the Kalacuri dynasty has been accepted by many scholars. The year 1076 must in that case be referred to the Vikrama era and taken to be equivalent to A. D. 1019-20. As Bendall has already pointed out, this Kalacuri Gāṅgeyadeva is mentioned in Alberuni's Kitāb-ul-Hind of A. D. 1030 as the contemporary ruler of Dāhala with the capital Tripuri. His Piawan stone inscription<sup>2</sup> is dated in the Kalacuri year 789 (A. D. 1037-38). From the Benares plates<sup>3</sup> of his son Karna we know that he died in A. D. 1040. He may therefore have reigned from A. D. 1015 to 1040. Bendall's view does not therefore present any chronological difficulty. Besides, as the Kalacuri kings traced their descent from the moon, Gāṅgeya can be described as 'born in the lunar race'. In the Piawan inscription he is given the title

1. Bendall seems to have committed this mistake because he had not the Ms. before him when he wrote his Introduction. As he says in it, he gave the transcript from his own notes. It will be noticed that he has also omitted the word kye after śrī-Ānandarya.

2. Cunningham, A. S. R., Vol. XXI, p. 113 and pl. XXVIII. Prof. Hořivata has recently put forward the ingenious conjecture that Kābkan, the līṅg of the kingdom adjoining that of Gaṇḍa, who sent some wonder-working presents to Mahmud of Ghazni in A. D. 1020 was this Gāṅgeyadeva of Tripuri. Studies in Indo-Muslim History, pp. 78 ff.

3. These plates which record a grant made on the first anniversary of Gāṅgeya's death are dated A. D. 1011. Ep. Ind. Vol. II, p. 810 and Vol. XI, p. 146.

of Mukharājādhirāja. The objection raised by Levi that he does not seem to have any pretensions to suzerainty over Bengal has no force now, because the colophon gives him the epithet Garuḍadhvaṇa, not Gauḍadhvaṇa. As for R. P. Chanda's argument that the Kalacuri Gāṅgeyadeva could not have extended his rule to Tirhut as the Pālas were supreme in Magadha and the Candellas in the territory to the west, it may be pointed out that in the Goharwā plates of his son Karṇa, Gāṅgeyadeva is said to have looked resplendent with the wealth of the Aṅga country.<sup>1</sup> This evidently indicates that he raided the territory round modern Bhāgalpur. Gāṅgeya's son Karṇa invaded Magadha towards the end of his father's reign.<sup>2</sup> There is therefore no inherent impossibility in Gāṅgeya's rule over Tirhut. Besides, we know Gāṅgeya held the holy places of Prayāga and Benares. The Jubbulpur and Khairhā plates<sup>3</sup> state that he was fond of staying at Prayāga where he ultimately breathed his last. From the Tārīkh-us-Subuktigin we learn that in the summer of A. D. 1033 Ahmad Nialtigin, the Governor of the Punjab, raided Benares which belonged to the territory of Gaṅga. This Gaṅga is none other than the Kalacuri Gāṅgeyadeva. Karṇa's Benares plates which were issued just a year after Gāṅgeya's death record the grant of land in the Kāś't-bhūmi or the subdivision of Benares.<sup>4</sup> There is therefore no doubt that Benares was included in the kingdom of Gāṅgeya. With Benares as his base, Gāṅgeya could have easily overrun Tirabhukti.

The identification of Gāṅgeyadeva of Tirabhukti with the Kalacuri king does not however appear probable in view of two other epithets applied to him in the colophon of the Rāmāyaṇa Ms. He is called therein Puṇyāvaloka and Garuḍadhvaṇa. As Levi has already shown, Kalacuri kings are not known to have assumed such epithets ending in avaloka. As for the epithet Garuḍadhvaṇa it may be noted that like most other Kalacuri

1 Ibid. Vol. XI, p. 143.

2 See the discussion about the date of this expedition, ibid., Vol. XXIV, p. 104.

3 Ibid., Vol. II, p. 8 and Vol. XI, p. 143.

4 The plates record the grant of the village Sursi in the Kāś't-bhūmi. This village I have identified with Sursi in the Mirzapur District, just outside the southern boundary of the present Benares District. Nagpur University Journal, Vol. II pp. 51 ff kings, Gāṅgeyadeva was a devotee of Siva.<sup>1</sup> He is not therefore likely to have adopted Garuḍa, the vehicle of Viṣṇu, as his lāñchana<sup>2</sup>. The Kalacuri Gāṅgeya was, no doubt, a mighty king and in the Piawan inscription of A. D. 1037, he bears the title of Mahārājādhirāja, but it is doubtful if he had assumed that imperial title as early as A. D. 1018-19, the date of the Rāmāyaṇa Ms. In this connection I draw attention to a stone inscription recently discovered at Makundpur, nine miles south-west of Rewah.<sup>3</sup> It is dated in the Kalacuri year 772, corresponding to A. D. 1019, i. e., in the same year in which the Rāmāyaṇa Ms. was written. Besides, it comes from the heart of the home province of the Kalacuris. It would therefore be interesting to see how it describes the reigning king. Gāṅgeyadeva bears in this inscription the modest title of Mahārha-mahā-mahattaka together with another which is probably Mahārāja<sup>4</sup>. Now Mahāmahattaka was assumed by petty chiefs and ministers.<sup>5</sup> Even with the prefix mahārha it cannot be said to be equivalent to Mahārājādhirāja. It is plain therefore that in A. D. 1019 Gāṅgeyadeva was subordinate to some other power. This is again confirmed by a Mahobā inscription which describes that 'the moon of the Kalacuris' (evidently Gāṅgeya) and the king Bhoja (the well-known king of Dhārā) worshipped, full of fear, like a pupil, the Candella prince Vidyadhara who had caused the destruction of Rājyapāla, the king of Kanauj, and who was lying on a couch.<sup>6</sup> Curiously enough, the defeat of Rājyapāla occurred in the spring or summer of this very year A. D. 1019. All this goes to show that in A. D. 1019 Gāṅgeyadeva held a

1 In lines 2-3 the Piawan inscription probably contained the epithet Parama-mahātma in place of Cunningham's reading Mahāmāyājādhara. See plate XXXVIII in Cunningham's A. S. B., Vol. XXI.

2 The seal of the Goharwā plates issued by Gāṅgeya's son Karpa has the figure of S'iva's bull (Nandi). Ep. Ind., Vol. XI, plate facing p. 142.

3 A copy of this inscription has been kindly supplied to me by the Government Epigraphist for India. The inscription is still unpublished, but I have discussed its date in the Ep. Ind., Vol. XXIV, p. 118, n. 4.

4 The first line of the inscription reads Saṃvat 772 Kārtika śa śa 13 Pu(Bu)ḍha śine-Mah[?]ka-mahāmahattaka-śr(i)Ma(hārāja ?)-śri-Gāṅge[?]deva-rājya. Only the akṣara ma of Mahārāja is certain, the following akṣaras being lost owing to the peeling off of the stone. There is not sufficient space for the title Mahārājādhirāja.

5 For the title Mahāmahattaka assumed by several ministers of the kings of Mithilā, see Jaysawal's Introduction to the Mājanīśīratnākara, J.B.O.B.S., Vol. X.

6 Ep. Ind., Vol. I, p. 322.

subordinate position to the Candella Emperor Gaṇḍa, the father of Vidyādhara. It is again extremely unlikely that he had extended his way as far as Tirhut before A. D. 1019. The Sār-nāth stone inscription<sup>1</sup> dated V. S. 1083 (A.D. 1026) which records that Sthirapāla and Vasantapāla established, by the order of Mahipāla I of Bengal, hundreds of precious monuments of glory in Kāśī, shows that the holy place was in the occupation of the Pala king at least seven years after the date of the Rāmāyaṇa Ms.

Notwithstanding the epithet Somavamaśodbhava and the date, I am therefore inclined to regard the identification of Gāṅgeyadeva of Tirabhukti with the Kalacuri king of Tripurī as extremely unlikely.

(2) M. Sylvain Levi has suggested that this Gāṅgeyadeva of Tirabhukti might have been a prince of a local Kalacuri family like the one which was ruling over the adjoining country of Sarayūpāra (modern Gorakhpur District in U. P.)<sup>2</sup> No such local Kalacuri family is known from any record of Tirhut. As for the family ruling over Sarayūpāra, it is known from two records, the Kasīa stone inscription<sup>3</sup> and the Kāhī plates.<sup>4</sup> The former is undated, but as I have shown elsewhere,<sup>5</sup> it may, on the evidence of palaeography, be referred to the 10th century A.D. The princes mentioned in it must therefore have flourished some time before Gāṅgeyadeva of Tirabhukti. The second record is dated in V. S. 1135 which corresponds to A. D. 1079. It gives a long genealogy of the Kalacuri king Soḍhadeva, but mentions no prince of the name Gāṅgeyadeva. This Soḍhadeva bore the title Mahārājādhirāja and like other Kalacuri princes traced his descent from the moon. If Gāṅgeyadeva of Tirabhukti belonged to this family, he could, no doubt, be described as Somavamaśodbhava.

1 Ind. Ant., Vol. XIV, pp. 129 ff. As the Kalacuri Gāṅgeyadeva was supposed to have held Tirhut in A. D. 1019, the evidence of the Sār-nāth inscription was not regarded as sufficient to prove Mahipāla's occupation of Benares. It may be noted in this connection that if the Kalacuri Gāṅgeyadeva had been ruling in Tirabhukti and Benares in A.D. 1019 and 1026 respectively, the dates of the Ms. and the Sār-nāth inscription would in all probability have been recorded in the Kalacuri era. We find that the era was used in dating another Buddhist record at Sār-nāth during the reign of Karna. Bhandarkar's List of Northern Inscriptions, No. 1225.

2 Le Nepal, Vol. II, p. 202, n. 1.

3 Ep. Ind., Vol. XVIII, pp. 128 ff.

4 Ibid., Vol. VII, pp. 85 ff.

5 Ibid., Vol. XXIII, p. 259 and n. 6.

58 [Annals, B.O.R.I.]

But the other two epithets Garuḍadhvaja and Puṇyāvaloka would present the same difficulties in his case as in that of Gaṅgeyadeva of Tripuri. Besides, the date A.D. 1019 to which we have to refer this Rāmāyaṇa Ms. falls in a period when this family was in great trouble. The Kahlā plates state that Bhīma, the predecessor of Soḍhadeva's father Vyāsa, was deposed through adverse fate and that Vyāsa ascended the throne in V.S. 1087 (A.D. 1031). The plates do not state who had deposed Bhīma. Vyāsa could not, certainly, have been responsible for it; otherwise the Kahlā plates issued by his son would not have showered fulsome praise on Bhīma. There was presumably some foreign invasion and annexation of the kingdom. Ultimately Vyāsa recovered his ancestral country and crowned himself king at Gokulaghatṭa in A.D. 1031. It is not known how long the foreign occupation of the S'arayūpara country lasted. In any case it does not seem likely that in A.D. 1019 this Kalacuri family was powerful enough to extend its rule to Tirhut.

(3) Dr. R. C. Majumdar refers the date of the Rāmāyaṇa Ms. to the S'aka era and takes it to be equivalent to A. D. 1154.<sup>1</sup> He identifies Gaṅgeyadeva with Gaṅga mentioned in a Nepal inscription as the son and successor of Nānya.<sup>2</sup> This king is named as Gāṅga in a verse of a Mithilā Pañji.<sup>3</sup> This name, though not completely identical with Gāṅgeya, bears much similarity to it. As Nānyadeva is traditionally known to have come to the throne in A. D. 1097 and ruled for fifty years,<sup>4</sup> he may have closed his reign in A. D. 1147. The date S'aka 1075 (A. D. 1154) therefore falls in the reign of Nānya's successor Gaṅga. As Nānyadeva bore the title Dharmāvaloka, his son may have assumed another ending in avaloka like Puṇyāvaloka.

The identification of Gāṅgeyadeva with Gaṅga or Gāṅga, the son of Nānya, does not, however, appear to be convincing. We have,

1 Ind. Hist. Quart., Vol. VII, pp. 681 ff.

2 Ind. Ant., Vol. IX, pp. 138.

3 See the following verse cited in Jayswal's Introduction to Bījantīratnamāvaṇ p. 2, p. 3, J. B. O. B. S., Vol. X:—

शरत्ता नान्यपतिर्बभूव तत्रु भोगाक्षदेवी नृप-क्षत्सुमुनेरसिद्धदेवमृपतिः श्रीरामसिंहस्ततः ।
तत्समुः खलु शक्र(कि)सिंहविजयी भूपालवन्धस्ततः
यत्र श्रीहरिसिद्धदेवमृपतिः क्षाण्डिचूडामणिः ॥

4 Ind. Hist. Quart., Vol. VII, p. 680.

in the first place, no evidence to prove that Nānya's family claimed descent from the moon and called itself Somavamśodbhava. In his commentary Bharatavṛtti on the Nāṭyaśāstra of Bharata, Nānya makes no mention of any such claim. He describes himself only as Karṇāṭa-kula-bhūṣaṇa 'an ornament of the Karṇāṭa family'.<sup>1</sup> In a late Nepāl inscription of the 17th century A. D. an attempt is made to give a divine origin to the family of Nānya. But there also its descent is traced from the sun, not from the moon.<sup>2</sup> It is therefore extremely doubtful if Nānyadeva and his son called themselves Somavamśodbhava.<sup>3</sup> Secondly, it does not seem likely that this Gaṅga ever assumed the title of Mahārājādhirāja. His father Nānya was undoubtedly the most powerful member of this family. In his afore-mentioned commentary on the Nāṭyaśāstra, he claims to have defeated the kings of Mālava, Baṅgāla, Gauḍa and Saṁvīra. But even he called himself Mahāsāmantādhipati only.<sup>4</sup> He does not seem to have assumed the imperial title of Mahārājādhirāja. No records of his son Gaṅga have yet been discovered and so we cannot say if he was powerful enough to 1 J. A. H. B. S., Vol. I, p. 33.

2 आसीच्छ्रीसूर्यवंदे रघुनन्दकुलजो रामचन्द्रो नृपेशः
सर्वेश मानवैर्बोधिपतिरम्बत्तस्तुतो महोरवः । Ind. Ant., Vol. IX, p. 188.

The inscription is dated in the year 769 of the Newar era corresponding to A. D. 1649. The Malla dynasty of Nepāl traced its descent from Nānya. An earlier inscription of the dynasty dated in the year 693 of the Newar era (A. D. 1413) also mentions the descent of the family from the sun, though it does not name Nānya or his son Gaṅga.

3 The Ma. of the Bharatavṛtti does not indicate whether Nānya was a devotee of Śiva, Viṣṇu or some other deity. The opening maṅgala śloka would have given us some clue but that leaf is missing in the Ma. The first sheet of the Ma. belongs to some other work later by two or three centuries. J. A. H. B. S., Vol. I, p. 55.

After this article was sent to the press, Dr. V. Raghuvaran informed me that in the chapter of the Bharatavṛtti on Puṣkara there occurs the following verse as a maṅgala śloka :—

नमः समस्तलोकानां जनकाय स्वयम्भवे ।
भौमावर्ति (च) मवाम्मोधिपतिरवे वृषक्रतवे ॥

This clearly shows that Nānyadeva was a Śaiva. His son Gaṅga also may have likewise been a devotee of Śiva.

4 See the colophons of the Bharatavṛtti—इति श्रीमहासामन्ताधिपतिपद्मार्जलोक-श्रीमन्नान्दवाधिराजिते सरस्वतीहरदाक्षरनाम्नि भरतवर्तिके etc. In a stone inscription of his minister Śrīdhara, Nānya is simply called śrīmān (Illustrious). J. A. H. B. S., Vol. IX, p. 603.

claim that title. The political situation in North-eastern India was certainly not favourable for this king of Tirhut to attain the imperial status. His small principality was hemmed in by the Gāhaḍavālas on the west and the Senas on the east. As early as A. D. 1126 we find that the powerful Gāhaḍavāla king Govīndacandra had extended his sway as far as Mānār in the Patna District.<sup>1</sup> Twenty years later the Gāhaḍavāla ruler had pressed as far as Mudgagiri (Monghir) in the east where he made his grant recorded in the Lār plates of V. S. 1202 (A. D. 1146).<sup>2</sup> The Sena king Vijayasena claims in his Deopara inscription to have inflicted a defeat on Nānya probably towards the close of the latter's reign.<sup>3</sup> He is not likely to have tolerated the assumption of an imperial title by the son of Nānya soon after his accession.

We have thus seen that none of the theories so far advanced for the identification of Gāṅgeyadeva of Tirabhukti is satisfactory. As a matter of fact, the history of Mithilā before the rise of Nānya is enveloped in obscurity. But in view of the information supplied by the colophon a conjecture may be hazarded, leaving its corroboration to future research.

The colophon states that Gāṅgeyadeva of Tirabhukti had the biruda of Puṣyāvaloka and claimed descent from the moon. He was also probably a devotee of Viṣṇu as he had the Eagle standard. Now we know that such birudas in avaloka were assumed by Rāṣṭrakūṭa kings.<sup>4</sup> Again in their later records the Rāṣṭrakūṭas traced their descent from the moon.<sup>5</sup> Most of them were devotees of Viṣṇu and used the Eagle seal for their copper-plates. So this Gāṅgeyadeva of Tirabhukti is likely to have been a king of the Rāṣṭrakūṭa dynasty.

The date of the Rāmdāyana Ms. probably refers to the Vikrama era; for Śaka dates of the 10th or 11th century A.D. are rarely

1 J. O. B. O. R. S., Vol. II, pp. 441 ff.

2 Ep. Ind., Vol. VII, pp. 98 ff.

3 Ibid., Vol. I, p. 309.

4 See e. g. the biruda in Khaṇḍavāloka assumed by Dantidurga and Raṣṭravāloka by Śambha, the son of Dhruva.

5 In the earlier inscriptions of the dynasty such as the Bhāndak plates of Kṛṣṇarāja I, the Aṣṭanavāt and other plates of Govinda II etc., no mention is made of the lunar race. But in later inscriptions of the dynasty such as the Cambay plates of Govinda IV, and the Deoli and Kachhāḍ plates of Kṛṣṇa III, the genealogy is traced back to the moon.

found in North-East India. The date therefore corresponds to A.D. 1019-20. Let us now see if we have any evidence of a Rāṣṭrakūṭa family settled in the territory adjoining Mithilā in this period.

From the Bāṅgaḍ grant of Mahīpāla I, we learn that a Pāla king named Rājyapāla who seems to have flourished in the beginning of the 10th century A. D., married Bhāgyadevi who was the daughter of a Rāṣṭrakūṭa king named Tuṅga.<sup>1</sup> This Tuṅga may be identical with the Rāṣṭrakūṭa king Tuṅga alias Dharmāvaloka who has left an inscription<sup>2</sup> at Buddha Gayā recording his dedication of a Gandhakūṭi for the service of the Buddha.<sup>3</sup> We cannot of course conclude from this that Buddha Gayā was included in his territory, but in view of his matrimonial alliance with the Pāla king of Bengal and Bihar he may have been ruling in the neighbourhood, perhaps over Mithilā.<sup>4</sup> In the absence of further information about this Rāṣṭrakūṭa family it is not possible to say if it produced any king of the name Gāṅgeyadeva in the beginning of the 11th century A. D. But the existing data for the history of North-East India do not at least preclude the possibility of a Rāṣṭrakūṭa king of that name who claimed descent from the moon and assumed the title Mahārājādhirāja and the virūḍa Puṣyāvaloka, ruling over Mithilā and the adjoining territory in the beginning of the 11th century A. D.

1 Ep. Ind., Vol. XIV, pp. 324 ff.

2 This record is not dated, but on palaeographic grounds it can be referred to the 10th century A. D. See pl. xi in R. L. Mitra's Buddha Gayā.

3 Tuṅga's grandfather Nanna also bore a virūḍa ending in avaloka, viz. Gaṅgāvaloka. R. L. Mitra, Buddha Gayā, p. 195. Kishore identifies Tuṅga, the father of Bhāgyadevi, with Jagattūṅga II, the son of Kṛṣṇa II. Another view is that he was identical with Kṛṣṇa II. Ind. Ant., Vol. XLII, p. 136.

4 The Buddha Gayā inscription of Tuṅga mentions in l. 18 that Nanna, the founder of the family, conquered the impregnable fort of Mapipura where he seems to have subsequently established himself. This Mapipura has not been identified.

THE VEDIC DOCTRINE OF THE WORLDS ABOVE

BY

H. G. NARAHARI

Of the heavenly world of Yama to which repair the virtuous Souls according to the Vedic poets, after their death, there is a clear mention made in the funeral hymns of the Saṃhitās; but a study of the cosmological speculations of these people reveals that a belief in a plurality of heavens was also current among them. It was usual in this period to divide the Universe into Earth, Air or Atmosphere, and Heaven. Each of these spheres was called by several names in accordance with the angle with which it was viewed by the poet. Thus, when he thought of the Earth as a 'broad place', he called it urvī or prthivī, aparā when he conceived it as 'boundless', and bhūmih when as the 'place from which everything springs'. Earth is also very often denominated the 'great' (mahā), the 'extended' (uttāna) or simply 'this' (idam) as contrasted with the upper sphere which is distant. Heaven is likewise designated the 'shining light' (div, rocana, rocanaṃ divah), the 'woven web of light' (vyoman)<sup>1</sup>, the 'height' (sānu, pr̥ṣṭha, viśvap), the 'place situated afar' (parāvat), the 'roof of the world supported on high',<sup>2</sup> and the 'firmament above the sky' (dīvo nāka) in which the stars are fixed'. It is Hertel's<sup>3</sup> claim that in India as well as in Iran heaven was conceived 'as a great stone building filled with light, through whose doors the sun and the stars, the light of heaven shines upon men'. In the course of an elaborate examination of this view, Keith<sup>4</sup> points out that the evidence called in support of the contention is not accurate. The Vedic

1 Cf. RV. III.54.9 where the gods are described as standing on the spacious far extended path-way (urou paśhi vyaṭe) and singing praises.

2 X. 149.1; IV.56.8.; II.15.2; VI.47.4.; though a definite expression conveying this meaning is not found in these passages, they prove in plain terms that heaven was conceived by the Vedic bard as the roof of the world supported on high without beams (avāṛṇā, akambhana).

3 Die Himmelsstern in Veda und in Avesta, cited by Keith, Religion and Philosophy of the Veda, II.621.

4 Op. cit., p. 621 f.

Seer often thought of Heaven and Earth together, and the couple was then denominated by such terms as dyāvāpṛthivī, rodasī, and kṣonṣī.

Rajas is the name by which the atmospheric region was commonly known, but the term is often used<sup>1</sup> as a general name for all the three spheres. On such occasions, heaven is called itrīya (IX.74.6; X.45.3; 123.8), uttama (IX.22.5), or parama (III.30.2) as contrasted with the earth which is then called upara (I.62.5) or pāṛthiva (I.154.1; IV.53.3). The different spheres are all mentioned together as the three earths, the three heavens and the three atmospheres, and the matter is made all the more complex when occasionally addition is made in the singular of one member of the trio, when the three have already been mentioned.<sup>2</sup> What is more, the dual division of heaven and earth is sometimes combined with the three-fold division, and six regions are thus enumerated (ṣaṭimā rajāmsī).<sup>3</sup> Such manipulation of numbers might have originally been mere freaks of language,<sup>4</sup> but, as we shall presently see, they later resulted in an actual sub-division of each of these regions.

The vault (nāka)<sup>5</sup> is often added after the triad (I.34.8), and a region higher than the usual three is thus posited; but a verse in the Atharvaveda (IV.14.3) seems to speak of a still higher region when it mentions this sphere before the realm of celestial light (svaṛ, jyotiḥ). In one verse of the Rgveda (IX.96.19), Soma is said to enter the atmospheric region and then travel further to the fourth sphere (turīyaṃ dhāma):

1 The term pṛthivī also finds a similar use and in such contexts (I.108.9,10) the atmospheric region is called middle (madhyama) and heaven by the name highest (parama), while earth is called lowest (avama). Zimmer (Altindisches Leben, p. 357) thinks it necessary to accept the existence of a rajas beneath the earth to account for the course of the sun at night, but Wallis (Cosmology of the Rgveda, p. 115 f.) rightly points out that in the Vedic passages containing the word rajas, the reference is always to a region situated above the earth.

2 For instance, RV. VII. 33.7; cf. Wallis, op. cit., p. 114.

3 RV. I.164.6, cf. RV. VII.87.5 where three heavens (trīṣaḥ dyāvauḥ) and three earths (trīṣaḥ bhūmīḥ) are mentioned together.

4 Wallis, loc. cit.

5 Words like ānu (I.84.4), viśṭap (I.46.8), pṛṣṭha (I.115.8) nākaśya pṛṣṭha (I.125.5), ānuapṛṣṭha (III.2.13), nākaśya ānu (VIII.109.12), prāṇe pṛṣṭhe (IX.96.27) which occur frequently in the Rgveda denote the same region.

Camūṣacchyensā śākuno vibhṛtvā govindur drapsa
 āyudhāni bibhrat |
 Apām ūrmīm sacamānas samudram turīyam dhāma
 mahiṣo vivakti ||

According to Sayana, this 'fourth sphere' is the realm of the Moon<sup>1</sup> which is situated above the solar region (sa somaḥ turīyam caturtham dhāma candramasam sthānam vivakti sevate ; sūryalokasyopari candramaso loko vidyate).

Quite frequently three worlds are marked as distinct from the usual three regions by such expressions as tisro divaḥ, trīṇi rocanā, and trīṇi dyūn; tisro divaḥ are distinguished from tisraḥ pṛthivīḥ, and trīṇi rocanā and trīṇi dyūn from tisro bhūmīḥ:<sup>2</sup>

Trīr antarikṣam savitā mahitvanā trī rajāṃśi paribhūṣ
 trīṇi rocanā |
 Tisro divaḥ pṛthivīs tisra invatī tribhīr vratair abhi no
 rakṣati tmnā ||
 Trī rocanā varuṇa trīr uta dyūn trīṇi mitra dhārayatho rajāṃśi |
 Vāvṛdhānāv amatim kṣatriyasyānu vratam rakṣamāṇāv
 ojuram ||
 Tisro dyavo nihitā antarasmin tisro bhūmīr uparāḥ
 ṣaḍvidhānāḥ |
 Gr̥tso rāja varuṇas' cakra etaṃ divī preṅkham
 hiraṇyayam s'ubhe kam ||
 Trīviṣṭidhātu pratimānam ojasas tisro bhūmīr nṛpate
 trīṇi rocanā |
 Atīdam viśvam bhuvanam vavakṣithās'atrur Indra jānuṣā
 sanād aśi ||
 Tisro bhūmīr dhārayan trīr uta dyūn trīṇi vrataḥ
 vidathe antar eṣām |
 R̥tenādityā mahi vo mahitvam tad aryaman varuṇa
 mitra cāru ||

Varuṇa's rays are once (RV, VIII.41.9) described to pervade not only the three earths (tisraḥ bhūmīḥ), but to go beyond as well and fill up the three superior realms of heaven (trīr uttarāṇi papratuḥ).

1 Geldner (Der Rigveda in Auswahl, II.148) reiterates this view and so does Ludwig (Der Rigveda, V.398), though in a hesitant fashion. Oldenberg does not explain the phrase turīyaṃ dhāma.

2 RV, IV.58.5; V.69.1.; VII.87.6; I.102.8; II.27.8.

as on the axle-end of a car. Mādhava<sup>1</sup> and Sāyaṇa<sup>2</sup> interpret the three worlds mentioned here to mean the group of Earth, Air and Heaven, and hold that the first and last belong to Savitr and that the second region belongs to Yama. Vaṅkaṭamādhava<sup>3</sup> understands the 'three worlds' here to mean the 'three heavens' which stand supported by Agni and Savitr, and that all immortals are supported by the latter for he grants immortality. Skandavāmin<sup>4</sup> mentions both these meanings as alternatives. Macdonell<sup>5</sup> says that of the three worlds, Savitr occupies Air and Earth, and that the third world which is the highest heaven, is the abode of Yama in which dwell the pitarah (men after death). All these explanations proceed from a quaint understanding of the passage and are in the highest degree fanciful. Seeing that the term dyauh is used most frequently in the Veda to denote a region distinct from the usual trio, it is unnecessary to take the word dyāvah in this verse in the generic sense of 'a region'. What is to be understood here<sup>6</sup> is the existence of "three heavens" besides Earth and Atmosphere, two of which belong to Savitr and are the station of immortals, while the third which is the abode of Yama serves as the residence of ordinary mortals who after death become the Manes. Also, the heavens belonging to Savitr should be accepted to be situated on a higher plane than the one of which Yama is the lord. When Macdonell said that the world of Yama is the highest and that the two worlds of Savitr are situated at a lower level, he was perhaps influenced by the Atharvavedic verse (XVIII.2.48) noticed already; but this conception is entirely opposed to Rgvedic tradition<sup>7</sup>.

For a ratification of these observations as well as for obtaining a full knowledge of the distinctive features of the three

1 Īgvedaśukhāyā Mādhanukṛtā, Ed. by Dr. C. Kunhan Raja, p. 270.

2 Cf. G. Müller (Der Rigveda, I. 38 n.) who understands this earth and the visible and invisible portions of the sky by the three heavens mentioned here (Die drei Himmels sind hier Erde, der sichtbare und der jenseitige, unsichtbare Himmel).

3 Dr. C. Kunhan Raja, op. cit., p. 271.

4 Īgvedaśukhāyā, Edited by Dr. C. Kunhan Raja, p. 193.

5 Vedic Reader, p. 16.

6 Cf. J. Rhni, Der Vedische Mythos des Yama, p. 115.

7 That there is frequently a simile between the traditions of the RV. and the AV. is a well known fact. For some instances see my Designation of Hell in the Rgveda and the meaning of the word 'Ant' in the Indian Historical Quarterly XVIII.164.

heavens, it is necessary to make a careful study of the eschatological conception in the Samhitā period.

Mundane pleasure had all its charms for the Vedic poet,<sup>1</sup> but death had no terrors for him. He believed, as did Socrates long after, that it is not death but dying that is terrible. To the pessimistic Socrates death was attractive because it marked the cessation of mundane misery;<sup>2</sup> but the optimistic Vedic Indian did not fight shy of death for a different reason. Death held out to him a prospect of greater happiness. It brought out not a cessation of his existence but a prolongation of his old life lived under better conditions. The abode of Yama which the virtuous man reached after death is no strange place. It is his own home, discovered for him by his ancestors and ruled by one of them (RV. X. 14. 1, 2; 16. 9). He was not severed from intercourse with those whom he left behind on earth,<sup>3</sup> for he was, in a measure, dependant on the offerings of his descendants. Nor did he suffer for want of those pleasures which were available to him on earth. He had all these in a greater measure, so much so that it is possible to call the Vedic Heaven 'a glorified world of material joys'.<sup>4</sup> The Heaven in which the dead man thus passes a life of enjoyment may be identified with the Lunar World of later times. The idea that the Manes live here seems to be quite familiar to these Vedic Seers, though it is still in its beginnings and not yet fully developed as in the Upanishads. Soma is described to be in very close connection with the Manes. He is said to be united with them (RV. VIII. 48. 13) or accompanied by them (AV. XVIII. 4. 12), Soma stimulated the fathers to deeds (RV. IX. 96. 11), and through his help they found the light and the cows (RV. IX. 97. 39). The fact is no doubt true that Soma is a regular name of the Moon only in Post-Vedic Literature, and that in the Veda it generally signifies the plant or more frequently the

1 For details, see my Synopsis of the Conception of Immortality in the Veda in course of publication in the Bhāratya Vidyā.

2 Cf. the Poet-Philosopher Heine who wrote:

"Süss ist der Schlaf, der Tod ist besser, Am Besten wär' es, nie geboren sein."

3 In several of the passages of the AV. (XII. 3. 17; VI. 120. 3; IX. 5. 37) an expectation is expressed that there will be a continuation of family relations maintained even in the next world, (Muir, Original Sanskrit Texts, V. 205 L.).

4 Macdonell, Vedic Mythology, p. 168.

juice; but it has to be conceded that there are certain passages<sup>1</sup> in the R̥gveda which would give an absurd meaning if the word Soma occurring in them is taken in either of these latter senses. Chief among such are those (RV.X.85) which describe the wedding of Soma with Sūryā, the daughter of the Sun. Soma is here described as placed in the lap of the stars (nakṣatrāṇāṃ eṣāṃ upasthe soma āhitaḥ).<sup>2</sup> It is also stated here (RV.X.85.3) that albeit the fancy of the drinker of the juice of the Soma-plant that he has drunk Soma, no one really tastes of him whom the priests know to be Soma (somam yañ brahmāṇo vidur na tasyāśnānti kākana). Besides these passages where Soma cannot mean the juice or the plant, there are some which speak of the connection of the daughter of the Sun with Soma; the former is thus said to purify the distilled Soma (RV.IX.1.6), and to have brought Soma after it had been expanded by rain (IX. 113. 3). The connection between Sūryā and Soma mentioned in these passages becomes clear only if Soma is here understood to mean the Moon who, as a luminary even like the Sun, can reasonably be regarded as his son-in-law. Yet another passage (RV.X.123.8) describes Soma as the drop (drapṣa) which goes to the Ocean, looking with the eye of a vulture; and here also the allusion must be only to the Moon. The Atharva-veda which is generally reputed for conceptions more advanced than the R̥gveda, holds its own even on the present occasion. It declares in clear terms the identity of Soma with the Moon when it says (AV.XI.6.7) "May the god Soma free me he whom they call the Moon" (soma mā devo munēatu yañ āhuḥ candramā itṣ).

It is thus clear that Soma meant also the Moon to the Vedic Seers; and this idea, coupled with the fact that these people believed in a close association of Soma with the Manes, leads one naturally to the conclusion that the Moon must have been regarded, even so early as in the Vedic Period, as the world of the Manes.

The Manes are not all of the same kind. There are distinctions made among them (RV.X.15.1) into those that are lower (avara), those that are higher (para), and those that are middle

1 It must be of interest to note in this context that Hildebrandt contends that in the whole of the ninth Maṇḍala, Soma is the Moon and nowhere the ordinary plant. (Vedic Mythology, pp. 303, 320).

2 RV. X.85.2.

(madhyama); of these, it is only those that belong to the last variety that are expressly spoken of as soma-loving (madhyamāḥ pitarāḥ somyāsah), and it can hence be inferred that it is these alone that are intimately connected with the Moon. The lower (avara) variety of the Manes might be composed of the ordinary virtuous dead who go to Yama's Heaven to revel in his company. Soma is intimately connected even with Yama.<sup>1</sup> The latter, we are told, sits under a tree in Heaven and drinks Soma in the company of the gods (RV.X.135.1). Varuṇa, who is the companion of Yama in his merriment in this world, is often identified with Soma (IX.77.5; 95.4), so that the dead man who is promised that he would meet the two kings, Yama and Varuṇa, (RV.X.14.7) can be considered to meet Soma also. If so, we have here the beginnings of the Upaniṣadic theory that people of ordinary merit like sacrificers and philanthropists reach the Lunar World after their death. The theory that these people enjoy there might also have been suggested by the Vedic belief that the dead man finds Yama in his Heaven engaged in an ever-lasting bout with the gods and that he is also welcome to the party.

But the higher class (para) of Manes were justly honoured with a higher award. To this class belong the Rbhus, the Maruts, the Āngirases, the Vīśvāpas, the Navagvas, the Dakṣavas, the Atharvans, the Bhryus, and the Kuśikas. All these are people who distinguished themselves by exhibition of special merit,<sup>2</sup> and as a reward they became immortal and were treated even like gods. Not only do we hear often that the Manes are in close relation with the Sun, but also immortality is found in the Veda to have a sort of special connection with the Solar gods. Thus, on the far path to the world of the Manes, Pūṣan is the protector and Savitṛ the usherer of the dead (pūṣā tvā pātu prapathe purastāt...tatra tvā devaḥ savitā dadhātu).<sup>3</sup> The Manes are united with or guard the Sun (RV.X.107.2; 154.5) or are connected with the rays of the Sun (RV.I.109.7),<sup>4</sup> and suns shine for them in Heaven (RV.I.125.6). In another passage

1 Cf. Hillebrandt (op. cit., I.32 f.) according to whom Yama is the Moon, in which dying is typical, and thus the mortal child of the Sun and closely connected with the Manes.

2 For an elaboration of this theme, see my Apropos of the Conception of Immortality in the Veda mentioned already.

3 RV. X.17.4.

4 Cf. Bloomfield, J.A.O.S., XVI.27.

(RV.IX.113.9) we are even told clearly that the abode of the fathers is the highest point of the Sun (lokā yatra jyotiṣmantah taṣṭra mām amṛtaṁ kṛdhi). Varuṇa is the wise guardian of immortality (dhīram amṛtasya gopām),<sup>1</sup> and on Savitr all immortal things rest as on the axle-end of a car (RV.I.35.6). Sūryā is in one passage (RV X.85.20) asked to ascend the chariot bound for the world of immortals, and in another context it is clearly stated that man becomes immortal by the solar ray (upāṁśunā sam amṛtateam anaḥ).<sup>2</sup> As in the case of the close relation of Soma with the pītṛs which might be the beginning of the identification of the Pitṛloka with the Moon, the intimate relation of immortality with the Sun may be the starting point for the later doctrine of Immortality being identified with dissolution in the Sun.

From this world which is the abode of immortals like the Rbhus must be distinguished the abode of Viṣṇu, another solar god<sup>3</sup> in the Vedic pantheon. This is a god whose status in the Rgveda is much debated. The general view<sup>4</sup> has been that Viṣṇu presents the unique spectacle of a god whom, from a very inferior position in the Vedic period, rises later in the Puranic period, to the dignity of the Supreme Spirit. Several reasons are adduced to prove that the position of Viṣṇu in the Rgvedic age is quite insignificant. Not more than five whole hymns and a few more stray verses are addressed here to this god, so that, judged by the statistical standard, he will have to be counted as a deity of the fourth rank. Besides, in most passages he is lauded along with a host of other divinities, and many of the attributes given to him are those which he shares in common with many of them<sup>5</sup>. Viṣṇu is even stated to have sung the praise of Indra (RV.VIII.15.9),

1 RV. VII. 42.2.

2 RV. IV. 58.1.

3 Oldenberg's view that Viṣṇu is only a space-god (Weltall durchschneidende Gott) is untenable, for the idea that he is the solar home of souls is too clearly connected with him to be brushed aside as of no account (cf. Hopkins, J.A.O.S., XVI, cxlvii (L)).

4 Oldenberg, Die Religion des Veda, p. 227; Muir O.S.T., IV. 93; Barth, Religions of India, p. 164; Ehandarkar, Vaiṣṇavism, Śaivism and Minor Religious Systems, p. 83 f.; Macdonell, Vedic Mythology, p. 87; Vedic Reader, p. 30, Griffiths, Rigveda, I. 27 n. For other views of the same nature, see Dr. Dandekar's interesting article Viṣṇu in the Veda in Pestchiff's Prof. P. V. Kane, pp. 26 ff.

5 For instance, like Viṣṇu, Indra takes strides, spreads out the space and creates the wide air (RV.VI.83.5; VII.29.6). Along with Mitra, Varuṇa, and the Maruṭs, Viṣṇu sings the praises of Indra (RV. VIII.15.9).

and to derive his power from that god (RV VIII.12.27). From these considerations it should follow that Viṣṇu is no prominent god at all in the RV, and that he is not only on a footing of equality with other gods, but is often seen to be subordinate even to some of them.<sup>1</sup> It is true that the hymns in which Viṣṇu is celebrated in the R̥gveda are extremely small in number compared with those used in edifying Indra or Varuṇa; but to deny on this score to Viṣṇu the position of a great god in the Veda would only be to forget that in a sacrificial collection like the R̥gveda that is handed down to us the comparative prominence of the numerous gods in the Vedic pantheon is not necessarily brought out to the fullest extent.<sup>2</sup> It is not necessary even to say that Viṣṇu might have been quite popular among the masses, while the priestly classes, with its love for sacrifices, did not think much of him.<sup>3</sup> That would be to think that when the seer praised Viṣṇu he did so with the utmost reluctance. This, however, cannot be, for the seer is seen to extol Viṣṇu's unique feat of taking the 'three strides' with as much gusto as the feat of any other prominent god of the Veda. No one who reads the hymns in praise of Viṣṇu can afford to feel that this god 'occupied a somewhat subordinate place in the estimation and affections of the ancient ṛsis'.<sup>4</sup> Of the three steps of Viṣṇu, two, we are told, are visible to the naked eye, but the third and highest is beyond mortal ken. It is accessible to none, not even to the winged birds in their flight. (RV. I. 155.5; VII.99.2). It is the highest place (paramam padam)<sup>5</sup> or the highest path (paramam pāthah),<sup>6</sup> and is known only to its

1 Weber stresses this by pointing out that Viṣṇu owes almost all his famous qualities to Indra (Indische Studien, II. 226 ff., cited by Mair, op. cit., p. 298).

2 cf. Keith, Religion and Philosophy of the Veda, I. 103 ff.

3 Barth, Religions of India, p. 166: In a very interesting study of Viṣṇu in the Veda published recently, Dr. Dundas challenges both the views that this god is not prominent in the R̥gveda and that he is un-Aryan in origin, and maintains that he must have been supreme in the popular religion of the masses, though neglected by the higher class composed of priestly intellectuals (Feuchtwang Prof. P. V. Kane, p. 111). That Viṣṇu is not quite important in so far as sacrifices are concerned lends some justification to the latter part of the statement; but the former part must remain unsettled till the community to which devotees of Viṣṇu like Madhūśūkī Kāya or Dyaghatman exactly belonged is known with certainty.

4 Mair, op. cit., IV. 98.

5 RV. I. 29.20.21.

6 RV. III. 55.10.

owner who guards it zealously (RV. X.1.3).<sup>1</sup> This is a station situated far away from this earth (kṣayantam aśya rajasah parāke).<sup>2</sup> The same is the import of other passages<sup>3</sup> which describe Viṣṇu as living on high (bṛhan kṣayaḥ), as mountain-abiding (giriśāḥ) or mountain-dwelling (giriḥsit). It is also a fact that Viṣṇu shares many an attribute with the other gods, and that he is even described sometimes as subordinate to Indra.<sup>4</sup> Seeing that, in a kathenotheistic religion like that of the R̥gveda, each god is, for the time being, supreme in the mind of the devotee, it is not right to pay much attention to attributes given to the gods by their worshippers when they are in divine ecstasy.

The personality of Viṣṇu is far more important in the Veda than is ordinarily estimated judging him from these criteria. His importance lies in the very fact that he is not a sacrificial deity.<sup>5</sup> As Yāska would classify him, he is a god of the celestial region (dyauhāna) living on the highest plane compared with those gods that live in the atmospheric (antarikṣu) or terrestrial (prthivī) regions. While almost all the other gods receive sacrificial offerings like havis or soma, this is the god who is content with mere prayer (stuti). Like the god of the Puritans, he cares for piety rather than sacrifice, for devotion rather than offerings. It is thus stated that the group of Manes that go to his abode after their death is composed only of the pious (devayavaḥ sūrayaḥ)<sup>6</sup> among these Vedic poets. Their eye is ever directed towards this highest abode of Viṣṇu which is situated like an eye in Heaven (divīva cakṣur ātatam). It is their fond desire always that they should attain to the dear domain of Viṣṇu where are the many-horned nimble kine,

1 cf. RV. I.1. 55.10; VII. 99.1.

2 RV. VII. 103.6.

3 RV. VIII.15.9; I.154.2,3.

4 Such descriptions come chiefly from insignificant members of the family of Kṛpā like Parvata, Gaṇḍakī and Abusūkī. The Kṛpā family is moreover known for its special devotion to Indra. But Viṣṇu is really the highest god in the Veda.

5 For details in this connection, see my Sūktabhāṣya and Haviṣābhāṣya in the Ekāratīya Viḍḍi III.131f. It is of interest to note here that deities which are Sūktābhāṣya are not at all prominent in the R̥gveda that has come down to us.

6 cf. RV. I. 50.10 which says that the godly attain to the supreme light of the Sun (sūryam devāḥ agatva jyotiḥ uttamam). Another passage (RV. X. 15. 8) where connection between the manes and the wide-steps of Viṣṇu is mentioned should also be of the same import.

where men devoted to the gods rejoice,<sup>1</sup> and which is a veritable spring of nectar:

Tad viṣṇoḥ paramam padam sadā pas'yanti sūrayaḥ |

Divīva cakṣur atatām ||

Tad asya priyam abhi pātho asyām nara yatra

devayavo madanti |

Urukramasya sa hi bandhur itthā viṣṇoḥ pade parama

madhva utsaḥ ||

Tā vān vāstūny us'masi gamadhyai yatra gavo

bhūriśṛṅgā ayasaḥ ||

Atrāha tad urugāyasya vṛṣṇaḥ paramam padamāva

bhāti bhūri ||<sup>2</sup>

In the later age of the Epics and Purāṇas, Viṣṇu occupies the high place of one among the trinity, and even forms to his sectaries the highest god. But the Purāṇic Viṣṇu is only a logical development of the god of the Vedic period. His history is the history of one regular and normal development. There are no traces here of breaks and stop-gaps, of sudden elevations and recognitions. From the Vedic age down to the age of the Epics and Purāṇas, Viṣṇu is primarily revered for being the saviour and asylum of departed souls.<sup>3</sup>

To sum up : the Vedic seers believed in a three-fold heaven. The lowest of them which was intimately connected with Soma or Moon and belonged to Yama, formed the destination of people of ordinary merit like sacrificers and philanthropists. The remaining two heavens were situated in the higher region. The realm of Savitṛ and Sūrya was the lower of these two, and in this were accommodated men like the Ṛbhus and the Maruts whose exceptional merit brought them immortality and divinity. The other which is no other than the highest heaven of Viṣṇu was accessible only to the seers and even among these seers, only to those who were known for their piety and devotion towards the gods.

1 According to RV. VIII, 23.7, the gods themselves rejoice in this abode (yatr devāso madanti).

2 RV. I. 22.20; 154.5, 6.

3 cf. Bloomfield, Religion of the Veda, p. 170; Hopkins, Religions of India, p. 458; Notes on Dyauṣ, Viṣṇu, Varuṇa and Rudra (J.A.O.S., XVI, cxlvii ff.)

THE NĀNĀNĀ GRANT OF CAULUKYA KING KŪMĀRA-PĀLADEVA OF GUJARAT DATED VIKRAMA SĀMVAT 1212

BY

GAURISHANKAR H. OJHA

The grant was found while digging the foundation of a house at the village called Nānānā, about three miles from Bhagvān-purā railway station on the B. B. & C. I. Ry. On hearing about its discovery, I secured it through a friend of mine for examination and subsequently published its summary in my Annual Report on the working of the Rajputana Museum, Ajmer for the year ending 31st March 1937, pp. 3-4.

The grant consists of two copper-plates, which are inscribed on one side only. The measurement of each plate is 12" by 9½". Their edges are slightly turned up so as to form raised rims to preserve the writing. Two ring-holes at the bottom of the first and the top of the second plate show that they were originally held by two rings, which are now missing. Each plate contains 16 lines of writing. The letters are engraved deeply and their average size is about four-tenths of an inch. The plates are in a fairly good condition and the writing is legible throughout.

The language of the inscription is Sanskrit and the characters are Nāgarī. Except the five verses at the end (ll. 22-29), which are benedictory and imprecatory, the rest of the record is in prose. As regards orthography the letter व is throughout denoted by the sign for व. A consonant following र is mostly doubled, e. g. श्रीकृष्णदेव (l. 5), चक्रवर्ति (l. 7), विनिर्जित (l. 8), स्वर्ग (l. 22), गर्त (l. 26), etc. Rules of Sandhi are observed in all places. The sign of avagraha has been used only thrice, e. g. उषा (l. 13), उस्मदंशजे (l. 20) and इतकोऽत्र (l. 31). The sign of anustūpa is mostly used, e. g. चासुंद (l. 3), रणांगण (l. 8), शाकंभरी (l. 8), मंडल (l. 9) etc., while at some places the nasal is also employed, e. g. अवन्ती (l. 6), and मंडलान्तः (l. 9). Prethamātrās have been mostly used, but at places we also come across ordinary mātrās, e. g. पुण्ययज्ञो (l. 16), नाहुले (l. 18), चैतद (l. 20) and वंशजे (l. 20). इ is written in its old form (इ) at two places, e. g. इह (l. 25) and इति

(1. 31). The language of the inscription is quite correct and a few mistakes which occur in it are mostly due to the engraver.

The grant refers to the reign of Paramabhaṭṭāraka-Mahārājādhirāja-Parameśvara Śrī Kumārapāladeva and gives the following genealogy of the Caulukya kings of Gujarat :—

- 1 Paramabhaṭṭāraka-Mahārājādhirāja-Parameśvara Śrī Mularājadeva.
- 2 P. M. P. Śrī Cāmupderājadeva.
- 3 „ Śrī Durlabharājadeva.
- 4 „ Śrī Bhīmadeva.
- 5 „ Śrī Karpadeva alias Trailokyamalla.
- 6 „ Śrī Jayasīmhadeva alias Avantinātha, Tribhuvanagaṇḍa, Barbarakajlaṇḍa (i. e. conqueror of Barbaraka) and Siddhacekṣavartī (Siddharāja).
- 7 „ Śrī Kumārapāladeva, conqueror of Śākambhari

The record mentions that the last named king (Śrī Kumārapāladeva) granted one dramma per day from the customs-house of Nādūla (Nāḍol), on the occasion of the lunar eclipse, to the temple of Lākṣmīdevī built by Lākṣmīdevī, daughter of the exalted Nādūliya (of Nāḍol) Cāhuvāṇa (Chauhān) family of Kuntapāla and situated within the precincts of the temple of Tripuradeva.

The grant was issued from Anahilapātaka and is dated Monday, the fifth day of the bright half of Śrāvaṇa (Kārtikādi), Vikrama Samvat 1212, corresponding to the 24th July 1156 A. D. The day is irregular as the Caitrādi Śrāvaṇa Śudī 5 fell on Wednesday, while it was Tuesday on the same date of the Kārtikādi Śrāvaṇa.

The grant was written by Mahādeva, son of Lakṣmana of the Gauḍa Kāyaṣṭha family, the Mahā-Akṣa-Pāṭalika (the Chief Registrar). The dūtaka is Mahā-Sandhivigrahika (the Minister of Peace and War) Śrī Delapa. The second plate bears at the end the name of Śrī Kumārapāladeva (written by the writer).

Of the places mentioned in the grant, Nādūla is the present Nāḍol in the Goḍavāḍa district of the Jodhpur State and Anahilapātaka (Anahilavādā) is the present Pāṭana in the territory of His Highness the Gaekwad of Baroda.

Plate I

- (1) ओं <sup>१</sup>स्वास्ति राजावलीपूर्ववत् समस्तराजावलीदिराजितपरमभट्टारक-महाराजाधिराजपरमेश्व-
(2) रश्रीमूलराजदेवपादानुध्यातपरमभट्टारकमहाराजाधिराजपरमेश्वरश्री- वा-<sup>२</sup>
(3) मंहराजदेवपादानुध्यातपरमभट्टारकमहाराजाधिराजपरमेश्वरश्रीदुर्लभ-
(4) राजदेवपादानुध्यातपरमभट्टारकमहाराजाधिराजपरमेश्वरश्रीभीमदेव-पादानु-
(5) ध्यातपरमभट्टारकमहाराजाधिराजपरमेश्वरश्रीत्रिलोक्यमल्लश्रीकर्ण-देवपादा-
(6) मुध्यातपरमभट्टारकमहाराजाधिराजपरमेश्वरावन्तीनाथत्रिभुवनमंड-
(7) वर्वरकैजिष्णुसिद्धचक्रवर्तिश्रीजयसिंहदेवपादानुध्यातपरमभट्टारकमहा-
(8) राजाधिराजपरमेश्वरतिजलुजविष्णुमरणागणाविनिर्जितशाकंभरीभूपा-
(9) लश्रीमत्कुमारपालदेवः स्वभुज्यमाननाडुलमंडलान्तःपादिनः समस्त-राजपु-
(10) रुषार्ण ब्राह्मणोत्तरांस्तत्रियुक्ताधिकारिणो जनपदांश्च बोधयन्त्यस्तु वः
संविदि-
(11) तं यथा । श्रीमद्विक्रमादित्योत्पादितसंवत्सरशतत्रये द्वादशसु
द्वादशाधिकेषु
(12) श्रामर्षमासशुक्लपक्षपंचम्यां सोमदिने यत्रांकतोपि संवत् १२१२
वर्षे आश्विन-
(13) शुदि ५ सोमेऽस्यां संवत्सरमासपक्षवारपूर्विकायां तिथावयेह
श्रीमद्वर्णहि-

<sup>१</sup> Indicated by a symbol.

<sup>२</sup> This sign of punctuation is superfluous.

<sup>३</sup> Read वर्वरक°

<sup>४</sup> Read <sup>०</sup>सिद्ध.

<sup>५</sup> Read <sup>०</sup>पादिनः.

<sup>६</sup> Read दुर्लभाद्.

<sup>७</sup> Read ब्राह्मणो°.

<sup>८</sup> Read बोधय°.

<sup>९</sup> Read शतेषु.

<sup>१०</sup> Read आश्विन°.

[illegible]

- (14) लपाटके सोमग्रहणपर्वणि स्वात्वा चराचरगुरुं भगवन्तं भवानीपति-
मभ्यर्च्य
(15) संसारासारतां विच्छिन्द्य नलिनीदलमतज्जललवतरलतरं प्राणितन्यैमाक-
(16) लव्यैहिकमाभुषितकं च कलमंजीकृत्य पित्रोरात्मनश्च पुण्ययशो-

Plate II

- (17) भिदुद्धये ।<sup>1</sup> नाडूलतले संतिष्ठमानवृत्तकमंडपिकायां नाडूलीयचा
(18) हु० वाण० कुंतपालकुलपुत्रिकालाक्षणदेव्या नाडूले संतिष्ठमान
(19) श्रीतृपुरुषदेवजगत्यां कारितश्रीलाक्षणेश्वरदेवाय दितं प्रति वै १
एकः शा-
(20) सनेनोदकपूर्वमस्माभिः प्रदत्तः । सामान्यं चैतत्पुण्यफलं मत्वा- ऽस्मदंशजै-
(21) रन्ध्रेरपि भाविभोक्तृभिरस्मात्प्रदत्तदेवदायोयननुमंतदयः पालनीयश्च
(22) उक्तं च भगवता इयासेन । पश्चिर्वर्षतद्दद्याणि स्वर्ग्ये तिष्ठति भूतिर्दः ।
आच्छेत्ता
(23) चाधमंता च तान्येव नरकं वसेत् । १ [1] यानीह दत्तानि पुरा नरेवै- दानानि<sup>2</sup> धर्मा-
(24) धैयसस्कराणि<sup>3</sup> । निर्माल्यद्योतिप्रविमानि तानि को नाम साधुः पुनराददी-

<sup>1</sup> Read प्राणितन्य०

<sup>2</sup> This sign of punctuation is superfluous.

<sup>3</sup> This sign of punctuation is superfluous.

<sup>4</sup> This sign of punctuation is superfluous.

<sup>5</sup> Originally the words श्रीआसलेक्षरदेवजगत्यां were engraved, but all the letters have been struck off by two short slanting strokes at the top of each letter and on the right hand margin श्रीतृ(त्रि)पुरुषदेवजगत्यां is written in the same hand. To denote the alteration two Hanṣapadas in the form of crosses (x) have been placed at the beginning as well as at the end of the original and altered words.

<sup>6</sup> Read द्रव्य.

<sup>7</sup> Read ०यमनु०.

<sup>8</sup> Read भूमिदः.

<sup>9</sup> Read नरेवैदानानि.

<sup>10</sup> Read यशस्कराणि.

<sup>11</sup> Read ०प्रविमानि तानि.

- ( 25 ) त ॥ २[॥] इह हि जलदलीलाचंचले जीवलोके तृणलवलघुसारे सर्व-( 26 ) संसारसौख्ये । अपहंरन्तु दुराशः शासनं देवतानां नरकगहनमर्त्तावर्त्त-
 ( 27 ) पातोत्सुको यः । ३[॥] वैदुभिर्वसुधाभुक्ता राजभिः समरादिभिः । यस्य य-
 ( 28 ) स्य यदा भूमिस्तस्य तस्य तदा फलं ॥ ४ [॥] विष्यादवीश्वतोयासु
 शृङ्गकोटरवासि-
 ( 29 ) नः कुष्णसर्पाः प्रजायन्ते देवदायापहारकाः ॥ ५ [॥] लिखितमिदं
 शासनं मौ-
 ( 30 ) ढकायस्थान्वयप्रसूतनहाक्षपटलिकं<sup>१</sup> टं श्रीलक्ष्मणसूत टं श्रीमहादे-
 ( 31 ) वेन । दूतकोऽत्र महासंधिविग्रहिकं<sup>२</sup> टं श्रीदेवण इति ॥
 ( 32 ) श्रीकुमारपालदेवस्य

<sup>१</sup> Read अपहंरन्ति.
<sup>२</sup> Read दुराशः.
<sup>३</sup> Read मर्त्तावर्त्तं.
<sup>४</sup> Read बहुभिः.
<sup>५</sup> Read महाक्षपटलिक.
<sup>६</sup> Read टङ्कुर.
<sup>७</sup> Read संधिविग्रहिक.

THE VILIVĀYAKURAS AND SIVALAKURA OF THE KOLHAPUR COINS

BY
M. GOVIND PAI

The genealogy of the later Śātavāhanas i. e. the last 8 kings of the Śātavāhana dynasty from Gautamīputra Śrī Śātakarṇi to the last Pulumāvi, with their respective regnal periods as I have settled, stands as follows—<sup>1</sup>

Some 60 years ago, certain coins of copper and lead were discovered in Kolhapur, buried in what appears to have once been a Buddhist stūpa near the hill of Brahmapuri, north-west of the town. These coins bear three kinds of legends, viz—

---

<sup>1</sup> This table has been given here merely for reference. The articles bearing upon the genealogy and chronology of the later Śātavāhanas will be published soon hereafter.

- (1) Raño Vāsiṣṭhīputasa Viḷivāyakurasa,
- (2) Raño Mādharīputasa Sivalakurasa, and
- (3) Raño Gotamīputasa Viḷivāyakurasa.

And this serial order is based on the evidence of the re-strikings of the coins themselves, for no. 2 Mādharīputra re-strikes the coins of no. 1 Vāsiṣṭhīputra, and similarly no. 3 Gautamīputra re-strikes the coins of no. 1 Vāsiṣṭhīputra as well as those of no. 2 Mādharīputra, so that of these three rulers whom these coins have brought to light, Vāsiṣṭhīputra is no doubt the earliest, Mādharīputra comes next, and Gautamīputra is the latest in point of time.

Different scholars have explained these names and identified these rulers in different ways,<sup>1</sup> but none of them seems to be satisfactory. So I shall offer my explanation here, which may be taken for what it is worth.

In Ptolemy's geography<sup>2</sup> we are told that in his time (1) the capital of Tiactanes i. e. obviously Castana, the Śaka ruler of Surāṣṭra and Mālava, was Ozanē=Ujjayinī, and (2) the royal seat of Sir Polemaios was Baithana, which is no doubt Ptolemy's Greek for the Prākṛit Paṭṭhana=Skt. Pratiṣṭhāna, modern Paṭhan in the Aurangabad district of the Hyderabad State, and we shall soon see that it was for a long time the capital of the imperial Sātavāhanas. It thus follows that Ptolemy's Siro Polemaios is without doubt one of those three kings of that dynasty who are called Pulōmāvi or Pulōmā in the Purāṇas,<sup>3</sup> and Pulumāyi as well as Pulumāvi in their inscriptions.<sup>4</sup>

<sup>1</sup> R. G. Bhandarkar: Early History of the Dekkan (EHD), Calcutta (1928), pp. 34-35; Vincent Smith: Early History of India (EHI), p. 231; Jouveau-Dubreuil: Ancient History of the Deccan (AHD), p. 45; D. R. Bhandarkar: 'Dekkan of the Sātavāhana period' in Indian Antiquary (IA), XLIX (1920), pp. 31-34; V. S. Bakhle: 'Sātavāhanas and the contemporary Kshatrapas' in JBRRAS IV (1928), pp. 55-58; K. P. Jayaswal: 'Problems of Saka-Sātavāhana History' in JBORS XVI (1930), pp. 267-269; J. Praylski: 'Hippokours et Satakarni' in JRAS (April 1929), pp. 273-279, and its English translation by L. V. Ramaswami Aiyar in Journal of the Andhra Historical Research Society, IV (1930), pp. 49-53; Rapson: Indian Coins (RIC), pp. 22-24.

<sup>2</sup> McCrindle: Ancient India as described by Ptolemy, Calcutta, 1927 (Ptolemy) pp. 152, 155, 175-177.

<sup>3</sup> Pargiter: Purāṇa Text of the Dynasties of the Kali Age (Pargiter), pp. 36-43 and 71-72.

<sup>4</sup> Lüders' Ins. Nos. 1122, 1123, 1124, 1106 etc.; and EI VIII, p. 60, and XIV, p. 115.

From the Gīrnār ( or Junāgaḍh ) inscription <sup>1</sup> of the Śaka Mahā-kṣatrapa Rudradāma, we know that he had already succeeded his grand-father Caṣṭana in its year 72 of the Śaka era, i. e. 150-151 A. C., while from the Andhan inscriptions <sup>2</sup> of the year 52 of the same era i. e. 130-131 A. C., we know that Caṣṭana and Rudradāma were ruling conjointly at that time. In an inscription at Kaṇheri <sup>3</sup> we are further told that a queen of ( the Sātavāhana king ) Vāsiṣṭhiputra Śrī Śātakarṇi was the daughter of Mahā-kṣatrapa Rudra. of the race of the Kārddamaka kings, i. e. evidently a race of foreign rulers, and this Rudra. is, all scholars are agreed, the Śaka ruler Rudradāma, the grandson ( and the immediate successor ) of Caṣṭana, and this is amply borne out by his own statement in his afore-said Gīrnār inscription that he was not remotely, and therefore was sufficiently closely, related to Śātakarṇi i. e. Sātavāhana king—सतकर्ण... सम्बन्धाविद्रुतया... Since Ptolemy however mentions only Caṣṭana, and not Rudradāma too, as king at Ujjayīni, it goes without saying that his reference is to a state of things sometime before 130-131 A. C., say C. 125 A. C. or yet earlier, when Rudradāma had not yet been associated with his grand-father in rulership. Consequently Ptolemy's Sirō Polemaios would seem to have been the contemporary of the Śaka ruler Caṣṭana, and the immediate predecessor as well, in his own line, of a Vāsiṣṭhiputra Śrī Śātakarṇi, who was the son-in-law, and therefore for some or several years a contemporary too, of Caṣṭana's successor Rudradāma. Conclusively therefore Sirō Polemaios is the 2nd king in the above genealogy, viz. Vāsiṣṭhiputra Śrī Puṣumāyi ( 91-119 A. C. ) the elder brother as well as predecessor of Vāsiṣṭhiputra Śrī ( Śivaskandha ) <sup>4</sup> Śātakarṇi ( 119-148 A. C. ). Ptolemy's work therefore must have been composed before or soon after 119 A. C.

In Ptolemy we are further told that in the country inland from the west coast, while Sirō Polemaios = Vāsiṣṭhiputra Śrī Puṣumāyi was ruling in the north at Baithana = Paithan, another ruler, whom he calls Bateokouros had his royal seat in the south

<sup>1</sup> Epigraphia Indica, ( EI ), VIII, p. 47.

EI, XVI, pp. 23-25.

<sup>2</sup> EI, X, Appendix: Lüders' List of Brāhmī Inscriptions, No. 994.

<sup>4</sup> From the Purāṇas ( Pargiter, p. 42 line 30 ) we learn that the personal name of Vāsiṣṭhiputra Śrī Śātakarṇi, was Śivaskandha.

41 [ Annals, B. O. R. I. ]

at Hippokoura.<sup>1</sup> There is no distinct letter in Greek for our  $\varphi$  ( $\phi$ ), which was therefore invariably represented by the Greek consonant  $\beta$ , or the vowel  $\alpha$ , or the diphthong  $ou$ ,<sup>2</sup> so that as was first pointed out by the late Dr. R. G. Bhandarkar and has since been universally accepted, Ptolemy's Baleokouros i. e. Baleokoura in its uninflected form, is quite the same as the Vilivāyakura of the Kolhapur coins,<sup>3</sup> but which of the two Vilivāyakuras we shall presently see.

Now Ptolemy's Hippokoura, which thus lay to the south of Paithan, was situated in the interior, obviously to the west of river which he calls the Benda (or Binda), and which Yule has identified with the Bhīmā river.<sup>4</sup> It further stood between the cities which he calls (1) Indē (in the east) and (2) Banaouasei (in the west)<sup>5</sup> which are easily and correctly identified with (1) Indi, the headquarters of the taluk of the same name in the Bijapur district of the Bombay Presidency, and (2) Banavāsi, a town in the Sirsi taluk of the North Kanara district in the same Presidency. In other words Hippokoura certainly lay in the Karnāṭaka country. In my identification of the 10 cities, which Ptolemy mentions as lying between the river Benda=the Bhīmā river and Banaouasei=Banavāsi, viz. (1) Nagarouris, (2) Tabaso, (3) Indē, (4) Tiripangalida, (5) Hippokoura, (6) Souboutton, (7) Sirimataga, (8) Kalligeris, (9) Modogoulla and (10) Pelirgala, I have shown<sup>6</sup> that all of them lie in Northern Karnāṭaka and his Hippokoura is no other than the present Hipparagi (also called Hūvina Hipparagi) in the Bāgevaḍi taluk of the Bijapur district.

We have just seen that Paithan=Pratiṣṭhāna was the capital of Vāsiṣṭhiputra Śrī Puṣumāyi. Now in the final verse in one of

<sup>1</sup> Ptolemy, pp. 175-76, 178-79; EHD p. 43.

<sup>2</sup> e. g. The river Vitastā=Sindus (Ptolemy, p. 89); Aluvakhṛta=Olokhota (Ptolemy, p. 180); Vindhya mountain=Ovindion (Ptolemy, p. 77).

<sup>3</sup> EHD, p. 44.

<sup>4</sup> Ptolemy, pp. 178 and 358.

<sup>5</sup> Ibid., pp. 175-76.

<sup>6</sup> My Kannada art. Ptolemy's Hippokoura containing the identification of all these 10 cities, has been published in the Prabuddha Karnāṭaka (Bangalore), XXIII: no. 1 (August 1941) pp. 82-104, and no. 2 (October 1941), pp. 89-92. The English art. will soon follow.

the MS of the Prākṛit poem Gāthā-Saptasatī, we are told—<sup>1</sup>

राएण विरहआए कुन्तल जणवअ इणेण हालेण ।

that its reputed author Hāla, who was a king of the Sātavāhana dynasty, and ruled about 100 years before Vāsisthīputra Śrī Puṣumāyi (91-119 A.C.), as is evident from the Purāṇas,<sup>2</sup> was the king of Kuntala, and further in its colophon he is spoken of as कुन्तलजनपदेश्वर प्रतिष्ठानपत्तनाधिशि अतर्कणोपनामक...हालाद्युपनामक श्रीजातवाहन नरेन्द्र...king of Kuntala and the lord of the city of Pratiṣṭhāna, which was therefore evidently his capital. A yet earlier king of the same dynasty who ruled some 60-70 years before Hāla, as appears from the Purāṇas,<sup>3</sup> is known by the very significant name Kuntala (Svatikarṇa or) Śātakarṇi, which naturally tends to connect him with the Kuntala country. And perhaps it is yet another Sātavāhana king, who is said to have ordered the exclusive use of the Prākṛit language in his harem in the Kuntala country—कुन्तलेषु सातवाहनो नाम राजा तेन प्राकृतभाषाप्रयोजनस्तदुर एव प्रवर्तितो नियमः ।<sup>4</sup> It thus appears that Kuntala was the home province of kingdom of the Sātavāhanas, and Paithan their imperial capital, i. e. the capital of the kings themselves, and not of their heirs-apparent nor of other princes of the royal family, from at least the beginning of the first century B. C. to at least the end of the reign of Vāsisthīputra Śrī Puṣumāyi (91-119 A. C.), if not yet later on until the end of their dynasty in C. 205 A. C.

From the Nāsik cave inscription of the 19th regnal year of Vāsisthīputra Śrī Puṣumāyi<sup>5</sup> i. e. 109-110 A. C., the Sātavāhana empire which he inherited from his father, the great conqueror, Gautamīputra Śrī Śātakarṇi, is known to have included (1) Anūpa in the north i. e. the Haihaya country lying to the north of the Narmadā river, (2) the Mahendra mountain in the east i. e. the Eastern Ghāṭs standing between the rivers Gōdāvari and Mahā-

<sup>1</sup> Nirṇayavāgar Press Edition (Bombay, 1899), Introd. p. 1.

<sup>2</sup> Pargiter, pp. 41 and 71.

<sup>3</sup> Ibid. p. 40, fn. 61, and p. 71. It is this Sātavāhana king who is mentioned in Vātsyāyana's Kūmasāstra (EHD.) p. 69, fn. 7)—कर्णवर्मा कुन्तलः शातकर्णिः जातवाहनो महोदधी मलयवर्ती [जवान].

<sup>4</sup> Rājāsākhara's Kāvyā-mīmāṃsā (Gaekwad's Oriental Series No. 1), p. 50.

<sup>5</sup> EI, VIII, p. 60.

nadi, (3) the Malaya hill in the south i. e. the southern portion of the Western Ghāṭs to the south of the river Kāvērī, and (4) on the west the coastal Aparānta country,<sup>1</sup> so that there is hardly any doubt that the whole of the Karpāṭaka country was included in the Śātavāhana empire under Vāsiṣṭhīputra Śrī Puṣumāyi, which thus extended from the river Narmadā in the north to the river Kāvērī in the south, and was bounded by the Eastern Ghāṭs and the Arabian sea on the other two sides. It therefore follows that the city of Hippokura, which was the capital of Baleokouras, as Ptolemy tells us, was also comprised within Śrī Puṣumāyi's empire, and was evidently the capital of one of its principalities or tributary states, and accordingly Baleokouras = Vilivāyakura, would at once seem to have been a subordinate ruler under Vāsiṣṭhīputra Śrī Puṣumāyi, or in other words a viceroy of that Śātavāhana king and never himself an independent king as several scholars seem to believe.

Another fact which also tends to the same conclusion, on that while the names of the Śātavāhana kings, whether on their coins or in their inscriptions, have the honorific Śrī i. e. Śrī invariably immediately preceding them,<sup>2</sup> that epithet however is conspicuous by absence in every one of the three names on the Kolhapur coins, and since neither its presence in the former case could be merely customary, nor its absence in the latter purely accidental, it is unavoidable to infer that inasmuch as the later Śātavāhanas were paramount rulers, the Śrī = Siri preceding their names could not well be simply honorific, but was also indicative of their imperial rank, and as such it was an indispensable part of their designation, and consequently its absence on the Kolhapur coins argues that the Vilivāyakuras and Sivalakura mentioned on them were undoubtedly just subordinate rulers, and not sovereign kings like the Śātavāhanas. And if at the same time it is remembered that it was invariably the princes of the royal house, such as the sons or brothers or nephews etc. of the reigning king, who governed under him as his viceroys i. e. as subordinate rulers, both the Vilivāyakuras and the intermediate Sivalakura would forthwith seem to have been Kumāras i. e. (kings') sons or princes,<sup>1</sup> of the imperial family, very likely the sons of perhaps as many contemporary kings of the Sātavāhana dynasty. This is further confirmed by the fact that these princes not only strike coins with their own names but also take on them their respective metronymies exactly as the later Sātavāhanas do in their inscriptions as well as their coins.<sup>2</sup>

<sup>1</sup> For the identification of these and other place-names in that inscription, vide IA, XLVIII (1919), pp. 150-51, and Nandalal Dey's Geographical Dictionary of ancient and mediaeval India.

<sup>2</sup> Inscriptions—(1) Lüders' list nos. 994, 1024, 1106, 1122, 1123, 1124, 1125, 1145, 1147 etc.; (2) EI: VIII, pp. 20 and 71, XVIII, pp. 318-319, and XIV, p. 115. Coins of (1) Śrī Śiva Śātakarṇi: AHD p. 41, (2) Śrī Yajña Śātakarṇi: RIC p. 23, Plate III. 5, and (3) Śrī Caṇḍa Śātakarṇi: AHD p. 42.

Since thus the Vilivāyakuras and Sivalakura would seem to have been Kumāras of the Sātavāhana family, it need hardly be said that every word on the Kolhapur coins is Prākṛit, exactly as is the case with the legends on the Sātavāhana coins, and therefore Vilivāya-kura and Sivala-kura, which at first sight appear as rather bizarre amid the other undoubted Prākṛit words in those coin-legends, are not out-landish but are likewise pure Prākṛit designations. A comparison besides of these designations definitely shows that they are compounds of which the common latter part is the word kura, and now that we know that Vilivāya-kura and Sivala-kura were princes, there can not be any more doubt that Kura is only a Prākṛit form of the Skt. word Kumāra.

Now the Skt. word कुमारी = (king's) daughter, princess, occurs as कुमरी as well as कुमरी in Hāla's Gāthā-Saptasatī—मोहे गमा कुमरी ॥ ( III. 98, fn. 11 ), and the Prākṛit form सामाद्वेय for the Skt. दयामादितेयु or सामाजितेयु ( VI. 59, fn. 5 ) in the same poem puts it beyond doubt that कुमरी could not well be less literary than कुमरी. Even if it were not so, we shall do well to remember that the Prākṛit which is met with in the inscriptions and coin-legends of the Sātavāhana period, with which we are here concerned, is rather popular than literary, as a comparison with the elegant Prākṛit of the Gāthā-Saptasatī will readily testify. We have therefore to think of कुमरी and कुमर rather than कुमरी and कुमर in the present connection, as having been current in the popular usage of those days. And when again the medial अ of (कुमार = ) कुमर was further dropped, as such syncope is quite frequent in common parlance, there only remains कुर = (king's) son, prince.

<sup>1</sup> Amarakośa: युवराजस्तु कुमारी मर्तुदातकः ॥ ( I. 7. 12. ).

<sup>2</sup> See foot-note 2 on p. 324 above.

Or the process of the change from कुमार to कुर may also be otherwise explained. The medial anunāsika न is frequently changed into an anusvāra in popular language, and कुमार accordingly becomes कुंवर, कुंजर and finally कुर.<sup>1</sup> The anusvāra symbol is moreover invariably omitted, as is borne out by a number of examples in the Śātavāhana inscriptions, e. g. in the aforesaid Nāsik cave inscription of the 19th regnal year of Vāsiṣṭhīputra Śrī Puṣumāyī (EI. VIII, p. 60)—संयसर=सविस्तर (line 1), वैश=वस (L 6) &c. so that कुमार=कुर.

Accordingly Viṣivāya-kura would be Viṣivāya-kumāra, and Sivala-kura similarly Sivala-kumāra; and on an analogy with the compound Rāja-kumāra=king's son, which has the same word Kumāra for its latter part, both of them are readily explained as similar genitive tatpuruṣa compounds meaning respectively the son of Viṣivāya and the son of Sivala. And since one of the two Viṣivāyakuras i. e. Ptolemy's Baleokouros, was a contemporary of Vāsiṣṭhīputra Śrī Puṣumāyī or Puṣumāvi (for these are merely the two different forms of the same personal name, as we shall presently see), and besides Viṣivāyakura, as we now know, means the son of Viṣivāya, it need hardly be said that Viṣivāya is merely a variant of Puṣumāy(v)i, and Viṣivāyakura therefore means the son of Puṣumāy(v)i.

The process is perhaps as follows—(1) व > य—प्रतारयितुम् = से आरिडं ( Gāthā-Saptasati=GS, III. 86 ), व्यापार=वापार ( Ibid, III. 26, IV. 36 ), तार्पी=तार्पी ( III. 39 ), सोपान=सोपाण ( III. 78 ), प्रदीपित=वल्लिपित ( Hemacandra's Śabdānuśāsana=HS, VIII. 1. 100 ), प्रभूत=बहुत ( Ibid, VIII. 1. 223 ) &c., (2) उ > इ—दुरुप=दुरिस ( GS, II. 96, III. 14, 27, 55 ), कुटुम्ब=कुटिम्ब &c., (3) न > य—मन्मथ=यन्मह ( HS, VIII. 7, 61 ), अभिमन्थु=अद्विधन्तु ( Ibid, VIII. 1. 243 ), पायल=पावर; (4) इ > अ—इरिद्रा=इलदा, शिथिल=सठिल, सधिल &c.; and (5) व > य—प्रवर्तते=प्रवृद्ध, दिवा=दिपा, दाप=दाय &c. so that Puṣumāyī, Puṣumāvi = Viṣivāya.

Now there are two different Viṣivāyakuras mentioned on the Kolhapur coins (Nos. 1 and 3), the earlier of whom is a Vāsiṣṭhīputra = son of a queen who as a Vāsiṣṭhī i. e. belonged to the

<sup>1</sup> These forms are still met with in the titles of the scions of the princely houses of northern India.

Vāsiṣṭha gōtra, and the later a Gautami-putra=son of a queen who was a Gautami, i. e. belonged to the Gautama gōtra. Which of the twain was Ptolemy's Baleokouros? In other words, which of these two princes was the son as we have just seen, and the viceroy as well, of the contemporary Sātavāhana king Vāsiṣṭhi-putra Śrī Puṣumāyi?

All these three Sātavāhana princes bear their respective metronymies, Vāsiṣṭhi-putra, Mādhari-putra, and Gautami-putra, exactly as the later Sātavāhana kings from Gautami-putra Śrī Śātakarṇi onwards do, and all of them will have therefore to be duly assigned to the period covered by the reigns of the later Sātavāhanas i. e. 60 to C. 205 A. C. Now within this period there were only two kings among them who were called Puṣumāyi, viz. (1) Vāsiṣṭhi-putra Śrī Puṣumāyi (91-119 A. C.), and (2) the last king Śrī Puṣumāyi (197-C. 205 A. C.). And since the former is called Puṣumāyi in some of his inscriptions and Puṣumāvi in others<sup>1</sup> and these names, as is self-evident, are merely the variants of each other, it need hardly be said that the earlier Vilivāyakura, viz. Vāsiṣṭhi-putra Vilivāyakura of the Kolhapur coin No. 1, is the son of the earlier Puṣumāy(v)i, viz. Vāsiṣṭhi-putra Śrī Puṣumāy(v)i, and consequently the other Vilivāyakura, viz. Gautami-putra Vilivāyakura of the No. 3 coin is the son of Śrī Puṣumāvi i. e. the last of the Sātavāhanas. There is thus hardly any doubt that Vāsiṣṭhi-putra Vilivāyakura of coin No. 1 is Ptolemy's Baleokouros.

We have seen<sup>2</sup> that Vāsiṣṭhi-putra Śrī Puṣumāyi was succeeded by his brother Vāsiṣṭhi-putra Śrī Śivaskandha Śātakarṇi (119-148 A. C.), who in his turn was succeeded by his nephew Vāsiṣṭhi-putra Śrī Śiva Śātakarṇi (148-152 A. C.) son of Vāsiṣṭhi-putra Śrī Puṣumāyi. Vāsiṣṭhi-putra Vilivāyakura, who was the son of Vāsiṣṭhi-putra Śrī Puṣumāyi might therefore as well be Vāsiṣṭhi-putra Śiva Śātakarṇi as any other son of Vāsiṣṭhi-putra Śrī Puṣumāyi, for it is not possible to be more definite about his identity, because he has been mentioned by only his metronymic Vāsiṣṭhi-putra and patronymic Vilivāyakura i. e. Pulumāyi-Kumāra, and not by his personal name, so that all that can be said with certainty about him, is that he was a son of Vāsiṣṭhīputra Śrī Pulumāyi. If besides he was the same prince who later on became king as Vāsiṣṭhīputra Śrī Śiva Śātakarṇi, his Kolhapur coin No. 1 must have been struck when he was yet a prince, Yavarāja, under his father and was ruling as his viceroy during some or several years of his reign.

<sup>1</sup> Puṣumāyi in Lüders' list nos. 1123, 1123 etc., and Puṣumāvi in nos. 1106, 1124 etc.

<sup>2</sup> This will be shown in our forthcoming art. on the genealogy and chronology of the later Sātavāhanas.

Next in order of time is prince Māḍharīputra Sivalakura of the Kolhapur coin No. 2, and we have seen Sivala-kura is Sivala-Kumāra and means son of Sivala. Who then is Sivala?

It is well-known that the suffix ṣ is added to proper names without any alteration of sense, or in the sense of endearment, and in Lüders' list of Brāhmī inscriptions there occur several instances of proper names with that suffix, most of which no doubt belong to the later Śātavāhana period; e. g. (1) Kṛṣṇa (Kanha) = Kanhila (No. 833), (2) Naga = Nagila (Nos. 338, 470, 569), (3) Droṇa = Droṇala (No. 1417), (4) Vasu = fem. Vasulā (No. 249), and (5) Śiva (Siva) = fem. Sivalā (Nos. 709, 1268) wherefore masc. Sivala. So Śiva = Sivala, and since there was only one king among the later Śātavāhanas who was called simply Śiva, there is hardly any doubt that Sivala is that king Vāsiṣṭhīputra Śrī Śiva Śātakarṇi, (148-152 A. C.), and Sivalakura is therefore his son. He also bears the metronymic Māḍharīputra, wherefore the queen who was his mother was a Māḍhari i. e. she belonged to the Māḍhara = Māṭhara gōtra. The name of this gōtra is met with in the metronymic of Māḍharīputra Sīri Vīra Purisadata son of Vāsiṣṭhīputra Cāntamūla in the pillar inscriptions at Nāgārjunikonda,<sup>1</sup> and also in that of Māḍharīputra Svāmi Sakasēna in the Kaphēri cave inscriptions;<sup>2</sup> and from Hēma-candra we have 'वेदव्यासस्तु मातरः' (Abhidhānacintāmaṇi, v. 846) and 'मातरो व्यासविप्रयोः' (Anēkārtha-saṃgraha, v. 1194), so that Māṭhara gōtra would seem to be the gōtra of Vēda-vyāsa.

After Vāsiṣṭhīputra Śrī Śiva Śātakarṇi (148-152 A. C.) the succession which went back to the younger branch, when his uncle's son Gautamīputra Śrī Yajña Śātakarṇi (152-181 A. C.) ascended the Śātavāhana throne, went on till the last in that junior branch and never again reverted to the senior, so that for one thing it is certain that prince Sivalakura, who was the son of Vāsisthīputra Śrī Śiva Śātakarṇi, never ruled as king. So we know him only by his metronymic Māḍharīputra and patronymic Sivalakura : that is all.

<sup>1</sup> Annual Report on South Indian Epigraphy, 1927, pp. 42-43 and 72.

<sup>2</sup> Lüders' list, nos. 1001 and 1002.

The last in point of time is the prince Gautamīputra Vijivāyākura of the Kolhapur coin No. 3, and we have seen that he is the son of Śrī Pulumāvi (197-C. 205 A.C.), the last of the Śātavāhanas, by his queen who belonged to the Gautama gōtra. The only other thing we can tell about him surely, is that since the Śātavāhana dynasty itself came to an end with his father Śrī Pulumāvi, this prince too did not rule as king.

A NOTE ON THE MEANING AND USE OF THE WORD JOHĀR

BY

A. G. PAWAR

The word Johār, indicating a form of obeisance, has attained a degree of importance in the history of Shivaji, the founder of the Maratha Kingdom, by creating a little problem regarding the influence exercised upon the king by the contemporary saint, Rāmadāsa. Tradition affirms that Rāmadāsa persuaded Shivaji to abandon the usage of saying johār and to adopt in its place the practice of rāmraṃ. Various accounts of this supposed change are given in the Bakhara according to one of which a meeting is said to have taken place between the king and the saint in the Śaka year 1573 (i. e. A. D. 1651-52) when the saint asked the king to introduce the said change. "Your kingdom," the saint is said to have observed to the king, "is a kingdom of the Hindus. It is therefore against (Hindu) religion to observe the custom of doing johār as the Mlechhas (Moslems) do. The Hindus should really say rāmraṃ and use the same expression in their writings. Henceforth no Hindu excepting a member of the depressed class should use the word johār." It is said that the king accepted the suggestion and issued orders to the effect that all the caste Hindus should use the expression rāmraṃ, but the Shudras were to stick to johār. Since that time the change in the mode of obeisance is said to have come into force.<sup>1</sup>

The assertions made or implied in this account are utterly unhistorical. The question whether Shivaji met Rāmadāsa in the Śaka year 1573, though relevant and important, need not be discussed here, particularly because it can be conclusively proved that, whether this meeting took place or not, the change-over from johār to rāmraṃ could not have occurred in the manner suggested. On the strength of purely historical evidence, a detailed study of which is out of place here, two facts can be well established to prove the falsity of the story as given in the Bakhars. Firstly, the term rāmram was in vogue even before the times of Shivaji and Rāmadāsa,<sup>1</sup> so that there is no question of the king introducing a new mode of greeting. Secondly, the practice of saying johār continued not only throughout Shivaji's reign but at least till the end of the seventeenth century, and what is even more important, the Chhatrapatis themselves used the term in their writings. In a letter which Shivaji wrote only three years before his death, he says johār to the addressee<sup>2</sup> (Maloji Ghorpade, the Chief of Mudhol), and the king's son, Rajaram, uses the same expression in the letters he wrote to the chief of Sunda in the year 1690.<sup>3</sup> Had Shivaji ordered the change in accordance with the wishes of Rāmadāsa, he himself would not have been guilty of a lapse, nor his son, Rajaram, would have dared to violate his father's injunctions. The gross absurdity of the story of the Bakhars becomes even more evident when we remember that, according to it, only low-class Hindus were to continue the use of the expression johār, but, in fact, the Chhatrapatis themselves freely used it!

<sup>1</sup> See Athalye's Samarthānache Samarthya pp. 370-71.

The use of the term rāmram even before the times of Shivaji and Rāmadāsa and the currency of the expression johār during the reign of the first three Maratha kings negative the suggestion that the former term came into force by a royal decree. Johār is quite an ancient word (as is shown below) whereas rāmram came to be freely used since the beginning of the eighteenth century. It is obvious that the subsequent disappearance of the word johār among the caste Hindus together with the retention of its use by the lower class, and the prominence which the word rāmram obtained in course of time, led the imaginative writers of the Bakhars, which are but later productions, to weave a story around 'the plot' and make both Shivaji and Rāmadāsa play an important part in it. One can conceive the possibility that Rāmadāsa, being a devotee of Rāma, was interested in the spread of his cult. Naturally the practice of saying rāmram may have obtained enthusiastic support by his followers in the first instance and by many others in the end. Even so, Ramadāsa was not the first to coin the word, nor did Shīvajī give it the royal sanction and support.

<sup>1</sup> Nāmadēva, a fourteenth century saint-poet, has used it in one of his abhaṅgas (see Bharat Itihas Sanshodhak Mandal Quarterly Vol. 4, p. 39) and in an official letter written before the beginning of Shivaji's regime the same expression has been used (see, B. I. E. M. Itivratna, Śaka 1838, pp. 6-7).

<sup>2</sup> For this letter, see Patrasarsangraha Vol. 2, No. 1901.

<sup>3</sup> See letters Nos. 477-78 of Shivacharitra-Sahitya Vol. 3.

The eventual displacement of johār by other terms is a fact which must be admitted but cannot be easily explained. If the Bakhar account is to be accepted as an explanation of the change it appears that the objection raised against that word was religious. As quoted above, it is said that it was "against (Hindu) religion to observe the custom of doing johār as the Mlechhas do." If really an appeal were made to the Hindus on the religious ground it must certainly have evoked a hearty response, because religion was still a living force. The religious argument against johār, if it were raised, would be forceful and significant but, as is shown below, utterly baseless. It must be mentioned here that the expression which superseded johār was not rāmram alone. Many other terms came to be used from time to time and some of them still hold their ground strongly. Thus, for instance, in a letter written in 1600 the word darshanata<sup>1</sup> is used whereas in another letter written fifteen years later the word used is nīlāhaga namaskāru.<sup>2</sup> Both of these expressions are pretty old and still very much in use. The addition of rāmram to the modes of greeting, and possibly the prejudice engineered against johār, may have led to its subsequent downfall.

Johār is a purely indigenous word unconnected with any custom of the Mlechhas who, at that time, were synonymous with Moslems. Had the word contained any ingredient suspected of Moslem origin, one would have reasonably expected to meet the word in the Rajyavyavaharakōsha, which lexicon, as is well known, was purposely composed by Shīvajī's order to give Sanskrit equivalents of mainly Persian words. The Kośha, however, does not refer to it.<sup>3</sup> In fact, the word is much older than the

<sup>1</sup> Shivacharitra-Sahitya, Vol. 2, letter No. 340.

<sup>2</sup> Idem No. 146.

<sup>3</sup> The stanza which refers to the modes of greeting is as follows:—
शिरहावन्दनं शिञ्वा प्रणामस्वीकृत्य मनेत् ।

नमस्कारः सलामः श्यादाशीर्वादौ बुद्धिः स्मृतः ॥ 8. 52

In this description, the rendering of सलाम by नमस्कार appears to be literally correct because, whatever physical movements may have accompanied सलाम in its original sense, it was just an equivalent of नमस्कार to the Hindus who contact of the Persian language and Islamic culture with the Hindu society.
(continued on the next page)

A few instances<sup>1</sup> of its earlier use may be given here to show how pure it is in origin, how polite in its meaning, and how wide in its application.

In Gāthāsaptasatī,<sup>2</sup> a work of about 300 A.D., we have न होति देवाण जोकारा 'salutations are not offered to the gods' (in this manner). The V. L. quoted by Weber are जोकारा नमस्कारा जोहार इति वा. In Silāṅka's Commentary<sup>3</sup> on Āvaśyaka, we read in a story दिष्टं जोहारिन्नइ जं जं सोभणइ तं च कापत्वं 'a man, who is seen, is greeted with the word johār and one should do whatever he tells.' As Silāṅka lived about 870 A. D. the word must have been current in the ninth century. In the Basavapurāṇ of Bhoimkavi, a Kannad work of the fourteenth century, the word johār and its variant johar (जोहर) are frequently used. Thus we have आसन वंदु जोहारिनु पोड मडेल<sup>4</sup> 'seeing him (i. e. the ascetic) he (the prince) said johār and lay prostrate at his feet.' जनपनेदु केळनई येन्न जोहरव.<sup>5</sup> 'The prince said, why is he not attending to my word johar?' इतिग तंदेरडु करगळ नेति जोहारय्य निमगे येनुतिरडु<sup>6</sup> 'he came near, lifted both his hands and said "O worshipful sage I bow to you;" जोहर जोहरेनुतं पोडमडुत<sup>7</sup> 'saluting with the words johar johar.

It is quite likely that further search might bring to light several other instances of the use of the word johār during the many centuries preceding its use at the time of the Marāṭhas. The had accepted and appropriated the custom. Both Paes and Nuniz, in their description of the court and the courtiers of the Vijayanagar Kings support this view. Says Paes, "The salaam which is the greatest courtesy that exists among them is that they put their hands joined above their head as high as they can." Nuniz says the same thing when he remarks, "each one comes by himself and bows his head and raises his hands. This is what they call the salaam."—A Forgotten Empire pp. 250, 372.

(continued from the previous page)

<sup>1</sup> I am highly obliged to my colleagues Prof. Kundaogar and Dr. Ghatage for the troubles they have taken for me in finding out the uses of the word in Kannad and Prakrit languages.

<sup>2</sup> Weber ed. 332.

<sup>3</sup> Silāṅka cited in Leumann's Āvaśyaka Erzählungen, p. 25.

<sup>4</sup> Basava Purāṇ, 46-3.

<sup>5</sup> Idem 46-7.

<sup>6</sup> Idem 46-8.

<sup>7</sup> Idem 46-42.

few instances cited here make some points regarding the use and meaning of the word quite clear. Firstly, it is a purely indigenous term derived from a Prakrit, and possibly from a Sanskrit, word. As already mentioned, Weber gives a quotation which treats जोकार, नमस्कार and जोहार as synonyms. He also refers to a Ms. ( Ms. X ) which derives the word जोकार from जयकार. I do not feel competent to discuss the etymology<sup>1</sup> of the word, nor am I able to detect any connection between it and the well known Rajput practice of jauhar.<sup>2</sup> It suffices our purpose here to know that etymologically johār stood for quite a respectable mode of obeisance.

Secondly, the word indicated a vocal utterance accompanied by some bodily movement in the case of a meeting between persons. The quotations from Basavapurāṇ make this fact quite clear. There we see that salutations were offered with the word johār (or its variant) and "both hands were lifted." Sometimes prostration seems to have accompanied the utterance of the word.

Thirdly, it appears that during all the ages when the word was rightly used, it expressed a mode of greeting which was applicable equally to all the sections of the community. Its use implied no invidious distinction between the person who saluted and him that received the salute. Even princes were using the word freely so that its use by Shivaji and his son was quite in conformity with the age-long practice.

Johār being so impeccable in its use for centuries, its degradation in modern times is as surprising as inexplicable. The continuance of other modes of greeting and the appearance of new ones do not, in themselves, constitute a problem. So the displacement of johār, thought too sudden, can yet be understood. But why degradation? Johār now implies a basic lowness of position in the person who offers the salute, and this is the only meaning of the word to day. According to Molesworth, the word is "used by the महर चमार etc. in saluting their betters or each other.”<sup>1</sup> The loss of status suffered by johār is indeed deplorable, and the more so because the cause of it is not known. The question of its relation with any custom of the Mlencchas, as described in the Bakhars, has been already disposed of. No foreign influence working upon the term nor any royal decree deprived it of its dignity, or belittled its importance. It may, however, be conceded that an ignorant but vigorous propaganda against it by interested and equally ignorant people may have dislodged the word from the high position it held and driven it to the last limits of the social strata. But it shall have to be admitted that when the Mahars or Chembhars say johār they are using an expression which even kings and princes used for centuries.!

<sup>1</sup> My learned colleague Dr. Ghatage is of opinion that the word जोहार can with propriety be derived from the Sanskrit word जोकार.

<sup>2</sup> Jauhar also is said to have been derived from a Prakrit word. See Vincent Smith's Akbar the Great Mogul, 2nd ed. p. 72 f. n.

---

<sup>1</sup> Molesworth adds a second meaning of the term as a "word of obeisance used to a Raja by his attendants, implying O Warrior!" This sense in general agrees with the original significance of the term but Molesworth's suggestion that जोहार comes from योद्धा is not clear.

SEX-LIFE IN ANCIENT INDIA—SOME THOUGHTS

BY

K. R. PISHAROTI

The life of an Indian to whatever caste or creed he might belong is essentially religious; and all his activities are motivated by religious considerations and conditioned by religious conventions. Sex-activity is no exception to this: it works on a religious bias and for a religious purpose.

What is the motive of sex-life? If ancient traditions and legends are any indication in the matter, the main motive of sex-life is the begetting of children for the performance of the funeral obsequies of the parents, so that they might have happiness ensured for them in the life hereafter, which Hindu religion holds out as the summum bonum of existence. The stories of the Mahābhārata and the Rāmāyana clearly indicate that the greatest blessing of a married state was the begetting of children; and if marriage failed in this particular respect, married men were prepared to do anything to beget children, not only to abide by the severest rules of religious discipline, as practised by Daśaratha and Dilīpa, but also to cast off all rules and conventions of religious and social life, why even the canons of higher ethics and morality, if such a step would ensure them the birth of an issue, an aspect evidenced by the birth of Dhṛtarāṣṭra and Pāṇḍu and their children. These national epics of India would, then, have it that the begetting of children to ensure for parents happiness in the life hereafter and to carry forward the family functions was the highest and noblest function of married life.

The idea that sex-life is primarily and fundamentally intended for securing progeny has been so ancient and so deeply instilled that it exists in every one of us in a nascent or active state and shapes all our sex-activities. At the same time it has not failed to evoke the higher aesthetic and emotional attitudes which nature has associated with sex-life and sex-activities. Rightly, therefore, our forefathers have classified sex-life from three fundamental points of view : Dharma-śṛṅgāra, Artha-śṛṅgāra and Kāma-śṛṅgāra ; and to this we may add also Mokṣa-śṛṅgāra. Under the first of these varieties come the marriages of the Rṣis of old who married, because certain religious rites could be performed only in company with their wedded wives ; and under the last variety come the divine love of the Gopīs for Lord Kṛṣṇa. Of a more mundane type are the other two varieties : when a king marries for reasons of state, that forms an instance of Artha-śṛṅgāra, a typical legendary instance of which we have in the marriage of Udayana with Padmāvatī, which is dramatised in the Svapna-nāṭaka. The last variety of Kāma-śṛṅgāra is illustrated in the same king's marriage of Vāsavadattā. Practically marriages which are or may be characterised as Gandharva, are really instances of Kāma-śṛṅgāra, though in modern parlance this term has come to acquire another sense altogether.

This kind of prosaic analysis of the marriage motive which our fore-fathers introduced into the most romantic of life's activities may be characterised as depriving it of the essence of its life, as hurling it down from the heights of sensuous emotionalism to the depths of sordid intellectualism. Such characterisation, we must say, is indeed a mistake. Art does not lose its artistic value and emotion its emotional value, simply because it has been analytically considered. That an artist has some specific motive in executing a work of art does not certainly take away from its value as a work of art. Irrespective, therefore, of the ultimate motives under which a marriage has taken place every Indian marriage can bloom into a romance, in the same way as the most romantic of modern marriages can end in sordid misery. Marriages in India have generally been a far greater success than they have been elsewhere ; and the reason is not far to seek. For, in India the romance of love begins with marriage, whereas in the West it ends with marriage ; it begins in the East where it ends in the West.

Very great importance has, indeed, been attached in the past to this subject—the subject of sex-life. The intricacies of sex-life have attracted the attention of even the eminent seers of old, and sexology has been raised to the position of a Śāstra, i. e. a science, and the Indian has granted the title of Muni or Rṣi to Vātsyāna the exponent of sexology—the same position which he has assigned to the Sūtrakāras in other branches of knowledge. The Kāmaśāstra of Vātsyāyana, the last great writer on the subject of sex, is a book of great human interest: it is a book which is equally good for the saintly Brāhman, the politically minded Kṣatriya and the emotion-filled man and woman. And the author of the work, consistently with the exceedingly humanising character of sex-life and sex-activities, has described Kāma as the highest of life's ideals to be sought after. Those who go after Dharma wish to ensure happiness in the world hereafter, and those who are after Artha wish to ensure it in this world itself. Both these are thus after happiness, but are in active search after the instrument thereof. Those, however, who are after Kāma are directly in search of happiness. According to Vātsyāyana, Kāma, therefore, is the most important of the threefold objects of mundane existence.

Vātsyāyana has instituted a detailed study of man and woman from the point of view of their sex-worthiness; and this is then utilised for classifying them so as to ensure proper sex-life. The classification has been made from the point of view of physical traits, and since these are but an indication of their psychological content, it is psychological also to some extent. All the same, lest the unwary should be led astray, the author has enunciated the fundamental psychological principle, underlying all sex-activity: it is nothing other than complete happiness for the parties concerned, physical, intellectual and emotional. Every sex-activity instinctively craves for complete sex-happiness, and whenever this happiness is wanting in completeness, then the activity is a failure: it is at best only one-sided satisfaction and is, therefore, void of all romance, for it fails to immerse the lovers in ecstatic bliss. Elaborate directions have, therefore, been laid down, regarding the choice of the partner, the place and time of union and last, but not least, the mode of sex-act. The methods to be adopted to win each other's heart and to retain it, when once it is won, the numerous modes of kissing and embracing, the varied modes of sex-act—all these are described in such elaborate details that one would wonder if all that has been said could be practical even. Thus irrespective of the motive underlying a union, irrespective of the temperamental differences inherent in the parties themselves, every sex-act could yield the full bliss arising from sex-activity.

The Kāma-sāstra of Vātsyāyana attests to the fact that the Indian never forgot the fundamental fact that sex-activity is intensely human. In spite of the healthy religious discipline, in spite of the numerous social and religious taboos which beset the life of the average Indian, the fundamental fact that man is an animal, possessed of animal passions and of a longing to satiate these passions, has never been ignored; and this explains the presence in India of the professional loose woman, well-known under the familiar title dancing girl. If man or woman leads a loose life, it is an indication that he or she does not get sex-satisfaction at home, if, indeed, we take no cognisance of those who are forced to sell their bodies to keep their body and soul together. It is, therefore, desirable that for the sake of such unfortunates who are sex misfits and hence out of tune in their own home, society should devise some outlet, lest they should develop a morbid mentality and be a continued menace to the society they live in. This appears to be main basis of the organisation of the class, known as dancing girls in India. These have in later days degraded themselves, and man has in no small measure helped them in the process of their downfall; but it deserves not to be forgotten that in ancient days at least they formed an honoured part of society and were the custodians of art and culture, as evidenced by the terms Gapikā, Nāgarikā etc.

Irrespective, then, of the motives with which or the circumstances under which a marriage was contracted, the human aspect of sex-life, namely the enjoyment of the supreme bliss of love, requires that birth should be controlled; for too many offsprings constitute a serious handicap to enjoyment. Our Paurāṇika traditions would show that the elite of the land always suffered from a lack, rather than a superfluity, of issue. The dancing girl has always successfully controlled birth; for she has to maintain her charms for the success of her trade, since to this position she has degraded herself and her ancient art. These considerations would show that our forefathers consciously practised birth control. Following the traditional Indian outlook on the question, we find Vātsyāyana giving detailed directions in his work as to how one may control the birth of children. The most practical of the methods he has elaborated is the regulation of the sex-act with due regard to the periods of the women and the variation in the modes of sex-act. His attitude towards abortion is equally clear; he condemns it as a heinous sin, as a dreadful crime. Life in every form has always been sacred, and the life of the embryo in the womb is no exception.

Quite consistently with the author's attitude towards birth-control, he would have it that sex-education is a necessary part of general education, both for boys and girls. To ensure the bond of union between a couple, it is highly necessary that each should give the other the maximum amount of sex-pleasure; and this, be it noted, is not possible, unless one knows fully the whole complexities of sex and sex-life. In the case of man, our author would have it that this education should come off immediately after his general education and before his getting married. In the case of girls, it may come off either before or after marriage according as convenience for such study is available. If this study should come after marriage, she must take the previous permission of her husband, lest he should misunderstand the object of such a study. The unmarried girl should study the theory of sex-life from one in whom she would have implicit faith, such for instance as her nurse or faithful friend. Vātsyāyana lays it down as a fundamental axiom that ignorance of sex-life is the primary cause of all unhappy marriages.

Whatever might be the ulterior aim of sex-life, its immediate aim is complete happiness or the realisation of the bliss of love in its fullest and richest measure. Hence Vātsyāyana would go further and insist that the mere satisfaction of sex-appetite does not constitute sex-life. He has, therefore, detailed all the accessories of sex-life, and under this head he has included all those things and activities which give pleasure to the varied sensory organs. According to him, studied effort should be made, with due deference to the likes and dislikes of the partners, to make oneself as pleasing to the other as nature and art together are capable of making one-by dress, by cosmetics, by speech, by words, by thoughts, by conduct and by general attitude. There should be nothing which would in any way jar upon the partner, why even the place itself must have an atmosphere of happiness and romance. In other words, one should completely adapt oneself, for the time being at least, to the aesthetic needs of the other, if one would have complete happiness.

This outlook necessarily raises another very important aspect which Vātsyāyana has stressed—the attitude of the mind of the lovers in every sex-act. The lovers must conduct themselves like lovers enjoying the fruits of love for the first time. The woman must be wooed and won every time a sex-act is done. The husband has no right to expect condescension from his wife, simply for the reason that she is his partner in life. This is psychologically a very correct attitude, for it ensures even for the married couples novelty and romance during the whole period of their existence. As a wife, a woman certainly has certain duties to perform; but the satisfaction of the sex-appetite of her husband does not form part of her duty. The husband must court her like a lover again and again, and together they should enjoy sex-bliss. Hence Vātsyāyana does not make any distinction between a Gaṇikā and a wedded wife, so far as their sex-activities are concerned. In actual sex-act there is no difference between woman and woman, man and man and between man and woman. This is an important practical direction that he would give all married couples as well as all lovers and prospective couples about to be joined in wedlock. The non-realisation of this aspect of sex-life is the main cause of the failure of so many marriages that we meet with in the world at large.

SUKHAPRAKĀŚA—HIS IDENTITY AND WORKS

BY

E. P. RADHAKRISHNAN

In the history of the post-Śaṅkara advaita dialectical literature, three authors stand out as pre-eminent. They are Śrī Harṣa, Citsukha and Madhusūdana Sarasvati. The object of the dialectical works of these authors is to show the untenability of the multiplicity of concepts accepted in other schools of philosophy on their own so-called logical grounds and thus show that Brahman is the only one absolute reality, unshakable by logic. The lines of approach of these scholars differ, though the aim is one. Śrī Harṣa and Madhusūdana quite uncompromisingly took up the destructive attitude while refuting the counter theories; but in Citsukha we have a happy harmony of the two aspects of advaita dialectics, constructive as well as destructive. So much so a comprehensive understanding of the Tattvapradīpikā has come to be considered as a necessary introduction of advaita dialectics.

Citsukhī is a difficult work and the commentary of Pratyagrūpa, printed in the Nirṇaya Sagar edition of Citsukhī, is of immense help to clearly grasp many points. Many of the previous views and authorities refuted in Citsukhī are traced to their original sources in the Naṣṭanaprasādīnī. I have collected all these and shall try to publish them with pertinent remarks in a separate paper in future. The date of Pratyagrūpa is not clearly known. MM. Gopinath Kaviraj<sup>1</sup> gives his date as about 1400 A. D., but the grounds are not stated.

Now, we know that Sukhaprakāśa was a disciple of Citsukha. He has written a commentary on his teacher's work, Citsukhī, and a manuscript of this commentary is available in the Madras Govt. Oriental Library (R. No. 5203). On a perusal of this commentary I found that many passages found in Pratyagrūpa's commentary are identical here, so that the conclusion is that Pratyagrūpa, it is doubtless, seems to have made use of this commentary also. In this paper it is not possible to enter into a comparison of the two commentaries; but I shall discuss generally about the date, identity, and works of the earlier commentator, Sukhaprakāśa.

---

<sup>1</sup> Introduction to Des. Cat. of Pūr. Mīm. Mas. in Sarasvatī Bhavan Library, Benares, Vol. I, p. iv.

Date :

Regarding the date of Sukhaprakāśa we have not to seek far. Being the direct disciple of Otsukha, he should have flourished early in the 13th century A. D.

The assumption of some scholars that he is the teacher of the famous Ānandagiri does not seem to be correct. Obviously such an assumption is founded on an equation of the two names Sukhaprakāśa and Śuddhānanda on a formal similarity, for which there is not only no necessity, but such identification will lead to atinyāpti in many similar instances. Hence Sukhaprakāśa has to be held as a different author from Śuddhānanda. From Amalānanda's reference, we know that Śukhaprakāśa was his vidyāguru.

Works :

The following works are found ascribed to him by Aufrecht (C. Catalogorum I, p. 723b).

(1) Tattvapraṁkriyāvyākhyā, (2) Nyāyodīpāvalītikā, (3) Nyāyamaharandavivecanī, (4) Pratyaktattvapradīpikāṭīkā and (5) Bhāvadyotānikā. I shall discuss these one by one presently.

1. Tattvapraṁkriyāvyākhyā. Aufrecht notices one manuscript of this work. (Bühler's Guj. Report IV, 54). This copy is incomplete. Nothing more about this work was known to him.

An advaitic work of the name Tattvapraṁkriyā is noticed in Burnell's Tanjore Library Catalogue, p. 94b (the corresponding No. in the New set of Tanjore Des. Catalogue being 7546). From the introductory verses :

सर्ववेदान्तसिद्धान्तसंप्रदायानुसारतः ।
नमस्कृत्य गुरुन् वक्ष्ये प्रक्रियां तत्त्वसंश्रयाम् ॥
यच्छ्रीमद्रामतीर्थेभ्यः संप्रदायसमागतम् ।
श्रुतं सत्तर्कसचिवं विविच्य तदिहोच्यते ॥

it would appear that the author was a disciple of Rāmatīrtha.

There is also a commentary on this Tattvapra-kriyā. It is by Anantadeva, son of Āpadeva. It is called Sampradāyanirūpaṇa. It begins :

वेदान्तनयसिद्धान्तपरीक्षणविचक्षणान् ।
नमामि तातचरणान् श्रीमद्भोविन्दविग्रहान् ॥
श्रीरामतीर्थचरणस्मरणस्य प्रसादतः ।
प्रस्थानत्रयसिद्धान्तसंप्रदायः प्रदर्श्यते ॥

This commentary attributed to Anantadeva, son of Āpadeva in the Tanjore Ms. (No. 7547) calls for an examination here. It is called Sampradāyanirūpaṇa, for, as the second verse in the beginning says, the commentary explains the views of three prasthānas or sampradāyas :

प्रस्थानत्रयसिद्धान्तसंप्रदायः प्रदर्श्यते ।

See also later where he seems to say that by Prasthānatraya, he means the interpretation of Śaṅkara's Brahmasūtrabhāṣya, by Vivaraṇācārya, Vārtikakāra and others :

विवरणाचार्यवार्तिककारादिकृतनिरूपणादिभेदेन अनेकविधत्वमापन्नस्य
क्वापि वेदान्तसिद्धान्तो निरूप्यत इत्यर्थः ।

The fact that by prasthānatraya we should take three lines of interpretation of Śaṅkara's bhāṣya has been set forth by me on a previous occasion ( see on Sarvadarśana Literature to be published in the Annals of B. O. R. I. ).

On an examination of the Tanjore Ms. No. 7546 described in the recent catalogue under the caption, Tattvapra-kriyā, I find that the text is exactly identical with what is printed as Siddhāntatattva of Anantadeva in the Pandit 22. So much so the Tattvapra-kriyā is only another name for the Siddhāntatattva of Anantadeva. Again since in both the Tattvapra-kriyā and the commentary thereon, there is a reference to the author's teacher, Rāmatīrtha, there is every reason to believe that Anantadeva himself wrote the commentary also on his Siddhāntatattva ( Tattvapra-kriyā ).

This Anantadeva calls himself as the son of Āpadeva. He has, however, to be differentiated from Anantadeva II, his grandson, who also is the son of Āpadeva and who commented on the Mīmāṃsānyāyaparakāśa of his father, Anantadeva I (c. 1575 A. D.) was the son of Āpadeva I, and father of Āpadeva II (author of the Mīmāṃsānyāyaparakāśa) and grandfather of Anantadeva II (author of the Smṛtikaustubha, Bhāṭṭālakāra etc.). His teacher, Rāmatīrtha, is the same as the commentator on the Upadeśasāhasrī and the Saṅkṣepasārirāka. However, he had also another guru, by name Nārāyaṇa, of the Bhaṭṭa family of Benares, who was born about 1513 A. D. and whom he mentions in his Manomurañjananāṭaka (Sar. Bhavan Texts 76). He composed the following works:

1. Kṛṣṇakriḍākutūhalāryūh (Ms. BORI. 152 of 1902-07).
2. Kṛṣṇabhakticandrikānāṭaka (Ms. BORI. 152 of 1902-07).
3. Bhaktibhāgavataśaṅgraha, being a collection of choice verses from the Bhāgavatapurāṇa (Ms. RASB. Cat. No. V, 3671).
4. Bhaktiśata (Ms. India Office Cat. No. 2521).
5. Bhagavadbhaktinirṇaya or Viveka (Ms. Adyar Cat. II, p. 195b). This is printed in the Sar. Bh. Texts 73. This work is clearly referred to as his grandfather's work by Anantadeva II in his Mathurāsetu (See Ind. Office Cat. I. p. 1402a).
6. Bhagavannāmakaumudīvyākhyā (Ms. BBRAS. 1152, Madras Govt. Library, R Nos. 1424b and 1748).
7. Manomurañjananāṭaka (Sar. Bh. Edn. 76).
8. Siddhāntatattva or Tattvaparakriyā with commentary.

This information regarding Anantadeva is only by the way. It is thus clear that the author of the commentary on the Tattvaparakriyā is none other than Anantadeva, disciple of Rāmatīrtha. Thus Rāmatīrtha could not have lived prior to the 16th century A. D. so that Sukhaprakāśa, Citsukha's disciple thus could not have commented on the Tattvaparakriyā. Bühler's reference perhaps refers to Sukhaprakāśa's commentary on the Tattvapradīpikā of Citsukha, Tattvaparakriyā being a mistaken reading for Tattvapradīpikā.

9. Nyāyadīpīvalīvyākhyā.

Aufrecht gives two references for this work (Hall p. 206 and 557). He attributes the commentary to Sukhaprakāśa. But on examining the Bikaner Manuscript, this ascription was found to be a mistake. Really the commentary is by Anubhūtiśvarūpa, who wrote commentaries on all the known works of Ānanda-bodha. The colophon in the Bikaner manuscript reads :

इति श्रीमदनुभूतिस्वरूपाचार्यकृतायां न्यायदीपावलीटीकायां द्वितीयोऽध्यायः ।

3. Nyāyamakaraṇavivēcanī.

Aufrecht gives two references (Hall p. 155 and Burnell's Tanjore Catalogue p. 94b). The latter catalogue has been revised by Prof. P. P. S. Sastri in whose new set of descriptive catalogues there are four manuscripts (Nos. 7465-68). The first three are complete while the last one is incomplete. The commentary begins :

कन्वर्षर्षभिदुरं छिदुरं प्ररुह-मोहान्वकारमुतनोर्विदुरं यथावत् ।
सर्वस्य सङ्गतमुपा ... ..
... .. ॥
... .. परिचर्याविकस्वरम् ।
मक्षीयं गानसं न्यायनकरन्दे प्रसीदतु ॥
मुखप्रकाशमुनिना प्रसन्नोक्तिरविस्तरा ।
टीकेयं कियते न्यायमकरन्दाविवेचनी ॥

प्रारिप्सितस्य ग्रन्थस्याविज्ञेन परिसन्नतमिप्रचयगमनकामः(ः) शिष्टाचारपरि-
प्रापितया कृतमिष्टदेवतानमस्कारमाचरन् शिष्यशिक्षार्थं ग्रन्थतः प्रतिपादयन्
प्रकरणस्यार्थाभिधेयप्रयोजनसंबन्धानि दर्शयति — यज्ज्ञासेत्यादिना । etc.

It ends:— केपां किंप्रयोजनतायां ग्रन्थो विहित इत्यत आह—आनन्द-
हेतुरिति । अकलङ्कचर्या संदेहाविपर्ययासामूपादिरहितबुद्धिनां भुङ्गायमाणानां
आनन्दहेतुरित्यवगन्तव्यम् । लोके नकरन्दस्य धमरानन्दहेतुत्वात् । अकलङ्क-
पिचामानन्दहेतुदर्शनेन च ग्रन्थस्यादुष्टता प्रतिपादितेति मन्तव्यम् । दुष्टस्य तदा- नन्दहेतुत्वाभावात् ।

Colophon reads : इति श्रीमत्परमहंसपरिव्राजकाचार्यश्रीचित्तुखपूज्यपाद-
शिष्यश्रीमुखप्रकाशमुनिविरचिता न्यायमकरन्दविवेचनी समाप्ता ।

Prof. P. P. S. Sastri in his remarks adds : " This author has also written a commentary on his guru's ( Citsukha's ) Tattvapradīpikā.

He lived during the middle of the 17th century (?). This author seems to have written a commentary on Ānandabodha's Pramāṇamālā also." The date of Sukhaprakāśa as the middle of the 17th century is surprising. The further information that he wrote a commentary on Ānandabodha's Pramāṇamālā also is purely a muddle. Prof. P. P. S. Sastri seems to have mistaken Citsukha's Pramāṇamālavyākhyā (Madras Ms. R. 3273) for Sukhaprakāśa's work.

Comparing the above extracts from the Nyāyamakarandavivēcanī of Sukhaprakāśa with the text of the commentary on the Nyāyamakaranda, printed in the Chowkhamba edition, which is attributed to Citsukha, we find that the texts are identical, with the exception that in the printed version the maṅgalalōkas are missing. The very absence of the maṅgalalōka in the beginning itself is a ground for doubting the attribution of the commentary to Citsukha. All the four manuscripts in the Tanjore Palace Library have the colophon mentioning Sukhaprakāśa as the author of the commentary. The colophon in a manuscript in possession of Mr. Damodaran Nambudiripad of Peruvannattumana near Shoranur, Cochin State, also explicitly mentions Sukhaprakāśa as the author.

इति श्रीपरमहंसपरिव्रजकाचार्यश्रीमद्विन्मुखमुनिपूज्यपादशिष्यश्रीमत्-
सुखप्रकाशमुनिविरचिता न्यायमकरन्दविवेचनी समाप्ता ।

Again one of the verses in the beginning of the Tanjore Ms. clearly mentions Sukhaprakāśa as the author.

सुखप्रकाशमुनिना प्रसन्नोक्तिरवित्तरा ।

टीकेयं कियते न्यायमकरन्दविवेचनी ॥

In the light of these evidences it should be admitted that the real author of the commentary is Sukhaprakāśa and its attribution to Citsukha is a mistake; and if out of vinigamanāvivāha, one argues the other way that the real author is Citsukha and that the teacher's work is in some manuscripts wrongly ascribed to his pupil. Sukhaprakāśa, the following additional evidence may serve as an answer. In the Citsukhavyākhyā of Sukhaprakāśa (which will be shortly described) the second maṅgalalōka is the same as the first verse in the Nyāyamakarandavivēcanī. The identity of this verse clearly proves the identity of authors.

It now remains to explain how the colophon of the Nyāya-makarandavyākhyā printed in the Chowk. edition mentions Citsukha as the author. Further some manuscripts also have the colophon giving Citsukha as the author. Reference may be made to the following Mss., all of them recorded in the Cat. Catalogorum (India Office Cat. Nos. 2373-74; Mitra Notices No. 1682; Stein's Cat. p. 124 and Extr. p. 323). We cannot find any reasonable explanation for this except that this colophon is a mistake. The fact that all these manuscripts have no maṅgalaloka is of special significance for this conclusion, for it is not the characteristic way of Citsukha to open his commentary without a maṅgala.

Such jumbling of authorship is not also very uncommon. For in the case of the Īśvāsyabhāṣyaṭippaṇa attributed to Ānandagiri in the Ānandāśrama edition, different manuscripts have different colophons, though the entire text is the same. In some Mss. the author is mentioned as Narendrapuri, in some others the colophons give Śivānanda as the author, while in the Ānandāśrama edition it is attributed to Ānandagiri. This confusion does not seem to admit of an easy solution at the present state of our insufficient material. I have examined this problem in some detail in a paper in the Poona Orientalist. Thus what I wish to stress is that from the mere colophon we should not hasten to determine the authorship of a work unless it is confirmed by other evidences as well.

4. Tattva-pradīpikāvyākhyā.

Aufrecht refers to Burnell's Cat. p. 92b. In the Madras Govt. Oriental Msa. Library also there is a Ms. of this commentary to which I shall come shortly.

5. Bhūvadyotanikā. Regarding this work as noted in Aufrecht as a separate work of Sukhaprakāśa (Cat. Cat. I, p. 407) I wish to say that it is a mistake. The work is identical with item (4) above for Sukhaprakāśa's commentary on the Citsukhī is called Bhūvadyotanikā.

Thus altogether the number of works written by Sukhaprakāśa reduces to two, commentaries on the Nyāyamakaranda and on the Tattvapradīpikā. Besides these, he also wrote one Adhikaraṇaratnamālā ( Madras Ms. R. 2902 ).

In the following I give only very few remarks about these works.

Citsukhīvyākhyā—Bhāvyadyotālikā. A complete manuscript of this work is available in the Madras Library ( R. No. 5203 ). It is very scrappy with many omissions in the middle. However it is interesting to append here the extracts from the beginning etc. It begins :

स्वात्मावबोधविभवदुतमोहनिद्रं
विज्ञावितद्वचकथं वितथादपेतम् ।
[ सच्चिन्मुक्तोर्मिचनमक्षरमीक्षितारो
यं योमिनो ] नरहरिं तमिमं नमामः ॥

कन्दर्पदर्पभिदुरं छिदुरं प्ररूढ-मोहान्धकारमुतमोर्विदुरं वषावत् ।

सर्वस्य सङ्गा .... ..
... मनिशं गिरिशं नताः स्मः ॥

दूषणश ... निवारणा ... तत्त्वप्रदीपिकाख्यायाः ।

भावद्योतनिकेयं कियते मुनिना सुखप्रकाशेन ॥

( The portion within brackets in the first verse has been filled up from the Adhikaraṇaratnamālā. See later on ).

The second verse is identical with the maṅgalastoka in his Nyāyamakarandavivecanā, which proves the identity of authorship. In many places this commentary is brief; but still it is helpful in tracing the views expressed by Citsukha, as it comes from the author's own disciple. A comparative study of the commentaries on Citsukhī by Sukhaprakāśa and Pratyagrūpa shows that the latter had made use of Sukhaprakāśa's work. In many places Pratyagrūpa quotes verbatim Sukhaprakāśa's expressions. Of course, there are many points of difference also between the two; but within the limited scope of this short paper it is not possible to give a comparative statement. Here I shall give a list of the chief authorities cited in Sukhaprakāśa's commentary.

Gaṅgāpurī, Gaṅgāpurīyāh, and Gaṅgāpurīyamala, pp. 5. 7. 38. 43. 51. 53. 55. 59. 71. 77. 78. 79. 80. 87. 87. 244.

Bhaṭṭa Vārtika, pp. 8. 62.

Udayana, pp. 9. 56. 81. 84. 87. 91. 129-30.

Līlāvātikāra, pp. 9. 163. 164. 180. 182. 189. 204. 221.

Vārtikakāra, pp. 12. 57. 92. 105. 113. 145. 248.

Mānamanohara, pp. 15. 27. 35. 53. 110.

Śālikānātha, pp. 32. 46.

Murāri, pp. 32. 46.

Nyāyakalpataru, p. 50.

Tātparyaparīśuddhi, pp. 52. 221.

Akṣapāda, pp. 63. 155.

Vācaspati Mīśra, pp. 83. 129. 130. 137. 150.

Kīrapāvalī, p. 85.

Brahmasiddhi, p. 103.

Khaṇḍanakāra, p. 123.

Bhaṭṭapādah, p. 129.

Sureśvaravārtika, p. 214.

Iṣṭasiddhikāra, pp. 241. 243.

Pañcapādikā, p. 243.

Sāmkhyasaptatī, p. 247.

Adhikaraṇaratnamālā. This is a work of Sukhaprakāśa. A Ms. of this is available in the Madras Ori. Library (R. No. 2902). This is perhaps designed after his teacher's two works of the same nature, namely Adhikaraṇamañjarī (R. 3305e) and Adhikaraṇasaṅgati (R. 3305d). Later on Bhāratīrtha wrote the Vaiyāsikādhikaraṇamālā on this model. Sukhaprakāśa's work begins:

स्वात्मावबोधविभवदुतमोहनिद्रं

विद्रावितद्वयकथं वितथादपेतम् ।

सचित्तुखोर्मिधनमक्षरमीक्षितारो

यं योगिनो नरहरिं तमिमं नताः स्मः ॥

वादिमन्थकरिदर्पमर्दनप्रस्फुरस्त्रयकरोत्तहावलिम् ।

आममस्मृतिनिजाकर्णक्षणे चित्तुखाख्यनखरायुधं नमः ॥

भाष्याम्भोनिधिभक्ष्यात्

उद्धृत्य न्यायरत्नसंभारम् ।

अधिकरणरत्नमाला

क्रियते मुनिना सुखप्रकाशेन ॥

The first verse is the same as the verse in the beginning of his Bhāvadyōtanikā (see above). In this as well as in the second he refers to his guru, Citsukha, and in the third he says that the Adhikaraṇaratnamālā is strung out of gems of arguments collected from the ocean of Śāṅkara Bhāṣya.

To recapitulate the results: We know that Sukhaprakāśa was the disciple of Citsukha and as such must have lived early in the 13th century A. D. He was the teacher of Amalānanda (Kalpatarukāra) and he has to be differentiated from Śuddhānanda, the teacher of Ānandagiri. His works so far known are (1) Citsukhīrjyālekhyā-Bhāvadyōtanikā, (2) Ngūyamakarandavyālekhyā-Vivēcanī and (3) Adhikaraṇaratnamālā. Except the second the other two have not yet seen the light of day. It is highly desirable that some effort is made to publish these works also at an early date.

ANUBHŪTISVARŪPĀCĀRYA—AUTHOR OF THE PRAKATĀRTHAVIVARAṆA, ISTASIDDHI-VIVARAṆA ETC.

BY

V. RAGHAVAN

The name of Anubhūtisvarūpācārya has long been known in connection with the Sārasvata school of grammar of which he wrote the Sārasvata prakriyā and according to some, the Sārasvata sūtras also. In the history of Advaita literature, he has also been known as the preceptor of one Janārdana who wrote the Tattvāloka. Aufrecht adds that Anubhūtisvarūpācārya wrote a gloss on Ānandabodha's Pramāṇamālā CC. I p. 17a.<sup>1</sup> Mr. T. M. Tripathi, in his introduction to the GOS edition of the Tarkasaṃgraha, drew our attention to three more works of Anubhūtisvarūpācārya: the Saṃgraha<sup>2</sup> on the Nyāyamakaranda of Ānandabodha, the Candrikā<sup>3</sup> on Ānandabodha's Nyāyadīpāvali and a gloss<sup>4</sup> on the Gaṇḍapādīyabhāṣya of Śaṅkara. Mr. Tripathi recorded also an interesting anecdote about the origin of the Sārasvata sūtras (p. x) and considered that Anubhūtisvarūpācārya wrote both the Sūtras and the Prakriyā of the Sārasvata grammar. Besides, in the Catalogue of Sanskrit Mss. in the Oudh Province for 1872, p. 24, there is entered a work called Jñānapāṭha by Anubhūtisvarūpācārya, of which nothing more is known.

<sup>1</sup> Aufrecht records the reference L. 2869 (inc). The following other manuscripts of it are known now: Madras Trien. Cat. R. 3268; one in Naḍuvallmaṭham, Cochin; one in the Muṭt at Śrīngeri; and one described in the Trivandrum Curator's Catalogue, II, 310 A.

<sup>2</sup> Tekkemaṭham, Cochin.

<sup>3</sup> Dec. Coll. 766 of 1891-95; besides the Dec. Coll. manuscript of this work, we know of other manuscripts: Bikaner Library; Madras Des. Cat. 15306, wrongly ascribed to Narendrapuri and Tri. Cur. Cat. 298 (entered anon.).

<sup>4</sup> Tekkemaṭham; besides that we now know of two other Mss., Mad. Trien. Cat. 2911 and Adyar I App. II b.

We are now in a position to know in a greater degree the important place which Anubhūtiśvarūpācārya occupies in the history of Advaita, and some more Advaita works of his which are of greater importance than those already noted.

His Khaṇḍanakhaṇḍa Khādya Vyākhyā

Anubhūtiśvarūpācārya wrote a commentary on Śrī Harṣa's Khaṇḍanakhaṇḍakhādya called Śiṣyahitaśipi and there is a manuscript of it in the Big Bhandar at Jesalmere, noticed on p. 26 of the Catalogue of the Mss. in the Jain Bhandar at Jesalmere by Dalal (GOS. XXI 1923). The commentary is entered here anonymously, though the concluding verse clearly mentions the author.

येमोचिः परमात्मबोधतरणेः पन्थानमातन्वता
तुङ्गं मोहगिरिं निरुध्य जुलुकीचके भविकार्णवः ।
सच्चेतःपयसां प्रसन्निकृदसौ चके पदं खण्डने
व्योम्नीयानुभवस्वरूपभगवानभ्याजकुम्भोद्भवः ॥

This seems to be a complete manuscript; another manuscript of this commentary, an incomplete one, is available in the Sangha Bhandara of Pattan (No. III) and is described on pp. 372-3 of the Des. Cat. of Mss. in Jain Bhandar at Pattan, Vol. I, Palm-leaves, GOS, 1937. The description in this catalogue extracts all the three concluding verses; the last verse is on the commentator and is identical with the verse given above from the Jesalmere Catalogue; the first verse is on Śrī Harṣa, and the second one on God Hayagrīva.

... ..तुरङ्गाननः
सोऽयं मानसपङ्कजेषु भवतां कुर्याद्विरः संनिधिम् ॥

At the beginning or at the end, Anubhūtiśvarūpācārya salutes Hayagrīva in most of the works.<sup>1</sup> The form of the author's name occurring in the last verse of this work, Anubhavasvarūpa, need not make us hesitate in taking him as Anubhūtiśvarūpa; Prajñānānanda, author of the gloss on the Tattvāloka of Janārdana who was Anubhūtiśvarūpa's pupil, mentions Anubhūtiśvarūpa as Anubhavasvarūpa.

<sup>1</sup> See end of Sārasvataprakriyā; both beginning and end of Pramāṇamāla nibandhana, Mad. Trien. Cat. R. No. 3236 and beginning of Nyaya-dīpavali Candrikā, BORI, 776 of 1891-95, and Mad. Des. Cat. 15305.

तं वन्देऽनुभवस्वरूपयमिनं स्मृत्याखिलाभीष्टदम् ।

Bom. Br. R. A. S. Cat. II, p. 320.

The Report in English on the Search for Mss. in the Pattan Jain Bhandara, appearing as an Introduction to the GOS Catalogue of the Pattan Mss. Vol. I, seems to confuse this commentary by Anubhūtiśvarūpa with that of Vidyāsāgara Ānandapūrṇa (pp. 44-45).

The same Pattan manuscript was also described with extracts by Peterson in his Fifth Report (see extracts on pp. 29-30). Peterson makes a remark that the author of the commentary was a pupil of Śrī Harṣa; this is just a surmise.

The Gītābhāṣya ṭippaṇa of Anubhūtiśvarūpa

Another important work of Anubhūtiśvarūpācārya is his Ṭippaṇa on Śaṅkara's Bhagavadgītābhāṣya. This is a brief gloss available in four manuscripts, one in the Adyar Library (Catalogue I, p. 138b), another in the Mysore Library (Cat. I p. 442), a third in the office of the Curator, Trivandrum (Des. Cat. II, 324), and a fourth in the new collection of the University, Trivandrum.

In the Des. Cat. of the Curator's Library, Trivandrum, Vol. II, p. 714, we find a note that "the commentary on chapters 14-17 is missing." The fact, however, is that Anubhūtiśvarūpācārya himself did not offer any comments on these chapters. As I said above, the Ṭippaṇa is very brief and has some discussions only in a few places; there are some chapters on which the author has only very little to say. After finishing ch. 13 he expressly says, चतुर्दशादयोऽप्यायाः स्पष्टार्थाः । अष्टादशे किञ्चिदुच्यते ।

Adyar Ms. leaf 33.

At the beginning of the gloss on ch. 2, Anubhūtiśvarūpācārya criticises Bhāskara and his Jñāna-karma samuccaya. In this connection Anubhūtiśvarūpa refers to another writer on Advaita, an Ācārya, as having cited Bhāskara's text and criticised it in detail; unfortunately, in none of the manuscripts is the name of that Ācārya clear.

अत एव भास्कररोदनम्—यत्तु निवृत्तस्य निवृत्त्युपदेशकं शास्त्रमित्यादि तदुक्ताभिप्रायापरिज्ञानप्रसूतमित्युपेक्ष्यते । यच्च तस्य समुच्चयाभिप्रायः, सोऽनन्तरमेव निरूप्यमाणन्यायबलादेव अपेतो भविष्यति । पराचक्रमिरे प्रत्येकं तदीयग्रन्थानुभाषणदूषणयोः गद्यावलाभार्याः(1) इत्युपरम्पतेऽस्माभिः मन्द-मतिव्युत्पादनाय ग्रन्थमात्रविवेचनपरैः ।

Adyar Ms. leaf 4a.

The Mysore manuscript<sup>1</sup> has भास्कररोदनम् and गद्यापता (or ला-चार्याः). Of the two manuscripts in Trivandrum<sup>2</sup>, one in the old Curator's Office reads भास्कररोदनम् and गद्यालभार्याः and the other newly acquired Trivandrum manuscript reads भास्कररोदनम् and गद्यालभार्याः.

There are passages which Ānandagiri reproduces from this Gītābhāṣya ṭippaṇa, in his own commentary on the Gītābhāṣya.

An important work of Anubhūtiśvarūpācārya, which Mr. Tripathi had already mentioned, is the Gauḍapādīya bhāṣya ṭippaṇa of which the manuscript in the Tekkematham in the Cochin State had come to Mr. Tripathi's knowledge. There are two manuscripts in the above Matham, and the Madras and Adyar Libraries, each contains a manuscript. Mad. Trien. Cat. B. No. 2911 and Ad. Cat. I. App. iib. It is a perusal of this work which led to the discovery of two other important works of Anubhūtiśvarūpācārya.

The Iṣṭasiddhivivaraṇa of Anubhūtiśvarūpācārya

On pp. 59-60 (Madras Ms.) of his above-mentioned gloss on the Gauḍapādīya bhāṣya of Śaṅkara, Anubhūtiśvarūpācārya criticises the Ekaśivavāda and briefly clarifies his view of the relative plurality of Jīvas and of the impossibility of release for all when one gets released (Ekamuktau Sarvamuktiḥ). In this context, Anubhūtiśvarūpācārya says that he has criticised these views of Ekaśiva and Sarvamukti in the Iṣṭasiddhivivaraṇa.

ये तु एकस्य ब्रह्मण एव एकेनैव उपाधिना अवच्छेदाद् एकजीवतामाहुः,
न कल्पितो द्वयवच्छेदोऽस्ति      ×      ×      ×      × विस्तरतश्चायं

<sup>1</sup> I am thankful to Mr. M. S. Basavalingayya, Curator, Mysore, for sending me the relevant extract from the Mysore Ms.

<sup>2</sup> I am thankful to Dr. L. A. Ravi Varma, Hony. Director, Ori. Mss. Library, Trivandrum, for the relevant extracts from the two Trivandrum Mss.

मार्गोऽपाकारि इष्टसिद्धिविवरणे । तस्माद्भावभारिकदृष्ट्या अवच्छेदभेद-वर्णनम् । तत्त्वदृष्ट्या न विरोध इति न्याय्यम् । दृष्टिद्वयबाह्यकृतस्त्वयमेक-संसारिवादः त्रैपुरसालग्रामाद्यर्चनपरैः ब्रह्मविद्यापराङ्मुखैः उत्प्रेक्षित इत्यु- पेक्षणीयम् ।

pp. 59-60, Mad. Ms. R., 2911.

Now, this Iṣṭasiddhivivarapa may be anybody's but, in fact, turns out to be Anubhūtiśvarūpa's own, in the light of which fact, the reference gains in point. What is more fortunate is that this commentary of Anubhūtiśvarūpa on Vimuktātman's Iṣṭasiddhi is available. In the Madras Govt. Oriental Mus. Library there is a manuscript of an anonymous Iṣṭasiddhivivarapa described in the Trien. Catalogues under R. No. 4384. In the general Alphabetical Index of the Madras Library, this is wrongly entered as another manuscript of Jñānottama's commentary on the Iṣṭasiddhi and misled by this, I had postponed its examination for some time, though my attention was on it from 1936. Two more manuscripts of this Iṣṭasiddhivivarapa are also available in Trivandrum, one in the Palace Library and another in the Curator's Library, but there again in the Descriptive Catalogues of those Libraries, it has been assumed without examination that the commentary is Jñānottama's (See Des. Cat. of the Palace Lib. No. 599 ; Cur. Lib. No. 268). When I examined this Iṣṭasiddhivivarapa (Madras ms. R. 4384), I found that its author was identical with the author of the above-noticed Gauḍapādīya-bhāṣya ṭippaṇa, and that the Iṣṭasiddhivivarapa referred to there is the same as this. The matter, for which Anubhūtiśvarūpa in his Gauḍapādīya bhāṣya ṭippaṇa refers us to the Iṣṭasiddhivivarapa, is found in this manuscript.

On pp. 329-333 (Mad. Ms. R. 4384) of this Iṣṭasiddhivivarapa we find an elaborate statement by the author of his position regarding Māyā, Jīva, Īśvara, Bandha and Mukti.

इदमत्र रहस्यम् — चिन्मात्रतन्त्रा अनादिरनिर्वाच्या महदादिप्रकृतिर्माया, तस्यां चित्प्रतिबिम्बः ईश्वरः, तत्परिणामैरेव सर्वज्ञत्वादि(मान्) । 'मायां तु प्रकृतिं विद्यान्मायिनं तु महेश्वरम्' इति श्रुतेः । बिम्बकल्पं तु निर्विकल्पं ब्रह्म कैवल्यालम्बनम् । 'अक्षरात्परतः पर' इति श्रुतेः । तस्या एव मायायाः परि-
च्छिन्नानन्तप्रदेशेष्ववयवविशेषशक्तिमत्सु अज्ञानाभिधानेषु प्रतिबिम्बितं तदेव

चैतन्यमनन्तजीवव्यवहारास्पदं बोधवीति । न चैकस्यामूर्तस्य युगपत्कान्तर्ग्येन
अनेकप्रतिबिम्बभावो विरुध्यते । तार्किकाणां लौकिकानां वा अमूर्ततया
समतस्य नभसोऽनेकोपाधिषु युगपदनेकप्रतिबिम्बभावदर्शनाद्, जानुद्वेऽपि
नीरेऽतिमंभोरतायाः साक्षिसिद्धत्वात् ... .. श्रुतिश्च
'रूपं रूपं प्रतिरूपो बभूव' 'यथा ह्ययं ज्योतिरात्मा विवस्वान् अपो भिन्ना
बहुधेकोऽनुगच्छन्' । ... .. यस्मिन्तरो मायाविवर्तः प्रपञ्चः
स विद्यमानोऽपि निरिन्द्रियेणैव रूपेण अनुभूयत इति ... ..
मिथ्यात्वेऽपि अनादित्ववद् अनुच्छेदस्यापि संभवात् । अन्यथा सदेशि(हि)- त्वादिव्याघातापातात् । ग्रामो दूष इति तन्मायैकदेशाविद्याया जीवमतसकल-संसारहेतोः निवृत्तिः विवक्षिता । तस्माद् यद्यप्येकैव चित्तन्त्रानिर्वाच्यं चैकमेव, तथाप्यवान्तरविभागाद् सर्वव्यवस्थासिद्धिरिति ।

केचित्पुनः उक्तरहस्यानभिज्ञाः प्राहुः,— इष्टसिद्धिकृत एको जीवोऽर्भीष्टः
इतरे जीवाभासाः अद्यापि कस्यापि मोक्षो न बभूव, पश्चाद् भविष्यतीति<sup>1</sup> ।
तत्तेषामिष्टसिद्धिग्रन्थमात्रदर्शित्वमपि नास्तीति क्वापयति । यत इष्टसिद्धिकृता
आयुःश्लोक एव तावदूरो जीवविशेषस्य 'देवतैक्यं' प्रादर्श द्वितीयश्लोके च
तन्मां नत्वेति स्वस्य जीवन्मुक्तत्वरूपापनाय । सिद्धान्तश्लोके च जीवन्मुक्ति-
रसाधि । × × × × × तस्मात् त्रैपुर-
मातृकादिमन्त्राभ्यासाद्विस्तक्तानां ब्रह्मविद्यापराङ्मुखानां प्रलापे मुमुक्षुभिः
नैव ग्रन्थसितव्यमिति ।

The identity especially of the closing lines in the portions extracted above from the Gaudapādīya bhāṣya ṭippaṇa and the Iṣṭasiddhivivarāṇa is clinching.

The identification of the author of this Iṣṭasiddhivivarāṇa as Anubhūtiśvarūpa is borne out by another evidence also. On p. x of his Introduction to the Tarkasaṃgraha, Mr. Tripathi refers to an anecdote relating to a variant form of the locative singular

<sup>1</sup> We do not know which Advaitic writer it is whom Anubhūtiśvarūpa accuses here as not having had even a sight of the Iṣṭasiddhi for his mistake of attributing to the Iṣṭasiddhi the Ekajīvanvāda. At the end of his criticism, Anubhūtiśvarūpa refers to that writer as an Upāsaka of Tālpuraśālagrāma and as one not exactly interested in Advaita as such.

Pratyakṣavarūpa, in his commentary on the Tattvapradīpikā of Citsukha, ascribes the Ekajīvanvāda to the Iṣṭasiddhi; p. 376, Nayanaprasādinī, N8
edn. एकजीववादिमिथ्यवमञ्जुकिमत इत्याह-इष्टसिद्धीति । and the reference seems to imply that Citsukha's view also was the same as that of his commentator.

of the word Pams, viz., Puṅksu (पुङ्क्षु) and to the composition of the system of Sārasvata Grammar; in a footnote to this anecdote Mr. Tripathi draws attention to a passage in the Sārasvata dīpikā of Satyabodha which explains the form Puṅksu and cites its occurrence in a verse in the Iṣṭasiddhi of Vimuktātman.

वेदान्तकवेयस्य आत्मनो बहुत्वासंभवे वाच्ये सति पुंसश्चस्य कमागमो भवति ... पुङ्क्षु । न चायनप्रयोग इति शङ्कनीयम्, शिष्टपरिग्रहितेष्ट-सिद्धौ प्रयोगदर्शनात् । तथा हि—

उच्यते तस्मैनास्मान् ( उच्यते दोषतो नास्मान् ) वृत्तिः पुङ्क्षु बहुष्वपि ।
इष्टेष्टैकाम्यमेवातो न्याय्यत्वादभ्युपेयताम् ॥

In the Sārasvata sūtras and Prakriyā of Anubhūtiśvarūpa ( p. 153 Pūrvārddha, Haridas Skt. Series ), we find in the section on Hasantapūṅlinga Śabdas, the following bearing out the observation of Satyabodha quoted by Mr. Tripathi.

असंभवे पुंसः ककुसौ । असम्भवेऽर्थे पुंसश्चस्य कमागमो भवति, सुपि परे । ककारः कित्कारार्थः । अकार उच्चारणार्थः etc.

Anubhūtiśvarūpa says that in the case of the Pams śabda, a condemnatory 'Kagāgama' occurs before the termination to show that plurality is impossible as regards Puṁān, i. e. Puruṣa or Ātman.<sup>1</sup> It is in support of this Prakriyā and Rūpa that Satyabodha cites the occurrence of Puṅksu in the Iṣṭasiddhi.

Now, what do we find in the Iṣṭasiddhi? The verse cited by Satyabodha, with a difference in the first pāda, occurs as verse 12 in ch. vii, p. 342, GOS edn. of the Iṣṭasiddhi of Prof. M. Hiriyanna. Prof. Hiriyanna's note to this verse says that three manuscripts of the text and the commentator Jāṇottama have the reading Puṅksu and that only Ānandānubhava says in his commentary that we have to read it as Puṁsu; Prof. Hiriyanna here refers also to the tradition mentioned by Mr. Tripathi. If we turn to the Iṣṭasiddhivivarapa identified by me as Anubhūtiśvarūpa's, we find that that commentator also reads it as Puṅksu and what is more, gives the same explanation as is offered in his Sārasvata prakriyā.

<sup>1</sup> If 'Asambhave Puṁsaḥ Kakau' is a Sūtra, it would be one of the proofs to show that Anubhūtiśvarūpa himself composed the Sūtras also; but the number of the Sārasvata Sūtras in Mss and commentaries is not uniform and in Rāmānandā's Siddhānta Candrikā, a gloss directly on the Sūtras, 'Asambhave puṁsaḥ kakau' is absent. It would then mean that it is a 'Vaktavya' introduced by Prakriyākāra.

सिद्धान्तमुपक्रमते— उच्यते इति । पुंस्त्वं इत्यसंभवेद्योतनार्थ आगमः । बहुषु पुंस्त्वं असंभाव्यमानेषु अङ्गीकृतेष्वपि अस्मत्कर्तासहिष्णुव्यवस्थानुपपत्ति- लक्षणादोपात्तव मुक्तिर्नास्ति ।

Before I go to the identification of yet another work of Anubhūtiśvarūpa and the data which this Iṣṭasiddhivivarapa gives in that connection, let me draw attention to some noteworthy points in the Iṣṭasiddhivivarapa.

1 p. 2 Anubhūtiśvarūpa refers here to the Tikākāra; this is Vimuktātman himself, the Tikā meant being the Vṛttigrantha itself.

2 pp. 36-37. Here Anubhūtiśvarūpācārya refers and replies to the sarcastic view of a Nyāya writer who said, while explaining and illustrating *jāti*s, that further varieties of futile responses, Jātyuttaras, can be had in the Iṣṭasiddhi.

यश्च तार्किकाणां कोलाहलः— अन्यानि ज्ञान्यन्तराणि ( ज्ञान्युत्तराणि ) इष्टसिद्धौ द्रष्टव्यानीति, स नेष्टसिद्धिमाविलयितुमलम् etc. <sup>1</sup>

3 pp. 228-9 Anubhūtiśvarūpācārya evidently refers to a Nyāya writer again who seems to have remarked that the Iṣṭasiddhi suffers from Punarukti. Anubhūtiśvarūpa explains how this is an unjustifiable jibe.

किञ्चात्र सप्तशत्यां नोत्तरग्रन्थपौनरुक्त्यम्, तस्याः सकलप्रकरणसङ्ग्रहाहक-
आयश्लोकविवरणपरत्वात् । सिद्धान्तश्लोकविवरणेन च उत्तरग्रन्थपौनरुक्त्यं
स्वयमेवाचार्यः पर्यहर्षित् । उत्तरग्रन्थेष्वेव यत्पौनरुक्त्यं भाति तद्वादिभेदेन,
तस्वे च परममंभरी दिग्गजाणामनुसन्धानसिद्धयर्थत्वेन प्रसिद्धं दूषणमनूय
अप्रसिद्धदोषविधानार्थत्वेन च परिहर्तव्यमिति नेष्टसिद्धौ कापि पौनरुक्त्यम् ।

<sup>1</sup> See below for full quotation of the whole section. This entire section extending to two pages in Anubhūtiśvarūpa's Iṣṭasiddhivivarapa is absent from Jñānottama's gloss on the Iṣṭasiddhi, Mad. Ms. R. 3350 pp. 48-49.

<sup>2</sup> This passage is retained by Jñānottama in his gloss, see Mad. Ms. R. 3350 pp. 4-5, where the word 'Baptaśatyām' reads 'Saptaśatyā'; and see also Prof. Hiriyanna's GOS edn. of the Iṣṭasiddhi, extracts from Jñānottama's commentary, p. 537 where the reading 'Saptaśatyām' is accepted. See also Prof. Hiriyanna's Note on this passage on p. 668 of his edn.

<sup>3</sup> Prof. Hiriyanna has 'तस्य' instead of तस्याः ।

<sup>4</sup> This refers to Vimuktātman's own remarks on p. 123, end of the first paragraph.

The discovery of Anubhūtiśvarūpa's Iṣṭasiddhivivaraṇa takes away the reputation of Jñānottama of Maṅgala in Coladeśa who now appears to be a secondhand writer. His Iṣṭasiddhivyākhyā is practically a reproduction of Anubhūtiśvarūpācārya's. In section IV of his Introduction to his edition of the Naiskarmyasiddhi of Suraśvara with Jñānottama's Candrikā in the Bombay Sanskrit Series, Prof. M. Hiriyanna notes the fact that Jñānottama's commentary on the Naiskarmyasiddhi and Citsukha's commentary on the same work are practically identical except for some extra passages in the former. Prof. M. Hiriyanna considers Jñānottama more likely to have been the earlier of the two and hence the original writer. But when one reflects on this circumstance after what we have known from the relationship of Anubhūtiśvarūpa's and Jñānottama's commentaries on the Iṣṭasiddhi, one would be disposed to view Jñānottama as the later writer who was indebted to Anubhūtiśvarūpa and Citsukha.

Regarding the relationship between the commentaries on the Iṣṭasiddhi by Jñānottama and Ānandānubhava, Prof. Hiriyanna says (p. vii, his preface) that the latter seems to presuppose Jñānottama. Besides the two places pointed out by Prof. Hiriyanna, there is a third place, where again passages are common in these commentaries; compare pp. 85-86 of the Adyar Ma. of Ānandānubhava's Iṣṭasiddhivivaraṇa where Ānandānubhava replies to the Naiyāyika who pointed out Prasaṅgasamā Jāti in the Advaitin's argument, and the corresponding portion of Jñānottama's gloss in manuscript; (p. 407 GOS edn. extracts from Jñānottama's gloss here are not full). There are about eight lines taken by Jñānottama from Ānandānubhava. From these passages it is clear that Jñānottama used Anubhūtiśvarūpa's gloss in the main and in a few places, used Ānandānubhava's gloss also.

The Prakāśārthavivaraṇa a work of Anubhūtiśvarūpa

Students of Advaita Literature are indebted to Dr. T. R. Chintamani for his edition (Madras University Sanskrit Series, 9, Part I, 1935, Part II, 1939) of the valuable commentary on the Brahma Sūtra Bhāṣya of Śaṅkara, called the Prakāśārtha, long known to scholars only through references like the one in the Tattvāloka of Janārdana. When the distinctive views of the author of this commentary on Śaṅkara's Sūtra bhāṣya were referred to by writers they always mentioned its author as Prakaṭārthakāra only. It is clear that his identity was forgotten. His Iṣṭasiddhivivarāṇa has also been handed down anonymously. The first clue to the identification of the Prakāṭārthakāra struck me as early as the time of the publication of the first volume of the Prakāṭārthavivarāṇa in 1938. I took up the question after the publication of the second part and tried to push the investigation to a conclusion towards the end of 1940. And owing to the more pressing day-to-day work of the New Catalogus Catalogorum, I could publish my results only now. A close study of the works of Anubhūtiśvarūpacārya already dealt with, such as the Bhagavadgītābhāṣya ṭippaṇa, Gauḍapādīyabhāṣya ṭippaṇa and the Iṣṭasiddhivivarāṇa, together with the Prakāṭārthavivarāṇa, has convinced me that the author of the "Śārirakamahābhāṣya Prakāṭārthanibandhana (or Vivarāṇa)" is none else than Anubhūtiśvarūpacārya.

A. I. One of the two opening verses of the Prakāṭārthavivarāṇa is:

ज्ञात्वापि यस्य बहुकालमचिन्तते
व्याख्यातुमक्षमतया परितापि चेतः ।
तस्योपतापहरणाय मयेह भाष्ये
प्रारभ्यते विवरणं प्रकटार्थमेतद् ॥

This is a characteristic verse, either at the opening or end of the works, of Anubhūtiśvarūpacārya. If he does not pay obeisance to his deity Hayagrīva, he usually starts with affirming his being the Brahman; and then he gives a verse which contains some dark allusion to some personal detail referring to himself or a student of his; this second verse contains a statement of somebody's long neglect of the works, Vyākhyā-asāmarthya, and consequent Saṁtāpa and his own effort to compose the commentary on hand for the removal of that Saṁtāpa. Now, see this verse or idea occurring in the other works of Anubhūtiśvarūpacārya :

After an Anuṣṭubh, as in the Prakāṭārtha, affirming the author's identity with the Brahman, the Iṣṭasiddhivivarāṇa has the second verse which is nearly identical with that in the Prakāṭārthavivarāṇa :

श्रुत्वापि यस्य बहुकालमचिन्तनेन
व्याख्यातुमक्षमतया परितापि चेतः ।
तस्याभितापश्मनाय मयेष्टसिद्धे- रारभ्यते विवरणं प्रथितार्थमेतत् ॥

Mad. Mas. R. 4384.

ii. At the end of Anubhūtiśvarūpācārya's Gitābhāṣya ṭippaṇa we have the same idea put in an Anuṣṭubh.

अनुभूतिस्वरूपाख्यः यतिश्वकार दिप्पणम् ।<sup>1</sup>
व्याख्यासामर्थ्यसन्तापि पुंसां चित्तानुरञ्जनम् ॥

Adyar Ms. and Trivandrum Curator's Catalogue, II. 324.

iii. The second verse at the beginning of Anubhūtiśvarūpācārya's Gauḍapādīyabhāṣya ṭippaṇa is:

गौडपादीयभाष्यस्य दिप्पणं क्रियते स्फुटम् ।
चिरोग्निज्ञताममाख्यातुचित्तसन्तापज्ञान्तये ॥

Mad. Ms. R. 2911.

iv. At the end of Anubhūtiśvarūpa's Nyāyadīpāvalī Candrikā we have:

अनुभूतिस्वरूपाख्यः यतिश्वकार चन्द्रिकाम् ।
व्याख्यासामर्थ्यसन्तापि पुंसां मानन्ददायिनीम् ॥<sup>2</sup>

v. At the end of his Nyāyamakarandavyākhyā, Anubhūtiśvarūpa says:

अनुभूतिस्वरूपाख्यः यतिश्वकार दिप्पणम् ।
व्याख्यासामर्थ्यसन्तापि पुंसां चित्तानुरञ्जकम् ॥<sup>3</sup>

<sup>1</sup> It is a characteristic of Anubhūtiśvarūpācārya to disregard in the even pādas of the Anuṣṭubhs the guru-laghu rules. See his Sārasvata prakriyā also, Haridas Ser. Kasi, Pt. I, pp. 107, 110 ( श्रीने मुनोनि सोमपाः ) 233 and Pt. II p. 93 ( वृद्धिद्विको गुणः ). See again the verse at the end of his Nyāyadīpāvalī-candrikā and Nyāyamakarandasāhgraha quoted below.

<sup>2</sup> I am thankful to Messrs. P. K. Gode and Ram Nivas Harit for sending me extracts from the BORI and Bikaner Mss. of Anubhūtiśvarūpa's Candrikā on the Nyāyadīpāvalī of Ānandabodha. A third manuscript of this work, in great disorder and wrongly taken as a work of Narendrapuri is available in the Madras Govt. Oriental Mss. Library, but of this more later.

<sup>3</sup> I am thankful to Mr. I. N. Menon, M.A., B.Litt., (Oxon), D. P. L., Cochin, for the kindness with which, through the Devaasvam Commissioner of Cochin, he sent me on loan the Tekkemaṭham Ms. of this work.

Note in the second pāda of these two Anuṣṭubhs again the break of guru-laghu rules. The last verse, the last in the Nyāyamakarandasāhgraha, is on Anubhūtiśvarūpa's favourite deity, Hayagrīva.

B. A second series of evidence pertains to the Anuṣṭubh verses which Anubhūtiśvarūpa always has in the place or in addition to the Maṅgala Śloka, either at the beginning of his works, or at their end or at the beginning and close of sections. In these verses he usually affirms his being the Supreme Brahman.

i. At the beginning of the Iṣṭasiddhivivarāṇa he has this verse :

मायया यज्जगद्बीजं जीवा अज्ञानभेदतः ।
तज्ज्ञानं नित्यकूटस्थमद्वयं सद्ब्रह्मव्यहम् ॥

Mad. Ms. R. 4384.

This verse, with a change in the last quarter, is found at the end of the I Adhyāya of the Prakāṣārthavivarāṇa.

मायया यज्जगद्बीजं जीवोऽविद्यावशेन च । तज्ज्ञानं सत्यमद्वैतं सिद्धं वेदसमन्वयात् ॥

ii. The Gauḍapādiya bhāṣya ṭippaṇa ends with the verse

सत्यं ब्रह्मास्म्यर्थे शुद्धं निर्मयं भेदवर्जितम् ।
नानवाप्तं मया किञ्चित् कर्तव्यं वा तदात्मना ॥

Mad. Ms. R. 2911.

which compares with the verse with which the Prakāṣārthavivarāṇa ends

शुद्धं ब्रह्मास्म्यहं नित्यमक्षरं परमं पदम् ।
तिष्ठामि क क गच्छामि जगदापुरितं मया ॥

The opening verse of the Prakāṣārthavivarāṇa, the opening verses of the four chapters of the Gauḍapādiya bhāṣya ṭippaṇa—these are all of the same type.

C. The following series of passages in the body of the Prakāṣārthavivarāṇa, which are common with those in the other works of Anubhūtiśvarūpa, go to confirm further my identification of the author of the Prakāṣārthavivarāṇa as Anubhūtiśvarūpācārya :

1 Dr. T. R. Chintamani's edition reads the second pāda as 'जीवोऽविद्यावशेन च'. I have given above the correct reading 'जीवोऽविद्यावशेन च'. And it is supported by the corresponding part of the Iṣṭasiddhivivarāṇa-verse, as well as by four manuscripts of the Prakāṣārthavivarāṇa, noted in the foot-note by Dr. T. R. Chintamani.

i. In the foregone portion of this paper, while identifying the Iṣṭasiddhivivarāṇa as a work of Anubhūtiśvarūpa, I quoted two passages from the author's Gauḍapādīya bhāṣya ṭippaṇa and Iṣṭasiddhivivarāṇa, the former one making a reference to the latter. In the latter is to be found an elaborate statement of the author's view on Māya, Īśvara, Jīvas, the relative plurality of Jīvas and the impossibility of release for all when one gets release. The whole thing occurs in the Prakaṣārthavivarāṇa, except the reference to the 'Traipura Sālagrama Upāsaka.' Since the passage from the Iṣṭasiddhivivarāṇa has been quoted above, I quote here only the corresponding portion from the Prakaṣārthavivarāṇa, Pra. vi., Pt. i. pp. 3-4.

तदयं संक्षेपः— एका तावदनिर्वाच्या भूतप्रकृतिश्चिन्मात्रसम्बन्धिनी माया, तस्यां चित्प्रतिबिम्ब ईश्वरः, तत्परिणामिरेव सर्वज्ञत्वादिमान् । बिम्बकल्पं तु निर्विकल्पं ब्रह्म कैवल्यावलम्बनम् । तस्या एव परिच्छिन्नानिर्वाच्यानन्तप्रदेशो- ज्ज्ञानाभिधानेषु आवरणविक्षेपशक्तिमत्सु प्रतिबिम्बितं तदेव चैतन्यम् अनन्त-
जीवव्यवहारास्पदम् । × × × न च निरंशस्यैकस्य कृत्स्नस्य
अनन्तप्रतिबिम्बभावो विरुध्येत, 'रूपं रूपं प्रतिरूपो बभूव' इत्यादि श्रुतेः,
न भसि दर्शनाच्च । × × × यस्तु मायाविवर्तः महाभूत(तादिः)
प्रपञ्चः स विद्यमानोऽपि निरिन्द्रियेणैव रूपं नानुबोध्यते । 'भूयश्चान्ते विश्व-मायानिवृत्तिः' इत्यत्र मायाशब्देन मायैकदेशाविद्याभिधानादगमि(क) सकल-
संसारकारणाविद्यानिवृत्तिः, न स्वरूपेण मायायाः, सदेहित्वादिद्याघातान्,
मिथ्यात्वेऽपि अनादित्ववदनुच्छेदसंभवात् ।

This can be closely compared with the passage quoted previously from Anubhūtiśvarūpa's Iṣṭasiddhivivarāṇa. The ideas here are also briefly given in the Gauḍapādīya bhāṣya ṭippaṇa of Anubhūtiśvarūpa, Mad. Ms. pp. 4-5 and 14.

प्रज्ञानं ब्रह्म । तस्यांशव इवांशवो जीवाः । चिन्मात्रं तत्र अनाद्यनिर्वाच्या- ज्ञानेष्वावरणविक्षेपशक्तिमत्सु मायाव्यष्टिषु प्रतिबिम्बितं तदेव चैतन्यम् अनन्त-जीवव्यवहारास्पदम्— ।

p. 12 अत्रेयं प्रक्रिया—चिन्मात्रतन्त्रा अनाद्यनिर्वाच्या भूतप्रकृतिः माया
अव्याकृतादिशब्दवाच्या । तस्यां प्रतिबिम्बितं तदेव चैतन्यम् × × सर्व-ज्ञत्वादिधर्मकमीश्वरसंज्ञाकं भवति × × ।

ii. Pra. vi., Part I. p. 6.

न हि घटावष्टब्धे भूतले निर्यटं भूतलमिति जायतीति । किञ्च विमतमज्ञानं नाभावः उपादानत्वात्, मृद्वद्, etc. ।

This can be compared with the following from Anubhūtiśvarīpācārya's Gitābhāṣya ṭippaṇa, Adyar Ms. leaf 11b.

विमतमज्ञानं नाभावः, उपादानत्वात्, मृद्वद् इति भावः ।

ii. Pra. vi., Part I. p. 17.

यौक्तिकविवेकस्य अपरोक्षप्रमाविरोधात् × × पण्डितव्यवहारोऽपि अभ्यासमूल एवेत्यर्थः ।

This is found thus in the Gitābhāṣya ṭippaṇa of Anubhūtiśvarīpācārya, Adyar Ms. leaf 82a.

यौक्तिकविवेकज्ञानस्य अपरोक्षप्रमानिवर्तकत्वात् पण्डिता अपि भ्रान्ता इत्याह ।

ii. Pra. vi., Part I, p. 34.

प्रकाशनशक्तिमद् सत्त्वप्रधानं मनः अदृष्टादिसहकृतं दीर्घप्रभाकारेण स्व-कर्मदेशं सरीसर्पि । तत्संसृष्टे विषये चैतन्यं प्रतिबिम्बते तद्विषयसंबन्धनम् ।

Compare this with the following from Anubhūtiśvarīpācārya's Gauḍapādīyabhāṣya ṭippaṇa, Mad. Ms. R. 2911, p. 5.

जामरिते हि अदृष्टेन्द्रियादिसहकृतं मनः दीर्घप्रभाकारेण गवाक्षनिस्सृत-प्रदीपप्रभावद् विषयपर्यन्तं सञ्चरन् तान् व्याप्नोति ।

And also the following from his Gitābhāṣya ṭippaṇa, Adyar Ms. leaf. 10a.

अदृष्टेन्द्रियादिसहकृतमन्तःकरणं गवाक्षनिस्सृतप्रदीपप्रभावद् दीर्घप्रभा-कारेण विषयपर्यन्तं परिणमते, सा बुद्धिवृत्तिरित्युच्यते ।

5. I have already referred to the context in the Iṣṭasiddhivivarāṇa of Anubhūtiśvarīpācārya where he replies to a Naiyāyika-critic who had a fling at the Iṣṭasiddhi as a store-house of Jātyuttaras. Let me reproduce here the entire paragraph from the Iṣṭasiddhivivarāṇa, for, except for an initial omission, the paragraph occurs in the Prakāśārthavivarāṇa also.

Iṣṭasiddhivivarāṇa, Mad. Ms. R. 4384, pp. 36-37.

यश्च तार्किकाणां कोलाहलः अन्यानि जात्यन्त(स्तुत)राणि इष्टसिद्धौ द्रष्टव्यानीति, स नेष्टसिद्धिमाधिलयितुमलम् । तथा हि लौकिकसिद्धां वादिसिद्धां वा व्याप्तिमुपजीव्य इष्टसिद्धिः प्रावर्तिष्यति । तथात्वेऽपि जातित्वे सकलमपि तर्कतन्त्रं जातिस्स्यात् । अथ यथा भेदाभेदादिविकल्पेन परपक्षः प्रतिषिध्यते, तथा प्रतिषेधोऽपि न सेषिष्यते । न हि प्रतिषेधस्य प्रतिषेध्याद् भिन्नत्वेऽभिन्नत्वे च तत्प्रतिषेधस्वमुपपत्नीयते । ततः स्वपक्षव्याघातकरत्वाज्जातिरिति ? न, स्वमतव्याघातानुपपत्तेः । यस्य हि ब्रह्मातिरिक्तं न किञ्चिदपि निरूपणसहमिति मतम्, कथंकारं तस्य प्रतिषेधस्य निरूपणसहस्ये स्वमतहतिः स्यात् । प्रत्युत स्वस्त्ययनमेव । न च प्रतिषेधस्य तर्कबाधितत्वे जयादिव्यवहारसंभवः, स्वप्ने जयादिदर्शनाच्च । स्वप्नवदेव च न प्रतिषेधमिथ्यात्वेऽपि प्रतिषेध्यसत्यतापातः । किञ्चेतत्तार्किकपशूनां सङ्केतमात्रम्, प्रमाणाभावात् । अथास्ति व्यतिरेकी स्वपक्षव्याघातकरमुत्तरं जातिः, स्वपक्षव्याघातकरवचनत्वाद्, न यदेवं न तदेवं, यथा प्रमाणवचनमिति, न, अनैकान्तिकादिवचने व्यभिचाराद्, अनुकूलतर्कविरहाद्, अनैकान्तिकाभिधानवद् अजातित्वसाधनपसंगाच्च ।

× × × × ×
यच्च लक्षणान्तरं प्रयुक्ते हेतौ समीकरणाभिप्रायेण प्रसङ्गो जातिरिति, तद्विपक्षव्यापकम्, तस्य अनश्लिष्टत्वेऽधुमवस्वप्रसंगो गङ्गातरङ्गदेशवदिति प्रतिदृष्टान्तसमीकरणाभिप्रायेण अभिधानात् । किञ्च जातिवचनादपि प्रमा जायते वा, न वा ? आये प्रमाणमेव, द्वितीये कुत इति वाच्यम् । मानान्तराविरोधादिति चेत्, तर्हि तदेव दूषणम् । किं नाम जात्युत्तरम् ? विमलकलेवरस्य वचनमात्रेण अव्यामोहादित्यलम् ।

Now in the Prakāśārthavivaraṇa, part I, under II, ii, 41, there is a long refutation of the categories of the Nyāya beginning from p. 562. The refutation of Jāti found here on pp. 572-3 is practically the same as found in the passage given above from the Iṣṭasiddhivivaraṇa of Anubhūtiśvarūpa.

यच्च जातिलक्षणं प्रयुक्ते हेतौ समीकरणाभिप्रायेण जातिरिति तद्विपक्षव्याप्तिग्रस्तम् । × × वल्लिभस्वाभावेऽधुमवस्वप्रसङ्गो गङ्गातरङ्गदेशवद् इत्यपि बाधकस्तर्कः । प्रतिदृष्टान्तसमीकरणाभिप्रायेण प्रसङ्गो भवतीति अतिव्याप्तिः । ... किमनेन अकिञ्चित्करणेण साधर्म्यसमाधिपरिभाषाकरणेन । नो बलु विमलकलेवर(रा)णां वाङ्मात्रेण

1 'Dr. Chintamani's edition has 'विमलकलेवरणम्' with a query. The correct reading is 'विमलकलेवरणम्' and it means 'Pāsupata', who is also, in (continued on the next page)

व्यामोहः संभवतीति । यच्च बोधोऽवत् स्वपक्षव्याघातकरमुत्तरं जातिः, येन प्रकारेण परपक्षः प्रतिषिध्यते प्रतिषेधोऽपि तेनैव प्रकारेण न सिद्ध्यतीति । तत्र किम् ... .. प्रथमे नाद्वैतवादिनः किमपि जात्युत्तरं तावत् प्रसरीतास्तैः, तस्य नद्वैतातिरिक्तं तत्त्वमिति मतम् । ततः प्रतिषेधस्यापि दुर्निरूपत्वं न स्वपक्षव्याघातकरम् । व्यवहारस्तु स्वप्नवद् भविष्यति । स्वप्न-वदेव च प्रतिषेधस्य अतात्त्विकत्वेऽपि न प्रतिषेधस्य सत्यत्वापातः । पूर्ववदेव चात्रापि प्रमाणाभावो वेदितव्यः । किञ्च अनुकूलतर्काभावाद् अप्रयोजकत्व-शङ्कोत्तरेऽतिव्याप्तिः ।

vi. Pra. vi., Part II. p. 746 : the etymology of the word Māyā and the discussion on the presence of the word in the synonymous of Prajñā in the Nirukta. In the same discussion occurring in Anubhūtiśvarāpa's Iṣṭasiddhivivaraṇa, ( under I. 8., I 35 ) on p. 159 of the Madras Manuscript and in his Gauḍapādīya-bhāṣya ṣippaṇa, p. 75 of the Madras Manuscript, we find identical words and phrases.

मायादर्शितहस्त्यश्वादिषु ' मायेयं मायेयम् ' इत्यनुमतप्रत्ययादनुमतनिष्पत्त्ये मायापदस्य व्युत्पत्तिः बुद्धव्यवहारे लाघवाद्ब्रूयते ... .. ' भीयतेऽर्थोऽनया ' इति व्युत्पत्त्या मायाशब्दो बुद्धिवाचकः प्रज्ञानामसु स्यात् ।

Ist. vi., p. 159. Cf. Pra. vi., Part II. p. 746.

The Tattvāloka of Janārdana is a compilation made out of the Prakāṣārthavivaraṇa. Janārdana says both at the beginning and end of his work :

प्रकटार्थनिबन्धाव्वेरुद्धृतन्यायरत्नकैः ।

वितनोति तमोऽप्यस्यै तत्त्वालोकं जनार्दनः ॥

शारीरकमहाभाष्यप्रकटार्थनिबन्धनम् ।

जनार्दनो निरीक्ष्येयं तत्त्वालोकं विनिर्ममे ॥

And in the colophon to this work, Janārdana describes himself as a pupil of Anubhūtiśvarāpācārya :

इति श्रीमदनुभूतिस्वरूपाचार्यशिष्येण.....जनार्दनेन विनिर्मिते

तत्त्वालोकं द्वितीयोऽध्यायः ॥

( continued from the previous page )

the height of his Siddhi, a ' Nagna ', and refers as such to the Naiṣyika. It would indeed be of greatest value to identify this particular Naiṣyika critic of the Iṣṭasiddhi, for that would give an early lower limit to Vimuktā-tman's date.

Don't we see that there is an implicit relation between the preceptor mentioned in the colophon and the work mentioned as source in the two verses? And now that from other evidence, we gather that the author of the Prakāṣārthavivaraṇa is none else than Anubhūtiśvarācārya, do not these two verses and the colophon of Janārdana disclose to us clearly that relation between Janārdana's Mūlagrantha and Ācārya? <sup>1</sup>

---

<sup>1</sup> While this paper was under preparation, I had a personal discussion with Prof. M. Hiriyanna, M.A., who accepted the evidences and conclusions of this paper.

After the preparation of this paper, Mm. Prof. S. Kuppuswami Sastri, M.A., I.E.S. (Retd.) was kind enough to scrutinise it and send me the following remarks: "It is a very valuable contribution to the history of Advaita Literature." ".....The identifications there are all right and I accept all of them.....I am exceedingly glad that you have succeeded in establishing the identity of the Prakāṣārthakūṣa."

I may add that Dr. T R. Chintamani also has expressed his agreement with my conclusions.

THE HERO IN THE MĀLAVIKĀGNIMITRA

( A Character Study )

BY

C. KUNHAN RAJA

The character of King Agnimitra, the Hero in Kālidāsa's drama Mālavikāgnimitra is one of the examples of misjudgment in Sanskrit Literature. Few scholars have done justice to this character. Most of the critics condemn him as an irresponsible and voluptuous king who spent his whole time in the harem in the company of women, enjoying all the luxuries there and leaving the affairs of state to his ministers. Many people have been able to see only one commendable feature in him—namely that he had able and trustworthy ministers and that he had confidence in them.

One must in this connection recognise that in art it is not the details or isolated incidents that matter. The total impression is the chief thing in art. Even what is supposed to be bad in physical life becomes beautiful when handled by an artist. It is this truth that Kālidāsa enunciates in the verse :

यद्यद् साधु न चित्रे स्याद् क्रियते तत्तदन्यथा<sup>1</sup>

" Whatever may not be good ( in physical reality ) can be made otherwise in a picture. " We shall not condemn a character in a drama simply because he is much older than the heroine whom he loves or because he tries to embrace her<sup>2</sup> before he marries her. It is also unfair to condemn Agnimitra on the ground that he fell in love with his queen's maid-in-waiting. We have to judge the character not from details but from the way in which the details are put together and presented as art.

---

<sup>1</sup> Śākuntala, Act. VI, verse 14. I have given a translation in my own way, which is different from the traditional one, but which is the correct one.

<sup>2</sup> Mālavikāgnimitra, Act IV

Let us see what the first impression is that we get about Agnimitra when we start reading the play or start seeing the play on the stage. He is introduced for the first time as a resolute king, firm in his decision, brave in his outlook. He is first seen not in the harem but in his private office, surrounded not by women but by his minister and engaged not in flattering the beautiful damsels and attempting to secure their favour but in attending to serious matters of state.<sup>1</sup> The situation is that he had sent a messenger to the Vidarbha King directing him to set Mādhavasena free and the minister had the reply in his hand. When Agnimitra asks his minister what the demand was,<sup>2</sup> the minister says that it was the ruin of the Vidarbha King.<sup>3</sup> Thus we are first introduced to a king who is so terrible that opposition to him meant nothing but ruin.

Then the king asks the minister to read out the reply.<sup>4</sup> The reply was that there are certain conventions in mutual transactions between equals, that there must be some mutual consideration and that Mādhavasena can be released only in return for the release of Mauryasaciva who was imprisoned by Agnimitra.<sup>5</sup>

This reply enrages the king<sup>6</sup> that the Vidarbha king should think of negotiating with him instead of obeying his directions.<sup>7</sup> The question of words comes to an end and he orders action being

<sup>1</sup> ततः प्रविशत्येकान्तस्थितपरिजनो मन्त्रिणा लेखदृष्टेनान्वासमानो राजा ।

<sup>2</sup> बाह्यक किं प्रतिपद्यते वेदमः ।

<sup>3</sup> देव आत्मविनाशम् ।

<sup>4</sup> निदेशनिदर्नीं श्रोतुमिच्छामि ।

<sup>5</sup> पूज्येनाहमादिष्टः— भवतः पितृव्यपुत्रः कुमारो माधवसेनः प्रतिश्रुतसंवन्धो ममोपातिक-
मायच्छन्नन्तरा स्वदीयेनाम्नपालेनावस्कृत्य गृहीतः । स त्वया मदपेक्षया सकलत्रसोद्यो
मोचयितव्यः— इति । तन्न वो न विदितं यत्तुल्याभिजनेषु भूमिहरेषु राज्ञां प्रवृत्तिरीदृक् ।
अतोऽन मध्यस्थः पूज्यो भवितुमर्हति । ... ... श्रूयतामसिखन्धिः—

मौर्वेसखिवं त्रिमुञ्चति यदि पूज्यः संयते मम स्थालम् ।

मोका माधवसेनं ततोऽहमपि बन्धनात् सद्यः ॥ Act. I. verse 7.

<sup>6</sup> सकोपम् ।

<sup>7</sup> कथं कार्यविनियमेन मयि व्यवहरत्यनामज्ञः ।

taken against him.<sup>1</sup> The minister has only to carry out the orders.<sup>2</sup> The minister dares to say a word, to express an opinion about the king's decision, only when he was asked to say what he thought of it.<sup>3</sup> The minister simply says that his decision is in accordance with the principles of political science.<sup>4</sup> Thus we start with a very good impression of the greatness of the Hero.

And how is the Heroine introduced with whom the Hero falls in love? Is she introduced as a servant in the harem? She is introduced to us in a conversation between two maid-servants<sup>5</sup> in the harem. From the conversation it is found that the Heroine Mālavikā is a great favourite of Agnimitra's Queen Dhārīnī, that the queen placed her under a dancing master named Gapadāsa, that there was another queen named Irāvati who was an expert in dancing and who had received instructions under another dancing master named Haradatta and that Dhārīnī's ambition was to see Mālavikā excel the rival queen in the art of dancing.<sup>6</sup> Dhārīnī was making daily enquiries through the maid-servant regarding the progress which Mālavikā was making in her studies.<sup>7</sup> The teacher Gapadāsa was very proud of his new disciple.<sup>8</sup> There is no mention of Mālavikā being a maid-servant in the harem.

<sup>1</sup> यातव्यपक्षे स्थितस्य पूर्वं संकल्पितमुन्मूलनाय बीरसेनपक्षे दण्डवत्प्रणम्य ।

<sup>2</sup> यदाज्ञापयति देवः ।

<sup>3</sup> अथवा किं भवान् मन्यते ।

<sup>4</sup> शास्त्रदृष्टमाह देवः । कुतः —

अचिराधिष्ठितराज्यः शत्रुः प्रकृतिश्वरद्वयमूलत्वात् ।

नवसंरीड्गणशिथिलस्तद्विषयं सुकरः समुद्धर्तुम् ॥ Act. I. verse 8.

<sup>5</sup> बकुलापलिका and कौमुदिका.

<sup>6</sup> इरावतीमतिक्रामन्तीमिव पश्यामि ।

<sup>7</sup> आज्ञास्मि देव्या धारिण्या — अचिरप्रयुक्तोपदेशं चलितं नाम नाट्यमन्तरेण कीदृशी मालविका — इति नाट्याचार्यनार्यगणदासं प्रष्टुम् ।

<sup>8</sup> विज्ञाप्यतां देवी परं निपुणा मेधाविनी चेति । किं बहुना—

यद्यत् प्रयोगविषये भाविकमुपदिश्यते मया तस्यै ।

तच्च द्विशेषकरणत्वात् प्रत्युपदिशतीति मे चाला ॥ Act. I. verse 3.

From the conversation we also understand how Agnimitra first came to know of the presence of Mālavikā in the court. The queen had got a new painting of hers finished. In that painting there was one lady attendant who was unusually close to Dhāriṇī and this roused the king's curiosity. The king asks Dhāriṇī who that lady was in whom she was showing such marked partiality<sup>1</sup> but the queen was silent. The princess tells the king that it was Mālavikā.<sup>2</sup>

The maid-servants are not concealed from the king. They attend on him freely and there is absolutely no hint in the whole drama of the king having entertained any improper feeling towards them. Why should Dhāriṇī conceal one particular person? Usually the maid-servants keep at a respectable distance from the queen. Why should one person be introduced in the painting as standing particularly close to the queen? These are unmistakable hints that Mālavikā was not one among the usual attendants in the harem and that the king was not wrong in beginning to entertain a feeling of attachment to her. What is wrong in the king beginning to love a lady of noble position in the Court?

Does this compare unfavourably by the side of Duṣyanta falling in love with a young lady in a hermit's penance grove? In the Śākuntalā, the king understands that Kanva was not in the hermitage and that a young girl named Śākuntalā was there in charge to entertain guests. This information encourages him to visit the place rather than deters him. From the moment he enters the penance grove, he has only one thought—how to win Śākuntalā. Why should we condemn Agnimitra for his love towards a girl, for whom love on his part is not illegitimate while we admire Duṣyanta for his love towards a girl in a hermit's penance grove?

How did Mālavikā come to the Court of Agnimitra? She was sent to the queen Dhāriṇī by the queen's half-brother who was in command of the royal army. He sent her to the queen so that the queen may employ her as keeper of jewels.<sup>1</sup> As soon as Dhārīṇī saw her, she instinctively found her as deserving something far higher and took her up under her protection.

<sup>1</sup> देवि अपूर्वेयं दारिका आत्मना लिखिता किन्नामधेया ।

<sup>2</sup> यावदेवो न कथयति तावत् कुमार्यो वसुलक्ष्म्या आख्यातम्— आवुत्त एषा मालविका
— इति ।

There is nothing in the king, so far as the first impression goes, that is unfavourable in his character. As the story proceeds the very favourable initial impression continues. The king naturally desires to meet Mālavikā. Dhārīṇī studiously keeps her away from his sight.<sup>2</sup> As is ever the case, there is the Vidūṣaka to render him the needed assistance.<sup>3</sup> A plan is evolved whereby the king should have a chance of meeting Mālavikā. A feigned quarrel between the two dancing masters in the court, their request that the king should judge between them, a proposal that their respective disciples should exhibit their proficiency before the king—this is the plan meant to outwit Dhārīṇī. The whole plan was conceived and worked up by others. The king stands aloof; he simply approves.

And who are the people that are involved in it? Both the dancing masters are implicated in it. The Buddhist Samyāsini, Ārya Kauśikī, is also in it. What more is wanted to keep the plan safe from any taint of being unworthy of decent people?

In the third act, we find that the maid-servants in the harem come forward with help in bringing the Hero and the Heroine together.<sup>4</sup> When the king meets Mālavikā in the third Act, there occurs nothing that calls for blame. The feelings are exactly what we find in the other noble heroes of Kālidāsa—namely Duṣyanta and Purūravas.

<sup>1</sup> अस्ति देव्या वर्णावरो धाता वीरसेनो नाम । स भर्ता अम्बपालदुर्गे नर्मदाकुले स्थापितः । तेन शिष्याधिकारे इयं योग्या दारिकेति भगिन्यै उपायनं प्रेषिता ।

<sup>2</sup> साप्रसन्नं मालविका सविशेषं भर्तुर्दर्शनपथाद्वस्यते ।

<sup>3</sup> राजा—वयस्य कचिन्वदुपेयोपासदर्शने आपृतं ते पञ्चाचसुः ।

विदूषकः—प्रयोगसिद्धिं पृच्छ

<sup>4</sup> The maid servant's words:—विज्ञापय भर्तारम्—अतुष्टाहतास्मि अनेन निचोगेन । किंतु सा तपस्विनी देव्या अधिकारं रक्षयमाणा नागरक्षित इव निधिर्न सुखं समासादयितव्या भविष्यति । तथापि घटविष्यामि—इति ।

Mālavikā naturally knew who she was ; and she was compelled to keep her identity a secret. Ārya Kauṣiki too knew her identity ; but she too had to abstain from disclosing it. All the people in the court—the queen Dhārīṇī, the dancing master Gaṇadāsa and the maid-servants were impressed by her look and instinctively knew that she belonged to a very high position. The queen showed extraordinary partiality for her in undertaking to arrange for her lessons in dancing, in permitting her to move on very intimate terms,<sup>1</sup> in directing the other maid-servants to attend on her<sup>2</sup>, in engaging her as proxy for placing her decorated feet on the Āśoka tree so that it may blossom,<sup>3</sup> in allowing her to adorn her own ornaments<sup>4</sup> and in various other ways.

Through the help of the maid-servants, Agnimitra meets Mālavikā. Irāvati, another queen of Agnimitra, sees this meeting and reports the matter to Dhārīṇī who orders Mālavikā's imprisonment in a dungeon along with the maid-servant who helped her in her impudent conduct. Here again the Vidūṣaka along with some other responsible people in the court contrives a plan to set Mālavikā free and to enable the king to meet her again. It is at this meeting that the king tries to embrace Mālavikā.<sup>5</sup>

Critics have made much of this incident. But the ideal hero Duṣyanta is guilty of a far worse breach of the rules of modesty in trying to kiss Śakuntalā who was not married to him at that time even under Gāndharva rules.<sup>6</sup> He had only just then

<sup>1</sup> As seen in the picture, see Note I on p. 372 above.

<sup>2</sup> यकुलावलिकā adorns her feet as a servant.

<sup>3</sup> In the third Act, सर्वं तावत् तपनीयाशोकस्य दोहदं निर्वर्तय ।

<sup>4</sup> अन्यथा कथं देवी स्वयं धारितं नूपुरयुगलं परिजनस्वानुज्ञास्यति ।

<sup>5</sup> राजा— दक्षिण्यं नाम विम्बोष्ठि वैम्बिकानां कुलघटम् ।

तन्मे दीर्घाक्षि ये प्राणास्ते स्वदाशानिबन्धनाः ॥ Act IV, verse 14.

तद्वन्मनुगृह्णातां चिरानुरक्तो जनः ( इति संश्लेषमभिनयति । मालविका परिहरति )

<sup>6</sup> शकुन्तला— मुखं तावन्माम् । भूयोऽपि सस्त्रीजनमनुमानयिष्ये ।

राजा— भवतु मोक्ष्यामि ।

शकुन्तला— कदा

राजा— अपरिक्षितकोमलस्य यावत्

कुसुमस्यैव नवस्य षट्पदेन ।

अधरस्य विपासता मया ते

सदयं कुन्दरि गृह्यते स्तोऽस्य ॥ Act III, verse 21.

( इति मुक्तमस्याः समुत्तमपितुमिच्छति । शकुन्तला परिहरति ) suggested the Gāndharva method as fit for kings.<sup>1</sup> This incident is in a penance grove—a far more inappropriate place for such conduct than the garden attached to the palace of a king. The physical passion began to pinch the heart of Duṣyanta even on his approach to the penance grove.<sup>2</sup> In the penance grove every incident appealed to him as a specimen of the play of physical passion. In the bee he could see only a viṭa.<sup>3</sup> Agnimitra was not moving in a penance grove. He was in the royal garden.

Agnimitra's passion for Mālavikā was not a temporary outburst of physical passion. He did not merely want an opportunity to satisfy his carnal feeling. He had a sort of instinctive conviction that his heart fell on a lady who deserved to be his queen. He desired her to be one of his queens. There is nothing to show that he wanted to have any illegitimate association with her prior to their marriage.

In his longing to meet Mālavikā and to be united to her and in his anxiety for the feelings of Dhārīnī he is on a par with Purūravas who longed to meet Urvashi and be united to her and who at the same time was anxious about the feelings of his queen and was afraid of incurring her displeasure.

In the fifth Act, Mālavikā's identity is disclosed. She is found out to be the very princess of Vidarbha, the sister of Mādhavasena, whom he had arranged to marry. Mādhavasena was on his way to Vidisā with his sister.<sup>4</sup>

Thus from the very beginning it is found that Agnimitra had arranged for a new marriage. In the end it is found that the girl whom he loved was that very person whom he had thought of marrying.

- <sup>1</sup> गान्धर्वेण विवाहेन बहुचो राजर्षिकन्यकाः । श्रूयन्ते परिणीताश्च पितृभिश्चानुमोदिताः ॥ Act II. verse 20.
- <sup>2</sup> शान्तमिदमाश्रमपदं स्फुरति च बाहुः कुतः फलमिहास्य । अथवा भवितव्यानां द्वाराणि भवन्ति सर्वेद्य ॥ Act I. verse 14.
- <sup>3</sup> चलापाङ्गं दृष्टिं स्पृशसि बहुशो वेषधूमनो
रहस्याख्यायीव स्वनसि मृदु कण्ठान्तिङ्गवरः ।
करौ व्याधुन्वास्याः पिबसि रतिसर्वस्वमधरं
वर्यं तत्त्वाम्येषामधुकर इतास्त्वं सलु कर्तौ ॥ Act I. verse 20.

कुमारो माधवसेनः प्रतिश्रुतसंवन्धो भगोपान्तिकमागच्छन् ।

In the whole drama there is only one passage which indicates something unfavourable in his character. When Dhārinī finds herself caught in the intrigue set up against her by the Vidūṣaka and his accomplices, she rebukes the king saying that it would have been much happier if such ingenuity could be shown in state affairs too.<sup>1</sup> But this is not a well thought out judgment. She makes the statement at a moment of awkward despondency and she meant it more to console her wounded pride than to rebuke the king. But there are indications to show that Dhārinī was fully alive to the king's high sense of duty in state affairs. In the fourth Act, the king was by the side of Dhārinī who was confined to her bed. The Vidūṣaka wanted to get him out. Dhārinī had to be convinced of the reason for the king leaving her at that stage and he was summoned to attend to state matters.<sup>2</sup> This is only an excuse. The real purpose was to take the king to the place where Malavikā was, after her release from imprisonment.

If Agnimitra was devoid of any scruples, he had enough opportunities and occasions to satisfy his base passions. But we find in Kalidāsa's hero no trace of the meanness characteristic of Agnivarṇa described in the nineteenth canto of the Raghuvamśa. There Agnivarṇa throws away all sense of duty to his state.<sup>3</sup> He led the most detestable life, having illicit relations with the maid-servants.<sup>4</sup> But Agnimitra's life was throughout absolutely above rebuke.

In all the works of Kalidāsa we see a harmony worked out between what are normally supposed to be irreconcilable factors

<sup>1</sup> यदि राजकार्येष्वपीदंशुपायनिपुणतर्कपुत्रस्य तदा शोभनं भवेत् ।

<sup>2</sup> एष पुनरमात्यो वाहकः विज्ञापयति— राजकार्यं बहु मन्त्रयितव्यम् । तद्दर्शनेनानु-
ग्रहमिच्छामि— इति ।

<sup>3</sup> इन्द्रियार्थपरिश्रुत्यमल्लभः सोढुमेकमपि स क्षणान्तरम् ।

अन्तरेव विहरन् दिवानिशं न व्यपेक्षत समुत्सुकाः प्रजाः ॥

गौरवाद्यदि जातु मन्त्रिणां दर्शनं प्रकृतिकारितं इदं ।

तद्ग्राह्यविषयवस्तुना केवलेन चरणेन कल्पितम् ॥ verses 6 & 7.

कृतपुष्पशयनोद्धतागृहानेल्य दूतिरुत्तमागदर्शनः ।

अन्वमूत् परिजनाङ्गनारतं सौज्वरोधमयवेषधूतरम् ॥ verse 23.

in this world. The eternally celebrate Kanva is presented as a fond parent. The highest god Śiva is presented as a lover and a bridegroom. Similarly the great warriors Purūravas and Agnimitra are presented as victims of love and as very pliant and obedient husbands in the harem. A hero is a hero only where heroism is appropriate. There are aspects even in the life of a hero where he has to be a normal human being. Submission to the people in the harem in the private life detracts nothing from the greatness of a hero in his public life.

I have tried to show elsewhere that Kālidāsa was a contemporary of Agnimitra.<sup>1</sup> Agnimitra was Kālidāsa's ideal hero. He is to Kālidāsa what Henry V is to Shakespeare. Shakespeare portrays King Henry V in his drama Henry IV as leading a low life and at the same time he gives enough indications of his inner greatness. Later, in his drama Henry V, he portrays his hero as the ideal king.

Similarly in the Mālavikāgnimitra Kālidāsa portrays his ideal hero Agnimitra in his relation to his queens and his love for Mālavikā. At the same time, it is made quite explicit that he was quite alive to his sense of duty to state affairs and that he was a very firm ruler and a brave warrior. First he is described as a human being in the Mālavikāgnimitra; later in his two epics—the Kumārasambhava and the Raghuvamśa—he allegorically portrays his hero as the saviour of India from foreign domination and as the consolidator of the Indian Empire. Both the Kumārasambhava and the Raghuvamśa are political allegories. Some sin committed against the Divine (the Supreme God in the one and Kāmadhenu in the other), its expiation (in the penance of Pārvatī in the one and the propitiation of Nandini in the other) and the consequent birth of a national hero—these form the basic theme in both epics.

The great empire of Candragupta Maurya, the corruption in the life of the kings, the decadence of national life and the downfall of Hinduism in the later Mauryan period, the revival of Hinduism, the purification of the life of the kings, the revival of the national life, all brought about by the efforts of the virtuous Puṣyamitra, the birth of Agnimitra, the re-conquest of the lost portions of the shattered empire and its consolidation, the establishment of a new royal dynasty—these are the historical facts which are allegorically represented in both the epics. In Kumāra and in Raghu, Kālidāsa was really portraying Agnimitra. In my two Papers (1) Allusions to Agnimitra in the works of Kālidāsa<sup>1</sup> and (2) The Historical background of the works of Kālidāsa<sup>2</sup> I have tried to present the parallelism between Agnimitra on one side and the heroes of the two epics on the other side.

<sup>1</sup> My paper in the Annals of Oriental Research of the University of Madras vol. vi. pt. 1—1941. The Bharatavākya in the Mālavikāgnimitra.

---

<sup>1</sup> Annals of Oriental Research of the University of Madras vol. vi. pt. 1—1941.

<sup>2</sup> Indian Historical Quarterly, Calcutta 1942.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF MADHVA DVAITA VEDĀNTA

BY

NAGRAJ RAO

*Śrīman-madhvamate hariḥ paralarāḥ satyam jagat tattvalaḥ
Bhīmā jīvagaṇḍo hareranucarā nīcoccabhūvam gaḍāḥ ।
Muktirnaijasukhānubhūtiramaḷā bhaktiśca tatsādhanam Hyakṣūditritayam pramāṇamakhilūmnūyakaivedyo hariḥ ॥*

—Vyāsarāja

The most powerful philosophic attack on the monism of Śaṅkara is from Madhva. Madhva's Dvaita Vedānta is a pluralistic, theistic and realistic system. He derives most of his philosophical doctrines from the triple texts (the Gītā, Vedānta-sūtras and the Upaniṣads). He openly declares in many of his works that he is the chosen prophet of Lord Viṣṇu commissioned to interpret correctly the sacred texts and refute the misinterpretations foisted thereon by other commentators. Tradition holds the view that Madhva is the third incarnation of Vāyu, and that Vāyu appeared as Hanūman and Bhīma in his first two incarnations. Throughout his works Madhva speaks after the manner of a Messiah with a mission.

Like all other traditional ācāryas Madhva has commented on the triple texts. He wrote two commentaries on the Vedānta-sūtras as well as the Gītā. One of the commentaries on the Vedānta-sūtras is in verse i. e. Anuvyākhyāna. Besides the commentaries on the triple texts, he has ten small independent tracts (prakaraṇas) explaining the different tenets of his system.<sup>1</sup> Madhva has written a great deal besides these works. He has on the whole thirty-seven works to his credit some of them being devotional hymns. The works include a summary account of the Mahābhārata and a commentary on the Bhāgavata. It is claimed that he wrote his bhāṣya after an interview with and at the direction and command of Bādarāyaṇa. Hence it is asserted as authoritative.

<sup>1</sup> Dr. R. Nagaraja Sarma's book 'Reign of Realism' is a running exposition of the ten prakaraṇas of Madhva.

The most prominent post-Madhva thinkers are Jayatīrtha, Vyāsarāja and Rāghavendra. Jayatīrtha's contribution to Dvaita is unique. He has commented on all the works of Madhva excepting a few easy works. He is called the ṭīkācārya (the commentator) of Dvaita Vedānta. His masterpiece is his Nyāya-sudhā, a detailed running commentary on Madhva's Anuvya-khyāna. It is over six hundred pages in length. It is a mistake to call it a commentary. It is the best work on Madhva's philosophy. There is no aspect of Madhva's doctrine that this classic does not discuss. He renounced the world at a very young age and within a period of thirty years raised Dvaita Vedānta to a level of śāstric equality with Advaita. As a dialectician, his powers are most astounding "for beauty of language, brilliance of style, keenness of argument, fairness in reasoning, for refreshing boldness, originality of treatment and fineness of critical acumen, he has few equals." He belongs to the group of great philosophical prose-writers which includes Śaṅkara, Śabara and Vācaspati.

Vyāsarāja was the great logician of Dvaita Vedānta. He fought the scholastic battle with the Advaitin with great vigour. In his famous Nyāyamṛta he has examined all the possible arguments put forward in favour of Advaita by post-Śaṅkara thinkers, and has refuted them in detail. The whole work teems with logical skill. Besides this he has to his credit the polemical treatise on the dialectics of difference entitled Bhedojjīvaṇa. Though he trusted logic as an instrument to demolish rival systems, he did not spare the Nyāya school. In his Turkatūṇḍava he has refuted in detail many a doctrine of the Nyāya system. Besides he wrote a brilliant commentary on Madhva's sūtra-bhāṣya, called Tātparyacandrikā. This commentary covers the first two chapters of the Vedānta-sūtrās.

II

Like all other systems Dvaita Vedānta also has certain epistemological pre-suppositions. Knowledge for Madhva is a relation between a knower and a known object. There is no cognition of an non-existent thing. His theory of truth is akin to the correspondence theory of the Nyāya school. That Jñāna, which cognises the attributes of an object as it is, is truth. That cognition, which cognises the object other than as it is, is error. Even in error there is a presentative counterpart to it in the external world. The deluded individual mistakes one thing for another. In twilight the shell is mistaken for silver. What is shell is taken as silver. This doctrine of error is called abhīnavā anyathā khyātē (taking one thing as another). The absolutely non-existent silver is said to be cognised by the deluded individual. The radical realism of Madhva goes to the extent of affirming the existence of the cognition of the absolute non-existence (atyantāsāt-pratīti).<sup>1</sup> The Nyāya school held the view that the silver cognised in the shell was present in the shop and was indirectly cognised by the perceiver. But Madhva goes a step further and holds that the absolute non-existence of silver itself is cognised in the shell. It is the rigour of his realism that is responsible for his theory of error. For Madhva the test of truth is the cognition of a thing as it is (yathārtham pramāṇam).<sup>2</sup> He admits three pramāṇas, perception, inference and verbal testimony and subsumes the rest under the three. Perception is held in great regard. It is held to be a upajīvyā pramāṇa i. e. the support of other pramāṇas. Perception is a primary means of knowledge and the other two, inference and verbal testimony, are based on this. Inference involves the knowledge of vyūpti and vyūpti being a relation between two invariable things has to be cognised.<sup>3</sup> The relation between word and its sense can only be known after cognising the word. Hence perception is held to be a very important pramāṇa in Dvaita Vedānta.

As for verbal testimony the Vedas (śruti) are held to be impersonal and eternal. Madhva's belief in Vedas is so great that he denies validity even to Lord's words if and when it contradicts the spirit of the Vedas. That is why Madhva rejects the Nyāya argument that the Vedas are written by God. Revelation is the ultimate source in respect of Brahman. Besides the four Vedas, Madhva accepts the authority of some purāṇas, Pāñcarātra āgamas, Mūla Rāmāyaṇa and the epic Mahābhārata. Madhva says as a rule those texts, that are in accord with the prime purport of the Vedas, are valid and those, that are opposed to it, are invalid.

<sup>1</sup> See author's article on 'Error, doubt, and dream', Journal of Oriental research, Vol. XI, parts III and IV.

<sup>2</sup> See author's article on 'Pramāṇa in Madhva's epistemology', Indian Culture—Jan. 1937.

<sup>3</sup> See author's article on 'Inference in Dvaita Vedānta', New Indian Antiquary—Vol. I, No. 8.

Madhva adopts the six strict traditional marks of interpretation and derives the doctrines of his system from the Vedas. He leaves out no portion of the Veda as non-authoritative. He takes the entire Veda as implying a single system of thought. The central purport of the scripture is that Viṣṇu i. e. Nārāyaṇa is the supreme Lord of the Universe. He is not an attributeless and homogeneous stuff of consciousness. He is the abode of infinite auspicious attributes. He is a divya maṅgala vighraha (the most auspicious form). He is the supreme entity and has none above him. He is the sustainer, destroyer, and creator of this universe. There is nothing beyond this saṅga Brahman. The nirguṇa Brahman of Advaita is nothing more than a void. Those scriptural texts, which speak of the Brahman as incomprehensible, are to be understood to mean as referring to the inexhaustible glory of the Lord, and not his unknowability. When the Lord is referred to as being devoid of attributes, it means that he is devoid of inauspicious (or prākṛta) guṇas. He is the very embodiment of bliss and jñāna.

Next to him in rank is Lakṣmī. She is also classified under the head of the dependents, but she has no taint and no birth like other souls. She is also all-pervasive as the Lord. Next to her in rank is Vāyu whose third incarnation is Madhva. Vāyu is the mediator between the Lord and other souls. All the souls are to reach the Lord only through the worship and mediation of Vāyu. The Lord says, 'I take nothing that is not offered through Vāyu'. After Vāyu the rest of the gods and their wives are arranged in an hierarchy. This is technically called the ūra-tanya-krama. We are exhorted to worship the Lord not merely as superior to us, but as the ruler of all the gods. The other gods are to be worshipped according to their ranks as the retinue of the Lord. Worship of a superior deity as an inferior one is said to be fraught with danger.

The existence of the Lord is established through the help of the authority of the scriptures. The scriptures refer to him as the creator, sustainer etc., of the universe. Hence the universe is held to be real. The universe of souls and matter (jāda-jīva-prapañca) are as real as Brahman. If it is contended that the whole universe is unreal, the creator of such a universe would be no master-mind, but would be a mere juggler. The unreality of the universe militates against the omnipotence of the Lord. So Madhva is keen on establishing the reality of the universe. It is his infinite faith in an all-powerful Lord that makes him undertake the dialectical warfare against the Advaitin's doctrine of māyā.

He examines in great detail the position of Advaita and points out that the doctrine of adhyāsa (super-imposition) is not demonstrable in terms of any pramāṇa. Madhva holds that there is no authority whatsoever for the establishment of the doctrine of the illusoriness of the universe. He holds that what the pramāṇas cannot guarantee is not true.

As against the contention that Advaita ascribed a relative type of reality to the universe, Madhva argues that such an ascription assumes what it has not proved. The argument would hold water, after the establishment of the two degrees of reality by the Advaitin and not prior to it. On such grounds, Madhva establishes the ultimate reality of the universe of souls and matter.

III

Once this is granted, we are led to the famous doctrine of 'difference' in Dvaita Vedānta. The things of the world are said to be entirely different from one another; not only are the things of the world different but their attributes too. Difference is foundational to reality. If the ultimate reality of the category of difference is proved, the pluralistic realism of Madhva is automatically established. A scheme of five-fold difference is set forth by Madhva. They are (1) The difference between jīva and Īśvara, (2) between jīva and jīva, (3) jāda (matter) and jāda, (4) jāda and jīva and (5) Īśvara and jāda. Most of the post-Madhva philosophers have attempted to prove the ultimate reality of the category of difference through the dialectical method with the help of inferences. According to Madhva difference is of the very nature of the thing (svarūpa).

The individual souls are held as being eternally different and dependant on the Lord. Identity of the individual soul with Brahman is not the purport of the Vedas as Advaita holds. The souls are all dependent on the Lord for their salvation. Salvation means the removal from the soul of the sheath of ignorance which covers it. Besides this cover there is another cover, which hides the soul from the perception of the Lord. The grace of the Lord dawns on the spiritual aspirant and at the moment the two covers are removed and the soul comes to have a perception of its real svarūpa. The realisation of one's own svarūpa is called liberation (mokṣa).

Salvation or mokṣa is not for one and all. Madhva does not believe in the Advaita doctrine of sarvamukti (universal salvation). Many are called, but few are chosen. Those whom it pleases the Lord to save are saved. We are not saved only because we have merits. Salvation involves two factors, the grace of the Lord and the merit of the soul. On the part of the soul he has to strive hard and achieve the jñāna that Lord Viṣṇu is the supreme god and that salvation lies through the path which Madhva has indicated. Performance of scripture-ordained duties and intense devotion to the Lord are prescribed. But this devotion is not emotional bhakti. It is the result of detachment to the things of the world and attachment to god. Bhakti is defined as that kind of attachment to the Lord based on a complete understanding of the Lord, which transcends the love of one's own self and possessions and which remains unshaken in death and in difficulty.<sup>1</sup>

Such a devotion is not born out of ignorance. It is born through detachment and jñāna.

The practice of bhakti saves only a few select individuals. All the human souls of the world are broadly divided under three heads (a) Mukti-yogya, (b) Nitya-saṁsārīn and (c) Tamo-yogya. The classification of the souls is based on the intrinsic nature of the souls. The sāttvika souls are of good nature and they are destined to attain mokṣa i. e., the feet of the Lord. They have true knowledge of the nature of the Lord and reach him through their bhakti. The Nityasamsārins are of mixed nature, and they dangle between heaven and earth. To them there is no permanent place of stay. According to one section there is a place reserved for them too where they have a sort of experience which is a mixture of pain and pleasure. Others hold that there is no such place. The Tamoyogyas are destined to eternal damnation. Their future is in a hell called Andhatamas, from which there is no return for them.

<sup>1</sup> See Jayasirtha's Nyāya sūtrā.

Madhva holds the dogmatic view that the Tamoyogyas are never saved at all. The intrinsic nature of the souls are unalterable. Moral effort and education can never alter the svarūpa of the soul. The Tamoyogyas can never be changed into a sāttvika jīva. This doctrine is not calculated to egg on individuals to moral enterprise. Madhva sets a limit to the abilities of the soul. But it must be borne in mind that the svarūpa of the soul is not known till the time of release. It is in order to make each soul perceive its nature that the Lord is said to bring the souls into life. God helps each soul to work according to its svarūpa.

Even in mokṣa the individual souls that are released are not all identical in respect of the enjoyment of their bliss. They are all free from sorrow and births.

The contention of the Dvaitin against the Advaitin can be set forth thus: (a) The Advaitin's Brahman is non-different from the śūnya of the Buddhist, (b) the world of matter and souls is ultimately real, (c) the individual soul is absolutely and eternally different from and dependent on Brahman, (d) the Brahman of the śrūtis is not attributeless (nirguṇa) but is the abode of the auspicious attributes, and (e) the import of śruti is not in tune with Advaita.

HISTORICAL NOTICES OF THE LOKĀYATAS

BY

B. A. SALETORE

In the vast field of Indian philosophy and culture, the Lokāyatas occupy a prominent place. Two divergent views have been advocated concerning them. According to Macdonell and others, they were atheists given to sensuality, materialistic in outlook, outside the pale of Hinduism, and on the whole, a sort of a secret society of nihilists.<sup>1</sup> Macdonell maintains that they may "have had many secret followers in India down to the present day," and that Brhaspati was the "mythical founder of their school."<sup>2</sup> As opposed to this view is that of Benoy Kumar Sarkar, who would classify the Lokāyatas not among atheists but among philosophical materialists.<sup>3</sup>

The latter view seems more probable than the former, although it has to be admitted that the Lokāyatas have always had a very strong touch of atheism about them. Atheism may be traced to the Vedic times.<sup>4</sup> Macdonell opines that unbelief in the Vedas was common to the Dasyus.<sup>5</sup> It is not unlikely that this unbelief may have been in turn responsible for the questioning spirit of the later times, especially when a large body of the non-Aryans became aryanised in thought and culture. The age of the Upanisads is characterised by a sense of enquiry centring round the divine principle. This spirit of enquiry was not atheism itself,<sup>6</sup> although it certainly served as a source of

<sup>1</sup> Macdonell, A History of Sanskrit Literature, pp. 405-407.

<sup>2</sup> Ibid., p. 406. Cf. Amulyacaran Sen, Schools and Sects in Jaina literature, pp. 22-23. (Calcutta, 1931).

<sup>3</sup> B. K. Sarkar, Creative India, pp. 55-60. (Lahore, 1937).

<sup>4</sup> "They ask, Where is He? Or verily they say of him, He is not," Rgveda, II, 12, 5. (Trans. Griffith). Cf. Weber, A Literary History of India, p. 128.

<sup>5</sup> Macdonell, Ibid., p. 153.

<sup>6</sup> As Dr. H. C. Ray, maintains in the Indian Culture, VI. No. 2, p. 243. Why the authors of Upanisads give the impression of being atheistic in pessimism for later Indian philosophers.<sup>1</sup> This is specially noticeable when we come to the later Upaniṣads, the most prominent of which Maitrāyaṇīya (otherwise called Maitrāyaṇa) Upaniṣad contains references to anti-Vedic heretical schools.<sup>2</sup> But the Maitrāyaṇīya Upaniṣad, which belongs to the school of the Black Yajur Veda, seems to have been composed in an age which was nearer to the classical Sanskrit literature than to the Vedas, and was decidedly a post-Buddhist work.<sup>3</sup>
(continued on the next page)

The sixth century B. C. which produced the great teachers Buddha and Mahāvira, was essentially an era of spiritual speculation, doubt, and controversy.<sup>4</sup> Since the Maitrāyaṇīya Upaniṣad contains distinct allusions to the Buddhists as heretics,<sup>5</sup> and since it is silent as regards the Lokāyatas as a powerful group of pessimistic thinkers, it may not be too much to presume nature is due, perhaps, to the fact that the Upaniṣads embody the teachings of various authors of different periods. Winternitz, History of Sanskrit Literature, I, pp. 243-246. This was also the opinion of the late Sir R. G. Bhandarkar, Vaiṣṇavism, Śaivism, and Minor Religious Systems, p. 1. (Strassburg, 1913).

( continued from the previous page )

<sup>1</sup> Winternitz, ibid., I, p. 264. Dr. H. C. Ray maintains that atheism appears for the first time in the Chāndogya Upaniṣad, III, 17, 4. Ind. Cult., op. cit. But, as already pointed out by Winternitz, there is merely the differentiation between the true and the false Ātman mentioned in the Chāndogya Upaniṣad, VII, 7, 12, and passim. In that Upaniṣad as well as in the Kauṣītaki Upaniṣad, IV, and in the Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, II, 1, the philosophers "endeavoured to fathom the divine principle." Winternitz, ibid., I, pp. 245, 252-255.

<sup>2</sup> Macdonell, ibid., p. 230.

<sup>3</sup> Winternitz, op. cit., p. 264.

<sup>4</sup> In a later Jaina work styled Nandisūtra, 9, 10, 22, Mahāvira is praised as the moon who always vanquished the Rāhu of Ākriyavāda and as the destroyer of the lustre of other schools. According to Dr. R. S. Shama Sastry, the Nandisūtra was "composed somewhere about the first century A.D." ( Mysore Archaeological Report for 1927, p. 27 ). It is doubtful whether Devardhigaṇi alias Devavācaka, the author of Nandisūtra, can be placed in the first century A. D. Could not the school of Ākriyavāda mentioned in that work be the Jaina heretical schools themselves which seem to have sprung up in great numbers even in Mahāvira's time? Read Sen, op. cit., passim, for quite a number of such schools.

<sup>5</sup> Winternitz, op. cit., p. 264, and note ( 1 ) a

either that Cārvāka, the famous champion of the Lokāyata school is to be placed immediately after the age to which the Maitrāyaṇīya Upaniṣad is to be ascribed, or that he had just emerged into the limelight in the sixth century B. C. itself. In any case, there is little ground to assert that the Lokāyatas were earlier than the sixth century B. C.

When we come to the age of Kauṭilya, however, we find that they had already acquired sufficient celebrity. For he refers to them and to the school of the famous Brhaspati seven times in the course of his Arthasāstra.<sup>1</sup> That is to say, by the fourth century B. C. to which age we have to ascribe the Arthasāstra,<sup>2</sup> the school of Brhaspati was an acknowledged school of Hindu political thought.<sup>3</sup> We may, therefore, assume that the development of the Lokāyata school took place after the sixth century B. C. and before the fourth century B. C.

For an account of the doctrines of the Lokāyatas we cannot look to Brhaspati's nītisāra for guidance, since of his manual on polity only an incomplete account has been found.<sup>4</sup> Modern scholars, therefore, cite the famous Mādhavācārya Vidyāranya's Sarvadarśanasamgraha (SDS)<sup>5</sup> as the only source of information

<sup>1</sup> Kauṭilya, Arthasāstra, pp. 5, 28, 62, 201, 217, 403. (Shama Shastry's ed. Mysore, 1929, 3rd ed.).

<sup>2</sup> Winternitz's date third or fourth century A. D. for the Arthasāstra, (Winternitz, ibid., p. 519, n. 3.) is inadmissible. I intend to discuss this point in a subsequent paper.

<sup>3</sup> We have, therefore, to modify Dr. Benoy Kumar's statement that the mediaeval Sakra authors were the earliest to give a place of honour to the Lokāyata school. Creative India, pp. 55, 56. Likewise we have to dispense with the assertion of Macdonell that Brhaspati was the mythical founder of the Lokāyata School, and that there was "a touch of irony in that name." Macdonell, op. cit., p. 406.

<sup>4</sup> Edited and translated by Dr. F. W. Thomas and Pandit B. Dutt, Brhaspati's Arthasāstra. Panjab Oriental Series, no. 1. That there must have been a complete nītisāra of Brhaspati is evident, as has been pointed out by Winternitz, (op. cit., I, p. 425), from the didactic passages in the Mañbhārata (Books III, V, VI, XI, and XIV). Winternitz would place the law-books of Brhaspati "Centuries later than the Gautama Dharmaśāstras." Ibid., p. 519, n. (1).

<sup>5</sup> Edited by Pandit T. Tarkavācaspati (Calcutta, 1872), and translated by Cowell and Gough, London, 1894. (2nd ed.). According to Sarkar, the Italian scholar Pixagalli traces the word nītika to the Maitr. Up. Creative India, p. 56.

pertaining to the doctrines of the Lokāyata school. Sarker has attempted to connect the Brhaspati school with the Vidyāraṇya philosophy. But two points which still remain to be answered are the following:—(a) Why does Madhvācārya mention in such detail the Lokāyata school, and (b) Whether he wrote about an imaginary school of materialists.

The historical notices of the Lokāyatas, which we are going to enumerate presently, will help us to answer these two queries. The remarks made herein are based on literary notices and the evidence of contemporary epigrapha. From both the sources we learn that the Lokāyatas were more common in western India, especially in the region of Karnāṭaka proper, than elsewhere; that they possessed five well-known centres in Karnāṭaka from where they radiated their influence; and that they were very vigorous from the tenth till the fifteenth century A. D.

In other parts of southern India, as, for instance, in the Tamil land, the Lokāyatas were practically unknown.<sup>1</sup> But in Karnāṭaka they had five centres of learning. These were Guṇḍerī Begūru, Baḷligāmve, Somanāthapura, and Nāgarakhanda. Epigraphs discovered in these five places give us quite a number of interesting details about the Lokāyatas. In addition to these direct references to the Lokāyatas, we learn many details about their activities from the epigraphs of other centres, which deal with the Jains and the Hindus, some of whose great teachers are described as scoring victories over the champions of the Lokāyata-mata.

Of the five famous centres of learning which are associated with the Lokāyatas, the earliest is Guṇḍerī, Hoḷalkere tāluka, Chitaldroog district, Mysore State. A stone inscription found midway between the village of Guṇḍerī and that of Maḷṇahalli, and dated A. D. 968, relates the following interesting information:—That the suzerain was the Rāṣṭrakūṭa monarch Akāḷavarṣa, Kannaradeva (Kṛṣṇa III), under whom the Mahāsāmanta Śūdrakayya was governing the Kadambaḷiga Thousand Province. This viceroy on the specified date made grants of land (given in detail) in the Lokāyata city of Guṇḍeri within the limits of Kuravādi 300, and of lands in other places, to the priest named Divya-lingi-bhaḷāra (bhaṭṭāraka) after rubbing and washing the latter's feet. That the Lokāyata city of Guṇḍeri (Lokāyata-voḷalam-Guṇḍeriyol) was a Hindu city is proved from the statements made in the same epigraph. We are told that the gift was made by Śūdrakayya for the god Siḍḍiśvara of the temple of that name in Guṇḍeri itself. This temple had been constructed by one Siḍḍilanka Kāma. The grant thus made by the Kadamba viceroy Śūdrakayya was enhanced by a Sinda prince named Kerasinga Nanniya Singa, who granted the nelavāra-samaya (a kind of a tax pertaining to land) of Lokāyata-voḷal and of some other specified lands to the same priest of Guṇḍeri by name Divya-lingi-bhaḷāra. And so that no one might cause any damage to the gift, the Sinda prince had the following post-script inscribed:—"This dharma of the Sindas, whosoever is of the Sinda-vamsa should maintain."<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Read C. V. Narayana Ayyar, Saivism in South India, p. 215. While other heretics are met with in classical Tamil Literature, the Lokāyatas do not figure at all in the works of the Saṅgham age.

In the middle of the tenth century A. D. therefore the Lokāyatas could boast of a city which was all their own—a city of which the patrons were the Kadamba viceroy of the Rāstrakūṭa monarch and the prince of the Sinda royal house. The fact that some of the most important citizens like Kākambala Kambayya, the Prabhus (lords) of the (Kadambalige) Thousand Province, and the representatives of the fifty-eight agrahāras (Brahman endowment-villages) were witnesses to the grant thus made by the provincial governor Śūdrakayya, prove beyond doubt that the Lokāyata city of Guṇḍeri was of great consequence in the middle of the tenth century A. D. Further, the fact of the grant having been made to the god Siḍḍiśvara (now called Śvara) of the same city shows that the Lokāyatas, far from being considered as a sect outside the orthodox Hindu circles, were definitely within the Hindu fold.

The next prominent centre of the Lokāyatas was Begūru, Shikarpura taluka, Shīmoga district, Mysore State. This was essentially a Brahman centre (agrahāra). In the last quarter of the eleventh century A. D. it was noted for its liberal outlook. Two stone inscriptions found near the Mallikārjuna temple of

<sup>1</sup> Epigraphia Carnatica, XI, Hl. 23, p. 118.

Begūru itself, are of peculiar interest in this connection. The earlier of them is dated A. D. 1085. It relates that in the reign of the Western Cālukya king Tribhuvanamalla Deva (i. e. the great Vikramāṅka or Vikramāditya), there lived the Brahman named Appaṇa Bhaṭṭa, the son of Nārāyaṇa Bhaṭṭa, and the grandson of Soviyapa Bhaṭṭa. He was the manager of the Brahman village of Kolḷagara. In that year (A. D. 1085) he presented the Brahmans of Begūru with fifty matta of land in a specified area. The recipients of this gift were altogether 3,000 in number. They are highly praised in the record for their austerities, and among the many qualifications which marked them was the following—they were “established in the practices of the Maheśvaras, Vaiṣṇavas and other creeds; acquainted with the tenets of the Nyāya, Vaiśeṣika, Lokāyata, Sāṃkhya, Bauddha, Mīmāṃsā, and other systems of logic,” and worshippers of the god Mallikārjuna.<sup>1</sup>

Four years later (A. D. 1089), in the reign of the same distinguished Western Cālukya monarch Vikramāditya, another citizen named Caṭṭagosi, the son of Kāḷa Cāmuṇḍa of Amba, made another gift of twenty-five kamma of land in a specified area, also to the same learned company of Brahmans numbering altogether three thousand. And once again they are praised as having been “skilled in the Mīmāṃsā, Lokāyata, Bauddha, Sāṃkhya, Vaiśeṣika, and other śāstras.”<sup>2</sup> Evidently in the eleventh century A. D. the Brahmans of Begūru, and along with them, we may suppose, the rest of the Hindu world, did not think it un-Hindu like to study the Lokāyata doctrines in the orthodox circles of their famous agrahāras.

We pass on now to the third centre-Baḷḷigāmve, also in the same Shikarpura taluka of the Mysore State. Baḷḷigāmve (mod. Balgami) was a celebrated Brahman centre, with a great tradition of learning behind it. There were five well known maṭhas in that city. We are however concerned only with one of these that belonging to the Saktīpariṣe in the Mūvara-koṇṇaya-saṃtati, a Lākulīśa maṭha. Someśvara Pandita was the guru of that maṭha in A. D. 1103. The inscription dated in that year relates the following :—That he was the caitra (or spring; season to the mango tree Akalanka, a moon to the ocean Lokāyata, a regent, elephant to the earth Sāṃkhya, a pearl ornament for the conch-like neck of the lady Mīmāṃsā, a son to the lotus Sugata—such was the fame won by the logician Someśvara-sūri, the leader of the Naiyāyikas.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Ep. Car., VII. Sk. 16, p. 42.

<sup>2</sup> Ibid., Sk. 14, p. 41.

The Lokāyatas continued to be powerful in the thirteenth century A. D. Their centre now was on the banks of the Kāveri itself. This was "the mine of learning" Somanāthapura called in the inscription dated A. D. 1268 Somanāthanagarī, which "shone as an ornament in the world." The foundation of this agrahāra is attributed in the same record to General Somanātha. Its praise is thus sung in the same record :— "Even the parrots there being in some places filled with nyāya and nourished upon mīmāṃsā, in some places assembled together arguing in the severest terms of logic, in some places discussing grammar, sacrifices and logic."<sup>2</sup>

In this learned city lived the councillor to General Somanātha, by name Gaṅgādharāryya, "an abode of splendour." He is praised in these terms—"A sun to the darkness the prevailing Cārvāka and Bauddha doctrines, in logic an independent authority, an embodiment of Agastya in ability to swallow up the shining Jaina ocean."<sup>2</sup>

To the list of the four famous centres of the Lokāyatas mentioned above must be added another well-known name that of Nāgarakhaṇḍa in the Shimoga district of the Mysore State. The best known city in Nāgarakhaṇḍa was Bhāraṅgi, where lived in A. D. 1415 the learned Jaina teacher Abhaya Siddhāntadeva, "fully versed in siddhānta." The inscription dated in that year relates that "his mind was bent on shutting up the Bauddha speakers." His senior disciple was Bullappa Gauda, about whom the same epigraph relates the following :—Having overcome the Sāṃkhyas, Yaugas, Cārvākas, Bauddhas, Bhāṭṭas, and Prābhākaras, who other speakers can withstand him? This learned bhauya or Jains, we may note in passing, died in A. D. 1465, according to the orthodox Jaina method of samādhi.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Ibid., Sk. 98, p. 64.

<sup>2</sup> Ep. Car., XI, Dg. 36, p. 45.

From the above inscriptions it is clear that during the five centuries ranging from the tenth to the fifteenth century A. D. the influence of the Lokāyatas was widespread and continuous, especially because they could boast of five centres which cherished the study of the doctrines of Brhaspati. We have now to prove our assertion that the Lokāyatas were, indeed, powerful by citing references to them in the records of disputants who belonged to the rival Hindu or Jaina faiths. These epigraphs range from the middle of the tenth century A. D. to the days of the great Vidyāranya Mādhavācārya himself.

In the middle of the tenth century A. D. we have a renowned Jaina disputant named Vādighaṅgala Bhaṭṭa whose achievements I have already enumerated elsewhere. He is said to have been a great logician, having mastered the three schools of logic and the Lokāyata, Sāṃkhya, and the Bauddha systems of philosophy. Since the epigraph which is dated A. D. 974, relates that he was the guru of the Gaṅga king Marasimha, who reigned from A. D. 961 till A. D. 974, we have to assign the Jaina teacher Vādighaṅgala Bhaṭṭa also to the same period.<sup>2</sup>

In the first quarter of the eleventh century A. D. another celebrated teacher but of the Lakulīśa order, by name Vadi Rudragana, is described thus in a record dated A. D. 1036. "A saw for cutting down the Lokāyata great tree." That this praise which was bestowed upon Vadi Rudragana Paṇḍita was well deserved is further proved in another stone inscription dated A. D. 1042, which relates that this head of the Parvatāvali Kālāmukha ascetics was "in the Kapāda, Kapabhuk; in the Brhaspati creed, Vācaspati; in the Kapila doctrine, Kapila himself; in the Sugata śāstra, the guru of the Sugatas; in the knowledge of the Mīmāṃsā, Jaimini-muni; in Nyāya, Akṣapāda; in the brilliant groups of grammar, a manifest Īśvara; in Śaiva śāstra, present Śiva," etc.<sup>3</sup>

It was not only teachers of particular creeds who are thus

<sup>1</sup> Ibid., VIII, Sb. 329, 330, pp. 58-59.

<sup>2</sup> Salstorp, Medieval Jainism, pp. 26-28.

<sup>3</sup> Ep. Carn., VIII. Sa. 108 (bis), p. 113.

50 [ Annals, B. O. R. I. ]

described as having been proficient in the doctrines of the Lokāyatas; we have evidence of secular rulers as well, who were well versed in the teachings of Bṛhaspati. An example of such a ruler is that of the Pāṇḍya prince Vira Pāṇḍya about whom in a record dated A. D. 1148 we have the following--That he was possessed of many titles one of which was thus—Lokāyata-mata-vicāra-catura-devatācārya. We may note by the way that this scion of the Ucciani Pāṇḍya royal house was well known both for his military prowess and his liberality.<sup>1</sup>

The distinction of meeting the Lokāyatas in disputation, however, seems to have been more the privilege of the Jaina teachers than of the rest of the teachers and princes of the land. It is because of this that we find quite a number of Jaina sages still proficient in the Lokāyata doctrines and still determined at confuting the Cārvākas. Thus the great Jaina teacher Gopanandī is reputed to have overcome the Cārvākas in a record dated A. D. 1094.<sup>2</sup> Guru Gopanandī was like an infuriated elephant to the Sāṃkhya, Bhautika, Bauddha, Vaiṣṇava, and Cārvāka professors. Indeed, this remarkable Jaina teacher's success as a disputant seems to have become very popular. It is probably this which made the scribe of the record dated A. D. 1100 sing his praise in the following interesting manner.

"This lord of ascetics, Gopanandī, attained celebrity being praised by the people with joy as a bee at the lotus feet of Jina, as the destroyer of the pride of Cupid, as the eradicator of karma, as dear to the heart of Sarasvatī, as a thunderbolt to the mountain, the crowd of disputants, as a beautiful receptacle of (the praise of) learned men, as the celestial gem to the blessed, as proficient in all sciences, and as a Brahman in poetry. O Sāṃkhya, do not oppose, but be silent; O Bhautika, do not become inflated with pride; O wise Bauddha, do not show your head, be off, be off; O Vaiṣṇava, conceal yourself, conceal yourself; O sweet-tongued Cārvāka, give up the pride of the power of your speech; will the intoxicated elephant Gopanandī, the chief of sages, tolerate your arrogance? Ah! the scent-elephant Gopanandī, resplendent like the elephants of the regions, chased away (opponents) in the paths of the six schools of logic, so that Jaimini was stunned, the Vaiśeṣika tripped and fled, Sugata stopped and stamped the seal, Akṣapāda eagerly put on the bangles, the Lokāyata lost his pride, and the Sāṃkhya took refuge."<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Ibid., XI, Dg. 41, text, p. 119.

<sup>2</sup> Saletore, op. cit., p. 76.

Another Jaina guru who won victories over the Cārvākas was Guṇacandra-deva, whose exploits are thus sung in a record dated A. D. 1115:—"Give up your titles, Oh Sāṃkhya; trust not in your power of speech, crouch down and be quiet, Chārbbāka (Cārvāka); Naiyāyika, raise not your head, keep low; lo! here he comes and will simply disgrace you-Guṇacandra-deva, without fault, a lion to the elephants opponent speakers."<sup>2</sup>

It was, indeed, an age of great Jaina gurus. Soon after came another remarkable Jaina sage Gaṇḍavimuktasiddhānta-deva. As a record dated A. D. 1129 says, "the world renowned Gaṇḍavimukta Siddhāntadeva" was a "sun who was an enemy of the darkness, ignorance; an enemy to the waterlilies, the Śākyas (or Bauddhas); the cause of destruction of the moonlight, the Cārvākas," etc.<sup>3</sup>

An equally powerful opponent of the Cārvākas was the Jaina guru Divākaranandī, who as we are told in a record dated A. D. 1163, was "a submarine fire to the ocean the maintainers of the Cārvāka system."<sup>4</sup>

About the same time in A. D. 1167-8 there was in northern India a Brahman named Somarāja, who was "an eye of the teaching of Akṣapāda and the Cārvākaviśīṣṭamāna." This was during the reign of the Haihaya king Jājalladeva II of the United and Central Provinces.<sup>5</sup>

But the Lokāyatas were more common in southern India, where the Jaina teachers were still engaged in defeating them. Thus in A. D. 1176 "the celebrated Dāmanandī Traiśīdyā Munīśvara," was well-versed in logic, grammar, philosophy, literature, and other sciences. The same record describes him thus,-

<sup>1</sup> Ep. Car., II. p. 34.

<sup>2</sup> Ibid., VII. Sb. 57, p. 22.

<sup>3</sup> Ibid., VI. Mg. 22, p. 63.

<sup>4</sup> Ibid., II. no. 63, p. 15.

<sup>5</sup> H. C. Ray, Dynastic History of Northern India, I. p. 812, n. (2).

"A sun to the lotus-plant the Jaina religion; a gale to the cloud the Naiyāyikas; a terrible thunderbolt to the mountain the Cārvākas; an Agastya to the ocean the Bauddhas; a lion in breaking open the head of the scent-elephant the Mīmāṃsakas."<sup>1</sup>

In A. D. 1200 the Jaina teacher Śrīddharadeva Traividya-cakreśvara is praised thus in a record of that date: That he was an elephant to the lotuses that were Mīmāṃsakas; a lion to the elephants that were the Cārvāka disputants; a Garuḍa to to serpents that were Sāṃkhya, and a stormy wind to the clouds that were the learned Bauddhas."<sup>2</sup>

A formidable opponent to the Cārvākas in the last quarter of the fourteenth century appeared in the person of the Jaina guru Cārukīrti Paṇḍita. A record dated A. D. 1398 informs us that when Cārukīrti Paṇḍita started on his disputations, his rivals fled. "O Cārvāka, forsake your pride; O Sāṃkhya, give up the row of your titles before hand; O Bhāṭṭa, you are beaten by (his) innumerable brilliant resources; O Kaṇāda, abandon speedily and for ever your high conceit; the cause of your grief; for the renowned Sīṃhanārya (i. e. Cārukīrti Paṇḍita) comes striking down other disputants."<sup>3</sup>

The above examples refer mostly to Jaina sages from the tenth century A. D. to the end of the fourteenth century A. D. We have yet to explain how the Lokāyatas came to be associated with the Advaita philosophers of the pontificate of which Vidyāranya Mādhavācārya was the head. That is to say, we have to explain why and how this great Advaita teacher came to write a detailed account of the Lokāyatas in his SDS. Śrīṅgerī, the famous seat of Śaṅkarācārya, was fortunate in having over it three remarkable teachers in quick succession. These were Vidyātīrtha, Bhāratīrtha, and Vidyāranya Mādhavācārya. Of the second Bhāratīrtha, whom Dr. M.H. Krishna makes the younger brother of Vidyāranya before taking śaiṅgyāsa,<sup>4</sup> we have the following praise in a kaḍita dated A. D. 1381:—"Worship the

<sup>1</sup> Ep. Car., II, no. 66, p. 23.

<sup>2</sup> K. G. Kundangar, Inscriptions in Northern Karnataka and the Kolhapur State, p. 166.

<sup>3</sup> Ep. Car., II, no. 254, p. 114.

<sup>4</sup> Mysore Archaeological Report for 1933, p. 228. Of course this is based upon the work called Guruvamśakāvyā.

great ascetic named Bhāratīrtha, who breaks the doctrine of Bhāṭṭa ( Kumārila ) who makes the logicians ( followers of the Tarka school ) skilled in eloquent discourses faint, who tosses up the Bauddhas, who reduces to power in no time the teachings of the Kṣaparakas ( i. e. the Jainas ), who demolishes in assemblies the powerful doctrines of Guru ( i. e. of the Prabhākara school ), who cuts short the Cārvākas, and who establishes the Advaita school. " 1

The above helps us to explain why Vidyāranya came to notice the Lokāyata doctrines in such detail in his SDS. I have already shown elsewhere that Vidyārtha Śrīpāda was the head of Śrīṅgerī maṭha till June the 14th 1375, and that Vidyāranya Mādhvācārya came to Śrīṅgerī only in October 1375 as the head of that pontificate. 2 For about five months Bhāratīrtha seems to have been the guru of the Śrīṅgerī maṭha. It was from him that Vidyāranya must have learned a great deal about the Lokāyatas, who, as is amply proved from the many details we have cited above, were native to the soil of Karnaṭaka for more than five centuries. Their continual and powerful influence had given them an assured place among the philosophers of the land; and Vidyāranya seems merely to have reflected the esteem in which the Lokāyatas at least in Karnaṭaka were held, when he opened his work styled SDS with a chapter on their doctrines. It seems certain that, far from being a secret society of profane thinkers, the Lokāyatas were a most vigorous body of philosophers, whose presence was acknowledged with respect both by the Hindus and the Jainas for more than five centuries.

1 Ibid., p. 219. See also MAR for 1916, p. 56.

2 Salatore, Journal of the Andhra Historical Society, IX, Part 4, pp. 41-42.

THE SŪTRAS OF BĀDARĀYANA

BY

B. N. Krishnamurti Sarma

The Sūtras of Bādarāyana are the earliest aphoristic manual of a 'system' of Vedānta, that has come down to us. Internal evidence shows that there had been other attempts to reduce the conflicting speculative utterances of the Vedas and the Upaniṣads to some order and evolve a single system of thought out of them. Jaimini, Bādari, Āśmarathya, etc., are some of the names which occur in the Sūtras of Bādarāyana; but we cannot say if any or all of them had traversed the entire field of metaphysical system-building or had contented themselves merely with partial aspects thereof. The work of Bādarāyana seems, however, to have eclipsed others of its kind.

As a full-fledged Darśana, this work has its two sides of constructive exposition (स्वपक्षव्यापन) and dialectical refutation of those systems (परपक्षनिराकृति) whose tenets are likely to challenge its exclusive claims to metaphysical satisfyingness.

ii

The date of the Vedānta Sūtras is uncertain. The problem of successive interpolations into the original nucleus of the Sūtras, raised by some scholars, would complicate matters still further. In their present form the Sūtras are clearly post-Buddhistic,<sup>1</sup> and seem to be acquainted with a number of orthodox and heretical schools.<sup>2</sup> That they were cast in the mould of Brahmanical orthodoxy is clear from the ban on the study of the Vedas by the Sūtras<sup>3</sup> and their attitude of quiet approval to Vedic sacrifices,<sup>4</sup> which deserve to be contrasted with the Buddhist and Sāṃkhya<sup>5</sup> aversion to the same. They may ten-

<sup>1</sup> ii, 2, 26-32.

<sup>2</sup> ii, 2.

<sup>3</sup> i, 3, 36-38.

<sup>4</sup> iii, 1, 27.

<sup>5</sup> हृदयदातुमविकः सङ्गविहङ्गद्विसमाप्तिश्चयवृत्तः ॥ (Sāṃkhya Kārikā, 2).

tatively be assigned to the first two centuries of the Christian era.

III

Despite their annoying brevity the Sūtras disclose a firm theistic background not only in their scheme of contents but in their wording and drift of argument. They are arranged into four chapters, Samanvaya, Avirodha, Sādhana and Phala, of four quarters (pāda) each. The first chapter opens by enjoining a metaphysical quest of Brahman (for the attainment of Mokṣa). The second sūtra defines Brahman as the Being from whom the creation, preservation and dissolution of the Universe proceed. The third shows a partiality for revealed religion when it affirms that God can be known only through Scripture. The objection that Scripture speaks not only of the Brahman but of several other principles as well, such as Pradhāna, Ākāśa, Vaiśvānara, as responsible for world-creation is set aside by the fourth sūtra which provides for the attunement of such opposing texts in Brahman by means of an elaborate process of textual synthesis called Samanvaya in the course of practically the rest of the first chapter, which therefore takes the name of Samanvayādhyāya. The second chapter meets objections brought against the thesis of God's authorship of the Universe and refutes a good many anti-theistic theories in an indirect attempt at strengthening the central position of the Sūtrakāra. It also gives an account of the nature of the world's dependence on God. From ii, 3, 35 onwards there are interesting discussions about the nature of the soul, its attributes, and its relation to God. The third chapter expounds the ways and means (sādhana) of realisation. The last deals with the fruits of Brahma-jijñāsa, gives an elaborate account of the two ways of exit, the Devayāna and the Pitṛyāna, the intricacies of the theological problem of Laya (Absorption), the benefits of lordliness accruing to the released, and the scope and extent of such sovereignty.

In all this there is hardly any room for a Monistic philosophy. The second sūtra defines the Brahman as the author of the Universe, not surely an unreal one. Dialectical quibblings apart, the thesis of Brahman's knowability through scripture alone (i, 1, 3) is opposed to the Advaitic theory of the self-luminosity of Brahman (same as unknowability) which is defined as अवेद्यत्वे सति अपरोक्षव्यवहार योग्यत्वम्" (Citsukha, Tattvapradīpikā, Bombay, 1915, p. 9). The arduous task of "Samanvaya" can hardly have a meaning if the Brahman were really and absolutely beyond the pale of words (avācya).

The kind of Samanvaya projected and carried out by the Sūtrakāra in annexing the numerous texts that associate other agencies like Vaiśvānara, Ākāśa.....to the sphere of the Brahman, to the exclusion of the other principles, is a clear proof that he cannot at all be supporting a ब्रह्मपरिणामवाद. If the Universe with everything in it were the modification of Brahman, there is no point in the restriction of texts to Brahman and the elimination of Vaiśvānara, Ākāśa etc. from the sphere of inquiry.

iv

The Sūtrakāra takes great pains to refute Buddhistic Idealism which regards the world as a mental projection and the Śūnyavāda which looks upon it as a void, thus affirming an intensely realistic attitude.<sup>1</sup> Under the sūtra: वैषम्याच्च न स्वप्नादिवत् (ii, 3, 29), even a confirmed Monist like Śaṅkara, is forced to forget his own mental reservations and observe that the "objects of the waking state are not similarly stultified at any stage."<sup>2</sup>

v

The Sūtrakāra is of opinion that man is a real and free agent though not altogether an independent one: कर्ता शास्त्रार्थवत्त्वात्; परानुत्पद्यते: (ii, 3, 33; 41). The Supreme and the Individual dwell in one and the same body but the former is not subject to the evils and imperfections of life. There lies His superiority: संभोगप्राप्ति-

<sup>1</sup> "The author of the sūtras could not have refuted the Sāṅkhya and discussed the theories of creation so seriously, if he had held that the world was an appearance in which case its creatorship is out of the question." S. Radhakrishnan, Indian Philosophy, ii, p. 443.

<sup>2</sup> मैत्रेय जागरितोपलब्धं वस्तु कस्यांचिदप्यवस्थायां बाधते। In the second volume of his History of I. Phil., Prof. Das Gupta makes clear how on many occasions Śaṅkara "tries to wriggle out of the sūtras by introducing parenthetical remarks which are often inconsistent with the general drift of his own commentary and the context of the sūtras as well as their purpose and meaning so far as it can be made out from such a context". ii, p. 44. See also the same Professor's remarks on pp. 42, 43. op. cit.

रिति चेन्न वैशेष्यात्, (i, 2, 8). He deals out punishments and rewards according to one's deserts (कर्मसापेक्ष) and cannot, therefore, be deemed guilty of partiality or pitilessness, in having ordered the world as we see it (ii, 1, 35). Man's higher nature has hidden on account of his neglect of God. When he wakes up from this estrangement and turns to God for succour, he is freed : परामि- थ्यानात् तिरोहितं ततो ह्यस्य बन्धविपर्ययो (iii, 2, 5).

vi

The majesty of God is unutterable, inconceivable : विवाक्षित-
गुणोपपत्तेश्च ; सर्वधर्मोपपत्तेश्च ; आत्मनि चैवं विचित्राश्च हि ; सुखविशिष्टाभिधानादेव च (i, 2, 2 ; ii, 1, 37 ; ii, 1, 28 ; and i, 2, 15). The attributes of God are both negative and positive : अदृश्यत्वादियुगको धर्मोक्तः (i, 2, 15). He can be both the subject and object of His own cognition : ईक्षतिकर्मव्यपदेशात् सः (i, 3, 13). The author of the Sūtras seems inclined to interpret texts which declare the individual to be a "part" (amśa) of the Supreme, in a dualistic sense : अंशो नानाव्यपदेशात् (ii, 3, 43), अत एव चोपमा सूर्यकाविवत् (iii, 2, 18). From the wording of the sūtra, 'नाना' appears to be synonymous with 'अंश'. नानाव्यपदेश is the same as नानात्वव्यपदेश which then is equivalent to भेदव्यपदेश—not merely because of the earlier sūtra, भेद-व्यपदेशाच्छान्यः, but even as interpreted by Śaṅkara — कस्मान्पुनः स
एव न भवति ? नानाव्यपदेशात् । 'सोऽन्वेष्टव्यः' 'एतमेव विदित्वा मुनिर्भवति,' 'य आत्मनि तिष्ठन्'.....इत्येवंजातीयको भेदनिर्देशः नास्ति भेदे युज्यते ॥ He also seems to think that the individual on release passes on with the best part of his self-hood intact : संप्रसादिहाय<sup>1</sup> स्वेन शब्दात् (iv, 4, 1).
The merger of the human soul in God is not countenanced by him.

vii

The Upaniṣads hold diverse views on the nature of Brahman's causality of the Universe. The author of the Sūtras has therefore been obliged to discuss some of them and pronounce final opinion. He rejects the doctrine of creation from nothing :
असद्व्यपदेशाच्चेति चेन्न... (ii, 1, 17). The definition of the Brahman in the second sūtra, if it is to rule out the Sāṃkhya Prakṛti, must certainly point to an efficient cause and Intelligent Creator : ईक्षतेर्नाशब्दः ; गौणश्वेत्तामशब्दात् ( i, 1, 5-6 as interpreted by Śaṅkara). But it is not so easily apparent if he did also regard the Brahman as the material cause (उपादानकारण) of the world. Some commentators have doubtless found support for this doctrine in the "Prakṛtyadhikaraṇa" i, 4, 24, seq. Yet at least one among the professedly Brahmapādānavādin-commentators, Rāmānuja, has been forced to concede, under this very sūtra, the separate existence of a material principle other than the Brahman which provides the stuff of which the material world is made. The provision for the enjoyment of unalloyed bliss to the released and the denial of right to them to participate in the cosmic functions (jagadvyāpāra) of the Supreme, in the last chapter, make it impossible that the Sūtrakāra could have held the doctrine of Brahmapādānakāraṇatva, in any real sense. The strongest objection to interpreting the "Prakṛtyadhikaraṇa" in terms of the Upādāna (cum nimitta) kāraṇatva of the Brahman is that the adhikaraṇa in question occurs within the Samanvayādhyaḥ, which merely undertakes a Samanvaya or attunement of various names and epithets associated with other principles, in Brahman. The adhikaraṇa cannot therefore be viewed as anything more than an attempt to secure the attunement of such (feminine) names as Prakṛti, Yoni etc., in Brahman. It would thus be illegitimate to stretch the adhikaraṇa beyond its natural scope and purpose, and read the idea of Brahmapādānatva in it.

<sup>1</sup> Śaṅkara reads: आधिर्भावः. The epithet स्वेन स्वेन (sic न तु अन्यकृतेण = परमात्मभावादिना) (Chān. 8, 12, 3) "in his own form", is however significant;

viii

The nature of ultimate release set forth in the closing section of the Sūtras, also points in the direction of a Theism as the final philosophy of Bādarāyaṇa. The released souls, though in the enjoyment of ineffable bliss ( iv, 4, 22 ), are yet under certain irrevocable limitations as regards their powers and lordliness. For one thing they are emphatically debarred from participating in the cosmic functions of God : जगद्व्यापारवञ्जम् ( iv, 4, 17 ). This sūtra speaks for itself. To all attempts at explaining away this sūtra, Thibaut has an effective reply which scarcely admits of improvement: "It is as impossible that the sūtras should open with a definition of the Lower Principle as it is unlikely that they should close with a description of the state of those who know the Lower Brahman only and are thus debarred from obtaining true release." <sup>1</sup> Theism is thus writ large upon the Sūtras. <sup>2</sup>

We cannot say that there is any overwhelming support in the Sūtras for the identity of the Jīva and Brahman. Apart from the many sūtras which have been interpreted by Śaṅkara himself in a dualistic sense, monistic commentators themselves have openly admitted that the language and thought of the Sūtras are plainly dualistic. <sup>3</sup> Here and there one meets with a suggestion that the utterances of the Sūtrakāra should be taken cum grano salis or hears a protest that there need be no doubt of the Sūtrakāra's undying faith in Monism. On their own showing, there are not more than a couple of Sūtras, <sup>4</sup> which can be said to be unquestionably monistic in tenor. These are (1) आत्मेति तूपगच्छन्ति ब्राह्मन्ति च (iv, 1, 3) and शास्त्रदृष्ट्या तूपदेशो वामदेववत् (i, 1, 30). The first is ambiguously worded. The term Ātman may no doubt denote the individual soul; but that it is neither its only sense, nor even its primary one, is admitted by Śaṅkara himself <sup>5</sup> under i, 3, 1. The purport of the sūtra, then, may very

<sup>1</sup> Tr. Śaṅkara's c. on B. S., Introd. p. xlii.

<sup>2</sup> "I am myself inclined to believe that the dualistic interpretations were probably more faithful to the sūtras than those of Śaṅkara." Das Gupta, Hist. Ind. Phil. i, p. 421.

<sup>3</sup> "There is strong support for the view that Bādarāyaṇa looks upon the difference between the Brahman and the soul as ultimate, something which persists even when the soul is released." S. Radhakrishnan, Ind. Phil., ii, p. 440.

<sup>4</sup> अव सुत्रकृता सत्यमेव उक्ता इति धाम्तिनिरासाय, ईशत्वविकल्पाभिरस्तमपि बोधायुद्वाप्य निरस्यति (Ratnaprabhā 1. 2. 6); "मेवेने"तिस्त्वात् तान्त्रिकमेव इति धाम्ति निरसितुं शक्नुते—(op. cit., 1. 2. 20); तान्त्रिकमेव शङ्का निरसितुं शक्नुते (Ānandagiri, 1. 2. 20).

<sup>5</sup> अक्षैवापिधिया संसृति न ततोऽन्यो जीव इति शास्त्रिकार्थ इति । तर्हि सुत्रकृत् किमिति मेवं भूते? तत्राह ..... एवेत्येवमेवो बोक्त इति धाम्ति निरस्यति—'प्रतिपाद्यं त्वि'ति । (Ratnaprabhā on B. S. 1. 1. 30).

ननु जीवब्रह्माणोरमेव न क्वापि सुत्रकारो सुखतो वदति । कतु, सर्वत्र ज्ञेयमेव । अतो नैक्यामिष्टम् । तत्राह—'प्रतिपाद्यं तु' इति । आदिपदेन आत्मेत्यादि संग्रहार्थम् ॥ (Ānandagiri, i. 3. 19).

<sup>6</sup> Cf. also: आत्मत्वं तावन्मुख्यया वृत्त्या परमेस्वर उपपद्यते—स आत्मा तत्त्वमसीति ॥ (B. S. B. 1. 2. 13).

well be that the Supreme Being is taught and realised as one's Inner Ruler (आत्मा or अन्तर्यामी). This meaning of "Ātman" is assumed in "एष ते आत्मा अन्तर्यामिन्" (Brh. Up. iii. 7. 3).

The other sūtra is even more elusively worded. One cannot make much of that sūtra unless one knows what exactly the Śāstra-dṛṣṭi or point of view of the Śāstras is, according to the Sūtrakāra! It is evidently the same as अध्यात्मसंबन्धप्रश्ना (i, 1, 29), on which Indra's claim to be Prāṇa is sought to be justified. But the words संबन्ध, प्रश्ना and अस्मिन् would be superfluous if 'identity' were meant to be conveyed. "Sambandha" is not bound to be, except when so stated, तादात्म्य, (identity). It is moreover "dvi-niṣṭha" and would require at least two terms to be related. But in the present case, the conditioned self of Indra as Indra would have ceased to be, the moment it realised its identity with the All-Soul and could not be putting forth specific claims of identity with X or Z. 'Fullness of Divine Presence' is, therefore, the nearest approach to अध्यात्मसंबन्धप्रश्ना. That would very probably mean that it was the voice of the Antaryāmin or Possessor Behind, that spoke through Indra. Similar statements of identity elsewhere would have to be explained according to the Sūtrakāra, in the same way.<sup>1</sup> There is thus hardly any justification to believe that the Sūtrakāra had any leaning to a Monism of the type of Śaṅkara's. The doctrine of the "Svatantrādvaita"<sup>2</sup> was probably uppermost in his mind when he wrote: शास्त्रदृष्ट्या त्वपदेशो वामदेववत्. Vedānta Deśika nearly throws out such a hint when he writes: जीवेश्वरैक्यश्रुतीनां च निर्वाहकमं 'अवस्थितेति काशकल्म' इत्यनुवचनम्. and quotes from the Mbh. (xii, 323, 56) in support:

"अन्यत्र राजन् स परः तथान्यः पञ्चविंशकः । तत्स्थत्वादनुपश्यन्ति लोक एवेति साधयः ॥"

(Śatadūṣaṇī, Śāstramuktāvalī Series, no. 36, p. 131).

<sup>1</sup> OE. "सर्वगत्वादनन्तस्य स एवाहमवस्थितः । ममः सर्वमहं सर्वं मयि सर्वं सनातनम्" ॥ (Viṣṇu Purāṇa, i, 19, 85).

Also: "When Indra says 'Worship me' he means 'Worship the God that I worship.' On a similar principle Vāmadeva's declaration that he is Manu, and Sūrya, is explained."

(S. Radhakrishnan, Ind. Phil., i, p. 531).

<sup>2</sup> For its full philosophical implication and ideology, see my paper on The Philosophical Bases of the Theistic Realism of Madhva, AUJ.

GLEANINGS FROM THE COMMENTARIES ON THE VĀKYAPADĪYA

BY

K. M. SARMA

I

By the name Vākyapadīya what has been known is a work in the form of Kārikās divided into three Books called the Brahmakāṇḍa, the Padakāṇḍa and the Prakīrṇakāṇḍa. The work has been published from Benares some years ago with the commentary of Puṇyarāja for the first two Books and that of Helārāja for the last.

It is the following quotation from the Vākyapadīya found in Mammata's Kāvyaaprakāśa under verse II-2 and also in his Śabdavyāpāravicāra ( Nīrnaya Sagar ed. with Abhidhāyrtti-mātrkā, p. 1 ) that first raised the doubt regarding the nature of the Vākyapadīya.

उक्तं हि वाक्यपदीये—गीः स्वरूपेण न गीः । नाध्यगीः । गोत्वाभिसंबन्धात्
गीः । इति ॥

This is not a Kārikā but prose. The only two alternatives are that the Vākyapadīya is not entirely in the form of Kārikās or that Mammata was making a mistake. The latter is the less likely alternative.

My revered Professor, Dr. C. Kunhan Raja of [the Madras University, contributed a very learned paper to the Dr. S. Krishnaswami Aiyangar Commemoration Volume ( 1936 ) with the title " I-tsing and Bhartṛhari's Vākyapadīya. " Here he has for the first time pointed out that the commentary on the first Kāṇḍa ( Brahmakāṇḍa ) published from Benares is the Vṛtti on the Kārikās by Bhartṛhari himself and not the commentary by Puṇyarāja and that what is really Vākyapadīya is the Kārikās along with the Vṛtti. Dr. Raja has made his position quite clear by noting the colophon in the printed edition and also in the various Mss.

There is a Ms. of the Vṛtti of Bhartṛhari on his own Kārikās in the Government Or. Mss. Library, Madras (No. R. 5543) of which there is a transcript in the Adyar Library (No. 28. 9. 3). With some lacunae in the middle it is complete for the first Kāṇḍa and contains the Vṛtti for a good portion in the second Kāṇḍa. There is a commentary on this Vākya-padīya (Kārikā and Vṛtti) of Bhartṛhari by Vṛṣabhadeva of which there is a copy in the Government Or. Mss. Library, Madras (No. R. 2789) and a transcript of it in the Adyar Library (No. 39. F. 3). The Adyar Library contains also an independent palm-leaf Ms. (No. 23. L. 2). In this commentary Vṛṣabhadeva considers the Vākya-padīya as containing both Kārikās and prose Vṛtti on them by Bhartṛhari.

In this paper I propose to give further evidences to prove that the Vākya-padīya contains not only Kārikās but also prose Vṛtti on them by Bhartṛhari and that the Vṛtti available in the Benares edition for the first Kāṇḍa is by Bhartṛhari and not by Puṇyārāja.

In the Laghusiddhāntamañjūsā (Chowkhamba Sans. Series, p. 50) Nāgasa says that the following is quoted in Harigrantha, i. e. in the work of Bhartṛhari (एते श्रुतिभारते इत्यन्ये स्वटे):

सूक्ष्मामर्थेनाप्रविभक्तस्वामेकां वाचमभिष्यन्दमानाम् ।
 तामन्ये विदुरन्यामिव च नानारूपामात्मनि संनिविष्टाम् ॥
 इति ... ..
 'प्राणायामान्तरे देवी वाग्यै नित्यं स्म तिष्ठति ।
 स्थानेषु विवृते वायी कृतवर्णपरिग्रहा ॥
 वैखरी वाक्प्रयोक्तृणां प्राणवृत्तिनिबन्धनी ॥
 केवलं बुद्ध्युपादाना क्रमरूपातुपातिनी ।
 प्राणवृत्तिमनुक्रम्य मध्यमा वाक्प्रवर्तते ।
 अविभक्ता तु पश्यन्ती सर्वतः संहतक्रमा ।
 स्वरूपव्योतिरेवान्तः परा वागनपायिनी ।

<sup>1</sup> In my paper 'Vāk Before Bhartṛhari' which I read at the XVI Indian Philosophical Congress, Adyar, and which is in the course of publication in the Journal of the U. P. Historical Society, I have relied upon another text in the Mahābhārata which recognizes only two states of Vāk. The quotation here, however, recognizes the three states of Vaikhari, Madhyamā and Paśyanti.

These verses are found quoted in the commentary published from Benares, the former on p. 1 and the latter on p. 57. It must be noted that Nāgeśa refers to the commentary as Harigrantha. Again, in the section on चोद्धारस्य वाच्यत्वनिरूपणम् in the same work, p. 312, Nāgeśa says :

‘अनादिनिधनं ब्रह्म’ इत्याद्यन्त्रलोके हरिग्रन्थेऽपि स्पष्टमेतत्— ‘तत्त्वाद्- प्रच्युतस्य वस्तुनो भेदानुकारेणास्तस्याविभक्तान्यरूपोपग्राहिता विवर्तः स्वप्नाविषय-
प्रतिभासवद्’ इत्यादिना ॥

This also is found in the same commentary on the first verse of the Brahmakāṇḍa. We have thus the authority of no less a grammarian than Nāgeśa to accept the commentary as Bhartrhari's besides the evidence which Dr. Raja has already adduced.

Another important fact to which Dr. Raja has drawn attention in the same paper is that the commentary for the second Kāṇḍa which is available in the Ms. of the Govt. Or. Mss. Library, Madras, is by Bhartrhari himself. He observes : “I am inclined to believe that the commentaries on the two Kāṇḍas found in the Madras manuscript is by the same author” (p. 290). There is definite evidence that Bhartrhari wrote his own commentary on the second Kāṇḍa also. In his commentary on the first verse of the second Kāṇḍa (Benares ed., p. 64) Puṇyārāja refers to Bhartrhari's Vṛtti on this as follows :

यत्पुनरनेन वृत्तावुक्तमुदाहरणमात्रमेतदन्वयानि वाक्यलक्षणानि दर्शयिष्य-
तीति तद्वार्तिककारीयवाक्यलक्षणादेरन्तर्भावमनपेक्षेति मन्तव्यम् ।

Again, in his commentary on II. 79-85 Puṇyārāja says :

अथेषां निदर्शनार्थं लेशतः स्वरूपसंज्ञितान्युदाहरणानि टीकाकारेण प्र-
दर्शितानि । एषा च टीकाकृता स्ववृत्तौ सा च तुल्यबलेष्वसंभवादित्यादिना
बहुप्रकारा दर्शिता यस्मावुक्तं तेयमपरिमाणविकल्पा बाधा विस्तरेण बाधा-
समुद्देशे समर्थयिष्यत इति ।

Bādhāsamuddēśa appears to have been lost to us now. The identity of this Tīkākāra with Bhartrhari is made indisputable by Puṇyārāja's Avataraṇikā to II. 86. It runs as follows :

इदानीं षट्पञ्चादशचतुर्विंशतिव्यातिरिका अप्यमी बहुप्रकारा न्यायाः पदार्थ-
निश्चयहेतवः सन्तीति प्रौढिवादतया टीकाकारः प्रदर्शयितुमाह ।

Compare also his statement on II. 79-85 ( p. 103 ):

यद्यपि परेषां चोदनेन प्रमाणं प्रसिद्धं तथापिह टीकाकारो न्यायमात्रस्य
प्रमाणत्वमङ्गीकरोति ।

Also see his remarks on II. 259 and 263. A Vṛttikāra referred to by him is, however, different from the Tīkākāra, i. e. Bhartṛhari. Compare his Prakāśa on II. 200 ( p. 164 ):

एवं कर्मण्येव शेषत्वेन विवक्षिते षष्ठी कारकान्तरे त्वेकैवेति वृत्तिकारः ।
तेषां मते गुणैः स्मरणं न तु गुणानां स्मरणमिति काचिदपि षष्ठी । टीकाकारमते
तु करणस्य शेषत्वविवक्षायां गुणानां स्मरणं गुणस्मरणमित्यपि भवतीति मतभेदः ।

The foregoing references are evidence that Bhartṛhari has commented on the second Kāṇḍa also. The portions referred to are lost in the Madras Ms. which contains many gaps ( for a description see Dr. Raja, op. cit., pp. 289-90 ).

But fortunately there are other internal evidences in this showing that this is the author's own commentary. The style of this is that of an author explaining his own work and not the work of another. I give one instance selected at random. The Avataraṇikā to 2. 317 in this runs :

अपर आह—संसर्गो विप्रयोगश्च ... .. ॥

Compare this with Puṇyārāja's Avataraṇikā to the same which is as follows :

तथा चापरैः संसर्गोदयः शब्दार्थावच्छेदहेतवः प्रदर्शिता इत्याह—संसर्गो विप्रयोगश्च ... ..

In the former the reference to 'Apara' is direct as it ought to be when it is made by the author himself ; it is probably implied here that these verses are a quotation from an earlier work. But in the latter it is indirect, being only an Anuvāda of the author's reference. Apart from the evidence of the style, there is a definite clue to identify the work as Bhartṛhari's. In his Prakāśa on II. 75-85 ( p. 101 ) Puṇyārāja says :

तत्र षट्पञ्चादश चतुर्विंशतिर्वैतानि लक्षणानि तावदिह प्रदर्श्यन्ते । एतेषां च
वितस्य सोपपत्तिकं सनिर्दर्शनं स्वरूपं पदकाण्डे लक्षणसमुद्देशे विनिर्दिष्टमिति
ग्रन्थकृतैव स्ववृत्तौ प्रतिपादितम् ।

Compare this with the following which is found here in the commentary in the Madras Ms. :

तत्र द्वादश षट् चतुर्विंशतिर्वा लक्षणानीति लक्षणसमुद्देशे सापदेशं सविरोधं विस्तरेण व्याख्यास्यते । इह तु प्रदर्शनार्थमुदाहरणमात्रं प्रसक्तानुप्रसक्तं च किञ्चिदुच्यते ।

It is obvious that Puṇyārāja's reference is to this statement ; and no doubt can therefore exist as to this commentary being by Bhartṛhari. We must consider ourselves fortunate in being in possession of also this part of the work of the great grammatical philosopher and be grateful to Malabar ( from where the Ms. was acquired ) for its preservation. I have quoted here from the Adyar Library Transcript ( No. 28. L. 3 ) p. 168.

Dr. Raja has expressed also the view that there must have been a commentary by Bhartṛhari on the third Kāṇḍa, i. e. the Prakīrṇaka also. There is evidence for this. We have already noted that in both the Kāvya-prakāśa and the Śabdavyāpāravicāra Mammāṭa quotes a prose passage as from the Vākyapadīya. This passage is not found in Bhartṛhari's commentary on the first and second Kāṇḍas, which is available. Let us see where it could have occurred. As a comparison of Puṇyārāja's Prakāśa with Bhartṛhari's Vṛtti for the second Kāṇḍa shows, the commentators closely follow the author's own explanations. On examination of the available commentaries I find the following in Helārāja's Prakāśa on III. 52 :

संसर्गदर्शने स्वतो गौर्न गौर्गोत्वाभिसंबन्धाद्गौरिति बह्वकल्पं साक्षादप्यव-
हार्यमेव द्रव्यं परोपधीयमानरूपविशेषं व्यवहारमनुपतति ।

I cannot think of any other place in the text where this explanation is more called for ; and unless there is evidence to the contrary, the inevitable conclusion from the evidence of Puṇyārāja is that Bhartṛhari continued his commentary for the third Kāṇḍa also and that the passage quoted by Mammāṭa must have occurred at the same place as the above in Helārāja's Prakāśa.

II

Date of Puṇyārāja

A wrong view that Puṇyārāja was a disciple of Bhartṛhari has gained ground. In Anhang III, p. 267, of his edition of the the Kaśīśaraṅgī, B. Liebich observes: ".....Wir kennen nur einen Kommentar zu den beiden ersten Büchern, den des Puṇyārāja, der sich selbst als unmittelbaren Schüler des Bhartṛhari bezeichnet....."

A close study of his Prakāśa on the second Kaṇḍa, however, shows that he could not have been a contemporary of Bhartṛhari. Here are a few facts worthy of note. In his commentary on II. 79-85 (p. 101) Puṇyārāja says that the Lakṣaṇa section of the Padakāṇḍa was lost in his time:

आगमभ्रंशाद्वैकप्रमादादिना वा लक्षणसमुद्देशश्च पदकाण्डमध्ये न प्रसिद्धः ।

This shows not only that he was not a disciple of Bhartṛhari, but also that the interval between the two was so long as to have a portion of the work lost somewhere in its course either in oral transmission or in transcription. There are other evidences also to corroborate my view. Puṇyārāja quotes in his commentary the following from Kumārila's Śloka-vārtika:

यावन्तो यादृशा ये च यदर्थप्रतिपादने ।

वर्णाः प्रज्ञातसामर्थ्यास्ते तथैवावबोधकाः ॥

Prakāśa II. 64. Śloka-vārtika, Chowkhamba ed. p. 527.

नामधात्वर्थयोमी तु नैव नञ्प्रतिषेधकः ।

Prakāśa II. 88-89. Śloka-vārtika p. 575. The particle च instead of तु is found in the Chowkhamba ed.

Kumārila was later than Bhartṛhari. Puṇyārāja who quotes from the Śloka-vārtika must have therefore been still later. That he lived some centuries after his author is evidenced by some other quotations also in his work. The verse—

इन्दोर्लक्ष्म स्मरविजयिनः कण्ठमूले मुरारि-

दिङ्गलागानां मदमलमपीभाजि गण्डस्थलानि ।

अयाप्युर्वीवल्लयतिलक श्यामाभिम्नानुलिप्ता-

न्युज्जासन्ते वद भवलितं किं यशोभिस्त्वदीयैः ॥ which he quotes on II. 249 is attributed (with the reading त्रिपुरविजयिनः instead of स्मरविजयिनः) to Rājasekhara by Vallabha-deva in his Subhāsitāvali (Peterson's ed. No. 2563). From this it is evident that he was later than Rājasekhara. There is a difference of opinion among scholars as to the identity of Rājasekhara, the author of some memorial verses, with Rājasekhara, the famous dramatist and critic (See Peterson, Intro. to Subhāsitāvali, p. 101; S. K. De, Sanskrit Poetics, Vol. I pp. 122ff.). I do not wish to lengthen this paper with an investigation of this subject here, as it is sufficient for our present purpose if it is borne in mind that the verse is quoted by Kuntaka also in his Vakroktiṭīvita (ed. by Dr. S. K. De, 1928, p. 167), a fact which goes against its ascription to Rājasekhara of the 14th century, and that if it is from the earlier Rājasekhara (the dramatist and critic), it proves that Puṇyārāja has to be assigned to a date later than the beginning of the 10th century (for this date for Rājasekhara see S. K. De, Sanskrit Poetics, pp. 127-28).

In this connection I would like to draw attention to another verse which Puṇyārāja quotes at the same place as the above. It is this :

हे हेलाजितबोधिसत्त्ववचसां किं विस्तरस्तोयधे

नास्ति त्वत्सदृशः परः परहितार्थाने गुहीतव्रतः ।

दृष्टव्यान्धजनोपकारघटनादीर्मुक्थलन्वायशो-

भारप्रोद्बुधे करोषि कुपया साहाय्यकं यन्मरोः ॥

This is quoted also by Kuntaka in his Vakroktiṭīvita (ed. 1928, p. 59), by Mammaṭa in his Kāvya-prakāśa (Jhalakikar's ed., No. 494) and by Hemacandra in his own commentary on the Kāvya-nūśāsana (N. S. ed., p. 28). It is thus from a source earlier than these works. But some editors of the Kāvya-prakāśa have been led into the error of ascribing it to Puṇyārāja (see, e. g., the Mysore ed. Index) who, as will be presently shown has to be assigned to a date later than the 12th century.

My view that this commentator lived some centuries after his author is corroborated by the following also which he quotes on II. 243 :

सतां च न निषेधोऽस्ति सोऽस्तु च न वियते ।

अगम्यनेन न्यायेन नञर्थः प्रलयं मतः ॥

Nāgeśa also quotes this in the Laghusiddhāntamañjūsā (Chowkamba ed., p. 654). The commentators on the Mañjūsā, namely Bālabhāṭṭa and Durbalācārya are unanimous in ascribing this to the author of the Khaṇḍana, i. e. Śrīharṣa. Further on in the same section (p. 669) Nāgeśa quotes from and expressly assigns to Śrīharṣa some other verses also :

अत एवोक्तं श्रीहर्षेण—

समस्तलोकशास्त्रिकमप्यमाश्रित्य नृत्यतोः ।

का तवास्तु गतिस्तर्कैर्वस्तुभाष्यवहारयोः ॥

उपपादयितुं तेस्तिर्भूतैरशकनीययोः ।

अनिर्वक्तव्यतावादादसेवा गतिस्तयोः ॥

यथा सतो जानिर्नैवमसतोऽपि जानिर्न च ।

अन्यत्वमेव अन्यस्यानिर्वाच्यत्वसमर्पकम् ॥ इति ॥

These are traceable to the Khaṇḍanakhyaṇḍakhādyā (Chowkamba ed., p. 538). I have not been able to trace the former quotation to this work. But on the authority of Nāgeśa's commentators and in the light of the other quotations from Śrīharṣa on the same subject in the same section, we have to accept that the quotation in question is from another of the many works of this prolific writer. Śrīharṣa is generally assigned to the 12th century. The now known earliest reference to Puṇyarāja is by Nāgeśa (end of 17th and beginning of the 18th century), in the Laghusiddhāntamañjūsā (pp. 817, 1368, 1457 etc.). He is here referred to as Puṇjarāja. We have to content ourselves with placing Puṇyarāja between these two wide limits until some evidence comes to light enabling us to give these more accurately.

COMMENTATORS OF THE RĀMĀYAṆA IN THE FIFTEENTH, SIXTEENTH AND SEVEN-TEENTH CENTURIES

BY

P. P. S. SASTRI

Rāmāyaṇa studies seem to have been particularly popular during the fifteenth, sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. As many as ten commentaries of outstanding merit were produced during this period. It would be a source of great help in fixing the text-tradition of the Rāmāyaṇa if even a comparative chronology of these commentaries is available.

1. One of the earliest systematic commentators is Rāmānuja popularly known as Kaṇḍaḍai Rāmānuja, the son of Varadārya of Vādhūla Gotra. His commentary is called Rāmānujīyam and is referred to by Vaidyanātha Dikṣita and Govindarāja among others. He may be assigned to the beginning of the fourteenth century A. D. (circa 1400 A. D.).

2. Next in point of time, comes Veṅkatakṛṣṇadhvarin (alias Veṅkateśayajvan) of Hārita Gotra. His commentary is known as Sarvārthasāra and is quoted by Vaidyanātha Dikṣita. Veṅkateśa is also the author of the well-known digest on Law, Piṭṛmedhasāra. His teacher was Ādi Van Śaṭhagopa (1460-1520 A. D.). Veṅkateśa may therefore be assigned to the third quarter of the fifteenth century A. D. (circa 1475 A. D.).

3. Vaidyanātha Dikṣita, the author of the famous law-book, Smṛtimuktāphala, is the author of the well-known commentary, Rāmāyaṇadīpikā. He quotes from Sarvārthasāra and is quoted by Īśvara Dikṣita. He may therefore be assigned to the end of the fifteenth century (circa 1500 A. D.).

4 & 5. Īśvara Dikṣita is the author of two commentaries on the Rāmāyaṇa, a Bṛhadvivaraṇa and a Laghuvivaraṇa. The former was composed in 1518 A. D. He may be assigned to the first quarter of the sixteenth century (circa 1535 A. D.).

6. Mahēśa Tīrtha, the son of Nārāyaṇa Tīrtha is the author of the Tīrthīya on the Rāmāyaṇa. He is quoted by Govindarāja. He may therefore be assigned to the middle of the sixteenth century (circa 1550 A. D.).

7. Govindarāja, the author of the famous Bhāṣaṇa on the Rāmāyaṇa, refers to Appaya Dīkṣita as 'modern' in his comments and pays his homage to Bhāvanācārya and Ādi Van Śaṭha-gopa VI. He may therefore be assigned to the end of the sixteenth century (circa 1600 A. D.).

8. Ahobila Ātreya is the author of Tanīśloki and Vālmiki-hṛdayam. He quotes from Govindarāja. He salutes his guru Śaṭha-gopadeśika alias Parāṅkuśa, the sixth Pontiff of Ahobila Mutt. He may therefore be assigned to the first quarter of the seventeenth century (circa 1625 A. D.).

9. Katakayogindra, the author of the Amṛtakataka or Kataka on the Rāmāyaṇa, quotes Govindarāja and is quoted by Nāgeśa Bhaṭṭa. He may be assigned to the middle of the seventeenth century (circa 1650 A. D.).

10. Nāgeśa Bhaṭṭa (alias Nāgoji Bhaṭṭa) is the author of the famous Tilakam, a commentary on the Rāmāyaṇa. He quotes from Kataka. A commentary of Nāgeśa's Udyota dated 1718 A. D. is available in the Tanjore Palace Library. He may therefore be assigned to the end of the seventeenth century (circa 1700 A. D.).

Thus, during the course of three centuries, from 1400 to 1700 A. D., as many as ten famous commentaries on the Rāmāyaṇa were produced.

Numbers 1, 3, 4, 5 and 9 are available only in Manuscript whilst the others are available in print in Devanāgarī or Grantha scripts. Copies of all are available in the Government Oriental Manuscript Library, Madras.

SOME FORGOTTEN SANSKRIT POETS OF KARNĀṬAKA

BY

S. SRIKANTHA SASTRI

The Sanskrit anthologies<sup>1</sup> like Saduktikarṇāṃṛta of Śrī-dharadāsa (1206 A. D.), Sūktimuktāvalī of Jalhaṇa (c. 1260 A. D.), Subhāṣitāvalī of Vallabha (15th century), Śārṅgadharapaddhati (17th century), Kaviṇḍravacanasaṃuccaya (16th century), Sūkti-ratnahāra of Sūrya (14th or 15th century A. D.) and Apte's Subhāṣitaratnasamdhā mention a number of poets whose names appear to be of Kannada origin and who appear to have migrated from Karṇāṭaka to all parts of India. From the above-mentioned sources it is proposed to give some account of such poets with specimens of their compositions and also some anonymous verses praising the rulers of Karṇāṭaka.

(1) Amarānanda:—

एकव्रातनसंगतिः परिहृता मत्सुहृमादूरत-
स्ताम्बूलानयनच्छलेन रभसाश्लेषोऽपि संविधितः ।
आलापोऽपि न मिश्रितः परिजनं व्यापारयन्त्यन्तिके
कान्ते मत्सुपचारतश्चतुरया कोपः कृतार्थीकृतः ॥

(Sū. Mu.)

This is sometimes attributed to Pulinda supposed to be friend of Bāṇa. One Amarānanda or Amaranandin is the author of an alamkāra-work, Kāvyā (sarva) alamkāra Saṃgraha, written under the patronage of Manva, probably a subordinate of Gaṇa-pati the Kākatiya ruler of Warangal (c. 1233 A. D.), or of Manma Goṅka (1163-87).

<sup>1</sup> Abbreviations:—

- Sa. Ka.* ( Saduktikarṇāṃṛta ).
- Sū. Mu.* ( Sūktimuktāvalī ).
- Sū. Bhā.* ( Subhāṣitāvalī ).
- Śa. Pa.* ( Śārṅgadharapaddhati ).
- Ka. Va. Sa.* ( Kaviṇḍravacanasaṃuccaya ).
- Sū. Ra. Ha.* ( Sūktiratnahāra ).
- Su. Ra. Sa.* ( Subhāṣitaratnasamdhā ).

(2) Amogha (Sa. Ka. IV-3, 3). He is probably the same as Amoghavarṣa, the Rāṣṭrakūṭa emperor, who is the author of Prasānottara Ratnamālikā in Sanskrit and of Kavirūjamārga in Kannada (815-875 A. D.).

(3) Udayāditya (Sa. Ka. III-38-1). Paramāra Udayāditya was the successor of Bhoja of Malwa (c. 1050) and there are several Karpāṭaka chiefs named Udayāditya, one being the author of an alaṅkāra-work, Udayādityālaṅkāra (c. 1120 A. D.).

(4) Karkarāja (Sa. Ka. II-38-2). Also quoted in Sarasvatīkaṭhābharana, Kāvyaaprakāśa, Khaṇḍaprāsasti and Śā. Pa. He is later than Subandhu and earlier than Bhoja. Among the Rāṣṭrakūṭa governors of Lāṭa are several Karkarājas, one the grandfather of Rannā, the queen of Dharmapāla, another the father of Kṛṣṇa I and Kakka II, last of the imperial Rāṣṭrakūṭas (c. 970 A. D.).

(5) Kumuda Candra (Vādī). Digambara Kumuda Candra is said to have been the contemporary of Hemacandra by whom he was defeated (Śr. Mu. 26).

(6) Karpāṭaka Deva (Sa. Ka. II-42-2).

सुखं ज्योत्स्नालोकप्रसरधवलार्धं क नु मया
पुनर्दृष्टव्यं तत् स्मितमधुरमुग्धाल्पदशनम् ।
क सा अथवा वाणी विजितकलकण्ठी कलहता
विलासा वीक्षयानां क च सहभुवो धीरललिता ॥ also अलसमधुरा स्मिन्वा दृष्टिर्धनमनुपायता (II-10-4).

(7) Karpāṭaka (Bhaṭṭa) (Su. Bhā. 1261-2).

कान्ता ददाति मदनं मदनः सन्तापमनुपमं च ।
सन्तापी मरणमहो तथापि शरणं नृणां सैव ॥
अलसयति मादमाधिकं भ्रमयति चेतस्तनोति सन्तापम् ।
मोहं च मुहुः कुरुते विषविषमं वीक्षितं तन्वयाः ॥
अवश्यं कोपाग्निस्तव सुतनु निर्वोस्यति चिराद्
स्वशोभामारुढं मुखमपि च ते हास्यति ह्युचम् ।
भवद्दोष्टीशून्या मम नु दिवसा यान्ति य इमे
न तेषामावृत्तिः पुनरपि मनो द्रुपत इति ॥

(8) Kavi Ratna. He was the contemporary of Bhoja of Dhāra who praises him thus :—

अस्तंगतभारविराचि कालवशात्कालिदासाविभुविभुरम् ।
निर्वाणव्याणदीपं जगदिदमयेति रत्नेन ॥

To Kavi Ratna the following is attributed:—

शंखास्सन्ति सहस्रशो जलनिषेर्वाचिच्छटा वाट्टिताः
पर्यन्तेषु लुठन्ति ये दलशतैः कल्माषितक्ष्मस्तला ।
एकः कौण्डिन् स पाञ्चजन्य उदमुदाश्वर्यधामासतं
यः संवर्तभरक्षमैर्नधुरिपोः स्वासानलैः पूर्यते ॥

(Sa. Ka. IV-15-3 ; Sū. Mu. 45<sup>b</sup> ; Śā. Pa. 1119 ).

The Kannada poet, Ranna, was the contemporary of Calukya emperor, Tailapa II, and Satyaśraya Bedaṅga and hence the contemporary also of Muṇja and Bhoja. He obtained the title, Kavi-Cakravartī, from Tailapa and says that he was proficient both in Sanskrit and Kannada. It is not improbable that for some time he was in the court of Bhoja when we remember that Bhoja gave to the Kannada poet, Nāgavarma, the author of Kārṇāṭaka Kūdambari, many horses in appreciation. Some verses attributed to a Kavi-Cakravartī are probably Ranna's.

विषमविषधरप्रगाढघोरे

(Sa. Ka. IV-24-3),

जलधरमुदितं विलोक्य दुरात्

(Sa. Ka. II-88-3).

(9). Gaṇḍa Gopāla :—A title common to many chiefs in Andhra and Kārṇāṭaka—Vijayarāja Gaṇḍa Gopāla Tikka of Nellore, Manuma Gaṇḍa Gopāla of Velanāḍu in the 13th century.

काशाः क्षीरनिकाशा दधिदारवर्णानि सप्तपर्णानि ।
नवनीतानिमिश्रन्द्रः शरदि च तक्रप्रभा ज्योत्स्ना ॥

(Su. Ra. Sa. )

(10) Cintāmaṇi :—

बहुचणरिद्धिणि सामम म अणिद्धामासि अचे अणो लोओ ।
अवसाम अवसमदसादि अहार भम्मि पढि बुद्धी ॥

(Sū. Ra. Hā 167-31 ).

A Jaina poet, Cintāmaṇi, is said to have written a work, Cintāmaṇi, and is praised in the Śravaṇa Beḷagoḷa epitaph of Malliṣapa.

धर्मार्थकामपरनिर्वृतिचारुचिन्ता- श्चिन्तामणिः प्रतिनिकेतमकारि येन ।

स स्तूपते सरससीरुयमुजासुजातः
चिन्तामणिर्मुनिवृषा न कथं जनेन ॥

( 11 ) Jñāna Śiva. इयं बालो मां प्रपन्नवरतम्

( Sa. Ka. V-63-2 ).

He is probably Pāsupata ascetic Jñāna Śakti, the disciple of Vidyābharapa Paṇḍita of the Koṭīmaṭha at Balligāva.

( 12 ) Citta Rāja.

शशिखण्डं श्रीखण्डं खण्डं खण्डनगिरामथ विनोदः ।

भक्तिश्च खण्डपरशावखण्डतपसां फलं लोके ।

( Śū. Mu. ).

( 13 ) Cīttapa. Cīttama.

कालिन्दि हूहि कुम्भोद्भवजलधिरहं नाम मृद्धासि कस्मा-

च्छत्रोर्मं नर्मदाहं त्वमपि घदसि मे नाम कस्मान्सपत्न्याः ।

मालिन्यं तर्हि कस्मादनुहरसि मिलन्कञ्जलौर्मालवीनां

बाष्पाम्भोभिः किमासां समजानि कुपितः कुन्तलक्षोणिपालः ॥

( Sa. Ka. )

कल्पान्ते शमितः त्रिविक्रमः

( Śū. Ra. Sa. )

Cīttapa was a contemporary of Bhoja and since the name is common in the dynastic lists of the Śīlāhāras of Konkan, the author probably migrated from Karnaṭaka to Malawa.

( 14 ) Jagaddeva.

भोजनं देहि राजेन्द्र शाकसूपघृतान्वितम् ।

माहिषं च शरच्चन्द्रचन्द्रिकाधवलं दधि ॥

( Śū. Mu. )

This is attributed to Paramāra Jagaddeva. There are other Jagaddevas, a Śāntara of Humcha ( c. 1117 A. D. ), and a chief of Lemulavāḍa, subordinate of Vikramāditya VI. Jagaddeva is praised thus :—

चक्रः पप्रच्छ पार्थ कथय मम सखे नास्ति स कापि देशो

वस्तु नो यत्र रात्रिर्भवति भुवि खगायेति स प्रत्युवाच ।

नीति मेरो समाप्तिं कनकवितरणीः श्रीजगद्देवनाम्ना

सूर्यं ह्यन्तर्हितेऽस्मिन् कतिपयादिवसैर्वासरद्वैतसृष्टिः ॥

( 15 ) Taruṇa Vācaspati ( Sū. Rā. Hā. 4 ). He is the well-known commentator on Daṇḍin's Kāvyaadarśa, under the patronage of Hoysaja Rāmanātha ( c. 1280 A. D. ).

( 16 ) Devesvara ( Sū. Rā. Sa. ). One Devesvara is the guru of Sarvajñātman.

( 17 ) Devabodha ( Sū. Rā. II-5-5 ), the pupil of Satyabodha, wrote commentaries on Mahābhārata and Yājñavalkyasmṛti.

( 18 ) Devabodhi, a paramahansa parivrājaka, wrote the drama Satyavrata Rukmāṅgada ( Baroda Mss. No. 12089 ). He was the contemporary of Siddharāja Jayasimha and Śrīpāla.

यदमी दशमि दशना ( Sū. Mu. 53 ) attributed also to Nammayya.

( 19 ) Nāci Rāja ( Sū. Mu. ) seems to be a Jaina from Karpāṣaka who appears to have gone to the court of Karpa of Dāhaḥa and is praised by Karpūra Kavi.

( 20 ) Nammayya, Naimeyya—a pure Kannada name.

किं मालतीकुसुमं ताम्यसि निष्ठुरेण

केनापि यत्किल विलुनमितो लताप्रात् ।

लोकोत्तरेण विलसद्गुणगौरवेण

को नामुना शिरसि नाम करिष्यति स्वाम् ॥

शाखासन्ततिसभिरुद्धनभसो भूयांस एवावनी

वियन्ते तरवः फलैरविकलेरतिच्छिदः प्राणिनाम् ।

किंतु द्वित्रिदलेरलंकृततनोः शाले स्तुमस्तुल्लता

दृष्ट्वा येन निजं शिरः सुकृतिनां को नाम न प्रीणितः ॥

( 21 ) Nāgappayya, a Kannada name, earlier than Jalhapa.

विपन्नं पद्मिन्यामृतमनिभिर्वैर्यातमालिभिः

खगैरप्युद्धीनं रथचरणहंसप्रभृतिभिः ।

दशां दीनां नीतिं सरसि विषमग्रीष्मदिवसैः

कुलीनम्बादास्ते तदहहृदः कोऽपि तदपि ॥

( Sū. Mu. 31-7 ).

( 22 ) Nāgammā—a Kannada poetess,

शुकतुण्डच्छवि सवितुश्चण्डरुचः पुण्डरीकवनवन्धोः ।

मण्डलमुदितं वन्दे कुण्डलमाखण्डलाशयाः ॥

( 23 ) Maruḷā or Mārulā.

कृशा केनासि त्वं प्रकृतिरियमंगस्य ननु मे

मला धूत्रा कस्माद्भुजगमूहे पाचकतया ।

स्मरस्यस्मान् कञ्चिच्छहि नहि नहीत्येवमवद-च्छिरःकम्पं दाला मन हृदि निपत्य प्ररुदिता ॥

( Sū. Mu. )

She appears, from her name, to be a Kannada poetess praised by Dhanada Deva along with Śīla, Bijjā, Morikā.

( 24 ) Mahādeva Rājapitāmaha ( Sū. Mu. 114, 63, 126, 108 ).

भुक्तानि यैस्तव फलानि पचेलिमानि
क्रोडस्थितैरहह वीतभयैः प्रभुतम् ।
ते पक्षिणो जलरयेण विकृष्यमाणं
पश्यन्ति पादपमवं तममी तदस्थाः ॥

Mahādeva is most probably the Kākatiya ruler of Warangal. Another Mahādeva was the Seupa king of Devagiri.

( 25 ) Rākṣasa Kavi ( *Paṇḍita ), author of Kavi-Rākṣa-śīyam and mistakenly identified with the Telugu poet Vemula-vāḍa Bhlma Kavi. Kavi Rākṣasa's date is c. 1100 A. D. ( *Sa.
Ka.* I. 90, 5, Rākṣasa Paṇḍitau, different ? ).

( 26 ) Rudra Deva, probably Pratāpa Rudra of Warangal, author of Nītisāra ( Sū. Rā. Hā. 52, 231; Pratāpa Rudra 39, 40, 41, 104, 144 ).

Kapila Rudra, Gajapati ( 15th century ).

सहकारकुसुमकेसरनिकरभरामोदमूर्छितदिग्गते ।
मधुरमधुविधुरमधुपे मयी भवेत्कस्य वोत्कण्ठा ॥

The following anonymous verses are in praise of Kābilendra:-

विस्कार्य व्योमगंगा बलदुरुलहरी कैतवात्केसराली-
रुचैर्मास्तिष्कदेशे हिमकरकपटान् मण्डलीकृत्य पुच्छम् ।
दिङ्नामारभ्यलम्बस्तव विशदपशः केसरीकाबिलेन्द्र
ब्रह्मण्डारण्यवीथी गिरिगहनदरी सम्भ्रमी भ्रमतीति ॥
बेलासुलब्ध हेलालितधरणिमुद्राहिनी कोटिपूरै-
रुद्वेष्टकाबिलेन्द्र प्रचलजलनिधिः पालनायोज्ज्वलम्भे ।
स्यान्मग्न मेदिनीयं प्रचलभुजबलप्रौढतत्त्वन्द्रहास-
ज्वालाभिः संततं चेन्न दहति बहवा वीतिहोत्रोदपेता (?) ॥

( 27 ) Śrīpāla Kavirāja, a contemporary of Hemacandra, ( c.
1070 A. D. ). There is also the famous Digambara scholar, Śrīpāla Traividya, the disciple of Mallisena Maladhārī, a great Tārkika, poet, etc.

( 28 ) विद्या, विज्जिका, विजयाङ्ग, विज्जा—earlier than Rājasekhara, probably later than Daṇḍin and Śaṅkarācārya, if she is the author of Kaumudī-Mahotsava ( Sa. Ka. I-2-3; etc.). A Kanyāṭaka princess. The śamasyā पयोधिर्जलाधिः पयोधिर्दधिर्वाताधिः चारिधिः is said to have been completed by Vidyā ( Sa. Ka. V-74-1). The same is attributed with different completion to Lolla Lakṣmīdhara in the court of Kṛṣṇa Deva Rāya of Vijayanagara.

( 29 ) Vijñātātman, Vijñānātman, ( Sa. Ka. V-65-2 ); author of a commentary on Śvetāśvatara, c. 1100 A. D.

रम्यं हर्म्यतलं न किं वसतये श्रव्यं न मेयादिकं
किं वा प्राणसमागममुखं नैवाधिकं प्रीतये ।
किंतु भान्तपतत्पतंगपवनव्यालोलदीपाङ्कुर
छाया चंचलयाकलय्य सकलं सन्तो वनान्तं गताः ॥

( Also found in Bhartṛhari ).

( 30 ) Vyāsātīrtha, different from the Mādhva author of the 16th century, earlier than Jalhana.

भवश्च पदहं चेश द्वाविमौ जनिता त्वया ।
परस्परविभागं त्वं न करोषि कथं प्रभो ॥

( 31 ) Vaidya Bhānupāṇḍita, the real author of Jalhana's Sūktimuktāvalī; verses in Sūktimuktāvalī and Sūktīratnabhāra.

( 32 ) Sakala Vidyā ( dhara )cakravartī.—The Vidyācakravartins were the hereditary court-poets of the Hoysala dynasty from the time of Ballāla II down to Ballāla III. The first Vidyācakravartī was the royal priest to Ballāla II, the second wrote Gadyakarnāmṛta in the time of Narasimha II and Someśvara, the third in the time of Ballāla III wrote commentaries on Kāvya-prakāśa, Alamkāra-Sarvasva and on Virūpākṣa Pañcāśikā. He is also the author of Rukmiṇī Kalyāṇa. ( Sū. Ra. Hā. 31, 249; 43, 195, 198, 217, 218 ).

जीवनग्रहणे नम्रा गृहीत्वा पुनरुक्तताः ।

किं कनिष्ठाः किञ्च ज्येष्ठा घटीयन्त्रस्य दुर्जनाः ॥

( Sū. Ra. Hā. I-32-42 )

( 33 ) Sarvajña Someśvara, the Cālukya emperor and author of Mānasāra ( quoted profusely in Sūktīratnabhāra ).

( 34 ) Samantabhadra, probably the great Jaina scholar who wrote Āptamīmāṃsā, Gandahastimahābhāṣya, etc. The praise of Keśava does not necessarily mean that he was a Hindu.

लक्ष्मीं यत्परिचारकीति नयनं यस्येति मासां पतिं
यस्यादार्थमवेति नाकसरिते येनोद्धतेति श्रुतिम् ।

ईशं यत्तनुभागभागिति जनः शुश्रूषते सादरं
 भूयाद्विश्वनमस्यमानमाहिमा भूयै स वः केशवः ॥
 सन्तः कण्टकिताः कथं यदि कृता निष्कण्टका मेदिनी
 प्रख्याता यदि ते गुणाः कथमथ प्रस्तौति दोषं जनः ।
 नीतावयव भुरन्धरो यदि भवान्कस्मादनीतिः प्रजा
 वृत्त देव न चित्रमेव हि न चेच्चित्रं विभक्ते कथम् ॥

(Sa. Ka. I-63-2; III-13-1).

- ( 35 ) Śimhappayya, Singappayya :—a Kannaḍa name.
 नदीतीरे शास्त्राभिनवतरंगाम्रसलिलै- र्मुहुर्मूले सिक्तः कलयसि दलाटम्बरमिदम् ।
 न चैवं जानीषे सरल यदलं लूनधरिणः
 सुखस्पर्शाच्छिन्नो गुरुपतनहेतुर्व्यतिकरः

(Sū. Mu. 30-6).

यामस्ते शुभमस्तु रोहिणगिरे ...

(Sū. Mu. 30-2).

आमुग्रांगुलिपल्लवी कचभरे ...

(Sū. Ra. Sa.).

( 36 ) Śākalyamalla, the author of Udāra-Rāghava, also called Kavimalla. He was the son of Śākalya Mādhava probably the same as Śākalya Mādhava or Navilgunda Mādīrāja, the contemporary of Baṅkarasa. He gives his son's name as Māca probably the real name of Kavimalla or Śākalyamalla. Śākalyamalla was the contemporary of the first Dipdima Arupagiri-nātha in the court of Pratāpa Rudra II and of Nāgaṇa Kavi and Vidyācakravartī III in the court of Ballāla III.

एकोऽभूत्पुलिनात्ततस्तु नलिनादन्योऽपि नाकोरभूत् ।
 प्राच्यास्ते त्रय एव दिव्यकवयो दीव्यन्तु देव्या गिरा ॥
 अर्वाचो यदि गद्यपद्यरचनाचातुर्यवामुल्लता-
 स्तान् सर्वानतिशय्य खेलतितरां शाकल्लमल्लः कविः ।

( 37 ) Yādava Prakāśa, the author of the well-known lexicon and probably the guru of Rāmānujācārya ( c. 1070 A. D.).

नाथो नः पुरुषोत्तमे त्रिजगतामेकाधिपे चेतसा
 सेष्ये स्वस्य पदस्य दातारि सुरे नारायणे तिष्ठति ।
 यं किञ्चित्पुरुषार्थं कतिपयधामेक्षानव्यर्थदं
 सेवायै मुमया नहीनरमहो मुक्ता वराका वयम् ॥
 चक्षुः पश्यतु केशवं मम हरेर्वाचं शृणोतु श्रुतिः
 जिह्वा नित्यमनन्तनाममुधया सौहित्यमभ्यस्यतु ।

सूर्धा माधवपादपद्मरजसः स्पर्शेन पूतोऽस्तु मे ।

श्रीकान्तं परिरभ्य सौरभमरं प्राप्नोतु माघं मम ॥

( Sū. Rā. Hā. also attributed to Sarvajña Nārāyaṇa by Jalhana ).

The following verses appear to be in praise of Karpātaka kings by some anonymous authors.

Ballāḷa, probably Hoysala Ballāḷa II (1171-1220 ).

बल्लाल क्षोणिपाल स्वदहित नगरे संचरन्ती किराती
कीर्णान्यालोक्य रत्नान्युत्तरखादिरंगारशंकाकुलंगी ।
महा श्रीखण्डखण्डं तदुपरिसुकुलीभूतनेत्रा धमन्ती
श्यासामोदानुयातेर्मधुकरनिकरैर्मशंका विभर्ति ॥

Rāmanātha ( Hoysala ? ).

करकम्पितखट्वादिभीमे रणसज्जाहितरामनाथवीरे ।
अरिभूभुदमर्त्यसुन्दरीणामचलत् दक्षिणवामलोचनानि ॥

Narasimha ( Hoysala or Vijayanagara ).

आहवे जगदुद्वण्डराजमण्डलराहवे ।
श्रीनृसिंहमहीपाल स्वस्त्यस्तु तव बाहवे ॥

A similar verse in praise of the Reddī chief Anavema is as follows :—

अनमेव महीपाल स्वस्त्यस्तु तव बाहवे ।
आहवे रिपुदोर्दण्डचण्डमण्डलराहवे ॥
द्विर्भावः पुष्पकेतोः विबुधविटपिनां पीनरुक्त्वं विकल्पः
चिन्तारत्नस्य वीप्सा तपस्तनुभुवो वासवस्य द्विरुक्तिः ।
द्वितं देवस्य दैत्याधिपमथनकलाकेलिकारस्य कुर्वन्
आनन्दं कौविदानां जयति विजयते श्रीनृसिंहक्षितिन्द् ॥

Venkaṭapati ( of Vijayanagara ).

अत्र मन्मथमिवातिसुन्दरं दानवारिमिव दिव्यतेजसम् ।
शीलराजमिव धैर्यशालिनं वेद्वि वेङ्कटपतिं महीपतिम् ॥

Bhairava ( of Tuluva ? )

धनानि विद्वत्कविमण्डलीषु पञ्चपुत्राणामपि कामिनीषु ।
वर्षन्ति वज्राण्यरिधारणीषु श्रीभैरवक्षोणिमणिः कटाक्षाः ॥

The following is attributed to Śaṅkaragana, probably the Traikūṭaka chief of the 6th century.

कमलमनम्भासि कमले कुवलयमेतानि कनकलतिकायाम् ।
सा च सुकुमारमुभगेत्युत्पातपरम्परा केऽयम् ॥

( Sū. Mu. ).

WORD AND SENSE

BY

S. S. SURYANARAYANA SASTRI

The great poet who likened the conjunction of word and sense to the union between Pārvatī and Paramaśvara was assuredly right, since the former challenges understanding as much as the latter. There is no mystery in the former from the view-point of ordinary usage any more than there is in the latter for the average Hindu who knows something of his gods. The complacency of the latter is shocked, however, when he comes to learn, as he will some time, that Pārvatī is not a different entity, but only the śakti of Īvara, the śaktimān, and therefore non-different from him; if non-different, why speak of them as two? And how can any relation co-exist with non-difference? The questions that arise as to word and sense are at least as difficult.

We are all familiar with the time-honoured discussions as to connotation and denotation. The view generally prevalent is that there are really no non-connotative words, that every word both signifies certain attributes and indicates certain existents. If no attributes were signified, the denotative function would be impossible; if attributes alone were signified, the word would be defective in the absence of specification as to where and how these are realised; the least measure of indication involves at least the implication that the qualities belong to reality. Between the extreme limits of the Proper Name and the Abstract Name, we have several grades of inter-related connotation and denotation. It has also been noted that, with increase of denotation, connotation becomes less definite; where the latter gets to be precise, the former gets narrow.

There is a good deal to be said in favour of this general position. Words are applied to objects because of attributes present in the latter and signified by the former; the connotation is the determinant of the application (pravyṛtti-nimitta); it comprises those attributes on account of which a name is applied and in the absence of which it would not be applied. It is meaningless to say that a word is what it is and functions as it should, though it has no pravṛtti-nimitta. When this universal essential attribute (or set of attributes) is known, the particulars are also known therewith.

Right at this stage there comes a difficulty; are the connotation and denotation given together so as to constitute the meaning, or does connotation come first, constituting the primary meaning? The answers given in Indian philosophy are well known; we may concentrate on the answers of the Navya-Naiyāyikas who held that the jāti-vyakti complex is the meaning and of the Advaitins who held jāti to be the primary sense. One objection to the former view bases itself on the indefiniteness and innumerable character of the particulars denoted; 'man' denotes all human beings all over the globe, whether in the past, present or future; a word thus indeterminate in meaning can serve no purpose. Our interest is no doubt in particulars; but these are signified secondarily, since the generic must of necessity lead up to the particular wherein it exists; but the denotation is apprehended in the same act of knowledge.

This position of the Advaitin is on the face of it difficult to accept, postulating both secondary implication and apprehension by the same act of knowledge as the primary sense. This difficulty apart, the possibility of knowing the jāti apart from the vyakti-s is itself in question. What is essential or generic is not fixed but variable; when the vyakti is unitary it disappears; for to the individual as such no quality is non-essential; where the particulars become innumerable, the jāti dwindles again into little that is definite; for what is essential to an indefinite number admits little of precise determination. Despite the falsity of the inverse ratio view, we have to admit that connotation does vary with the denotation; the former does determine the latter, but the relation is not one-sided; denotation too determines the connotation. If the vyakti-s are what they are because of the jāti, the jāti would not be such but for the vyakti-s. In such a relation of reciprocal determination, what is the propriety of claiming one alone to be the meaning or even primary meaning of a word?

The other views, however, seem even less satisfactory. If the particular alone be the meaning, no word, as has been pointed out, can be used for two instants successively, the particular of the second instant differing from that of the first. And because of the indefiniteness of the particulars, the word-sense too would be indefinite and valueless. We are thus faced with the difficulty that, while the particular should be part of the primary significance of the word, it cannot intelligibly be so. The universal cannot be signified apart from the particular, nor the particular apart from the universal. To put either first is unjustifiable; but to take the two together somehow is only to mask a difficulty instead of solving it. It is more correct to recognise the sense as jāti-cum-vyakti than to dismiss the vyakti or treat it as secondary. But this is in the last resort to admit that the sense of no word can be definite. And in a new sense we shall have to agree with La Rochefoucauld that language is an invention to hide the thoughts of man.

If the jāti could become as precise as the vyakti and the vyakti as determinate as the jāti, if the universal is in no sense abstract and the particular to no extent finite, connotation and denotation would be equal one to the other and sense of the word would be wholly definite. A word, then, to fulfil its function adequately, should be significant neither of abstract qualities nor of finite entities, but of the concrete universal, the absolute that is in particulars and above particulars; the infinitude of quality will be expressed not in abstraction, but as real, and the determinateness of existence will be signified as universal, not as particular. The only truly significant word will thus be the Absolute, the Infinite, Brahman or some other synonym. All other words can be significant only in a smaller degree, or as themselves ultimately signifying the concrete Real. Words ultimately signify what ensouls them; since the concrete universal is their self, as indeed it is the self of all things, it is signified by all words: Brahman is sarva-śabda-vācya.

This is, however, not a position acceptable to the thoroughgoing absolutist, for whom the concept of the concrete universal has no charms, as it is only a device to conceal a contradiction. We cannot merely lump together identity and difference, the universal and the particular. If the word cannot signify the bare particular, its reference to the concrete universal is in no better case; for the alleged concreteness has to be in innumerable and indefinite places and times. The reference to Brahman is only an apparent solution; for Brahman is conceived as that which ensouls the entire world, sentient and non-sentient; and the indefiniteness of the latter cannot but affect the sense of word 'Brahman'; and the taint will be as great if not greater in respect of other words.

The conclusion therefore seems inevitable that no word is fully or adequately significant, not even the word 'Brahman.' Ultimate reality is therefore beyond the reach of words, worldly or scriptural. And for the Advaitin this position is very acceptable since words to apply to the Real should have connotation, a pravṛtti-nimitta, comprising gūḥya; how, then, can any word apply to what is nirguṇa? Again, Brahman is one, non-dual; it has no jāti; how can any word (which primarily signifies jāti) apply to Brahman? What is in the sphere of words is the qualified, the saguna, Reality conceived as creator, sustainer, etc. But this, in the Advaitin's view, is phenomenal with only a relative degree of validity. It is the express significance of the word 'Brahman'. Since however, this express sense reveals a contradiction (like the sense of the phrase 'hamlet on the Gāṅgā'), the word passes beyond to the implication of the nirguṇa. The suprarelational and attributeless is thus the implied, not the express, sense of the word. It may be urged that even implied sense is a word-sense. Even so, there is an important difference between expression and implication, one which cannot be lost sight of and is sufficient to justify the view that the Real is inexpressible.

Further, even in relation to the concrete universal, the word occupies a peculiar position. Words like 'pot' and 'cloth' seem to be entities on a par with what they signify and enjoying some mysteriously established relation with those objects. The word 'Brahman' or 'Real' is, however, a part of what it professes to signify. Even in a pluralist system like Madhva's there is this disparity, that while words, like most objects, are dependent reals, God is an independent real. Thus we are faced with a situation where a dependent or a part or an appearance professes to signify the independent or the whole or the real. If the reference of the word 'pot' to the corresponding entity be called expression, the other relation should certainly be recognised as distinct. Nor may it be objected that the pot too possesses the property of being called by that name; for the name is not a dependent or a part in relation to the pot, in the way in which it is in relation to Brahman. And if this much disparity has to be admitted, very little extra effort is needed to treat the word not as expressing but as implying nirguṇa Brahman.

The resultant position is as follows: words have no definite significance in relation to particulars; even the concrete universal is only a half-way house; they may signify nirguṇa Brahman, but that is only by way of implication. Are we then to say that words have no primary sense, except such as is indefinite and more or less defective? If all words are thus defective, how do we get a standard of judgment at all?

On absolutist principles, there is bound to be inadequacy, so long as there is duality-of the mark and the marked, śabda and artha. The imperfections of the finite are revealed by absolutist dialectic in the artha-prapañca; they are no less evident in the śabda-prapañca; witness the discussions as to whether there is sphoṭa, and whether the signification is of the related (anvīta) or the ananvīta (non-related). And the difficulties make themselves felt even in the inter-relations between the two spheres. If Brahman is both the prīva and the fulfilment of the world of things, does it not occupy the same place with regard to the world of words too? If Brahman is the supreme vastu, is it not also the supreme śabda?

We cannot rest, it would appear, anywhere short of the non-duality of sound and sense; the word is no longer more abstract than the sense, nor the sense more limited than the word, since the two are non-different. Omkāra is Brahman, not the name of Brahman.

If we stop short of this and continue to distinguish between the name and the named, we may treat Brahman as a proper name, despite the etymology given by the Advaitin himself. Though some Indian grammarians would treat the yadrochā śabdas as devoid of connotation (pravyūtti-nimitta), that is not the final word of either Western Logic or of Indian Grammar. Proper names are demonstrative rather than definitory; but Bosanquet who says this admits also connotation for proper names. And there does not seem to be a difference of kind between proper and other names: for, of any word-sound, the immediate effect, says Mr. A. H. Gardiner, 'can be only to identify, and ... its distinguishing power is only secondary' (The Theory of Proper Names, p. 36 n). 'Clearly' he says elsewhere, 'a proper name is a word in which the identifying, and consequently the distinguishing, power of the word-sound is exhibited in its purest and most compelling form' (p. 39); 'though the ability to mark distinctions depends in all words upon these distinctive sounds, in proper names it depends on that alone, or nearly alone' (p. 64). One cannot, however, follow Mr. Gardiner all the way. Since among other necessary conditions for the use of proper names (or the use of names proper), he mentions the existence of a plurality of sufficiently similar things. This seems to us unnecessary, if pressed too far; even the unique has to be identified; and 'Brahman' may be a proper name. Here too, we have some plurality, from which distinction has to be effected; Brahman has to be distinguished from pradhāna, kāla, avabhāva, etc.; but these are not on a par with Brahman in respect of reality; while the latter is vāstava, the former are kalpita. If this difference of grade, as between the distinguished, be acceptable to Mr. Gardiner, his theory may command our acceptance.

Why then is an etymology given for 'Brahman' suggesting the presence of connotation? Some connotation, we have already said, is not absent from proper names, though it plays little or no part in the function of identification; where distinction however is to be effected, it is helpful. The stock example of akhaṇḍārtha may be of some use here; the moon in the starry firmament may be indicated by the finger; where that indication does not suffice, words like the 'brightest luminary' are of use, still for purposes of identification, not of description. In the same way, the name 'Brahman' identifies the Absolute, with or without the help of the connoted quality. To the dilemma propounded by Deśika:

"avācyam itī vācyam ced brahma vācyatvam ꠆cchati avācyam ity avācyam ced brahma vācyatvam ꠆cchati" the Advaitin may reply that Brahman is both vācya and avācya with a difference of sense; it is word-identifiable, but not word-describable. In so far as there is an appearance of the latter, it is secondary.

With this, however, we seem to have arrived at a view different from that of traditional Advaita, as set out earlier. It was there said that the saguna is the express vācya, while the nirguna is vācya only in the sense of secondary implication. A consideration of Mr. Gardiner's theory, however, raises the question whether the primary function of all language is not identification, distinction (to say nothing of description) being secondary. If the answer be in the affirmative, our views as to primary and secondary usage of words will have to suffer a change; the nirguna would be vācya in the primary sense; for to that alone does a name proper properly apply; the saguna is vācya in the secondary sense. And the adoption of such a view, if possible, would have the merit of conforming to the wider implications of the doctrine of akhaṇḍārtha; for if the theory of impartite sense is to hold its ground, it must be a view, not of one possible sense, but of the only possible sense, though it is most often hidden from view by our own laziness or practical indifference. There will be the need to revise Advaita terminology, but the core of Advaita doctrine will remain unaffected and will perhaps be strengthened by its association with modern speculations in Logic and the science of language.

Dr. St. JOHN ON INDIA

BY

S. N. SEN

Dr. St. John's Indian career was brief but not uneventful. The first trained lawyer to be appointed a judge at Bombay, he witnessed the end of Keigwin's rebellion, took charge of the island from Sir Thomas Grantham as King's Judge, assumed the style and rank of Chief Justice, it appears without sufficient legal warrant, incurred the displeasure of Sir Josia and Sir John Child, was unceremoniously dismissed and left India in disgrace. He came, he quarrelled and he got the sack; and all this happened within the brief period of three years. He took up the duties of Judge Advocate in November 1684, got his dismissal in September 1687, and left for home early next year (12th January 1688) in the good ship Success.

St. John was by no means a man of straw. A member of Middle Temple, he had received the degree of Doctor of Laws from the University of Leyden and when the East India Company wanted a trained lawyer well versed in civil laws to preside over the Admiralty Court at Bombay, the selection went to St. John. He enjoyed the influential patronage of Lord Rochester and Sir Leoline Jenkins and had therefore friends at court who were not to be lightly trifled with. Zinzan, the Deputy Governor of Bombay, referred in more than one letters to St. John's powerful patrons at home. Pompous and self-opinionated, St. John was by no means devoid of good sense or ability. His report on Keigwin's rebellion was marked by clear insight and rare political acumen. It is extremely doubtful whether his attempt to extend his jurisdiction would under normal circumstances, lead to a breach with Sir John Child whose friendship and good opinion he had at first tried to cultivate. But the General did not believe in the independence of the judiciary and St. John was not prepared to submit to his dictation in matters pertaining to law. His independence was treated as insolence and insubordination and led to dismissal and disgrace. As Sir Charles Fawcett points out, "It is clear, therefore, that what really influenced Child in deciding that Dr. St. John should not be given the Chief Justiceship of Bombay was the latter's taking cognisance of accusations against Child himself. This was regarded as insolence and a presumptuous challenge to the authority of the 'General' by one who, under the Commission of the Company, was to be subordinate to the President and the Deputy Governor of Bombay." St. John was, therefore, first superseded and then dismissed. Wyborne and Vaux who were preferred to him were laymen and relied more on their common sense than their legal learning which was necessarily limited. St. John resolved to place his grievances before the King and described the political condition of India in a letter addressed to His Majesty. Evidently the draft was completed while he was still at Bombay and it was revised subsequently during his voyage home. This was probably the last epistle that St. John was destined to write on Indian affairs. He reached home in July 1688; the Glorious Revolution of that year ruined once for all what little prospects he had of avenging his wrongs. In August of that year Josiah had assured John that St. John "is a poor inconsiderate and weak man, and signifies no more than cypher here." The cypher counted for less than nothing when the more substantial figures from whom he derived his importance left the political arena.

A copy of the letter printed below was enclosed by St. John in his letter to Pepys on the 29th August 1688. It ultimately found its way to the Bodleian Library of Oxford and is now published with the kind permission of the Keeper of the Western Manuscripts.

St. John's letter on India derived its importance more from its authorship than from its substance. Very few, if any, of his countrymen in India could claim St. John's education and learning. He had picked up a few Persian words during his short stay at Bombay and had access to people of power and prestige. Yet his account is not free from chronological inaccuracies. He rightly observes that the Portuguese anxiety to please the Grand Moghul offended the Marathas, and led to the Luso-Maratha War, it is interesting to note that the fall of Bijapur did not mean the immediate subjugation of the Kingdom as a whole, but what interests us most is the reluctance of the Surat merchants to make any complaint against the English who had captured most of their ships at sea. Bombay, defenceless and weak, apprehended Moghul invasion and there was alarm and panic among the civil population which ultimately proved groundless.

If St. John's dates and facts are not free from error are we justified in placing implicit faith in every information that the less educated and by no means better informed English factors transmitted to their friends and superiors in England? Their evidence can be unquestioningly accepted only when the Factors speak from personal knowledge and claim first-hand information about contemporary events. St. John's criticism of Child and the East India Company may not be fair and impartial but his review of current Indian events fairly reflects the popular views about men and things.

MSS. RAWL. A 171 FOL. 52 ob.

May it please your most sacred Ma<sup>tie</sup>

As I constantly discharged all care and endeavours in remitting to your Ma<sup>tie</sup> y<sup>e</sup> best intelligence I could by his grace of Canterbury his conveyance ( as enjoyned by his late ma<sup>tie</sup> of ever blessed memory ) so finding to my greate griefe how things frame backward and untoward through y<sup>e</sup> Ill managery of those att y<sup>e</sup> helme there, I held it now my bounden duty, rather to discharge y<sup>e</sup> reputation of my discretion, then not faithfully your sacred Person wth some impartiall intimation thereof, in w<sup>ch</sup> I have y<sup>e</sup> more bestowed my paines att this time because I am very well assured, your ma<sup>tie</sup> will find it as different from what may be represented by y<sup>e</sup> East India Comp<sup>a</sup>, as true in substance, and every individual, as I doe in all submissive humbleness leave with the depth of your Royall judgem<sup>t</sup> and consideration and when I shall have y<sup>e</sup> honour to satisfie your Ma<sup>tie</sup> wth y<sup>e</sup> advantages. I had in drawing on y<sup>e</sup> best intelligence before any other of your subjects in India, I humbly conceive it will not only prove of entire satisfaction, but also of as pregnant conviction ag<sup>t</sup> all suggestion to the contrary.

The eldest prince Sha Alum sonne to Orangsha being arrived wth a formidable army Sombajee Raja by the same Princes brother Sultan Eckbar's<sup>1</sup> advice and persuasions, struck up a peace with y<sup>o</sup> Portuguese, as dreading y<sup>o</sup> Mogulls Forces w<sup>ch</sup> were approached so neare him, and already entred his countrey, but kept not his word not longer then till Sha Allum had ascended the Gaat againe<sup>2</sup>, y<sup>e</sup> season of the yeare not permitting so vast an army to stay any longer in Concan for want of water and forrage, w<sup>ch</sup> caused a greate mortallity among y<sup>e</sup> souldiers, horses, elephants and oxen. The Mogull his father observing and finding by experience that he could not doe any good upon Sombajee untill he reduced his confederates to obedience (like a sound Politician and experienced warrier) resolved to march to Visapore and besiege it, w<sup>ch</sup> he successfully compassed, and after he had spent two yeares and halfe before it, w<sup>ch</sup> a greate loss of his men, haveing so farr exhasted his treasure, y<sup>t</sup> he melted downe all his vessells of gold and silver to pay his Army tooke it in December 86, it being and is held to be the strongest and best fortified citty of all India<sup>3</sup>, he being a Shai<sup>4</sup> by Religion different to y<sup>e</sup> Mogulls, he being a Sunny, its king Sicandersha<sup>5</sup> falling also into his hands, together with all his vast treasure; He haveing found good success here after he had settled

---

1. Prince Akbar arrived at Sambhaji's Court in June 1681.

2. Sambhaji raised the siege of Goa as Shah Alam advanced towards the city. Peace was made but hostilities were renewed when Shah Alam began his retreat in March 1684.

3. The siege began in April 1685 and Bijapur capitulated in September 1686. The siege therefore did not last more than a year and six months (actually five months and 11 days).

4. Shia.

5. Sikandar Adil Shah.

52 R

all matters in the safest posture and manner he could in y<sup>t</sup> Kingdome of Deccan (tho made no perfect conquest thereof in regard that Serja Can and other omraus held out still<sup>6</sup>, and would not come in to yield and submit to him) leaveing considerable forces att Visapore, marched away wth the rest of his Army towards Hyderabad, and streightly besieged y<sup>e</sup> castle of Golcundah, where att first he found such strong resistance by y<sup>e</sup> besieged as obliged him to retreat above [ * * * ] Court and leave all his Artillery behind him, which was taken and carried into y<sup>e</sup> castle together with three eminent omraus who had command of 3 distinct batteries which they raised against y<sup>e</sup> castle, who thus made prisoners of Warr,<sup>7</sup> were not withstanding most honourably and civilly used by y<sup>t</sup> King Abdul Mohsana, who commanded his principall ministers and officers to shew them his stores of provisions, powder, shott, ammunition etc., he had for endureing a long siede, who urged might last and hold out eight yeares if it should be continued so long, and haveing given them (like a noble enemy) their libertie and to each a rich serpas and horse, desired y<sup>m</sup> that when they arrived att courte to present y<sup>e</sup> Mogull their master his most humble service, and make manifest to him how desirous he was to submit to any thing in reason his imperial majestie should require of him, so that he would be pleased to lett him live in peace and amity with him, and that if they found him averse thereunto, then to give him an accompt how he was provided with all manner of necessaries for a valiant and long siede; But they did so farr exasperate the Mogull, as that he immediately gave order for cut-

6. According to Moghul account Sharoz Khan also entered the imperial service with a mansab of six thousand and the title of Rustam Khan.

7. One of the prisoners was Ghairat Khan, Chief of Aurangzeb's Artillery. The captured officers were treated kindly and sent back to the Moghul camp.

ting off of halfe their muntsub<sup>s</sup> or pay, and sent them to Bengala<sup>b</sup> ( which is looked by such as are in the Mogull's service no better then exile ) and resolved to returne to Golconda and besiege it anew, so soone as he recruited his army sending his sonne Sha Allum in y<sup>e</sup> interim wth such troopes as he had under his command as forerunner of the army, who being arrived there instead of using hostility against y<sup>e</sup> King ( blinded with greate presents and selfe interest as most of the Mahometan princes are ) concluded (without any commission from his father for the same ) a peace wth him w<sup>ch</sup> y<sup>e</sup> Mogull his father had no sooner notice of then he caused him and all his sonnes to be apprehended and secured under very close and rigorous confinement, and so continueth to this time for any thing I know to the contrary.<sup>10</sup>

Orangsha y<sup>e</sup> Mogull being thus enraged ag<sup>t</sup> Abdull Mozensha<sup>11</sup> and y<sup>e</sup> rather because he is a Shai in Religion and not a Sanny prosecuted the warr more vigorously, that he never rested till he became conqueror both of that King and Kingdome, he entring that castle<sup>12</sup> on the 24th of the Mahometan moone Zulkhad w<sup>ch</sup> was y<sup>e</sup> 2nd of our October 1687 and found in one vault onely of ready money no less then 50 crores of pagodoes of rupees 4½ each, w<sup>ch</sup> makes sterling £252 112500 and still finds out more daily under ground particular treasure accumulated by y<sup>e</sup> greate and famous prince Ram Raja ( who kept his

53 66

8. Mansab.

9. St. John was correctly informed. Ghairat Khan was degraded and transferred to Bengal. Another noble lost his title.

10. Here St. John's chronology is wrong. Shah Alam and his sons had been placed under arrest prior to Ghairat Khan's disgrace.

11. Abul Hasan Qutb Shah.

12. Golkonda surrendered on the 31st September 1687. The discrepancy, however, is trifling if we take into account the difference between the old and the new styles. 24th Zulquada corresponds to 1st October, 1687.

Courte in Narsinga<sup>13</sup> and other successive princes of y<sup>t</sup> empire of diamonds, Jewells and other precious stones so many and such a vast quantity as the Persians very properly call it Beh Bah<sup>14</sup> that is to say Inestimable and not to be valued.

This victorious prince ever since he made himselfe master of this castle busied himselfe mostly in sending away y<sup>e</sup> treasure and acquisitions made to Agra and Dilly to secure all in his Impregnable and strongholds there; By late letters and Intelligence there I understand that he had sent thither 5000 camells loaden with gold and silver w<sup>ch</sup> hath enabled him to make warr with all y<sup>e</sup> Rajahs and Princes of India that will not buckle and bend to him submissingly and subjugate them especially those who are not of his owne superstitious Mahometan Religion.

His yearly revenue of Hyndostan before he conquered these two kingdoms of Deccan and Golcundah amounted unto 44 crors of rupees (rupee is ster 2s 3d), and now is guessed and calculated to importe verry neare 100<sup>15</sup>, w<sup>ch</sup> is sterling £ 112500000. Tis credibly reported y<sup>t</sup> he sent a very potent Army ag<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> Queen of Canara, whome if he subdueth will prove of very bad consequence not onely to y<sup>e</sup> Portuguese but us also; in regard it will deprive both of being supplied with rice, Goa cannot subsist without Barcelor and Mangalore, which is our case also, Bombay being so small that it is not at all able to subsist of itselfe, and without territories annexed to it is no better then an insignificant cypher.

13. Vijayanagar, so called by the Portuguese after the founder of the 2nd Dynasty. It is however extremely unlikely that all the hoarded wealth of Vijayanagar went to Golkonda alone.

14. Behāh (Persian) Inestimable, and not Beh Bah.

15. The new conquests could not have added even one tenth of the sum mentioned to Aurangzib's revenue.

That this Mogull Orangsha is a capitall enemy to all Christians and others, who are not Mahometan votaries, is most certaine and obvious, and it is very observable how politiquely he laboureth to extirpate and shoulder them out of all India, especially Hyndostan; for having conquered Canara, is resolved to send another army and reduce under his obedience all y<sup>e</sup> Malabars country along as farr as Ramser to which wee commonly give y<sup>e</sup> appellation of Cape Comorine, he being already master of all y<sup>e</sup> inward countrey of Carnateck and coast of Cormandell as far as Jaggernatt and Ballosoe, w<sup>ch</sup> confineth wth his greates and vast province of Bengala (formerly divided into severall kingdomes). In what condition our English att Forte St. George are for want of good intelligence cannot informe, I feare the English in the Bay of Bengala (of whome t<sup>is</sup> reported to have made peace with Shaesta Can y<sup>e</sup> Mogull's unckle<sup>16</sup>) that t<sup>is</sup> not att all honourable as it should be, for in y<sup>e</sup> judgem<sup>t</sup> of those understanding experienced persons I discoursed with, it had been much better, and farr more adviceable to have delayed it for a time, rather then to have concluded it so inconsistent wth y<sup>r</sup> Ma<sup>ties</sup> honour and prejudice to y<sup>e</sup> publike weale of y<sup>e</sup> English nation but as long as it may consist with some present convenience or interest of the Company (w<sup>ch</sup> never regard futurity, or present improvement upon expence) t<sup>is</sup> not attall strange to me that you<sup>r</sup> Ma<sup>ties</sup> honour be forgett, when I can myselfe instance wherein I argued y<sup>e</sup> pointe wth true honesty and integritie viz Your Ma<sup>ties</sup> honour ag<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> Gen<sup>ll</sup> and Cenne<sup>ll</sup> of Suratt; and the answer made by Gen<sup>ll</sup> Child was; this is y<sup>e</sup> King's honour and this is my Right Hon<sup>ble</sup> mas-

53 R

16. Reference is obviously made here to the Sutanati convention of 1637.

sters interest, whose bread I eat, and theire interest shall precede now and take place, is in effect it did, and in my judgement most most disgracefully.

In this coast of India there are some hopes afforded of better at least more reputable success,<sup>17</sup> if the newes be true that arrived lately before my departure, the Mogull is inclined to be kind to y<sup>e</sup> English, he haveing declared when he was inform'd that they had deserted their Factory in Suratt for the ill usage they had from y<sup>e</sup> severall Govern<sup>r</sup> of that place, and plenary restitution should be made them for what had been taken from them by any injust and indirect meanes, and that they should enjoy the same liberties, priviledges and immunities that were granted them by his father Sha Jehan and his anncestors, and for many yeares after he himselfe was settled on y<sup>e</sup> present throne enjoyed, he haveing sent a greate Omraw Muctier Can, whose daughter was given in marriage to his youngest sonne Caim Bux haft Hazary of 7000 horse who is going to be Suba of Ahmahdavad, haveing Cambais, Baroach and Suratt under his jurisdiction to examine and compose those differences and distractions w<sup>ch</sup> argueth some probabillity because of its consonancy wth all y<sup>e</sup> Suratt merchants wishes and desires, the principallest of them being you to courte to make theire complaints knowne to the King against y<sup>e</sup> Governours through whose prodigious avarice the Porte is reduced to the present miserable circumstances t'is now involved.

5d ob

Before the merchants resolved to goe, they consultted seriously of whome to complaine, of the English or the Governours, and concluded all unanimously ( Seid Idrous being theire oratour and chieftest of them ) by all meanes of the former governours, viz

---

17. The peace of 1690 was more humiliating.

Cartulub Can, Salabut Can, and Muttamer Can for they considered that if they complained of the English who lately, seized on most of their ships it might so far incense and exasperate y<sup>e</sup> Mogull ag<sup>t</sup> us, as that might cause him to send a strong Army to Bombay, and if he should take it (w<sup>ch</sup> he might easily doe) considering how ill t<sup>e</sup> is fortified and the paucity of men wee have to defend it (these haveing been a greate mortality of late among them) and England a farr off to be recruited upon occasion, yet it would no way benefitt them, but rather to y<sup>e</sup> contrary prejudice them, as they would never expect to have any free commerce nor their ships to navigate y<sup>e</sup> Indian seas but ours would reprove them.

The Mogull is now upon his march towards Ahmudnagger a very strong place on an eminency w<sup>ch</sup> he tooke some yeares since from a Princess called Chan Bibbie<sup>18</sup> much celebrated by these orientall nations for defending her castle and person wth silver bullets and balls instead of iron and leaden ones, and takeing off of a cup of poyson rather than fall into y<sup>e</sup> hands of her enemy alive, it lieth not above ten daies off of Bombay where he intends to make his rendevous, till he hath an absolute conquest Concan and Sombajee Rajah his countries, and captivated him alsoe w<sup>ch</sup> will be easily compassed now, haveing already reduced his confederates to obedience, all whome he will without all doubt send to Goalior<sup>19</sup> w<sup>ch</sup> will be their ultimate habitation in this world, where that mortall and intoxicating drinke of Post will be given them, if not beheaded.

While Orangsha was busie with y<sup>e</sup> siedges Golcundah his third sonne Sultan Eckbar imbarqued himselfe in Aprill last att

---

18. Chand Bibi.

19. Neither Sikandar nor Abul Hasan was imprisoned at Gwalior.

Rajapore<sup>20</sup> for Mascutt where he arrived safely; This Prince had not long rested there before the Emon<sup>21</sup> of y<sup>t</sup> Porte of Arabia (Sultan Benell Arab) shewed himselfe a second Prusias King of Bythinia who betrayed Hanniball to the Romans haveing sought his protection; This perfidious Prince y<sup>e</sup> Arab haveing secretly bargained wth y<sup>e</sup> Mogull Orangsha to deliver him up his sonne for five lacks of rupees (a lack is fifty thousand dollars) w<sup>ch</sup> the young prince haveing notice of, adviced immediately Sha Soliman Equiperour of Persia thereof, who presently upon receipt of his letter dispatched a Can to the Arab Prince with menacing missives, that if he offered the s<sup>d</sup> prince the least disgust, and did not permitt him to come freely and without the least molestation he would certainly send an Army to destroy him and his country, which proved of so greate a terroure and influence, as to suffer him depart peaceably, he arrived and disimbarqued att mino<sup>22</sup> neare unto Assine, where he was so honourably receiued by the Can and Shabunder<sup>23</sup>, who by the King of Persia theire masters express commands, both walked on foote by him takeing hold of y<sup>e</sup> stirrups till he was brought to the garden doore where he lighted from whence to y<sup>e</sup> roome y<sup>t</sup> was prepared for his reception y<sup>e</sup> ground was spread with rich Zerbafts (Zerbaft is a cloth of all gold or silver) on which he and all y<sup>t</sup> followed him treaded, after he had refreshed himselfe a while there, he was attended to Gombroone<sup>24</sup>, where was sett before him twenty five thousand Tomans of gold, (a Persian toman is 20. Akbar sailed from Rajpur in October 1586.

54 R

21. Imam.

22. Probably Minan, to the east of Bundur Abbas.

23. Harbour Master.

24. Modern Bundur Abbas.

sterling 3 £ 6s 8d ) fourteen stately horses with gold trappings all sett with precious stones to be lead in state, 300 horses besides and 1500 Georgian and Sircassian slaves for service and for his accommodation on the way to Spahan<sup>25</sup> y<sup>6</sup> Royal citty of that Empire the rich tent which was Sha Tamas, and used afterwards by Sha Abbas which is allwaies kept in the Cassana<sup>26</sup> or Treasury appointed him, haveing reposed a few daies here, where he was complemented by the English, French and Dutch, he marched away for Laar<sup>27</sup> where he was mett and wellcomed att suitable state and respect by divers Cans and 15000 Cuzelbashes all horse-men and some Cans of the prime rank within a few daies after removed thence to Shiraz where he was expected and receaved also wth no less state then before by as many greate personages and Cuzelbashes who conducted and waited upon him to Spahan,<sup>28</sup> where and how he was receaved and cushamudied or wellcomed. Your Ma<sup>tie</sup> may guess by the Persians naturall propension to magnificence and greateness, he never lighted off his horse to goe into any garden all the way he went and travelled up to Spahan but Zerbaft were spread for him to tread upon, he is so much honoured and esteemed by Shah Soliman as that t'is verily believed that he will give a considerable succour to enter into Hyndostan w<sup>ch</sup>

55 ob

he may easily doe, by way of Kandehear and arrive to sitt on the throne of that vast Empire, all y<sup>e</sup> Rasputts and many angry discontented Omraws being for him.

The Portugueses, after y<sup>e</sup> Don Manosel Lobo de Sylveira was displaced for his ill conduct of warr with Sombajee Rajah and 25. Ispahan.

26. Khazana.

27. About 150 miles to the west of Bunder Abbas.

28. He reached Ispahan in January 1688, after St. John had already embarked for England.

Joseph de Mello de Castro chose in his roome of Capt Generall of the north, soone retooke Carenjah<sup>29</sup> and beat out y<sup>e</sup> enemy, they also mett with good success on the coast of Melinda the last Montzoon,<sup>30</sup> makeing themselves masters of Pather whither they sent four frigotto and a Galiote wth severall families, to re-people it, and about two months since they repossessed themselves of the strong eminency of Asserine, w<sup>ch</sup> they did partly through confederacy partly by force of armes and stratagems it being a place not to be taken by force onely, forty vigilant men in it, being enough to defend and keepe it against 4000, this has so farr enraged Sombagee Rajah as that he threatneth to lay seidge to Chaule and Baccain, but the Rajah is so full-freighted with carefull thoughts now that Orangsha hath subjugated his confederates and is marching against him, that he is not in a capacittie hardly to defend himselfe much less warr upon and enemy.

When I wrote thus farr a letter was brought me to peruse lately brought me from y<sup>e</sup> Mogull's camp of the beginning of December last by one Bowanidas a Nagger Brahmen, directed to Volubvenidas<sup>30a</sup> a late Farmer of y<sup>e</sup> island Bombay, who adviseth that the Mogull is resolved to take Sombagee Rajah alive and because he should not escape him by flying to the Portuguese Countrey for protection, he would lay seidge and take theire countrey first; making himselfe (like a subtle Politician) ignorant of the greates enmity between them, w<sup>ch</sup> evidently manifesteth his implacable aversion to all Christians, tho y<sup>e</sup> Portuguese did from theire first establishment in India most seriously and industriously court the Mogull's amittie never giving but alwaies avoideing the least offence of

---

29. September 1684.

30. Monsoon.

30a. Vallab Venidas was the farmer of customs at Bombay.

theire parte, and if they have suffered of late and lossed a greate part of theire countrey w<sup>ch</sup> Sombajee Rajah tooke and destroyed, it was out of respect and pleasure to serve and gratifie y<sup>e</sup> Mogull by suffering his Army to pass through it when it marched to Calian where Ranmast Can his Generall intrenched himselfe and kept his rendezvous till his master commanded him away againe, besides they well knowing what a potent and formidable Prince in

55 R

Asia he is, theire chiefest study was alwaies to preserve a faire and amicable correspondence with him which was no unadvised policy.

The said Nagger Brahmen being a very intimate friend of Volubrenidas heartily wisheth and beseecheth him not to stay any longer on Bombay, but gett himselfe and his family off of the Island, and secure whatever he hath in Suratt or some other place for the Mogull was much incensed ag<sup>t</sup> the English for seizing his subjects ships and committing many exorbitances in Bengala, so that unless y<sup>e</sup> merchants who are gon to court doe appease him, wee must expect that he will send greate power ag<sup>t</sup> us, and besledge very straitely both by land and sea, his navall armada being in a readiness to sett out expecting a very considerable Fleete of Arabs of Mascatt consisting of 15 salles some very stoute ships with good Europe Artillery supplied by the Interlopers and very full of men very dextrous att small shott, which I have reason to suspect may joyne with the Mogulls, either by confederacy, taken up upon service or upon hire.<sup>30b</sup>

---

30b. Sir G. Campbell writes: "In fact such was the defenceless state of the island that the conquest of it was prevented more by the jealousy of Mukhtyar Khan of the influence which the reduction of it would have given to the Sidi than by the power of the garrison to defend it."

Matters standing thus between us and so potent a Monarch (the greatest that ever wore a Diadem of Hyndostan since y<sup>e</sup> reigne of Tamerlen, whence all the Mogulls are lineally descended, and England att so vast a distance for present succour, it behooveth those who have y<sup>e</sup> management of those weighty and nationall affaires ( to whom I heartily wish a happy progress and conclusion) to peice y<sup>e</sup> Fox's taile to the Lyon's skin, and avoide haveing too many irons in the fire att once, because Genll Child already hath disoblighd y<sup>e</sup> Portuguese French and Dutch, since this rupture wth the Mogull as your Ma<sup>ties</sup> shall understand att leasure, more particularly from the King of Portugall. I doe in all submissive humbleness crave leave to be silent in all occurrences relating to the East India Company and theire servants till I have the honour of attending your Ma<sup>ties</sup> p<sup>ersonally</sup> to satisfie you in your princely wisdoms with all such matters in my bounden duty as fell within the compass of my charge and with the manner of theire usage and carriage to myselfe in the quality of your judge by a speciall commission under the greates Seale of England which they presumed to supersede the ninth of September last to the amazement of all European and Easterne nations, giveing me a discharge in writeing, and telling me I must be maintained from that day by your Ma<sup>ties</sup> or myselfe, if I tarried any longer then the first conveyance presented for Europe, S<sup>r</sup> John Child already alleadgeing a new dispoticall soveraigne power invested in him over all your Ma<sup>ties</sup> subjects in India, with whome in sundry weighty occurrences I could not runn beyond my commission, judgem<sup>t</sup> and conscience as a tooles to serve turne ag<sup>t</sup> his late Ma<sup>ties</sup> Royall and righteous commands and directions att the bare will and arbitrary pleasure of S<sup>r</sup> John Child without against all lawes, w<sup>ch</sup> with all circumstances will be lay<sup>d</sup> open to your sacred Ma<sup>ties</sup> by Persons of approved integritie neare your Royall Person with w<sup>ch</sup> I shall not presume to burthen att present, thus onely that I had patiently borne wth all extremitie and pressures of my owne in that painefull, hazardous, and ingratefull service, till I receaved your Ma<sup>ties</sup> express directions, w<sup>ch</sup> out 'of imploy and meanes among strangers nay my avow'd enemies was altogether impossible for me to accomplish and if true devotion to your Ma<sup>ties</sup> service and my ever bounden duty had suffered my inclinations to come to a resolution, I had chose rather to undergoe the greatest extremitie in this world, then strugle any longer to preserve the inestimable peace of conscience under the unconditionale unbounded authoritie of the said Company and theire servants, as exercised and practiced by them, w<sup>ch</sup> I was under most impulsive necessitie to observe with teares, in my last yeares dispatches to his Grace of Canterbury under the title of Y<sup>r</sup> Ma<sup>ties</sup> prerogative offended defended, but since they proceeded a melo ad peius and I have cause to thank God to be thus delivered from theire warr and strife, as well as theire unnaturall animosities among themselves who cannot endure any concurrent jurisdiction from Y<sup>r</sup> Ma<sup>ties</sup> but what solely invested in themselves, witness the inhuman usages of Capt John Tyrrell, S<sup>r</sup> John Wyborne,<sup>31</sup> and myselve, whom I despaire not God will save from the striveing of unruly People, whose mouth speaketh proud words and theire right hand is a right hand of iniquitie.

56 ob

---

31. Capt. Tyrell was guilty of insolence towards St. John on one occasion. Child interfered with the judicial work of Wyborne and subsequently dismissed him. Tyrell's recommendation, probably as a jurymen, was rejected by Child.

In case the Mogull be mollified or influenced by the solicitations of the merchants that are gon to petition him, it will be happy, and if not wee must expect never to enjoy any peace quietness, or any manner of commerce in India so long as he liveth, this is clearly my opinion, for whither there be any trade in his countrey or no brought by sea he valueth it not, for what is 20 or 25 lacks of rupees to him, w<sup>ch</sup> the customes of Suratt, Bengala and Broach and Cambaya may inporte to yearely, a matter very inconsiderable to his vast Revenue, and there will not be Armenians, Turks and other merchants wanting that will find out waies (as formerly) to supply the trade by land, I say little of the politique Dutch, who all this while sitt still lookeing on how the game is played, who, I dare say are not a little joyfull to see these distractions, who time will manifest, will in y<sup>e</sup> conclusion interest and convenience, and supply Europe sufficiently with all these countrey commodities, as for the French they are not so considerable tho it may animate them much to increase their commerce, the last letters which came from Pundicherry (where theire Principall Factory is now) advice that there were six frigatta men of warr arrived at Syam of theire Kings with an Embassadour and upwards 1000 men with greate quantity of powder, armes, Artillery small and greate, morter pieces, granadoes etc<sup>a</sup> ammunition, what theire designe is, as yett is not certainly knowne, but suspected that they intend to goe and possess themselves of Tenassry and settle there, w<sup>ch</sup> if they compass, will prove of very bad consequence to other nations, especially those that inhabit the coast of Cormandell, who are alwaies supplied with rice from thence, besides t'is a countrey yielding plenty of most excellent strait masts and timber for building of ships, and in all seasons of the yeare a second Bay of Bombay, the situation of the place is so strong by nature that with a little arte added to it, there may be erected inexpugnable fortifications but it is believed the politique Dutch will be vigilant enough over them to overthrow theire designe.

56 R

On the 29th December last arrived in Bombay road a small ship belonging to Generall Child, called y<sup>e</sup> Casar from Forte St George w<sup>ch</sup> brought newes of a greate tempest that hapned on that coaste wherein were upwards of 40 ships lossed, that, where of young Goodlad was commander being also ship wrecked, this escaped by letting its cable slip and putting to Sea yett nevertheless was forced to cutt his maine mast by the bord.

The Resolution arrived safe there three daies after the storme, all the Portuguese who lived under the English att Fort St George are removed thence to St Thome apprehensive that the Mogull will send an army downe to besiege it, there hath been a greate mortality in Bengala and y<sup>e</sup> coast of Cormandell among the English French Portuguese and Dutch besides the countrey people among whome a violent Famine still continueth w<sup>ch</sup> will be our case also on this Coaste if there is not an accomodation concluded between us and Orangsha for all manner of provisions are not onely scarce, but most excessive deare already.

There arrived 3 messus<sup>32</sup> or foote messengers from Suratt wth letters to y<sup>e</sup> Generall from Mr. Harris and Annesley att Suratt w<sup>ch</sup> advice the new Gov<sup>r</sup> Muctier Can haveing shewed himself very civill to them with many promises to intercede with his master very effectually for the English and att theire taking Congee of him he presented Mr. Harris the Ohiefe with a horse and a rich 32. Probably a corruption of jasud.

---

Serpa, (Serpa is a rich garment) and to the Company's Brokers Kisso and Vittall Parracke each a Serpa, he did much insist on the Generall's returne to Suratt w<sup>ch</sup> is w<sup>t</sup> the Moores aime att, but he will avoide that snare for in my opinion it will not be safe for him to approach y<sup>e</sup> place againe without the Mogulls Firman secureing him and the Company's effects and affaires from all violences whatsoever and also theire former priviledges, immunities and stipulations w<sup>ch</sup> they enjoyed in Sha Jahans Reigne reconfirmed. But I looke on those proceedings for no better then meere formalities, neither indeed shall wee really know what to depend upon, or trust unto till the merchants that are gon to court have theire ultimate answer from the King.

57 cb

In a vessell that was lately brought into Bombay harbour lately reprized att Suratt rivers mouth by our ships that have blocked up that Porte was y<sup>e</sup> successor to an Embassadeur who was sent from Sha Soliman, to the King of Syam and inquireing what the importe of his embassy was, could not gather from my informers that it was to any other end then to maintaine a firme and amicable correspondence wth each other.

In a paper inclosed your Ma<sup>tie</sup> shall find an exact accompt of y<sup>e</sup> yearly Revenus of your Island Bombay as farmed in 86, not farmed out since in regard the Comp<sup>a</sup> enhanced the customes from 3 p. c. to 5 p. cent and keeps them in their owne hands, the Company still complains of theire charges, but your Ma<sup>tie</sup> may discern the truth w<sup>ch</sup> walked in the darke hitherto.

Thus farr I proceeded in my intelligence on Bombay w<sup>ch</sup> I had ready to be forwarded in the ship I intended to imbarque in for Europe, in case y<sup>e</sup> Generall would att y<sup>e</sup> last lay some impediment in my way w<sup>ch</sup> he most industriously laboured to doe after his wonted sinister practices, the 12th of January being imbarqued in the good ship Success, wee tooke our departure from that Porte and the 20th Aprill following arrived att St Helena roade where I receaved this following intelligence from a French Man of Warr<sup>33</sup>.

* * * *

Thus I have in all submissive humbleness and duty made bold to represent those occurrences to your sacred Ma<sup>tie</sup> with as much persepecuity integritie and candour, as my weake understanding would serve me presuming on your Ma<sup>ties</sup> knowne zeale for y<sup>e</sup> true wellfare of your subjects and gracious disposition towards him who in his bounden duty fidelity, and best endeavours shall ever be zealous and ready to approve himselfe.

Your most sacred Ma<sup>ties</sup> most humble, obdt and faithfull subject and servant

From bord ship Success

J. St. J.

the E Channell 18 July 1688/ S. V.

---

33. Here follows an account of French activities in Siam.

CERTAIN VEDIC, AVESTAN AND GREEK TRADITIONS AND THE AGE OF THE RIGVEDA

H. C. SETH

Elsewhere<sup>1</sup> we have argued for the sixth century B. C. as the age of Zoroaster, and also that his royal disciple and patron Vishtāsp is Hystaspes, father of Darius the great. The whole controversy on this subject is re-examined there and some new light is thrown on the problem. In this paper we are raising the question, if Zoroaster and the Gāthās attributed to him belong to the sixth century B. C., does the Rigveda, at least part of it, belong to the same age? It may not be necessary to repeat here the well-known suggestions made by various scholars regarding the striking similarity in the language, the pantheon, the heroic legends, ritual and ceremonies, sometimes to the minutest details, of the two lores, which has been revealed by the comparative Vedic and Avestan studies. It may be, as Martin Haug ably points out, that Zoroaster's monotheism as well as his ethical ideas represented the first great schism which divided his followers from the orthodox followers of the sacrificial creed of the Vedas. With the growing controversies some of the gods of one creed became the demons of the other. This schism was perhaps further deepened as the Indian and the Iranian sections of the Aryans emerged into independent political entities, each professing a separate religion.

Ervad Sheriarji Bharucha,<sup>2</sup> and following him S. K. Hodivala,<sup>3</sup> have perhaps rightly detected in the Rigveda a reflection of the bitter controversies initiated by the reforms of Zoroaster. One of the most striking of their suggestions is the identification of Iṣṭāśva mentioned in the Rigveda, with Vishtāsp the royal patron of Zoroaster. The relevant passage of the Rigveda runs as follows:

किमिष्टाश्व इष्टरश्मिरेत ईशानासस्तस्व ऋजते वृन् ।

(I. 122. 13 ).

-
1. "The Age of Zoroaster," Nagpur University Journal, No. 7.
  2. Cama Memorial Volume, p. 1 ff.
  3. Zarathustra and his Contemporaries in the Rigveda.

Wilson translates this passage as follows: "What can Ištāšva, (what can) Ištarašmi, (what can) those who are now lords of the earth, achieve (with respect) to the leaders of men, the conquerors of the foes." According to Śāyana the passage signifies, "what can the princes, who are named, or any other princes do against those who enjoy the protection of Mītra and Varuṇa". As Śāyana suggests Ištāšva and Ištarašmi are the names of two kings. These names are not found elsewhere in the Vedas.

A very deep colouring is lent to this identification of Ištāšva and Vishtāsp by the fact that the author of the Rigvedic hymn under consideration is Kaksīvat, who being son of Usij, is also called Anūija. Apparently the author is here complaining against the oppression of Ištāšva and Ištarašmi. Now, as pointed out by Bharucha, in the Gāthā Ushtavaiti (Yasna XLIV. 20) Zoroaster complains of certain persons called Kavis and Karapans, notably those of the family of Usikhsh (comparable to the Vedic Usij) as the chief opponents of his new religion<sup>1</sup>. As Jackson suggests Usij (Usikhsh) in the Avesta appears to be a proper name<sup>2</sup>. If we accept Ištāšva as equal to Vishtāsp and Usikhsh as referring to Anūija we have in the Rigveda a faint echo of the bitter controversies initiated by the reforms of Zoroaster.

Bharucha suggests that "as Vishtāsp, when articulated by Greek tongue, became Hystaspes, so pronounced by the Vedic Rishi, it assumed the form of Ištāšva". As suggested by Hodivala, "some Vedic words beginning with इ and followed by a vowel drop the इ; for instance in Rv. 5.41. 2 and 1. 162. 2 the word इयु is said by Śāyana and Mahīdhara to be used for इयु. Similarly in Atharva Veda 4. 8. 38 इयम is used for इयम. In Persian also we have 'Andariman' used for Avestan 'Vandariman' and 'ila' for Avestan 'Vira' (hero). In colloquial Marathi इ is very commonly dropped; as इयु = वियु; इराम = वियराम<sup>4</sup>." The Iranian 'aspa' termination is the same as Sanskrit 'asva'. On philological grounds, therefore, there appears to be no difficulty in equating Ištāšva with Vishtāsp. But the equation by Bharucha and Hodivala of Ištarašmi with the Avestan Vishtauru and the Persian Gushtam, an ancestor of Vishtāsp, is not convincing.

1. Ervad S. D. Bharucha: Zoroastrian Religion and Customs. p. 3.
2. Zoroaster, p. 43.
3. Cama Memorial Volume, p. 4.
4. Zarathustra and his Contemporaries in the Rigveda, p. 11.

Now in the light of our conclusion that Vishtāsp and Zoroaster belong to the sixth century B. C., and that Vishtāsp the royal patron of Zoroaster is Vishtāsp or Hystaspes, the father of Darius the great, a surmise may be offered that in Iṣṭaraśmi of the Rigveda we may have a reference to Arsames of the Greek writers or Arahama of the Achaemenian inscriptions, who was the father of Hystaspes ( Vishtāsp ) and the grand-father of Darius the great. In the Rigveda 'iṣṭa' may be a prefix to the proper name Araśmi. As we gather from the inscription of Darius at Behistun, Arsames was alive at the time when Darius ascended the imperial throne. In view of the identity of Vishtāsp the royal patron of Zoroaster with Vishtāsp the father of Darius, it can be assumed on the basis of the Avestan traditions that the father of Vishtāsp was also an ardent follower of Zoroaster and took part in the controversies resulting from the emergence of this new creed.

This surmise induces us to enquire also into the tradition preserved in the Rigveda concerning Suśravas. Our conclusion that Zoroaster and his royal disciple Vishtāsp belonged to the sixth century B. C. has made us revive the view that Kai Khusrau of the Persian traditions is identical with Cyrus the great<sup>1</sup>. It is well-known and almost unanimously suggested by all the Iranian scholars that Kavi Husravah of the Avesta, the glorious uniter of the Aryan race, is Kai Khusrau of the Persian traditions. Now it has been surmised by many an oriental scholar that Husravah of the Avesta is the same as Suśravas of the Vedas. This will lead to the suggestion that Suśravas and Cyrus the great may be the same person. We get the following brief notice of Suśravas in one of the Rigvedic hymns.

त्वमेताञ्जनगणो द्विर्दशान्वधुना सुधवसोपजम्बुवः ।
 पष्टि सहस्रा नवति नव क्षुतो नि यक्त्रेण रथ्या दुष्पदावृणक्तु ॥ ९ ॥
 त्वमाविथ सुधवसं तवोतिभिस्तव त्राममिरिन्द्र त्वर्याणम् ।
 त्वमस्मै कुत्समतिथिस्वमार्यु महे राशे धूने अरन्धनायः ॥ १० ॥

( I. 53.9 and 10 )

"Thou, renowned Indra, overthrewest by thy not-to-be-over-taken chariot wheel, the twenty kings of men, who had come against Suśravas unaided and their sixty thousand and ninety-nine followers.

1. In the paper, 'The Age of Zoroaster,' referred to above.

"Thou, Indra, hast preserved Suśravas by thy succour, Tūrvayāna<sup>1</sup> by thy assistance: thou hast made Kutsa, Atithigva, and Āyu subject to the mighty though youthful (king) Suśravas" (Wilson).

Against this Vedic account of Suśravas let us juxtapose the account of the main achievements of Cyrus the great as we have it from the inscriptions and Herodotus. After his flight from the court of Astyages, the powerful Median monarch, Cyrus in his ancestral home is attacked by the forces of Media. He emerges triumphant against Astyages and annexes Media. He spared the life of Astyages. After this he overthrows Croesus of Lydia. Though Lydia is won and annexed to the Persian empire Cyrus kindly treats Croesus, who continues till his last days one of his most intimate and trusted friends. After Lydia Cyrus overthrows the kingdom of Babylonia. Nabonidus is captured but his life too is spared and he is befriended by Cyrus. Thus Cyrus, rising from the humble chieftainship of a small vassal state, while yet young conquers three of the strongest and the proudest kingdoms of his time, Media, Lydia and Babylonia, and creates the first great Aryan empire of the ancient world. The lives of the three defeated monarchs are spared and they become subject to Cyrus. We thus find a striking similarity in the main achievements of Cyrus the great and the brief notice of Suśravas we get in the Rīgveda. Philologically it may not be difficult to equate Atithigva with Astyages and Kutsa with Croesus. It is difficult to equate Āyu with Nabonidus.<sup>2</sup>

1. "Tūrvayāna" here appears to be an epithet of Suśravas, meaning "of rapid marches" or conquering. We may note that in connection with Rv. 6.18.13 "Tūrvayāna" is explained by Śyāna as an epithet of Atithigva, meaning 'īvarisa-gamanam,' of rapid marches. If Tūrvayāna is taken as an epithet of Suśravas, then the verse 6.18.13 may also be taken to refer to the same fact as 1.53.10, i. e. Kutsa, Āyu and Atithigva were made subservient to the great king, Suśravas or Tūrvayāna. Griffith also takes Suśravas and Tūrvayāna as the name of one and the same king. We may note that in the Iranian legends Kai Khusrau or Kava Husravah is reported for his conquests of the Turanians. Tūrvayāna in the Rīgveda as applied to Suśravas may have some connection with Turān of the Iranian legends. According to these legends Kai Khusrau was the son of the daughter of the Turanian king, whom he subsequently overthrew.

2. We may trace in Āyu a reference to Nabu the Babylonian god, which prefix is added to the names of the Babylonian kings like Nabopolassar (= Nabu protect the heir); Nabuchadnezzar (= Nabu protect the Crown) and Nabonidus (= Nabu is glorious), the last named king of Babylonia being overthrown by Cyrus the great. Nabu may stand as equal to the Babylonian king and it may be referred to as Āyu in the Rīgveda. But this is only a surmise. According to the Zend-Avesta Kavi Husrava fought against the Turanian Frangrasyan (Afrasyah) and also fought against and defeated Auravašāra.

We may refer to another fact which may suggest that the events mentioned in the Rigveda as connected with Suśravas may refer to Cyrus the great. The author of the Rigvedic hymn under consideration is Savya, of the family of Angiras. Dino, who wrote in the 4th century B. C., had reported that one Angares was the most renowned of the minstrels at the court of Astyages. He had predicted the bravery of Cyrus and the fall of Astyages<sup>1</sup>. It may be that the Angares who was the minstrel and priest of Astyages later on became also the priest of Cyrus and may be the author of the Rigvedic hymn under consideration. If so, Savya the Angiras would then also belong to almost the same period as Auśija, another Vedic Rishi referred to above.

Legends in the Rigveda connected with Kutsa may also suggest that the traditions associated with him are similar to those given by Herodotus about Croesus; and these also may refer to the events of the sixth century B. C. One of these legends is that Indra in some battle in order to protect Kutsa and Etaśa stole the disc of the sun.

यत्रोत वाधितेभ्यश्चक्रं कुत्साद्य युज्यते । मुदाय इन्द्र सूर्यम् । ४ ।
यत्र देवी कुत्सायतो विश्वो अयुज्य एक इत् । त्वमिन्द्र वरुण इत् । ५ ।
यत्रोत मत्स्योय कमरिणा इन्द्र सूर्य । प्रादः सचोभिरुदाम् । ६ ।

IV. 30. 4, 5 and 6.

"4. In which ( contests ) for the sake of Kutsa and his allies, thou hast stolen, Indra, the ( wheel of the car ) of the sun.

"5. In which ( contests ) thou singly indeed hast warred with all those opposing the gods: thou, Indra hast, slain the malignant.

"6. In which ( contests ), Indra, thou hast for the sake of a mortal, discomfited the sun, and hast protected Etaśa by ( thine ) exploits"<sup>2</sup> ( Wilson ).

We may detect here, as suggested by Griffith, a reference to a solar eclipse which may have occurred during a battle in which Kutsa and Etaśa were involved. Herodotus records a prolonged struggle, lasting for five years, 590-585 B. C., between the Median King Cyaxares, father of Astyages, and the Lydian King Alyattes,

1. "Passages in Greek and Latin Literature relating to Zoroaster and Zoroastrianism", Fox and Pemberton. ( Cama Oriental Institute Publication No. 4 ), P. 25.

2. This incident also appears to be referred to in the following other Rigvedic hymns. I. 121.12; II. 19.4 and 5; V. 29.10; V. 31.11; VI. 15.5; VI. 31.3; VIII. 1.11.

father of Croesus. During the thick of one of the battles sun was eclipsed which terrified both the sides and peace was concluded between the two kings. Croesus, who, it appears, had already for some years shared the royal power with his father may have taken part in these battles alongside his father. We may note the account of Herodotus of this event. "War lasted between the Lydians and the Medes for five years; during this period the Medes often defeated the Lydians and often the Lydians defeated the Medes. In the sixth year when they were carrying on the war with nearly equal success, on occasion of an engagement, it happened that in the heat of the battle day was suddenly turned into night. This change of the day Thales the Milesian had foretold to the Ionians, fixing beforehand this year as the very period, in which the change actually took place. The Lydians and Medes seeing night succeeding in the place of the day, desisted from fighting, and both showed a great anxiety to make peace". (1. 74). As Herodotus further tells us, peace was made between the two kings, to cement which Alyattes gave his daughter Aryenis in marriage to Astyages, son of Cyaxares. In that year 'astronomical authorities are agreed that an eclipse of magnitude sufficient to have constituted the portent implied in Herodotus' story did occur in Asia Minor'. It may be surmised that the Rîgvedic passages under consideration may refer to this eclipse, in which case we may find in Eṭaśa of the Rîgveda a reference to Alyattes, father of Croesus, who has been equated with Kutsa. Philologically it may not be impossible to equate Eṭaśa with Alyattes<sup>1</sup>.

In some of the Rîgvedic hymns Kutsa is called as Ārjuneya, son of Arjuni<sup>2</sup>. From the grammatical formation Arjuni appears

1. Cambridge Ancient History, Vol. III, P. 512.

2. We may note that Attys was the name of the sun-god of Lydia. Attys also appears to be a popular name with the kings of Lydia. One of Croesus' son is also named Attys. In Alyattes, 'Al' may be a prefix to the name Attys. Alyattes also appears to be a popular name with the princes of Lydia.

3. त्वं ह स्पतिन्द्र कुत्समातः शुश्रूषमाणस्तन्वा समर्थे ।

दासं यच्छुष्णं कुषं स्पसा अन्वय आर्जुनिषाव शिशम् ॥ २ ॥

VII. 10.2.

"Aiding him with thy person, Indra, thou hast, defended Kutsa in combat when thou hadst subjugated Dṛṣa, Suṣṇa and Kuyava, giving (the spoil) to that son of Arjuni" (Wilson).

Sāyaṇa explains, आर्जुनियम् as अर्जुन्याः पुत्रं and suggests that it refers to Kutsa.

Kutsa is called the son of Arjuni also in the following other Rîgvedic verses:

I. 112.23; IV. 36.1 and VIII. 1.11.

to be the name of Kutsa's mother. We may note that Aryenis, in which name it may not be difficult to recognise the Vedic form Ārjuneyī or Arjuni, was the name of Croesus' sister, who as seen above, was married to Astyages. The name of Croesus' mother is not known from the Greek accounts, which only tell us that she was a Carian. If Croesus is the same as Kutsa, Ārjuneya as applied to the brother in the Vedic traditions and Aryenis to the sister in the Greek accounts may have reference to the name of their mother.

Herodotus has recorded the traditions of the extensive conquests of and also of the fabulously great wealth possessed by Croesus, whose name had stood as synonym of riches through all the centuries since he lived. In the Rigveda Kutsa appears to be a special favourite of Indra; the following Rigvedic tradition seems to suggest that Kutsa also possessed great riches:

प्रान्यचक्रमग्रहः सूर्यस्य कुत्सायान्यद् वरिवो यातवेऽकः ।

( V. 29. 10 )

"Thou hast formerly detached one wheel (of the car) of Sūrya (sun); another thou hast given to Kutsa wherewith to acquire wealth" ( Wilson ).

We have another Rigvedic legend about Kutsa which may recall the traditions about Croesus recorded by Herodotus.

तव त्व इन्द्र सख्येषु वह्नय कृतं मन्वाना व्यदित्वर्षम् ।

यदा दशस्यन्धुसो रिणतपः कुत्साय यन्मज्जाम्भ देवताः ।

( X. 138. 1 )

"Allied with thee in friendship, these thy priests, remembering Holy Law, rent Vritra limb from limb,
When they bestowed the Dawns and let the waters flow, and
When thou didst chastise dragons at Kutsa's call."

( Griffith )

In this legend we may have reference to Kutsa being saved by a timely burst of rain from the clouds. Herodotus records about Croesus that when he was captured by Cyrus, bound with fetters he was placed on a heap of a great pile to which fire was set. Meanwhile Cyrus having pardoned him commanded the fire to be instantly extinguished, but in spite of the best endeavours the fire could not be mastered. Herodotus further notes, "It is related by the Lydians, that Croesus, perceiving that Cyrus had altered his resolution, when he saw every man endeavouring to put out the fire, but unable to get the better of it, shouted aloud, invoking Apollo, and besought him, if any of his offerings had been agreeable to him, to protect and deliver him from the present danger; they report that he with tears invoked the god, and that on a sudden, clouds were seen gathering in the air, which before was serene and that a violent storm burst forth and vehement rain fell and extinguished the flames" (1. 87). Croesus was saved and he became one of the most trusted friends of Cyrus. We may not believe in all the details of the story of the escape of Croesus from the flames as given by Herodotus. But the truth underlying it seems to be that Croesus had a providential escape, may be from the sudden down-pour of rains as he sat on the burning pyre either condemned by Cyrus, or more likely in an attempt to self-immolation on his defeat.

We have another oft-repeated legend in the Rigveda about Kutsa. This legend refers to the destruction of Śuśpa, called an Asura by the commentators, by Indra for the protection of Kutsa<sup>1</sup>. If Croesus and Kutsa be the same person, it may be surmised that Śuśpa may refer to Syennesis King of Cilicia, which bordered on Croesus' dominions. According to Herodotus (1. 74), Syennesis the Cilician was one of the two mediators in the battle between Croesus' father Alyattes and the Median king Cyaxares, during which, as already referred to above, the eclipse occurred. May be that Croesus in course of his conquests came in conflict and may have worsted Syennesis. In certain Rigvedic hymns<sup>2</sup> the term 'Kuyava' is used side by side with Śuśpa. Sāyana explains it also as the name of an Asura destroyed by Indra for the benefit of Kutsa. It is however possible that Kuyava is an epithet of Śuśpa. In the Assyrian records Kue is the name of Cilicia<sup>3</sup>. If Śuśpa and Syennesis are the same, it may be surmised that Kuyava as an epithet of Śuśpa was perhaps derived from Kue, the country over which he ruled.

1. Rigvedic Hymns, I. 51.8; 63.3; 121.9; II. 19.6; IV. 16.12; V. 29.9; VII. 19.3; VIII. 85.17.

२. त्वं कुन्सेनामि शुष्पमिन्द्राद्भुवं पुण्यं कुयवं गविष्टौ ।

दश गविष्टे अयं सूर्यस्व सुषावश्चक्रमविष्टे रपसि ॥ ३ ॥

(VI. 31.3)

"Thou Indra, with Kutsa, hast warred against the inexhaustible Śuśpa; thou hast overthrown Kuyava in battle; in conflict thou hast carried off the wheel (of the chariot) of the sun; thou hast driven away the malignant (spirits)."

Also compare Rigveda, IV. 16.12 and VII. 19.3.

3. Cambridge Ancient History, Vol. III, p. 357.

As regards Atithigva who, as shown above, may be the same as Astyages, there is a recurring legend in the Rigveda, which says that for his benefit Indra destroyed Śambara and demolished Śambara's numerous cities. We may quote some of the Rigvedic passages containing this legend, as they may throw, if our surmise is correct, new light on the confused history of this period.

स्वं कुत्सं शृण्वह्येष्वविधाऽरन्धयोऽतिथिगवाय शम्बरम् ।

महान्तं विदुर्दं नि कमीः पदा सनादेव दस्तुहत्याय जज्ञिवे ॥ ६ ॥

I. 51. 6

"Thou (Indra) hast defended Kutsa in fatal fights with Śuṣpa, thou hast destroyed Śambara in defence of Atithigva; thou hast trodden with thy foot upon the great Arbuda; from remote times wast thou born for the destruction of oppressors" (Wilson).

मिनत् पुरो नवतिमिन्द्र पूरवे दिवोदासाय महि दाशये नृतो कजेण दाशये नृतो ।

अतिथिगवाय शम्बरं गिरिह्यो अवाभरत् ।

महो धनानि दयमान ओजसा विश्वा धनान्योजसा ॥ ७ ॥

I. 130. 7

"For Puru, the giver of offerings, for the mighty Divodāsa, thou, Indra, the dancer (with delight in battle), hast destroyed ninety cities; dancer (in battle), thou hast destroyed them with (thy thunderbolt), for (the sake of) the giver of offerings. For (the sake of) Atithigva, the fierce (Indra) hurled Śambara from off the mountain, bestowing (upon the prince) immense treasure, (acquired) by (his) prowess; all kinds of wealth (acquired) by (his) prowess" (Wilson).

दिवोदासाय नवति च नवेन्द्रः पुरो व्यैरच्छम्बरस्य ॥ ६ ॥

II 19. 6

"For the sake of Divodāsa, Indra demolished the ninety-nine cities of Śambara" (Wilson).

अहं पुरो मन्दसानो व्यैरं नव सार्धं नवतीः शम्बरस्य ।

शततमं वेद्यं सर्वताता दिवोदासमतिथिगवं ददावम् ॥ ३ ॥

IV. 26. 3

"Exhilarated (by the Soma beverage) I (Indra) have destroyed the ninety-nine cities of Śambara; the hundredth I gave to be occupied by Divodāsa when I protected him, Atithigva, at his sacrifice" (Wilson).

उत दासं कौलितरं ब्रह्मतः पर्वतादवि । अवाहमिन्द्र शम्बरम् ॥ १४ ॥

शतमश्मन्मयीनां पुरमिन्द्रो व्यास्यद् । दिवोदासाय दाशये ॥ २० ॥

IV. 30. 14 and 20

"Thou hast slain the slave Śambara, the son of Kulitara, hurling him from the huge mountain.

"Indra has overturned a hundred stone-built cities for Divodāsa, the donor of oblations" (Wilson).

त्वं कवि चोदरोऽकैसातौ त्वं कुत्साय शृण्वं दाक्षवे वर्ह ।
 त्वं शिरो अमर्मणः पराह्वतिभिग्वाम शैल्यं करिष्यन् ॥ ३ ॥
 त्वं तदुक्थमिन्द्र बर्हणा कः प्र यच्छता सहला शूर दधि ।
 अव गिरिर्दोसं शम्बरं हन् प्रावो दिवोदासं चित्राभिरूती ॥ ५ ॥
 वयं ते अस्यामिन्द्र युन्नद्धतौ सखायः स्वाम महिन श्रेष्ठाः ।
 प्रातर्दनिः क्षत्रध्रीरस्तु श्रेष्ठो घने वृत्राणां सनये धनानाम् ॥ ८ ॥

VI. 26. 3,5 and 8

"3. Thou hast cut to pieces Śaspa for Kutea, the donor of the oblation: thou hast struck off the head (of Śambara), imagining himself invulnerable, intending to give pleasure to Atithigva.

"5. Indra, who art the subduer (of foes), thou hast achieved a glorious (deed) inasmuch as thou hast scattered, hero, the hundreds and thousands (of the host of Śambara), hast slain the slave Śambara (when issuing from the mountain) and hast protected Divodāsa with marvellous protection.

"8. May we, adorable Indra, thy friends, at this thy worship, offered for (the acquirement of) wealth, be held most dear to thee: may (my patron) Kṣatrasri the son of Pratardana, be most illustrious through the destruction of foes and attainment of riches" (Wilson).

त्वं शतान्यव शम्बरस्य पुरो जपन्थाप्रतीनि दस्योः ।
 अशिक्षो यत्र शय्या शचीवो दिवोदासाव मुन्यते सुतद्धे
 भरद्वाजाय गृणते वसूनि ॥ ४ ॥

VI. 31. 4

"Thou hast destroyed the hundred impregnable cities of the Dasyu Śambara, when, sagacious Indra, thou, who art brought by the libation, hast bestowed in thy liberality riches upon Divodāsa presenting to thee libations, and upon Bharadvāja hymning thy praise" (Wilson).

पुरुणि यक्ष्यौला शम्बरस्य वि नवति नय च देह्यो देहन् ॥ २ ॥

VI. 47. 2

"And he (Indra) has destroyed the numerous hosts of Śambara and the ninety-nine cities"<sup>1</sup> (Wilson).

Putting these various references together we gather that Atithigva won a great victory over Śambara. Śambara's numerous cities, mentioned variously as ninety, ninety-nine or hundred, were destroyed. If our surmise that Atithigva is Astyages be true, may we not have here a reference to the overthrow of Assyria and the complete destruction of Nineveh and other ancient Assyrian cities at the hands of the Medians in combination with the Babylonians? This is more than a mere conjecture. Assyria seems to have been referred to as 'Subarum' in the following record of Nabopolassar, the Babylonian King, who took part in the overthrow of Assyria. "By the word of Nabu and Marduk, who favour my sovereignty, and by the great raging weapons of Girra<sup>2</sup> the terrible, who scatters my foes, I conquered Subarum and turned its land to ruin."<sup>3</sup> It may not be difficult to recognise Śambara in Subarum. If so, then in the Rigvedic tradition destruction of the Asura Śambara and his cities may refer to the defeat of the last Assyrian monarch and the destruction of Nineveh and other Assyrian towns.<sup>4</sup> We may further surmise that Arbuda (Rig. I. 51. 6), mentioned along with Śambara and also taken by Sāyana as an Asura, may be Arbela, a very important ancient town of Assyria. In Kulitara as applied to Sambara (Rig. 4. 30. 14), taken by Sāyana as the name of Śambara's father, we may have a reference to Calah, another very important town in Assyria, which was the seat of the ancient kings of Assyria. May we not also detect in Navati-nava or ninety-nine cities of Śambara a reference to Nineveh?<sup>5</sup> We know that many

1. The following Rigvedic hymns also refer to the destruction of Śambara and his numerous cities :

I. 54.4 and 6; 101.2; 103.8; 112.14; II. 14.6; V. 29.6; VII. 19.5; 29.5; IX. 61.1 and 2; X. 49.8.

2. Does Girra here refer to Indra? Girvah, Girvan etc. are used in the Vedic literature (e. g. Rv. VI. 24.6) as epithets of Indra.

3. The Cambridge Ancient History, Vol. III, p. 207.

4. This took place about 606 B. C. Sin-shar-ishkun, who was perhaps a son of Ashurbanipal, perished along with the fall of Nineveh. Classical traditions suggest that Sardanapalus was the last Assyrian king in whose reign the tragedy occurred. But the Assyrian history as now reconstructed does not bear this out.

5. It may be noted that Nineveh comes very near Ninynave, which in some modern Indian languages is the expression for ninety-nine. It is not improbable that Navatinava may be the Sanskritised form of Nineveh and poetically it may have symbolised the many towns which were destroyed along with it.

ancient towns including the famous Nineveh were utterly destroyed and razed to the ground when Assyria went down under the assaults of the Medians.

Now it is a mooted question whether the fall of Assyria and the destruction of Nineveh occurred in the time of the Median king Cyaxares or his son Astyages. The Greek historians put it in the reign of Cyaxares. But Berosus, the Babylonian author who wrote in the 4th century B. C. and the authors who follow him put the event in the time of Astyages.<sup>1</sup> The truth may be that this event occurred during the reign of Cyaxares but the final battles against Assyria were conducted by his son Astyages. If Astyages is the same as the Rigvedic Atithigva and the destruction by the latter of Šambara may refer to the downfall of Assyria, then the Rigvedic tradition will support the view that Astyages was the victor of Assyria. Further it may be noted that the Rigvedic hymn VI. 26, quoted at some length above, composed by Bharadvāja (of the family of Angiras) appears to be a contemporary record of this event. This is evidenced by hymn VI. 31. 4 (quoted above) composed by Suhotra, a descendant of Bharadvāja; according to this hymn Bharadvāja appears to have received liberal gifts when Divodāsa demolished Šambara. This will make Atithigva Divodāsa a contemporary of Kṣātraśrī, the patron of Bharadvāja, the author of hymn VI. 26. Kṣātraśrī may then be equated with Cyaxares (Huvakshatara), the father of Astyages, whom we have identified with Atithigva. The hymn gives the name of Kṣātraśrī's father as Pratarḍana, in whom we may recognise Phraortes, father of Cyaxares. The Brāhmapas mention perhaps the same Pratarḍana as a descendant of Divodāsa; according to Kauṣītaki Upaniṣad he met his death in battle.<sup>2</sup> We know from Herodotus that Phraortes, son of Deioces, perished in the war against Assyria (I. 102). Hostilities between Media and Assyria continued in the time of Phraortes' son, Cyaxares; and it was towards the close of Cyaxares' reign that the Median forces, perhaps under the command of Astyages as suggested above, overthrew Assyria. It appears that the epithet Divodāsa applied to Atithigva is a patronymic; and we may equate Divodāsa with Deioces, the founder of the Median dynasty, who was the great grand-father of Astyages. Rigvedic hymn (I. 30.7) may even suggest that this family was an offshoot of the Puru dynasty.

1. Historians History of the World, Vol. I, p. 444.

2. Cambridge History of India, Vol. I, p. 120. Mention is made of Pratarḍana in the Kauṣītaki Brāhmapa XXVI, 5.

The suggestions offered in this paper bring us to the conclusion that certain hymns of the Rigveda belong to the sixth century B.C. to which Zoroaster and his Gāthās so closely related to the Vedic lore also belong. We have further seen that the Vedas and the Avesta alike seem to refer to certain persons and events of this time. This will lend support to the contention of scholars like Johannes Hertel that the Avesta may provide evidence of great weight in estimating the date and the place of composition of the Rigveda; and that both the Rigveda and the Avesta are in a large measure the product of the sixth century B.C.<sup>1</sup> We may further suggest that the account left by Herodotus and other early Greek writers of the ancient kingdoms and dynasties of central and western Asia as well as the Babylonian and Assyrian records may also throw valuable light on the historical traditions preserved in the Rigveda and vice-versa.

If we assign some Rigvedic hymns to the sixth century B. C. others will have to be certainly assigned to centuries, preceding the sixth, but some others to the subsequent centuries, as the hymns themselves not unfrequently avow a difference of date, some are ascribed to the earlier Rishis, while others admit of their being new composition. It appears that until we come to the schism initiated in the sixth century B. C. by the reforms of Zoroaster, Rigveda, which seems to be essentially the product of the minstrels and priests attached to the royal courts, referred to the events and traditions common to the Aryans in north-western India, Persia, Media, Lydia<sup>2</sup> and other adjoining places conquered by them. This schism deepened when under Darius the Great and his successors Zoroastrianism was adopted as the state religion of the Achaemenian empire, which, as it expanded, came more and more in conflict with the Indian and other eastern sections of the Aryans. These religious differences coupled with the political animosities created a big gap between the Iranian section on the one hand and the Indian and other more orthodox sections

1. Johannes Hertel in 'Die Zeit Zoroasters' suggests that the period of Zoroaster's activity fell about 550 B. C. On grounds different than those advanced in this paper, he further suggests that the Rigveda was in large measure contemporaneous with the Avesta.

2. That the influence of Indo-Aryan traditions in western Asia is much earlier than the sixth century B. C. is to be seen from the fact that the inscriptions discovered at Boghaz-köi in North-eastern Asia Minor and attributed to the 14th century B. C. refer to the Vedic deities Mitra, Varuṇa, Indra and Nāsatya.

of one and the same people. There is, therefore, no wonder that, if we recognise in the Vedic Suśravas and the Avestan Huśravah references to Cyrus the great,<sup>1</sup> this mighty ruler is the last hero common alike to the Rigveda and the Avesta. After him the Vedic records reflect more and more the life and traditions of the eastern particularly the Indian sections of the Aryans. There may be a great deal of weight in the suggestions of Hüsing<sup>2</sup> and Halevy<sup>3</sup> that some of the Rigvedic hymns may refer to the period of the Parthian and the Śaka kings of India.

We may sum up the identifications suggested above.

Median Kings

Rigveda	Herodotus and other Greek sources.
Divodāsa	Deioces
Pratardana	Phraortes (Fravartish)
Ksatraśri	Cyaxares (Huvakshatra)
Atithigva	Astyages (Ishtuvegu)
Persian Kings
Suśravas (Av. Huśravah)	Cyrus the great
Ištarašmi	Arasmes
Iśtāśva (Av. Vishtāsp)	Hystaspes.

Lydian Kings

Etasa	Alyattes
Kutsa	Croesus

The following equations have also been surmised.

Āyu—	Nabonidus (King of Babylon)?
Śuspa—	Syennesis (King of Cilicia)
Śambara—	Subram (or the Assyrian Kingdom).

1. In another paper, "Cyrus the Great and the Battle of the Mahābhārata" (Nagpur University Journal, No. 6), we have suggested that the battle which Cyrus fought towards the end of his life against the Indians and their allies and his defeat in this battle formed the original nucleus round which the Mahābhārata epic grew up.

2. Die Inder von Boghanköi.

3. Considerations critiques sur quelques points de l'histoire ancienne de l'Inde.

TWO GOSPELS

BY

H. A. SHAH

I—The Virgin Birth and Nativity

We shall first discuss the 'Nativity' which means the birth of Jesus Christ, its accepted date being the 25th of December.

Any basis?—In such matters, there is generally a silent presumption in favour of the veracity of a date which is accepted and current since long. It is therefore required that we should look for its basis with a view for further investigation, which may involve some change. Sir Isaac Newton had carried many investigations in the realm of the ancient European chronology. If we read (see quotation "A") what he says we find that there is no solid foundation in selecting this month or the date for the event. "Cardinal points of the year were selected" and then various events were distributed. There is no solid ground to justify the one or the other. If there had been any, no loophole would have been left for different proposals such as the vernal equinox or the autumnal equinox (see quotation "A", its concluding paras) as a better substitute for the nativity.

Basis in the Gospels:—The events that took place at the birth of Christ are vividly narrated by Luke (II, 1, 20) and by Matthew (I, 18-25; II, 1-23). There are internal evidences and there is no reason why these vivid pictures should not assist us towards a proper selection of the month. The narration points to a time which is not December, the month of severe winter. The nativity is shrouded by many movements which are impossible in December. We point them out.

- (1) There was a decree for taxing the people (Luke) which did involve movements on a mass scale from one village to the other, in order to get back to one's own town for the census.
- (2) Accordingly, Joseph and Mary performed a journey from Nazareth to Bethlehem (Luke) of several days.
- (3) Shepherds were abiding in the field (Luke).
- (4) They were keeping a watch over their flock by night (Luke).
- (5) Shepherds moved unto Bethlehem (Luke) which is on the crest of mountains of Judea.
- (6) After eight days after the nativity, the parents start for a journey to Jerusalem and Nazareth (Luke II, 22-40).

- (7) Wise men from the east came to Jerusalem and went away in a different way ( Matthew ).
- (8) They saw the star in the east and that star went before them guiding them in their path ( Matthew ).
- (9) Joseph took the young child and the mother by night and fled into Egypt from Bethlehem.

These are the movements that are undertaken in Palestine and beyond, in the month of December. Let us see how the topographic and seasonal situation is at that time of the year in those regions. If we read the quotations "B" to "F" we find that from October to April ( inclusive ) it is rainy season, January being the wettest month; at the higher lands the cold is intense, the snow lying at times in the heights of Palestine to a depth of some inches; while the paths get miry and the travel rendered in winter toilsome and perilous.

It is then difficult to assume when the roads were drenched or flooded or muddy<sup>1</sup> that all the movements took place under such adverse conditions of winter in cold storm, and rains. It is difficult to see that the sky and the roads kept clear for days together to guide the wise men after the star, and permit travel; and that the shepherds kept themselves and their flock in the field, in open in rainy season and under severe winter with every possibility of snow-fall. That the star was continuously visible in this climate is an unwarranted assumption. It is impossible to conceive that a ruler would wisely issue a decree in such a period which may force masses of people to perform journeys in awkward conditions and which may frustrate the purpose of the census. He would select a better time. Even Joseph would not travel in such a climate under advanced pregnancy of Mary or after her delivery. On the other hand the narration of the gospel nowhere refers to the severity of the climate which the authors would not miss to heighten the effect of the narrative. Joseph would hardly leave the plains where the climate would be milder and go up the hills at that time. That applies as well to the shepherds tending their flocks. They would be in valleys rather than on hills.

It therefore appears that the nativity can not fall in December and the present date must be given up if gospels are to be a guide in the matter. The internal evidence of gospel points to another period, to the month of completion of harvest.

1. Where road-making is not scientific, level is generally lower than that of the field and the roads get flooded and drenched with the slightest shower.

The picture of the arrival of Christ is associated with the cleansing of the threshing floor "and he will gather his wheat into the garner" (Matthew III, 11-12). In another place Jesus is styled as the "Lord of the Harvest" (Matthew IX, 38). The proper time for his arrival in Bethlehem—"house of bread"—for rejoicings (gospel) would therefore be the time of completion of harvest when the "wheats are gathered into the garner" (Matthew III, 12). The proper month is then August or September as the latest in Palestine. See quotation "C." The date of nativity at about the autumnal equinox would be justified by the gospels. If we look to what is said in quotations "B" and "F," we will see that December is the least fitted month.

Virgin Birth:—The nativity in about the month of August-September leads us to the consideration of the 'Virgin' birth because the sun then is in the sign Virgo, when, in those days, the heliacal rise of the star Canopus is completed. We therefore consider the problem of the Virgin Birth. Luke (I, 26ff.) alludes to it; so does Matthew (I, 18-25). They agree in the birth of a son to the virgin Mary but they differ in their narration. In Luke, Joseph, the husband is not thought of; in Matthew, the mother does not participate in the talk that the angels conduct in either case. In Luke, Mary is perplexed. She says—"How shall this be, seeing I know not a man" in reply to the announcement to her that "the Lord is with thee". In Matthew, Joseph discovers that Mary who is betrothed to him "was found with the child of the Holy Ghost". The angel comes thereafter and ultimately, 'he took unto him his wife' but 'knew her not till she had brought forth a son.'

Parallel imagery in the Dramas of Kālidāsa:—In the dramas of Kālidāsa, 'Vikramorvaśya' and 'Śākuntala,' we come across a situation which, we can say, is very near to the one we find in the Matthew. In the Vikramorvaśya, the hero is separated from the heroine in the beginning of the rainy season (Act IV) and in the subsequent act, he comes to know that he has a son although he does not remember having been separated from the wife (except once) so as not to have noticed the signs of her pregnancy. He however recollects that only for a few days he noticed in her some faint changes which were some indications of the beginning of pregnancy (Act V). The companion of the king offers an explanation to the effect that the king should not put this matter to a strict human basis; and perhaps, the true explanation of the narrative of the gospels bears the same relation. In fact the drama proceeds with the acceptance of the son. In the Śākuntala, the king forgets the heroine (pregnant in Act V), "knew her not";—and the reunion takes place when the king meets the son (in Act VII). In both the situations in these dramas, the red jewel plays a very significant part, towards the reunion of the two in the former and towards a recollection of the union in the latter drama. The significance of the union in the former case lies in the season. It is the season which has followed the Indian rainy season, that is to say, the autumn, which is also the proper one for the Nativity.

The true explanation of the imagery of the virgin birth can now be inferred. It is during harvest and in autumn that the sun enters the sign Virgo and the star that completes heliacal rise then is the star Agastya-Canopus-A Argo Navis; and in that way the birth of a son in the virgin conception seems to have arisen. The consideration of this star Canopus furnishes a reasonable and true explanation of many other points of the gospel narrations. We will here refer to another imagery about this star.

The star which "the wise men of the East" saw must have been this star. It may be remembered that often Christ takes to a boat in the evening and preaches to the multitude. The star Canopus belongs to a constellation which is called a ship-Navis-the ship Argo. (cf. "...sat by the sea side. And there were gathered unto him great multitude, so that he entered into a boat and sat; and all the multitude stood on the beach. And he spake to them many things in parables..." Matthew XIII, 1-3. "...he withdrew from thence in a boat, to a desert place apart: and when the multitude heard thereof, they followed him on foot from the cities." XIV, 13-14, and also XIV, 22 ff. )

It looks that many of the passages of the gospels can be better understood and followed if we refer to the star as the star A-Argo Navis, the star Canopus. We cannot pursue the matter further in this article as it involves an extensive survey of all the literature that is connected with this star. But we will quote one passage and conclude this article. "Uṣas arrives with a bright child" ( 'Vedic Mythology' -A. Macdonell-p. 48 ). The writer finds that Uṣas is goddess of Dawn at the vernal and the Autumnal equinox and in the latter case, the star Agastya is alluded to as a child ( see the writer's article on the "Vedic Gods" published in the A. B. O. R. I., Vol. XVII ). This conception is very close to the one of the mother Virgin with child in her arms.

To summarise: The winter is not the season and the month is not December for the nativity. It must be the season of harvest; the month then would be August-September when the sun is in the sign Virgo and when the star Canopus (A-Argo Navis-Agastya) rises heliacally, thus furnishing the conception that the Virgin is with the child<sup>1</sup>. This is the proper season when 'the stones are turned into bread', that is, when the agriculture (process on earth) develops into fruitful gathering of the harvest, the proper season and months for the nativity and for the rejoicings-for the "Gospel."

QUOTATIONS

(A) "A New Analysis of Chronology and Geography"-by Rev. William Hales, Vol. I, pp. 92-93.

The true cause of their fixing on the 25th of December, is thus perhaps best explained by Sir Isaac Newton.

"The times of the birth and passion of Christ, with such like niceties, being not material to religion, were little regarded by the Christians of the first age. They who began first to celebrate them, placed them in the cardinal points of the year; as the Annunciation of the Virgin Mary, on the 25th of March, which when Julius Caesar corrected the calendar, was the Vernal equinox; the feast of John the Baptist on the 24th June, which was the Summer Solstice; the feast of St. Michael on September 29th, which was the Autumnal equinox; and the birth of Christ on the Winter Solstice, December 25th; with the feasts of St. Stephen, St. John, and the Innocents, as near it as they could place them; and because the solstice, in time, removed from the 25th of December to the 24th, the 23rd, and the 22nd, and so on backwards, hence some, in the following centuries, placed the birth of Christ on December 23rd, and at length on December 20th; and for the same reason, they seem to have set the feast of St. Thomas on December 21st, and that of St. Matthew on September 21.

"So also, at the entrance of the sun into all the signs of the Julian calendar, they placed the days of the other saints: as the conversion of Paul, on January 25th, when the sun entered Aquarius; St. Matthias, on February 25th, when he entered Pisces; St. Mark, on April 25th, when he entered Taurus; Corpus Christi, on

1. Bethleem or Bethlehem is also known by the Hebrew name of 'Ephrata.' These words mean the "house of bread" and "the land of country". The Arabs give it another name resembling the first: for they call it Bait-lahem or the "House of meat" ("The Life of our Lord Jesus Christ" by J. James Tissot, Vol. I, 17 ff.). This is a very suggestive name when the harvest season for the nativity holds good.

May 26th, when he entered Gemini; St. James, on July 25th, when he entered Cancer; St. Bartholomew, on August 24th, when he entered Virgo; Simon and Jude, on October 28th, when he entered Scorpio; and if there were any other remarkable days in the Julian calendar they placed the saints upon them: as St. Barnabas on June 11th, where Ovid seems to place the feast of Vesta and Fortuna, and the goddess Matua; and St. Philip and St. James, on the first of May, a day dedicated both to the Bona Dea, or Magna Mater, and in the goddess Flora, and still celebrated with her rites.

"All which shews that these days were first fixed in the Christian Churches by mathematicians at pleasure, without any ground in tradition; and the Christians afterwards took up with what they found in the calendars". Prophecies of Daniel, Chap. ii, Part I, p. 144.

Hesplan, a learned German Antiquary, is of opinion that the Christians at Rome did not celebrate the 25th of December, as thinking Christ was then born, but to make amends for the Heathen Saturnalia; which was a season of great festivity, beginning on December 16, and lasting three days, but usually prolonged to the end of the week, on account of the succeeding feast of Sigillarii. Macrobi. Saturnal. lib. i. cap 10. And indeed the crowding together so many holidays, near the end of December, as we find in the calendar, strongly confirms this opinion.

To determine the true day of Christ's birth, as Scaliger says, belongs to God alone, not man. Of all the various conjectures that have been proposed, the most probable are either (1) that "Christ, our Passover" was born about the time of the Vernal equinox, when the Passover was celebrated, or (2) about the Autumnal equinox at the celebration of the feast of the tabernacles, when "the Word became flesh, and tabernacled among us, (John i. 14), or (3) on the great day of atonement, the 10th day of the seventh month as "a faithful high-priest, in things pertaining to God, to make atonement for the sins of the people (of Israel)" Heb. ii. 17; "to be himself a propitiation for our sins; and not for ours only but also for those of the whole world." John ii. 2. And if this last (Adopted by primate Usher) be preferred, it gives a peculiar emphasis to the declaration of the angel to the shepherds on the night of the nativity:—"Fear not, for lo, I bring you glad tidings of great joy, which shall be unto all the people (of Israel); for unto you is born this day a Saviour, who is Christ the Lord. Glory to God in the highest, and on earth, peace, goodwill towards men." Luke ii. 10-14,

(B) "Dictionary of Christ and the Gospels." 2 Vols. J. Hastings.

Winter in Palestine:—This is the time of cold and rain storms. The modern Arab name Esh-shitta, means literally 'the rain'. It is the season in which the rain supply of the year falls; it lasts roughly for seven months from October to April inclusive, thus including the part of the year which we call spring. While in the deeper parts of the Jordan valley it is never very cold, the raw air breeds many discomforts in the rainy season. On the higher lands, however, the cold is often intense, snow lying in times e.g. in Jerusalem to a depth of some inches. The rain moistens the soil, hard baked by the summer sun. In a land where the science of road-making is practically unknown, the paths go swiftly to mud, so that travel in winter is always toilsome, and not seldom perilous."—W. Ewing.

(C) Summer in Palestine:—This term stands in the Gospels for the time of heat as distinguished from the season of cold and rain storms. These terms indicate the great division of the year in the East. Scripture has no special words for spring and autumn; while the Arab speaks of er-rabia, 'the time of fresh pasture', and el-kharif 'the time of gathering' of grapes and other fruits, they are hardly regarded as distinct seasons. Saif wa shitta, 'summer and winter' sum up the year for him. When in the less frequent showers of early April, the fig leaves burst out<sup>1</sup> and cover the immature fruit on the twigs, the days of cloudless sunshine are 'at hand.' These last from April, through the harvest in the end of May, the threshing and winnowing that follow, and the gathering of the fruits in August and September, until the clouds of October herald the coming of rains and cold."—W. Ewing.

(D) Vol. I, p. 32.

"Ploughing began immediately after the 'early rain' had softened the ground i. e. towards the end of September or the beginning of October, and went on right through the winter provided the soil had not become too wet and therefore, too heavy. Usually a single ploughing sufficed, but if the soil was very rough it was ploughed twice".

(E) Vol. I, p. 39.

"The sowing season began in the early days of October. A beginning was made with pulse varieties, barley came next, and wheat followed. Millet was sown in summer, the land being prepared for it by irrigation. When the winter set in cold and wet, barley was not sown till the beginning of February."

<sup>1</sup> Matthew xxiv. 32-34. "Now from the fig tree learn her parable: when her branch is now become tender, and putteth forth its leaves, ye know that the summer is nigh; even so ye also, when ye see all these things, know ye that he is nigh, even at the doors".

(F) Vol. I, p. 40.

"The Water Supply of the Country:—Unlike Egypt, which owed its fertility exclusively to the Nile, Palestine had its time of rain (Dt. xi. 10, 11, 14, Jer. v. 24 etc.). The 'early rain' of the Bible is that of October, which precedes ploughing and sowing; the 'latter rain' denotes the refreshing showers that fall in March and April, and give much-needed moisture to the growing crops; The intervening period is marked by the heavy rains of winter, the wettest month being January. The rainfall is not uniform over the country. In the Jordan valley it is very slight; at Jerusalem it averages about 20 inches annually; in some other upland regions it is almost twice as much. In the highest lying parts, as Lebanon, there is a considerable fall of snow. There are also many brooks and springs (Dt. viii. 7.), and irrigation is employed, especially in gardening, though naturally on a much smaller scale than in Egypt. The summer months are hot and rainless."

II—The Son of Man: Miracles and Betrayal

Canopus:—In the first article on the "Virgin Birth and Nativity" we pointed out that December and a late date in the month were not in harmony with the movements that were before and after the birth of Christ, in the land and in the then prevailing season of Palestine; and the other description of Christ as Lord of Harvest suggested for the arrival the time of harvest in the months of August-September which agreed with the course of Sun in the sign Virgo, leading to the symbolical description of the Virgin giving birth to the Son. That was the time of the heliacal rise of the star Canopus in the southern quarter. The description of the Lord of Harvest will be helpful in more than one way.

Mt. IX, 33-8; X, 1-4.

"And Jesus went about all the cities and the villages, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing all manner of disease and all manner of sickness....

"Then saith he unto his disciples: The harvest truly is plenteous, but the labourers are few. Pray you therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he send forth labourers into his harvest.

"And he called unto him his twelve disciples, and gave them authority over unclean spirits, to cast them out, and to heal all manner of disease and all manner of sickness.

"Now the names of the twelve apostles are these: (here the list of the twelve follows which we quote later on)."

Taking to a boat (MT. XIII, 2 "...He entered into a boat, and sat; and all the multitude stood on the beach...") further emphasized the character of the Lord of Harvest, which explained the Virgin birth, viz. star Canopus, A-Argo Navis, lucida in the ship Argo. Now we will point out some of the incidents in the life of Christ which help us more to understand it. The circumstances around the birth had a local colour but the other narrations do not admit of the geographic limitations. With certain facts about this star and regarding the occurrences about its time we can understand the narrations of the evangelists far better.

We refer to the gospel of St. Matthew (Mt.) to "Dictionary of Christ and the Gospels" in two vols. by J. Hastings, (T. & T. Clark, Edinburg, 7th ed., 1927) referred to as "DOG", and to "A Classical Dictionary of Hindu Mythology and Religion, Geography, History and Literature" by John Dowson (Kegan P. T. Trubner, London, 5th ed., 1913) referred to as "Dow." The list of apostles varies slightly in their order. However, for the purpose of this article, we stick to the order of Mt. and do not regard the variation.

Son of Man and Father in Heaven:—

There are many references to both these phrases—'Son of Man and Father in Heaven'—in the gospels. They proceed from Christ. For their occurrences one may consult DOG under "Son of Man" and 'Father'. We give only a few instances:

Mt. IX, 6—But that ye may know that the Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins....

Mt. XI, 19—The son of man came eating and drinking, and they say, Behold, a gluttonous man, and a winebibber, a friend of publicans and sinners!

Mt. XXVI, 63-4.—...tell us whether thou be the Christ, the Son of God, Jesus said unto him, Thou hast said: nevertheless I say unto you, Henceforth ye shall see the Son of man sitting at the right hand of power, and coming on the clouds of heaven.

It will be evident that the title "Son of Man" means much more than an emphasis on man as human being. The virgin birth conception is against human emphasis. The title therefore needs explanation. Let us put in here some references to the Father in heaven:

Mt. VI, 9-11—After this manner therefore pray ye: Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done, as in heaven, so on earth. Give us this day our daily bread.

Mt. X, 32-3-Every one therefore who shall confess me before men, him will I also confess before my Father which is in heaven. But whosoever shall deny me before men, him will I also deny before my Father which is in heaven.

Mt. V, 44-5-...but I say unto you, Love your enemies, and pray for them that persecute you ; that ye may be sons of your Father which is in heaven : for he maketh his sun to rise on the evil and the good, and sendeth rain on the just and the unjust.

The title here gets extensive through the 'sons of your Father.' Without attending the apparent contradiction in the last passage to the previous one, we may consider the problem in the ordinary way. The Father in heaven is not Sun (he maketh his sun to rise) as it will be clear from the above quotation. Therefore we must have an interpretation which will meet all the descriptions. For that we have to look into the history of Canopus and for that, into the history of Canopus in the sacred literature of the great religion in Asia and in its home in India too. Accordidg to the great lexicon, Amara, Canopus-Agastya is "Maltrā-Varuṇa", son of gods Mitra and Varuṇa (I, 3, 20). "Agastya and Vasiṣṭha are said in the Rgveda to be the offspring of Mitra and Varuṇa, whose seed fell from them at the sight of Ūrvaśī."—Dow. p. 4. As the author of this article finds it, the God Mitra is a regent of the Gnomon called Śanku at times 'Puruṣa' wherein another divine sage is also identified, the sage Manu, the first man and the father of human race (of mānavas). The god Varuṇa is found to be the regent of the Pole star and in Vedas, he holds the suzerain place in the realm of heaven, and is very naturally and generally associated with the Gnomon, Mitra-Manu. Manu (Gnomon) is often called the son of Vivasvan which is also another name of Pole star. For all these interpretations one has to read the article "Vedic Gods" sections I and IV (published in the Annals of the Bhandarkar O. R. Institute, Vol. XVII), Canopus as son of Man (Manu) and of the Father (Varuṇa) in heaven meets the description of the gospels. The eating and drinking may just refer to the plenty and joy of the harvest reflected in the depiction of the seasonal god. As to the power of Canopus regarding sins etc., and of Varuṇa the sacred literature of Vedas and of the Bhāgavata is enough. Brhaspati and Viṣṇu in Vedas and Kṛṣṇa in the classical literature of India are depictions of the moral and ultrahuman power of Canopus over mankind. Denial of it (Mt. X, 32-3) will be denial of the eternal laws of Varuṇa, expressed through Canopus. Harvest is the season of arrival of Canopus and hence, bread secured out of human efforts and out of divine grace is a natural reference in prayers. At the time of the heliacal rise of this star Canopus, the rise of stars of Ursa Major (Saptarṣi), particularly of the star Vasiṣṭha takes place. This may well have been the representation of the "wise men from the East" present at that time, departing another way (Mt. II, 1-12). The star they saw was Canopus, rising heliacally in Aug.-Sept., and the young child can be none other than the son of "Mitrā-Varuṇa." The emotions in the narrations are human, the garb is symbolical and the truth is astronomical. "Is not this the carpenter's son?" (Mt. XIII, 55) Yes—in the same way. When the star appears, the constellation Citrā (in sign Virgo) Spīca-A-Virgo star sets heliacally and its regent god is Tvaṣṭṛ, who is the divine carpenter (Amara. II, 10, 9 Tvaṣṭṛ=Carpenter). Ūrvaśī of whom Canopus (= Aurvaśeya) was born by Mitrā and Varuṇa, is representing equator in the drama Vikramorvaśīya of the great poet Kālidāsa and the equatorial star at that season is Citrā. (Citrālekṣhā is the companion of Ūrvaśī in the drama). Thus the carpenter is associated with the "Son of Man."

Two Miracles :—

The star Canopus does perform the two miracles. It is harvest and plenty at the autumnal season of sign Virgo when, in the north, we see seven stars of Ursa Major (Saptarṣi) and when the sun is in it (Virgo) in stars of Hasta (five stars-Corvus) and in two single stars each of Citrā (Spīca) and Svāti (Arcturus-A-Bootes comprising Virgo). Thus with five loaves (five stars of Corvus-Hasta) and two fishes (Citrā-Svāti, = Spīca-Arcturus) the Lord of Harvest fed the multitude, the five thousand and more. (Mt. XIV, 13-21). What was left is twelve which, as we see later, is the number of months, signs and also of the apostles of Canopus. The season of harvest has the divine grace of this star and all get their bread. In Vedic descriptions, light is spoken of in many ways, amongst which come 'food' and 'water'; 'and stars' are styled 'fishes' (they never wink—stellar gods never wink—Amara. III, 3, 218 "सुरमत्स्योऽन्निमिषौ"). Later, light is called 'blood' and 'wine' from its red colour and which colour—sense-of light—has a bearing in the passage of the Last Supper (Mt. XXVI, 26-29).

The same phenomena of plenty of the season and of the year gets another story, round the seven stars of Ursa Majoris-Saptarshi in Mt. XV, 32-39. Four thousand and more were fed by these seven 'loaves' and fishes and since the process repeats every year, the seven 'baskets' (Saptarsi) remain always full feeding the multitude—the number stands for many, for mankind. The grace is of the seasonal star but the time and the work of the period is always through the passage of the sun in the twelve signs of the zodiac. Thus the "miracle" of Canopus works through (the signs) the twelve apostles.

The Twelve Apostles: Betrayal:—

Mt. IX, 2-4 enumerates them. With equivalent signs they are as under. The first is naturally the most near to Canopus and that is the sign of the longitude of Canopus, the sign Gemini. Then the last one is the farthest from Canopus and it is Taurus and it is the sign in which this star sets heliacally; and when this star sets in west in its daily course, the constellation in the opposite direction in east (south) is the Southern Cross. The idea of crucifixion on a cross gets thus associated. And every sign has 30 divisions, 30 degrees, which in the narration become thirty 'pieces of silver' (Mt. XXVI, 16), the price for the betrayal of Son of Man. The emotions are unmistakably human. The pathos is human. But the truth is more than human: it is the symbolical description of the astronomical phenomena rather than betrayal by human Jews. Indeed, when Canopus sets, it is away from not one but from all the signs so far visibility is concerned. "Then all the disciples left him and fled" (Mt. XXVI, 56) is literally (i. e. astronomically) true. So the sign in which Canopus sets has the sun in it, it is dead, and accordingly, immediately after the "betrayal", Judas—the Taurus—"went away and hanged himself" (Mt. XXVII, 6), leaving the 30 "pieces" in the sanctuary—the zodiac. Thus the sign and the apostle bid exit. The pathos is indeed human but the truth is stellar and what is the value of any emotion or fact today if truth is not a part and parcel of it?

The list: 1st Simon who is called Peter	... Gemini
2nd Andrew, his brother	... Cancer
3rd James, the Son of Zebedee	... Leo
4th John, his brother	... Virgo
5th Phillip	... Libra
6th Bartholomew	... Scorpio

7th Thomas	...	Sagittarius
8th Matthew, the publican	...	Capricorn
9th James, the Son of Alphæus	...	Aquarius
10th Thaddæus	...	Pisces
11th Simon the Cananæan	...	Aries
12th Judas Iscariot "who also betrayed him."	} ...	Taurus

Mt. X, 4 says regarding the 12th "who also betrayed him" or according to another version "who also delivered him up." Why ALSO? This word would include others in this occurrence. 'Delivered him up' seems to be more near the original purport—Canopus delivered over by Taurus. Further, it is remarkable (Mt. IX, 9) that the 8th Matthew (representing Capricorn) is sitting at the place of toll which would then mean the juncture point at the winter solstice.

We may now read the passage of Mt. X, 16-23 to note the sense of 'deliver up' with reference to the twelve. "And brother shall deliver up brother to death, and the father his child: and children shall rise up against parents, and cause them to be put to death ... he that endureth to the end, the same shall be saved. But when they persecute you in this city, flee into the next: for verily I say unto you, Ye shall not have gone through the cities of Israel, till the Son of Man be come" is a picture of setting signs preceded or followed by one of themselves, astrologically, third being brother, fifth the child and fourth or tenth father; and the order changing amongst them, till (and after, too) the coming of the Son of man—Canopus. "What I tell you in the darkness, speak you in the light" (Mt. X, 27) is literally true, Canopus shines at night. Signs work by sun at day.

The fourth is John, representing the female Virgo and thus he would be associated with Mary the Virgin, since Canopus rises then heliacally (sun in Virgo).

The first group of four is intimately associated with the Canopus, from its longitude to its heliacal rise. (Cf. Mark XIII, 1-13). In the famous picture of the Last Supper (by Leonard Da Vinci) we see Christ seated between Peter (Gemini) and John (Virgo) which is significant enough for their connection with the Son of Man. The supper is arranged in a place indicated by a man bearing a pitcher of water (Mark XIV, 13-14) which is suggestive of another Indian name of Canopus, connected with water-pot, "Kumbha" (vide Dow, "Agastya").

We have some details of the association of Christ and Peter. It is Peter who also is definite about the Christ when all the disciples were questioned (Mt. XVI, 13-20). "But who say ye that I am? And Simon Peter answered and said, "Thou art Christ, the Son of living God." Peter (Gemini) is naturally expected to have a better communion, being the sign of the longitude of Canopus. But that sign is overcome for some time when the star Canopus disappears (heliacally) and that is the "denial" of the Lord by Peter. "Now Peter was sitting without in the court" (Mt. XXVI, 69), and that is very natural since it was then prevalence of Taurus. (Mt. XXVI, 69-73) asserts thrice the association of Peter-Gemini with Jesus—very naturally. But the human level of Peter is not encouraged in (Mt. XVI, 21-24), for "he thinketh not the things of God," the natural course (heliacal setting) of Canopus, and is carried off by one fact only. But Peter is just human as well as, as Gemini, astronomical when he asserts (Mt. XXVI, 31-35) "If all shall be offended in thee, I will never be offended". The subsequent tragedy is the limitations of Peter, he being least responsible, it being the astronomical course. It was not left to him 'to die with the Lord'—to form an unbroken company (Mt. XXVI, 35). And the course of Canopus (set heliacally) extends to three signs further—Gemini, Cancer and Leo, the three disciples are taken with him (Mt. XXVI, 36-46) but they fell heavy with sleep—the three signs wherein Canopus is left alone—in agony and here Mt. seems to have changed the order into one we read in Mark III. 16-19. But Peter wants to follow the Master walking on the waters—on waves (Mt. XIV, 22-33). The two months before Virgo are of rainy season and Peter as Gemini cannot follow into the rainy season, with the master. Even (naturally) he has difficulty in recognising him "Lord, if it be thou..." since Canopus was not yet risen (heliacally) although it was crossing the region of waters "walking upon the sea." All except Peter felt it to be apparition which was natural, they did not see or feel the (heliacally) set star even as much as Peter, Gemini, alone could feel to a limited extent. That was the 'little faith' in Peter (Mt. XIV, 31). This is also the time and phenomena of Transfiguration (Mt. XVII, 1-13) when Canopus is in clouds (heliacally set and rainy season) in company with divine personages. This vision is left to the three signs between Gemini and Virgo. Why Andrews is left out cannot be ascertained at present.

We need not multiply instances which elucidate more and more the nature of Christ and the twelve, the Canopus and the twelve signs; the same elements will explain the Resurrection. Betrayal and the resurrection are the phenomena of yearly recurrence. "He that hath ears, let him hear" (Mt. XIII. 43). Rising and setting of the signs is also referred to in Mt. XIX, 30. "But many shall be last that are first; and first that are last". Thus the twelve in rotation carry the work of the Master including the miracles and the betrayal every year. We repeat that Canopus is the key to the life of Christ, of "Gospel".

INDRA AND AHALYĀ

BY

R. SHAMA SASTRY

It is related in the Epics that Indra, the sun, loved Ahalyā, the wife of Gotama, who, coming to know of their intimacy, cursed Indra to be spotted and Ahalyā to be a stone. Yielding to her entreaty, he said that when Rāma, the son of Daśaratha, steps over Ahalyā's stony form, she will recover her former form. With a view to account for Indra's immoral conduct, Kumārila, the founder of the school of Vedic exegesis, named after him, explained the story as a form of sun-dawn myth, which is translated by Prof. Max Müller as follows:—

"Prajāpati, the lord of creation, is a name of the sun, and he is called so, because he protects all creatures. His daughter Uṣas is the dawn. And when it is said that he was in love with her, this only means that at sun-rise the sun runs (abhyeti) after the dawn, the dawn being at the same time called the daughter of the sun, because she rises when he approaches. In the same manner, if it is said that Indra was the seducer of Ahalyā, this does not imply that god Indra committed such crime, but Indra means the sun and Ahalyā (from ahan and li) the night and as the night is seduced and ruined by the sun of the morning, therefore is Indra called the paramour of Ahalyā". Criticising Kumārila's view the professor says:—"When the Rgveda says that Agni is the lover of maidens (jāraḥ kaninām, I, 66, 4) and the lover of dawn (uṣasām jāraḥ, VII, 9, 1), when it says, prabodhaya jaritar jaramindram (X, 42, 2), O singer wake up the lover Indra, it would, I think, be rather inappropriate to say that jāra means destroyer. Probably the word is derived from jar, to go, to approach, which is a root in group No. 118 of the list. The Rgveda (X, 3, 3) says about Agni thus—avasāram jāro abhyeti—the lover approaches the sister (the dawn)."

It is to be noted that Ahalyā is one of the five maidens, the mere mention of whose names is stated to destroy all sin. They are (1) Ahalyā, (2) Draupadī, (3) Tārā, (4) Tārā, (5) Mandodarī. I take these kanyās (Vedic kanās) to be the following asterisms, for reason that the word kanā is used in R.V. X, 61 to denote the same asterisms. Ahalyā is Ādrā which is compared to a coral stone in the list of asterisms. Draupadī is Viśākhā which is compared to a tree (Āśvattha or pippala) with its root turned up and its branches down; she is the daughter of Dru-pada, the root of the tree. Of the two Tārās, one is Rohiṇī, the mother of Budha, Mercury; the second is P. Phalgunī, the wife of Vāli, first, and then of Sugrīva, Indra's son, and father of Jupiter. Mandodarī is Śaraṇyu (Āsvini), the mother of the Āsvins, the two Āsvini asterisms; or Kṛttikā, or P. Āṣāḍhā, the mother of Agni, Mars. Ahalyā means not halyā, not fit for ploughing, that is stony ground. Since Ādrā is stone, she is Ahalyā. She is the wife of Gotama, the best bull, the moon, the husband of the 27 asterisms. The curse implies a solar eclipse by the asterism Ādrā, when the asterism takes the appearance of a colourless stone and Indra, the sun, appears marked with thousands of spots, and Gotama, the colourless moon, is near the sun, it being a new-moon day. She regains her brilliant colour on a full-moon day when the fest, rays, of Rāma, the sun, 180° from her, fall upon her. This seems to be the simple significance of the allegorical story of Ahalyā.

NARHAD INSCRIPTION OF VIGRAHARĀJA IV, V. 1218

By

DASHARATHA SHARMA

The name of the Cāhamāna ruler Vīgraharāja IV or Visaladeva of Sakambhari is well known to students of Rajput history. He ruled from about V. 1209 to 1223, and was responsible for the capture of Delhi from the the Tomaras, defeat of the Ghaznavite ruler, most probably either Khusrāu Shah or Khusrāu Malik, and for the building of the Sarasvatī-mandira of Ajmer on the site of which and built out of whose materials stands the mosque popularly known as Adhūi dīn ka Jhomprā. Dr. D. R. Bhandarkar's list of the inscriptions of Northern India mentions three records of this ruler, bearing respectively the dates V. 1210, 1211, and 1220. The inscription published here for the first time bears the date V. 1218, and is based on an estampage kindly supplied by Captain Principal S. D. Pande of the Birla College, Pilani. The inscription was originally discovered at Narhad, formerly known as Narbhata, and is now in the Birla College, Pilani (Jaipur State, Rajputana).

TEXT

1. Om. Saṃvat 1218 Mārga vadi 15
2. Śanau Naigamānvaya-Kāyastha-Ṭhakura
3. Śrī-Śrīcandra-suta-Vilhāna-putra-
4. Tālhaṇa(h) svargaloke gataḥ ॥
5. Paramabhaṭṭāraka-Mahārājadhīrāja-Pa-
6. rameśvara-Śrīmad = Vīgraharājadevarājye Tha.
7. Śrī-Somade(va)na nijasya...<sup>1</sup> rthe
8. [dehā] kārāpitā ॥ śubham bhavatu ॥

---

1 Three letters here are extremely indistinct.

THE IMPERIAL MYSTICS OF DELHI

BY

S. R. SHARMA

My heart, like the bud of the red, red rose,
Lies fold within fold aflame;
Would the breath of even a myriad springs
Blow my heart's bud to a rose?

Poets and Mystics are difficult to distinguish one from another. They are in imagination all compact. But, while all poets need not be mystics, all mystics are essentially poetic. Their hearts 'like the buds of the red, red rose, lie fold within fold aflame.' The above lines, worthy of a poet and mystic, are not from Blake, but from Bābur—the founder of the Mughal Empire in India.

Much has been written about the emperors of this dynasty of Delhi, but little that is of abiding human interest. Historians, for reasons best known to themselves, are incorrigibly—almost intolerably—political. If they were a whit more human their appeal would be wider and more enduring. Under the purple political cloak of the Mughal emperors there was always beating a warm human heart; under their jewelled crown was often a philosophical head concealed. The purpose of the present series is to throw some concentrated light upon this least suspected aspect of Mughal history.

To avoid being mystical ourselves, it is desirable to define our principal terms and the limitations of our scope. In the first place, 'mystic' is here not to be understood in a rigidly scholastic sense. Secondly, the emperors themselves were too much pre-occupied with political activity to allow 'the breath of even a myriad springs' to blow their heart's buds into fully blossomed roses. But the glimpses available to us, from their own writings or recorded sayings, certainly indicate a mystical vein running through their inner lives. They were primarily or outwardly men of action; else, they could not have built up and administered so magnificent an empire. In their domestic life they were deeply social; without which they would have been unapproachable tyrants. But beneath all these 'fold within fold aflame' was an intense personality romantic and poetical like Bābur's, refined and humane like Humāyūn's, intellectual and eclectic like Akbar's, epicurian and hedonistic like Jahāngir's, and Shāhjahān's, or esoteric and mystical like Dārā Shukoh's, and stoic and puritanical like Aurangzib's. All these were undoubtedly great men despite their well-known weaknesses. But for the political accident of their birth, had they been free to develop their private individualities, the Mughal emperors might have been a family of cultivated gentlemen, philosophers, poets, pirs, with their minds and hearts suffused with religious mysticism.

In the light of the above remarks let us now acquaint ourselves, as intimately as the records permit, with these imperial mystics.

+ + + + +

Bābur was truly and sincerely religious, though he changed his sectarian labels (Sunni and Shia) to suit political exigencies. So also did Humāyūn, to get the support of the Persians. The addiction of the one to wine, as of the other to opium, did not tarnish the soul of either. The conqueror of Hindustan begins his autobiography with the invocation "In the name of God, the Merciful, the Compassionate;" and this is no mere conventional dedication. As the Wāqīāt testifies, Bābur never forgot God in the hour of victory or defeat. "By the grace and mercy of Almighty God," he records about his triumph at Pānīpat, "this difficult affair was made easy to me." Quoting from the Qorān on another occasion he exclaims:

"Say,—O God! who possessest the kingdom! Thou givest it to whom Thou wilt and Thou takest it from whom Thou wilt! In Thy hand is good, for Thou art Almighty."

When he recovered almost miraculously, from the poison administered to him at Delhi (on 21 December 1526), he wrote in a letter: "He who has been near to death knows the worth of life... God gave me new-birth! Through God I know today the worth of life."

But, even more than the above citations, the following two occasions will serve to illustrate the sparkling sincerity of the man of faith that Bābur essentially was—

On the eve of his battle with Rānā Saṅga—"On Monday the 23rd of the first Jumāda (Feb. 25th), when I went out riding, I reflected, as I rode, that the wish to cease from sin had been always in my mind, and that my forbidden acts had set lasting stain upon my heart. Said I, 'Oh! my soul'

'How long wilt thou draw savour from sin?

Repentance is not without savour, taste it!'

(Persian)

'Through years how many has sin defiled thee?

How much of peace has transgression given thee?

How much hast thou been thy passions' slave?

How much of thy life flung away?'

(Turki)

In this mood of sincere repentance—characteristic of deeply religious men—Bābur renounced his long addiction to wine. The farmān which he issued on this occasion opens with the words of the Qurān: "Let us praise the Long-suffering one who loveth the penitent and who loveth the cleansers of themselves; and let thanks be rendered to the gracious one who absolveth his debtors and forgiveth those who seek forgiveness. He goes on to state that 'the nature of man is prone to evil, and that the abandonment of sinful appetites is only feasible by Divine aid and the help that cometh from on high.'

"After some days of sorrow and repentance, we (from the Shāh to the sipāhī) abandoned all evil practices one by one, and the gates of retrogression became closed. On this occasion I received a secret inspiration and heard an infallible voice say: "Is not the time yet come unto those who believe, that their hearts should humbly submit to the admonition of God, and that truth which hath been revealed?" Thereupon we set ourselves to extirpate the things of wickedness, and we earnestly knocked at the gate of repentance. The Guide of help assisted us...and an order was given that with the Holy War there should begin the still greater war which has to be waged against sensuality."

Here we are face to face with a religious Mystic rather than an ordinary conqueror. His end was of a piece with this trait.

"O God! if a life may be exchanged for a life, I, who am Bābur, give my life and my being for Humāyūn."

During the rite fever surged over him, and convinced that his prayer and offering had been accepted, he cried out, "I have borne it away! I have borne it away!"

Such was the sunset of the first of the philosophical minded Mughal emperors. Indeed had Bābur proclaimed on the eve of the battle of Khānua:

Who comes into the world will die;
What lasts and lives will be God.

( Persian )

He who hath entered the assembly of life,
Drinketh at last of the cup of death,
He who hath come to the inn of life,
Passeth at last from Earth's house of woe.

( Turki )

Before Bābur quitted the inn of life, he had once contemplated abdication in favour of his beloved son Humāyūn, declaring

"Though I be not related to derwishes,
Yet am I their follower in heart and soul.
Say not a king is far from a derwish,
I am a King but yet the slave of derwishes."

Humāyūn, the son of such a father, and carefully trained by him, lived to be a gentleman of refinement and culture. But we are more concerned here with his inner life than his social and intellectual accomplishments. His religious faith, however, bordered too often on superstition. His credulity in omens and astrology are too well known to require mention in detail. According to Khwāndamīr, 'His mind is the seat of the secrets of eternity.'

His heart is the receiver of the rays of God's guidance;
His words (are) the discourses of the secrets of truth.

Even if we regard these as conventional epithets, Humāyūn certainly indulged in innovations which revealed the workings of his mind. For instance the mystical values he attached to the number twelve. "For, twelve is the number of digits on which the regulation of most worldly affairs, and of every momentous business has been ordained since the creation of the world to the present time. Firstly because the eighth heaven is divided into the twelve Signs of the Zodiac and the direction of ten revolutions of the Sun, the Moon and the stars, and the seven planets is contingent on the Signs of the Zodiac. And the calculations for months and years are based on their revolutions, and the light of the truth of this idea shines as the passage of days and months in different parts of the universe." (Khwāndamīr)

This is sheer obscurantism or pseudo-mysticism. Yet, if it is true as is recorded, Humāyūn had the presentiment of his death when 'This day after paying my morning devotions a mysterious thing occurred and a secret inspiration brought this quatrain in my lips:

"O God, make me wholly thine.

Acquaint me with thine attributes.

Tyrannous Reason hath crippled my soul.

Call me Thine own madman and set me free."

(Akbarnāmā)

Whence this mysticism?

+ + +

Akbar's religious views and philosophical proclivities are well-known. That he was what Vincent Smith has called a student of comparative religion is also quite patent. But apart from and more than his intellectual eclecticism his own personal faith was deeper than his theosophy. As a ruler indeed he tried to gather

From each fair plant the blossom choicest grown,

To wreath a crown not only for the King,

But in due time for every Musalman,

Brahmin, and Buddhist, Christian and Parsee,

Thro' all the warring world of Hindustan.

And

To hunt the tiger of oppression out,

From office; and to spread the Divine Faith,

Like calming oil on all their stormy creeds,.....

To nurse my children on the milk of Truth,

And alchemise old hatés into the gold,

Of Love, and to make it current.....

Abūl Fazl would have us believe that "Numbers of those who have bid adieu to the world, such as Sonnassees, Calandars, Philosophers, and Sofees," had "their eyes opened unto knowledge" by this Majesty whose insight was esoteric. His prayers were effectively addressed to heaven to support their aspirations to translate them "from seeming existence, unto real existence" (Āin-e-Akbarī). It is this aspect of Akbar's personality that is of interest to us here. His mystic temperament and inclinations are admitted by all critics including Vincent Smith. "His religious speculations and vagaries," Smith writes, "rested primarily on the fact that he was born with the mystic temperament. Later in life he came more under the influence of Hindu pantheistic doctrine, which has close affinities with Sūfī teaching. Throughout all phases he seems always to have cherished the mystic's ideal of close and direct communion with God, unobscured by priestly intervention or disputable dogmas...He remained a mystic to the end." (Akbar the Great Mogul, pp. 348-9).

Quite early in life, when Akbar was only fourteen years of age (in 1557), he appears to have got sick of the world of 'short-sighted men' and was consumed with a passion to be away from men and utterly alone. In solitude he 'communed with God' and was immersed in ecstasy. Such a fit came over him often.

"One night," he said, "my heart was weary of the burden of life, when suddenly, between sleeping and waking, a strange vision appeared to me, and my spirit was somewhat comforted." ('Happy Sayings,' Āin, vol. III, p. 388).

Of such an occasion we have detailed impressions recorded by both Abūl Fazl and Badā'uni. Early in May 1578 Akbar set out on a hunt. But suddenly the mystical mood captured his being. He called off all activity and gathered up 'the skirt of his genius from earthly pomp.' 'A sublime joy took possession of his bodily frame. The attraction (jazaba) of cognition of God cast its ray' (Abūl Fazl). According to Badā'uni, "an extraordinary change was manifested in his manner, to such an extent as cannot be accounted for. And every one attributed it to some cause or other; but God alone knoweth secrets.

'Take care! for the grace of God comes suddenly,

It comes suddenly, it comes to the mind of the wise.'

Commenting further upon this phase of Akbar's life Abul Fazl adds: "About this time the privacy of the spiritual world took possession of his holy form, and gave a new aspect to his world-adorning beauty...What the chiefs of purity and deliverance (Sūfī seers?) had searched for in vain was revealed to him. The spectators who were in his holy neighbourhood carried away the fragments of the Divine bounty." A recent writer has tried to interpret the Dīn-i-Ilāhī in terms of scholastic mysticism.* The subject is too vast and controversial for ampler treatment here. But the initiation and the entire discipline of the Shasṭ certainly surround the Ilāhī with a halo of mysticism: 'the pure Shasṭ and the pure sight shall never err.' Allāh-ho-Akbar.

"Qazi Hamdani says that 'the great name' is the word 'Hu' or 'He'-God-because it has a reference to God's nature as it shows that He has no other at His side. Again the word 'Hu' is not a derivative. All epithets of God are contained in it.

"Possibly Handami's interpretation is true, specially 'Hu' is a Sūfī term and in his early youth Akbar used to chant these Sūfī terms 'Za Hu' and 'Yu Hadī' near the Anupulao. And it is quite probable that the familiar word should be repeated in his Sūfī order."

The writer above referred to concludes his interesting study with a commentary on the Dabistan. He cites parallel passages from the Qorān and the Persian Sūfī writers for every item of the ideology of the Dīn-i-Ilāhī. "As a Sūfī" he says, "Akbar cried with brother Sūfīs like Sādī, Rūmī, Jāmī, Hāfiz, etc. for union with Him." The spirit of Akbar's esoteric and eclectic mysticism is well reflected in the following credo formulated by Abul Fazl:—

"O God, in every temple I see people that worship Thee, and in every language I hear spoken, people praise Thee. Polytheism and Islam feel after Thee."

"Each religion says, 'Thou art one, without equal'. If it be a Mosque, people murmur Thy Holy prayer; and if it be a Christian Church people ring Thy bell from love of Thee."

---

* 'Akbar in the Light of the Dīn-i-Ilāhī' by M. L. Roy Choudhury, M.A., in the Proceedings of the Indian History Congress, 3rd Session, Calcutta, 1939.

"Sometimes I frequent the Christian cloister, and sometime the Mosque, but it is Thou whom I search from temple to temple. Thy elect have no dealings with either heresy or orthodoxy; for neither of them stands behind the screen of Thy truth."

"Heresy to the heretic, and religion to the orthodox, But the dust of the petal belongs to the heart of the perfume-seller."

+ + + +

It is difficult to speak of the mysticism of either Jahāngir or Shāhjahān. Though the fountain of idealism was not dry in their generation it spent its waters in other channels. In spite of Jahāngir's intellectual allegiance to Sūfism and Vedānta, and his interest in ascetics like Jadrūp, he 'was never deep in anything but—Wine.'

'A Flask of Wine, a Book of Verse—and Thou Beside me' was his Paradise. But it was essentially an Earthly Paradise. Shāh jahān was not cast in a more ethereal mould, despite his interest in saints.

'Love is as old as man,
But since this love began,
None loved like Shāh Jahān.'

"I am an artist, and I worship beauty,
Worship it and create it.
The real Jahān is in my palaces,
And in my love of thee.

I write my name—the name of Shāh Jahān—

In the enduring fabric of my marbles,
And when the empire of our Mogul line,
Crumbles in the inevitable flux of time,
And Akbar and Jahāngir are but words,
That monarchise in musty chronicles,
Men still shall say,

Jahān built this, and this,

Those dreams in stone were dreamed by Shāh Jahān,

Jahān of the unalterable love, the which,
He treasured more than these;

The greatest builder and the greatest lover,
That ever walked the earth."

(Jast, L. S.—Shāh Jahān

Shāh Jahān's contributions to mysticism are the Taj Mahal in the realm of art, and the philosophy of Dārā Shukoh in the realm of religion. Of the former one has written

'Not architecture! as all others are
But the Proud passion of Emperor's love
Wrought into living stone.'

Indeed its charm is eternally mystical. Of Dārā Shukoh as a Mystic we shall presently speak. Meanwhile we might dispose of Aurangzib who had the reputation of being a Zinda Pir. He is more of an enigma: In his private life he was intensely religious,—puritanical, stoic. Witness his spreading a carpet, kneeling and praying in the thick of the fight on the frontier against the Uzbeks. It served to mystify his enemy. But as Dārā stigmatised him he was a namāzī. Yet his last letter to Prince Azam reveals unmistakably the soul of a mystic:—

'Peace be on you!
'Old age has arrived and weakness has grown strong; strength has left my limbs. I came alone and am going away alone. I know not who I am and what I have been doing. The days that have been spent except in austerities have left only regret behind.....
'Life so valuable, has gone away for nothing. The Master has been in my house, but my darkened eyes cannot see his splendour. Life lasts not; no trace is left of the days that are no more; and of the future there is no hope.....
'I brought nothing with me (into the world), and am carrying away with me the fruits of my sins. I know not what punishment will fall on me. Though I have strong hopes of His grace and kindness, yet in view of my sins anxiety does not leave me. When I am parting from my own self, who else would remain to me?
'Whatever the wind may be,
I am launching my boat on the water'

+ + + +

Dārā Shukoh was the greatest of the imperial mystics of Delhi. In fact his mysticism disqualified him for the imperial role which brought about the tragedy of his life. "An exalted soul, a noble heart, a liberal mind, a freshness of outlook, a lofty idealism, and an inexhaustible thirst for knowledge--these were the uncommon gifts with which nature endowed him." He read much Persian poetry, his biographer Dr. Qanungs tells us; but Firdausi and Sādi had far less interest for him than Rūmī and Jami. Indeed, he read much besides, including the Bhagavad Gītā, the Upaniṣads and other Hīndu Vedāntic works.

Dārā like all other mystics had visions. In one of these, one night, 'in the prime of his youth' an angel cried out to him in a dream four times: "God has bestowed upon thee what no king on earth did ever get." In time, Dārā tells us, "the foreshadowing of it began to be manifest, and day by day the veil was lifted little by little." He joined the Qadiri school of mystics and instinct or inspiration led him in his quest of the Tawhid: 'Take one step out of thyself, that thou mayst arrive at God.' Limitations of space do not permit us to follow Dārā through all the intricacies of 'the Path.' We should therefore be content with only a few glimpses.

"I have no hope of reaching the goal through my own deeds and acts," says the Prince. "My sole reliance is on thy mercy, O lord!" In his Risala-i-Haqquma, written in 'the intoxication of Union,' Dārā declares—

(i) "No one is a stranger to thee in this Universe; on whatever thou layest thy hands, that confronts thee as thy own self.

(ii) "O thou who seekest God everywhere, thou verily art that God and not separate from Him. This search of thine is exactly like the search of the drop for the ocean, when it is already in the midst of the waters of the ocean.

(iii) "When thou shalt carry this stage to perfection, then there will remain no doubt that thou art the truth."

Even a bare recital of the titles of his works will give the reader some idea of Dārā's contributions to the literature of mysticism. (1) Safinat-ul-awliya or lives of Muslim Saints is 'full of the pain of search' in the path of Sūfism; (2) Sakniat-ul-awliya, dealing mainly with the life of saint Mian Mir of Lahore, incidentally notices the various stages of the mystic journey; (3) Risala-i-Haqquma, or the Compass of Truth, was written for the instruction of novices in the Path of Sufism; (4) Majma-at-Baharain, or Mingling of two Oceans, is the product of comparative study of Hinduism and Islam ; ( 5 ) Sirr-ul-asrar, or the Secret of Secrets is the appropriate title of his translation of the Upanishads ; ( 6 ) Hasanat-ul-Arifā, comprises a defence of his pantheistic views as against the criticism of the orthodox Muslims ; ( 7 ) Tariqat-ul-Haqiqat gives a more eloquent expression to his favourite idealism ; and ( 8 ) Tarjuma-i-Joga-Vashisht : a translation of the Yoga-vāsishṭa.

In the ripeness of his wisdom and learning Dārā sang :

"Thou art in the Kaaba as well as in the Somnath temple;
In the convent as well as in the tavern.
Thou art at the same time
the light and the moth;
The wine and the cup, the sage and the fool,
the friend and the stranger.....
Thou art thyself the rose and the amorous nightingale;
Thou art thyself the moth around the light of thine own beauty."

Here indeed is the greatest of the imperial mystics of Delhi en rapport with the soul of India; and in the words of Dr. Qanungo—"It is hardly an exaggeration to say that anyone who intends to take up the solution of religious peace in India must begin the work where Dārā Shukoh had left it and proceed on the Path chalked out by that Prince."

THE EXTENT OF MAHĀRĀṢṬRA AS FOUND IN THE AIHOLE INSCRIPTION

BY

S. R. SHENDE

I. INTRODUCTION

This is an humble attempt to draw to this subject the attention of learned scholars whose wider knowledge and deep study will surely settle the issue. The writer here merely opens it.

In this article an attempt is made to determine the territories which were included in Mahārāṣṭra according to the Aihole inscription<sup>1</sup> ( of the 556th year of the Śaka Era, and the 3735th year after the great Mahābhārata War ) which describes, in its 25th verse, Mahārāṣṭra as,

अगमदधिपतिर्द्वं यो महाराष्ट्रकानाम् नवनवतिसहस्रग्रामभाजो त्रयाणाम् ।

i. e. " Who ( Pulakeśi II ) attained sovereignty of the Tri Mahārāṣṭra containing 99000 villages." The territory covered by this Tri Mahārāṣṭra is not shown in the poem, in clear terms, and therefore we have to search it out. But before doing so, it will be helpful to see what we know of its colonization.

II. COLONIZATION OF MAHĀRĀṢṬRA

The first Aryan colonist<sup>2</sup> of Dakṣiṇāpatha, we know of, according to tradition, is Agastī, who crossed the Vindhya mountain and settled in Vidarbha.<sup>3</sup> Agastī being one of the

<sup>1</sup> ( 1 ) Ind. Ant. Vol. V : 67 ; Vol. VIII : 237

( 2 ) Epl. Ind. Vol. VI : I.

( 3 ) Selections from Sanskrit Inscriptions by Dikalkar, Part I, p. 37ff.

<sup>2</sup> अग्निदेवामावण, सारकाण्ड, सर्ग १०, श्लोक, १११ to ११५.

वाल्मीकिरामायण, अरण्यकाण्ड, अध्याय ११, Agastyāśrama situated in Vidarbha can be traced here.

authors<sup>1</sup> of the Vedic hymns, we can take back the date of the colonization of Mahārāṣṭra to the date when the Vedas were being composed i. e. nearly 4 thousand years before the commencement of the Śaka Era. Reference to इक्षिणा पदा in ऋग्वेद<sup>2</sup> 10. 61. 8 and to विदर्भ<sup>3</sup> in शतपथ ब्राह्मण 14. 5. 5, 22 support this view. The big colonies of Mahārāṣṭra are :

- |                  |                |
|------------------|----------------|
| ( 1 ) Mālava     | ( 3 ) Aparānta |
| ( 2 ) Āśmaka     | ( 4 ) Vīdarbhā |
| ( a ) Nāsikya    | ( 5 ) Kuntala  |
| ( b ) Petanika   |                |
| ( c ) Karbhāṭaka |                |

Here मालव is mentioned as a part of महाराष्ट्र because there existed a dialect of महाराष्ट्री, the language of महाराष्ट्र, of the name of आश्वन्तिका,<sup>4</sup> a dialect spoken in अश्वनी, the famous city of मालव. मालव seems to have been colonized in Vedic period.<sup>5</sup>

These we find recorded and form parts of Mahārāṣṭra. The locations of these colonies were since then well known. There were minor colonies such as Papdu Rāṣṭra, Deva Rāṣṭra,<sup>6</sup> Gopa Rāṣṭra,<sup>7</sup> Malla Rāṣṭra etc., and are accepted as parts<sup>8</sup> of Mahārāṣṭra. All these colonies were, in these days, being treated as "Rāṣṭras" and their residents as "Rāṣṭrikas."

These Rāṣṭras being of the same race, religion and culture, must have been in close contact with one another for several centuries, and must have developed a common civiliza-

<sup>1</sup> ऋग्वेद I. 179.

<sup>2</sup> 4000 to 1500 years before Śaka era [(a) Orion by Tilak (1898 Ed.) p. 219.

(b) भारतीय ज्योतिषशास्त्र by Dixit (1931 Ed.) p. 136 ].

<sup>3</sup> The date of शतपथ ब्राह्मण is fixed at 3100 years before Śaka Era ( भारतीय ज्योतिषशास्त्र page 128 ).

<sup>4</sup> "आश्वन्ती स्वाम्महाराष्ट्रीशौरसेन्योरु संक्रात्" प्राकृतसर्वस्व of माकडदेव.

<sup>5</sup> सिंधु river of अश्वनी is probably सिंधु mentioned in ऋग्वेद 4. 8. 8.

<sup>6</sup> इक्ष्वाकु can be assigned to the southern part of Satara district where there is a village named इक्ष्वाकु in Tasgaon Taluka.

<sup>7</sup> गोपराष्ट्र is गोवराष्ट्र ( गोपा ) one of the 7 Konkans ( Ind. Ant. Vol. VIII, page 18 ).

<sup>8</sup> History of Mediaeval Hindu India by Vaidya, Vol. I, p. 259.

<sup>9</sup> Bom. Gaz., Vol. I-Part II, page 143.

tion, one language and the same social customs. Consequently all these colonies or Rāṣṭras and Rāṣṭrikas must have been amalgamated into one society and a big nation, with Mahārāṣṭra as their common name, after the colonisation of दक्षिणापथ had taken place.

It is not possible to determine the exact date of such a transformation, requiring as it does several hundreds of years; still it can be presumed that it must have taken place ten centuries prior to the Śaka Era.

III. MAHĀRĀṢṬRA PRIOR TO PULAKESIN II

The name of this Union occurs first in Mahāvāso,<sup>1</sup> in the course of the description of Aśoka's missionary expeditions to the different parts of Bhāratavarṣa. One of these parts was Maharatta, the Pāli form for Mahārāṣṭra. Since these expeditions belong to the 4th century prior to Śaka Era, this first mention of the name should be safely assigned to that period. The reference for the second time is found in the Kāmasūtra<sup>2</sup> of Vātsyāyana (वात्स्यायन) of the first century of the Śaka Era as Mahārāṣṭrakāṇām (महाराष्ट्रकाणाम्) and Mahārāṣṭrikyā (महाराष्ट्रिक्य) and in Bṛhatsaṃhitā<sup>3</sup> of Varāhamihira (by about the 5th century of the Śaka Era) as Mahārāṣṭrāḥ (महाराष्ट्राः).

It is evident from the above that the use of this name is made very rarely in literature but those of the colonies are very common till the 10th century. The oldest name Daṇḍakāranya (दण्डकारण्य) is still in use in the opening of the Saṃkalpa (संकल्प) in our rites as मोदाचर्पाः दक्षिणे or उत्तरे तरे (as the case may be) दण्डकारण्ये देवे ...

All the four references stated above are mere mention of the name but the location of the country is given nowhere. As the subject-matter of those books calls for no occasion to specify it, it is no wonder that they remain silent on this point. Now the location is mentioned for the first time in the inscription referred to in the opening paragraph.

<sup>1</sup> Turner's Mahāvāso: 71 to 74.

<sup>2</sup> महाराष्ट्रिक्यः (महाराष्ट्रिकाः स्त्रियः) Vol. 2, Ch. 5, Sec. 29. महाराष्ट्रकाणाम् Vol. 2, Ch. 4, Sec. 11. (कामसूत्र) published by Chaukhamba Sanskrit Series, Benares.

<sup>3</sup> Ch. 10, verse 8. Page 66 of the commentary by Kern (1865 Ed.).

IV. COMMENTATORS UNHEEDFUL OF MAHĀRĀṢṬRA

The Aihole inscription has been commented<sup>1</sup> upon by good many learned and able scholars from varied points of views but none have viewed it from the point of the extent of Mahārāṣṭra, the only exception being of the late Dr. Ketkar who has drawn the attention of the readers of his Prācīna Mahārāṣṭra (प्राचीन महाराष्ट्र—pp. 459 ff.) to this point and promised to deal with it in the second volume of that series.

The historicity<sup>2</sup> of this inscription has been tested and certified by a good many research scholars and since then it has been proved very useful to the student of history.

V. THE FIRST SEVENTEEN STANZAS

The first 13 stanzas of the inscription deal with the achievements of the ancestors of Pulakeśi II. The verse 14th tells us that Maṅgalīśa, who was in charge of the administration of the kingdom, tried to betray Pulakeśi, the heir-apparent to the throne, by installing his own son to the Gadi. But the 15th narrates that the aims of Maṅgalīśa are frustrated, that he is killed in the scuffle, and that Pulakeśi comes to the throne. The 16th informs us that on account of the chaos arising from the conflict between uncle and nephew, those kings, whose territories were so far conquered and annexed<sup>3</sup> to their own by the Cālukyas, picked up this opportunity to try to recover these : the <sup>1</sup> See foot-note 1 on page 494.

<sup>2</sup> (1) Epi. Ind. Vol. VI: 3 (Kielhorn)

(2) Ind. Ant. Vol. V: 68 (Fleet)

(3) Selections from Sanskrit Inscriptions, Vol. I, Part II: 131 by D. B. Diskalkar, M.A.

<sup>4</sup> In verse 9 Kirtivarmā had overpowered Nala, Kadamba and Maurya kings. The Nalas were ruling in Kaliṅga and Mauryas and Kadambas in Koṅkaṇa.

(Selections from Sanskrit Inscriptions by D. B. Diskalkar, Vol. I, Part II, P. 32).

63 [ Annals, B. O. R. I. ]

लम्बा काले सुबहुपगते जेतुं.... In the 17th relates a concrete instance of such a revolt by Appāika and Govinda. In this way when Pulakeśi came to the throne we find that all these internecine feuds had resulted in diminishing his kingdom which once had indeed extended from the Western to the Eastern seas ( यः पूर्वपश्चिमसमुद्रतटोपितः V. 11 ). Verses 9, 10, 12 and 13 support the above statement.

VI. TWO DIVISIONS OF THE CONQUESTS

The verses which describe the conquests of Pulakeśi, if one were to look into them minutely, are in two divisions. The first division contains verses 18 to 22. Verses 23 to 25 do not narrate any conquest. Then again description of conquests commences from v. 26 and is carried on till v. 31. This is the second division. The intention of the poet in thus dividing the conquest can well be imagined from the verses 23 to 25. In V. 23 he tells the story of the total defeat of Harṣa by the king. The v. 24 shows the king's military powers by telling that he did not feel necessity of maintaining elephants, the strongest factor of the militia of those days, for the protection of his kingdom beyond the Narmadā. In v. 25 the poet showers eulogies in glaring terms on his king for "having attained sovereignty of the Mahārāṣṭra which was as big as to contain 99000 villages."

There are two more points that make this intention of the poet more clear. The first is this, that the description of the conquests is not in the order in which these took place but in geographical sequence. We quote here two instances in support of the above statement. The first is that of the conquest of the विटपुर in v. 27, territory in Godāvari district of the Madras Presidency, which took place, according to V. Smith, in 609 A. D. ( Early History of India : 1914 Ed. p. 425 ). The other is that of the battle between Pulakeśi and Harṣa which, as Dr. A. S. Altekar says ( Annals of B. O. R. I., Vol. XIII, page 306 ), had taken place between 630 and 634 A. D. The poet describes the former conquest in verse 27 and the latter in verse 23.

And the second point is that the poet observed this geographical sequence with the intention of bringing together the parts of Mahārāṣṭra which were not so far in the possession of Pulakeśi, who had just conquered these as described in verses 18 to 22. And this motive is further strengthened by the fact that the poet stops describing the further conquests and begins describing military greatness and praising the king as in verses 23, 24 and 25. These eulogies are supported by the facts that "the fame of the King of the Deccan reached the ears of the king of Persia"<sup>1</sup> and Pulakeṣi assumed the title of परदेव after he conquered Harṣa.<sup>2</sup> And the praises end by telling that the king became overlord of whole of the Mahārāṣṭra. It is still wonder that the poet does not here lose the opportunity of recording the extent of that country. The poet is out to eulogise the king. The inscription is a Praśasti (eulogy) and hence it can be presumed that, having found the king overjoyed at his being the master of the whole of Mahārāṣṭra, the poet did utilise this opportunity rightly as in verse 25. Had it not been so there is no reason why the poet should mention Mahārāṣṭra and its dimensions.

It should be further noted that part of Mahārāṣṭra was already his, when he ascended the throne and that the king did not conquer it afresh. It is also worth noting that the eulogies are not given along with each conquest, nor are they at the end of all the conquests, but are given when he describes the king as "having attained sovereignty of Mahārāṣṭra."

Therefore the verses 18 to 22 make one division of the description of conquest of such parts of Mahārāṣṭra which were not so far in his possession.

Verses 26 to 31 make the second division of it. The countries mentioned therein were outside Mahārāṣṭra.

Verse 32 sums up the second division and the description of the conquests.

The verses 25 and 32, quoted below, will speak for themselves.

Verse 25:

विधिवदुपचित्ताभिः शक्तिभिः शक्रकल्पः
तिसृभिरपि मुर्षीयैः स्वैश्च साहाकुलायैः ।

<sup>1</sup> Early History of India by Smith (1914 Ed.), page 426.

<sup>2</sup> Selections from Sanskrit Inscriptions by Diskalkar Vol. I, Part II, page 133; Epi. Ind. Vol. VII, 163.

अगमदधिपतित्वं यो महाराष्ट्रकाणाम्
नवनवतिसंहस्रग्रामभार्जां त्रयाणाम् ॥

Verse 32 :

उत्साहप्रभुमन्त्रशक्तिसहिते यस्मिन्समस्ता दिशो
जित्वा भूमिपतीन्विभूज्य महितानाराध्य देवहिजान् ।
वातापीं नगरीं प्रविश्य नगरीमेकामिबोर्दीप्तिमास्
चञ्चलीरभिनीरनीलपरिक्तां सत्याश्रये शासति ॥

VII. COUNTRIES COVERED BY MAHARĀṢṬRA

The first thing in this direction we have to do is to name the countries Pulakeśi conquered and the other is to find out those he already possessed. The territory, covered by the countries in these two lists, will help to mark out the countries covered by Mahārāṣṭra.

The names of the newly conquered countries are :—

	Serial No.	No. of the verse	The name of the country conquered	Present name
(a) Parts of Mahārāṣṭra	1	18	Vanavasi <sup>1</sup>	Shimoga and Canara districts.
	2	19	Kingdom of the Gaṅga <sup>2</sup> kings	The Mysore state except Shimoga district.
	3	19	Kingdom of Alupa <sup>3</sup> kings	The tract north-east of Vanavasi.

<sup>1</sup> (1) Selections from Sanskrit Inscriptions by Diskalkar, Vol. I, Part II, P. 133.

(2) Mysore Gaz. Vol. V, Page 1352

(3) Vanavasi in Sirsi Taluka of North Canara: Dharwar Gaz. P. 388.

<sup>2</sup> Bom. Gaz. Vol. I, Part II: 298, Talkhad, the capital of the Gaṅga kings is on the Kaveri river south-east of Mysore city.

<sup>3</sup> Bom. Gaz. Vol. I, Part II: 309.

Serial No.	No. of the verse	The name of the country conquered	Present name
4	20	Territory of Maurya <sup>1</sup> Chief	Southern Konkan.
5	21	Purī <sup>2</sup>	Thana district.
6	22	Lāṭa Deśa <sup>3</sup>	Gujarat, north of the Narmadā.
7	22	Mālava Deśa	Malwa.
8	22	Kingdom of Gurjara <sup>4</sup>	Southern part of Rajputana.
(b) Parts outside Mahārāṣṭra	9	Kingdom of Kosala <sup>5</sup>	Eastern part of Chhattisgarh division of C.P. but not Baster and Kanker states

<sup>1</sup> Early History of India by V. Smith (1914) Page 195.

<sup>2</sup> Bom. Gaz. Vol. I, Part II: 283.

<sup>3</sup> (a) J. B. B. R. A. S., Vol. 21, page 413.

(b) ऐतिहासिक संशोधन by दुर्गाशंकर क. शास्त्री (1941 Ed.) page 282. "लाट देशाची साधारण सीमा महीची तशी सुधी गणाय हे."

(c) Lāṭa is between Thana and Surat (Bom. Gaz. Vol. I, part I page 283 foot-note 5) and it was one of the seven parts of Konkan.

<sup>4</sup> (a) J. B. B. R. A. S., Vol. 21, page 413.

(b) A Gurjara Chieftain by name Dadda II was ruling in Lāṭa, and this Broach Gurjara kingdom was a petty principality hardly equal to 2 or 3 modern districts. This is not the King whom Pulakeśi defeated. Annals of the B. O. R. I., Vol. XIII, p. 304.

(c) Since the poet mentions both Lāṭa and Gurjara here it is clear that he does not mean Gurjara ruling in Broach. Taking into consideration that Gurjara has been mentioned after Malwa and that the poet preferred geographical sequence to describe the conquests, to the order of the countries conquered, and tells us that Pulakeśi first beat Lāṭa, then Malwa and lastly Gurjara who were in those days in Rajputana. Therefore by Gurjara we must take their country as Rajputana and not Broach nor Lāṭa. Early History of India by Smith p. 321 & 322 (1914 Ed.).

<sup>5</sup> Vidarbha of the beginning of the Śaka Era was a very big country divided by Varadā river (मालविकाग्निमित्र Act V, verse 13). Mahārāṣṭra is described as having been extended upto east sea as "पूर्वेतमुद्वेरी" by Mahānubhāvas. Even today Halbi, a dialect of Marāṭhī, is the chief language of Baster state close to the eastern sea. Hence country of Kosala must be beyond the hilly tracts in Khairagarh, Nandgaon and other states and to the North of Baster and Kanker.

Serial No.	No. of the verse	The name of the country conquered	Present name
10	26	Kingdom of Kaliṅga	Orissa.
11	27	Piṣṭapura	A Zamindari in Godāvari district.
12	28	Kunāla <sup>1</sup>	Territory between Godāvari and Kṛṣṇa rivers.
13	29	Pallava kingdom of Kañcīpura	Chingalput district.
14	30	Cola <sup>2</sup> kingdom	Tanjore district.
15	31	Pāṇḍya <sup>3</sup> kingdom	Madurā district
16	31	Kingdom of Kerala <sup>4</sup> kings	Malbar and adjoining native states.

If the readers will see the map they will notice that countries mentioned above have formed a circle. From this it can be easily inferred that the territory inside this circle was the kingdom of Pulakeśi when he ascended the throne. Though the poet does not say anything on this point it can be ascertained from the following facts:—

1 The Kalacūri<sup>2</sup> kingdom was conquered by Maṅgalīśa (verse 12).

2 The territory north of Bhīmarathī<sup>3</sup> river where Appāika and Govind were brought to books (V. 17) should be Sholapur and Usmanabad districts.

3 Vatāpi (V. 7 & 32) i. e. Bijapur district was his capital. These three places were, according to this inscription, in his possession when he came to the throne. As to the possession of

<sup>1</sup> Epl. Ind. Vol. VI, page 3.

<sup>2</sup> Bom. Gaz. Vol. I, part II, page 133.

<sup>3</sup> The kingdom of Kalacūri was near जौंकार मांघाता in Nemāda by this time. They shifted to Telipuri near Jubbulpore in the 10th century.

<sup>4</sup> Bhīmarathī is present भीमा or चंद्रमागा river

(1) महायोगपीठे तटे भीमरथ्या वरं बुधविकारा दातुं श्रुतीहिः ॥

—शौकराचार्यकृतं पांडुरंगस्तोत्रं

(2) भीमरथीतरितं विविटं पंदरिगे नामानं महाप्रानं... ..

—“विहल जागि पांडुरंग” by Khare, p. 6

the unmentioned territories inside the circle, we can safely take them to be parts of his kingdom, since he would not leave any country unconquered between his ancestral kingdom and the countries he conquered later on.

Thus the tracts of land forming parts of Tri Mahārāṣṭra, according to Aihole inscription are :—

(1) In the possession of Pulakeśi when he ascended the throne :—

Old Names	Current Names
(1) Kingdom of Kalacūri	(1) Country round about औदर मंचाला in Nemāda
(2) Āśmaka <sup>1</sup>	(2) Districts of Khandesh, Buldhans, Aurangabad, and up to Jath and Kolhapur States.
(3) Nāsikya	(3) District of Nasik and adjoining territory.
(4) Karhāṭaka	(4) Satara district and Western parts of Kolhapur State.
(5) Kuntala <sup>2</sup>	(5) S. M. C. and Kanarese speaking districts of the Bombay Presidency and of Nizam's dominion and Bellary district.

<sup>1</sup> सुजनिपल by Dr. P. V. Bapat (1924 Ed.) page 143, Śloka 976-77. Page 147, Śloka 1010-1011; Paṭṭhaṇ was included in Āśmaka.

<sup>2</sup> (a) Inscriptions in Northern Karnatak and Kolhapur by Prof. Kundangar. By Northern Karnatak the author meant Southern Maratha Country and Southern districts of the Bombay Presidency. This book contains a good many references to Kuntala from the inscriptions of the part. Hence it is clear that this part was Kuntala, in those days.

(b) Dr. Sten Konow tells us that Mahārāṣṭra comprises Vidarbha and Kuntala.—Ind. Ant. Vol. XXXII, page 180.

(c) He again tells us :—

To the South of Āryāvarta was the great country called Mahārāṣṭra extending Southward to the Kṛṣṇā and sometimes also including the country of the Kuntalas which broadly corresponds to the southern part of

( continued on the next page )

Old Names	Current Names
(6) No old specific name is found for this part	(6) Telugu speaking districts of Nizam's dominion
(7) Vidarbha	(7) Berar (except Buldhana) and whole of C. P. (except the northernmost districts beyond Narmada)

(ii) Countries newly conquered as in V. 18 to 22 shown in (Part 7) list numbering serially 1 to 8.

Here ends the subject-matter of this paper; still there are two more allied points: त्रयाणां महाराष्ट्रकाणाम् and नववर्तिसहस्रग्रामभाजां महाराष्ट्रकाणाम् deserve special attention.

VIII. त्रयाणां महाराष्ट्रकाणाम् OR त्रिमहाराष्ट्र

These two words have been translated by Dr. Fleet<sup>1</sup>, Dr. Kielhorn, Dr. Ketkar, and Mr. Diskalkar as (one) "Mahārāṣṭra; though, while giving the literal meaning, it is given as "Three Mahārāṣṭras." There is no clue or explanation given by the poet to make clear why he describes Mahārāṣṭra as Tri Mahārāṣṭra and therefore we have to search it from changes caused by the political, social and linguistic happenings in these parts.

Our theory of Tri Mahārāṣṭra (त्रिमहाराष्ट्र) is as follows:—

History tells us that many tribes have come down the Punjab. The verse 22nd of this inscription contains Gurjars, who had in those days their kingdom in Rajputana, then named after the settlers as गुर्जरवा or गुर्जरदेश. This tribe was very powerful and much stronger than the then residents. There were other newcomers such as Ahirs, Huns, Kushans, Shakas and others. These the Bombay Presidency and Hyderabad.—Linguistic Survey of India. Vol. VII, page 2.

(continued from the previous page)

(d) Guptas in कुपुत by H. O. Ray Chaudhari, in the Proceedings of the History Congress (Allahabad 1938), pages 43-44.

<sup>1</sup> (1) Epl. Ind. Vol. VI, page 10 by Dr. Kielhorn.

(2) Ind. Ant. Vol. V, page 72 and Vol. VIII, p. 244 by Dr. Fleet.

(3) Selections from Sanskrit Inscriptions, Vol. I, part II, pages 134 and 148, by Diskalkar.

(4) Prācīna Mahārāṣṭra by Dr. Ketkar, page 463.

new-comers might have had an upper hand in the formation of a new combination of culture, language, mode of living and manners, giving birth to altogether a new society, we find today in Rajaputana and Malwa. This process may have been at work by the time of रविकीर्ति in some visible form.

To the south also, there had been a flow coming up of a different language i. e. Kanarese which crossed the borders of Karnatak<sup>1</sup> i. e. the present Mysore State and entered Kuntala. The very Calukyas had shifted to Vātāpī where Kanarese had then made its way. This language was made vehicle for propagation<sup>2</sup> of their faith by the Jain kings<sup>3</sup> of the Gaṅga, Kadamba, Hoysala, Punnāṣṭa dynasties.

It is these Jains who gave the Kanarese a great lift by creating abundant literature in it. The Kadamba kings were ruling over Dharwar and Belgaum districts in the 5th century A. D. and their grants,<sup>4</sup> by copper plate, of villages and lands were in furtherance of the Jain religion.

Mahārāṣṭrī, one of the corrupt forms of Sanskrit, the language of Mahārāṣṭra, began in those days waning, giving birth to a still more corrupt form i. e. Apabhraṃśa. Another thing in this connection to be noted is that the centre of gravity of Mahārāṣṭra was in those days in Vidarbha and the western part of it i. e. Marathi speaking parts of the Bombay Presidency was backward in every respect. These two reasons might have given a fair chance to the flourishing Kanarese to make a firm footing in Kuntala.

<sup>1</sup> Mysore Gazetteer (Vol. I, p. 256) "Mysore is properly the कर्नाटक" Caldwell's Grammar of Dravidian languages (1856 Ed.) p. 6.

<sup>2</sup> Mysore Gaz. Vol. I, p. 335-36.

<sup>3</sup> (a) मद्रभाहू and चंद्रगुप्त (321 to 397 A. D.) introduce Jainism from अमरावती : Mysore Gaz. Vol. I, page 286.

(b) Jainism was state creed of the Gaṅga, Rāṣṭrakūṭa, Kalacūri and Hoysala kings—Mysore Gazetteer Vol. I, page 295.

(c) For more than 1000 years Jainism was professed by rulers.

(d) Upto the 12th century A. D. every Kannada writer was Jain. —History of Kanarese literature by Rice, page 17.

<sup>4</sup> Belgaum Dist. Gaz. p. 353.

To this side, unlike the north, the change is only linguistic and not social which should be marked.

These changes must have been before the eyes of the poet while describing Mahārāṣṭra, as Tri Mahārāṣṭra. Since there are today Hindi dialects beyond the Narmada and Kanarese below the Kṛpā, the readers will, it is hoped, find our theory of the origin and mention of Tri Mahārāṣṭra to be correct.

It will be interesting to note that there are 24 names<sup>1</sup> (majority of countries) with an adjective त्रि affixed to them. It is for the scholars of ancient history to search out what should be inferred by this त्रि; whether it has got any specific meaning or it merely indicates its greatness.

IX. नवतिसहस्रग्रामभाजां त्रयाणां महाराष्ट्रकणाम्

Ravikīrti says Mahārāṣṭra contained 99000 villages. It was customary in those days to mention important divisions with figures. It was uncertain whether they indicated the villages they contained or their revenue or anything else. Some of the antiquarians are doubtful as to what these figures imply.

The mention of the figure here is not a doubtful case. It clearly refers to villages. This number nearly tallies with that of the 1931 census figures which are given below.

Divisions of Tri Mahārāṣṭra as named today.	Number of villages from 1931 census volumes.
(1) Bombay Presidency (Br.) upto Mahl Nadi (excluding Kaira, and Ahmedabad districts and Sind).	20707
(2) States in Bombay Presidency upto Cambay.	6898

<sup>1</sup> A list of words with an adjective त्रि :—

(1) त्रिकूट (2) त्रिकर्लिंग (3) त्रिकुवि (4) त्रिगत (5) त्रिद्वी (6) त्रिककुब्ज
(7) त्रिनेश्वर (8) त्रिलङ्घन (9) त्रिदिना (10) त्रिपथगा (11) त्रिवर्दि (12) त्रिपुरा
(13) त्रिमागा (14) त्रिमङ्ग (15) त्रिलिंग (16) त्रिशोला (17) त्रिलोकनाथ (18) त्रिवेणी
(19) त्रिशिरपल्ली (20) त्रिस्तमा (21) त्रिशूलखान (22) त्रिशूलगंगा (23) त्रिशुंग
(24) त्रिरीता.

( from the manuscript copy of " Geographical Dictionary " by Pandit Chitrava Shastri of Poona ).

Divisions of Tri Mahārāṣṭra as named today.	Number of villanes from 1931 census volumes.
(3) Navasari and Baroda divisions and Baroda town of Baroda State.	1627
(4) C. P. (Br.) excluding Saugar, Bilaspur, Damoh, Jabulpore and Raipur districts.	29981
(5) C. P. States: Makrai, Khai- ragarh, Nandgaon, Kanker and Baster.	4080
(6) Nizam's dominion	21830
(7) Mysore state	16591
(8) C. I. States excluding Bundelkhand and Baghelkhand	12041
(9) Districts of Gwalior state in C. I.: Ujjain, Amjara, Sajaipur and Mandasaur.	3756
Total	117511

Note:—No figures of Rajputana and Kathiawar states and Northern Gujarat are included in the above list because these are not mentioned in the inscription. Linguistically these parts also were one with the above.

This total makes us bold to say that the figure 99000 is not an imaginary one; on the contrary its correctness is confirmed.

Dr. Fleet<sup>1</sup> does not take this figure as meaningless.

It is not supposed that the territories referred to above by old names cover the same areas. The changes must have been alight; and therefore we are nearer the truth. The figure 99000 can therefore be safely relied upon.

Since we find the number of the villages of Tri Mahārāṣṭra nearly correct we are right when we say that what Pulakeśi possessed when he ascended the throne and the countries he conquered, as described in V. 18 to 22, had in those days one collective name of Mahārāṣṭra. All these regions were, in the 6th century, being recognised as Mahārāṣṭra and therefore the use of the name of Mahārāṣṭra by Ravikīrti for all these territories was correct. It is evident from the cultural, social and linguistic revolution that was going on by that time; the present day Mahārāṣṭra is much reduced<sup>1</sup>, as we see from नर्मदाकर्णाटकयोर्मध्ये महाराष्ट्रविषयः (जयसंगला-टीका of 12th century A. D.). It seems from the Sanskrit sentence just quoted that Kuntala was not then left out of Mahārāṣṭra.

<sup>1</sup> Bom. Gaz. Vol. I, part II, pages 228, foot-note 5.

The famous Chinese traveller, Hiuen Tsang, also supports<sup>2</sup> us. He describes Pulakeśi to be a क्षत्रिय king and king of Mahārāṣṭra. The description of the traveller of the temperament and tendencies of the people of Mahārāṣṭra is exactly the same as those of the present day Mahārāṣṭriyans.

X. WHY THIS IS MAHARĀṢṬRA

The reasons are as under:—

(1) Pulakeśi did not conquer Mahārāṣṭra as he did other countries. The heart and major portion of it was already in his possession when he came to the throne.

अगमदक्षिणतिर्ष<sup>3</sup> ... means, he acquired the sovereignty of whole of Mahārāṣṭra by conquering such parts of it which were not so far under his control and not that he conquered the whole of it afresh.

(2) There was no reason for mentioning the number of villages of Mahārāṣṭra alone, had it been one of the countries conquered by him. This has neither been done in the case of the other countries he brought under him nor at the end of the description of all conquests i. e. after 31st verse.

(3) The verbs<sup>4</sup> indicating conquests in the verses 18 to 22

<sup>1</sup> A commentary on वात्स्यायनकामसूत्र published by चौखंबा संस्कृत ग्रंथमाला, बनारस.

<sup>2</sup> Hiuen Tsang visited the capital of Mahārāṣṭra, King of which was Pulakeśi II. He is Kṣatriya by race. Also he writes about the temperament of the people of Mahārāṣṭra—Fleet, Dynasties of the Kanarese Districts of Bombay Presidency, page 24. Beal. Vol. II, page 355.

<sup>3</sup> Epl. Ind. Vol. VI: 10; Ind. Ant. Vol. VIII: 244.

<sup>4</sup> Verbs in verses 18 to 22 and 26 to 31.

V. 18. ननवार्त्ता अनववृत्तः

V. 19. गंगाह्वयेदाः सेवानुपानशीलाः आरुन्

V. 20. मौर्यैर्बलविजितैश्चन्द्रयः उदरतास्तसा आसीत्

V. 21. पूर्णि अचमुद्रति

V. 22. लाटमालवशर्कराः समेतश्चपांशुपायः इषामवन्

(continued on the next page)

and 26 to 31 have a clear meaning to that effect but as to अगमदधिपतित्वं ... .., it may mean "conquered" but it emphasises "having attained sovereignty."

(4) The poem describes the conquests not in the order in which these took place but in a geographical sequence,<sup>1</sup> making two divisions of verses 18 to 22 and 26 to 34, the former indicating parts of Mahārāṣṭra and the latter outside it.

(5) There was not any country as Mahārāṣṭraka or Tri Mahārāṣṭra between Malwa, Gurjaratrā and Kosala in geographical sequence, which history knows of. The name of that country in those days was Jejākabhukti,<sup>2</sup> the present day Bundelkhand and Baghelkhand, which is between Malwa and Kosala which had not a bright history behind it. It was and is a hilly and backward country and thinly populated even today. The number of villages of both the countries together, according to 1931 census, is only 11213. It cannot be Mahārāṣṭra and not certainly Tri Mahārāṣṭra.

(6) The proper place for the eulogies showered on Pulakeśi (V. 25) ought to have been at the end of the conquests after 31st verse and not in the middle. These are given neither along with each conquest nor at the end of the description of all, but are attached to Mahārāṣṭra only, when Pulakeśi attained sovereignty and assumed the title of Paramēśvara after bringing under his control such parts of Mahārāṣṭra which were not so far in his possession.

(7) It can be shown that linguistically his ancestral kingdom plus the countries mentioned in V. 18 to 22 formed in those days one unit.

( continued from the previous page )

V. 26. कोसलकलिगाः वपज्जातिभीतिर्लगाः अमदम्

V. 27. विटपुरं विहं जातम् ।

V. 28. कोमलं जलं यदधमर्दिनं ( सत् ) नानाधुवततनरक्षतजागराणि आसीत्

V. 29. शीर्षोत्साहसोद्भूतः पञ्चवानां पतिं सज्जनकांचीपुत्राकाराम्भिरुग्रनाशनकरोत्

V. 30. कावेरीरत्नराशेः संस्पर्शं परिहरति ह्य

V. 31. चोलकेरलपञ्चवानां योधुत्तमं समुद्रदे पञ्चवार्तिकर्णज्जातुहिनेतरदीपितिः ।

<sup>1</sup> Annals of B. O. R. Vol. XIII, page 303.

<sup>2</sup> Med. His. Ind. by Valdia ( Hindu kings ), Vol. I : 361-62.

A NOTE ON THE GOA COPPER-PLATE INSCRIPTION OF KING CANDRAVARMAN

BY

DINES CHANDRA SIRCAR

Mr. Moreshwar G. Dikshit has recently published in the New Indian Antiquary, Vol. IV, August 1941, pp. 181-84, the text of a very interesting copper-plate inscription found in Goa and belonging to a king called Candravarman. As regards the pedigree of this king, Mr. Dikshit observes, "It is not clearly stated in the inscription to what family he (i. e., Candravarman) belonged. But from the figure of the varāha appearing on [the seal] resembling the seal on [the] Halsi Plates, we would like to take him as belonging to the Kadamba dynasty. Like many of the Kadamba kings his name ends with varman. The plates are dated according to the regnal year, a practice which is noted in almost all the Kadamba records. Besides, [the] Kadamba family is (the) one of the early dynasties known to have ruled in Goa and its adjoining territories on the western sea-board of India in the fifth century, the period to which our plates belong." Mr. Dikshit seems to be right in ascribing the record, apparently on palaeographic grounds, to the fifth century A. D.; but his arguments for the suggestion that king Candravarman belonged to the Kadamba dynasty do not appear to be quite convincing. As all the known Early Kadamba charters do not bear the varāha emblem and as this particular emblem is known to have been used by other dynasties as well, the seal of the Goa grant does not furnish any conclusive evidence. The name of the king ending in varman and the date in regnal year are quite common features, and no special importance can be attached to them. There is again no definite evidence in the present state of our knowledge to prove that the whole of Goa formed a part of the Early Kadamba kingdom in the fifth century. On the other hand, the phraseology of the epigraph in question does not resemble that of any of the known Early Kadamba records. A passage like mahāsena-māṛgaṇūnūdhyaṭūnām mānavya-sagotrāṇām hārīti-putrāṇām kadambūnām, usually found in Kadamba inscriptions, cannot be traced in this record. It is therefore not impossible that Candravarman of the Goa plates belonged to a dynasty different from that of the Early Kadambas, whose kingdom did not possibly extend beyond the southern fringe of Goa. In the present note, I am going to suggest some emendations in the text of the Goa grant as published by Mr. Dikshit. I shall also try to explain the passages, no interpretation of which has been attempted by him. My reading of the record is based on the facsimile published in the New Indian Antiquary, op. cit., and on inked impressions kindly supplied by Mr. Dikshit.

Mr. Dikshit's transcript of the Goa grant runs as follows:

FIRST PLATE

- 1 ... .. माध्यं ... ..
- 2 ... श्रीचन्द्रवर्ममहाराजेन भुवन त नानासामन्त
- 3 मणिमरीचिभिरापुरितपादपद्मपुग
- 4 ... छीत प्रीतिकरं मद सत्रकतामभा

SECOND PLATE : First Side

- 5 न्त शिवपुरमहाविहाराय सर्वदेय(क्ष)
- 6 क(क्ति) सर्वपरिहारेण दत्त(त्तं) [1*] रतोर्निर्कस्थक्षेत्रावाप्त
- 7 च क्षेत्र भग्नतटाकव्याघ्रपाषाणपरिवन्त
- 8 तो दक्षिणपश्चिमतः पर्वतस्य उदकपात ...

SECOND PLATE : Second Side

- 9 मान्त सर्व सपदराजपुरुषप्रवेश(विवाजितं) चे-
- 10 ब्रमासे कुष्णपक्षे दशम्यां राज्यप्रतिष्ठितवर्ष
- 11 २ ये [1*] आत्मानावापरेनोपियो दत्तं सहरेणु
- 12 ... तोषापक्षयं ... ..

The akṣaras read māryya in l. 1 are either m=āryya or mauryya, and the akṣara immediately before that is clearly nā or nām. If the following akṣara is mā, nā may indicate a śaṣṭhyanta word referring to the family to which Candravarman belonged; but If man is preferred, although nām in that case may indicate a similar gaṣṭhyanta word, nā would suggest a trīgūnta word qualifying mahārājena in l. 2. The akṣara after ryya looks like pra, and the next akṣara may be tā, nā or ṇa. The word may be prapannā; but no definite assertion is possible. It is however not improbable that the Mauryas are actually indicated in the passage. We know that there was a Maurya dynasty in the Konkan and another in Rajputana. These Mauryas apparently claimed descent from the Kumāra viceroys stationed at Ujjayini and Suvarṇagiri at the time of the Maurya emperors of Magadha. Candravarman of Goa may have had some relations with the Mauryas of Konkan.

There are traces of two akṣaras at the beginning of l. 2 before śricandra°. The second of them may be śri, svi, ati or mī. The word may have been something like tejasvi°; but the possibility of word like gomi° is not altogether excluded. It should however be admitted that the reading gominū or gominūm may also be hazarded before māryya or mauryya in l. 1. The first half of that line cannot be satisfactorily deciphered; but a symbol for siddham followed by *s[ṣ*] a[s*] t[i*] v[ḥja*] [ya-candra] [purak*a] [t]* may not be wholly absurd. Candravarman may have then belonged to the family of the Gomins of Goa, to which Devarāja of the Siroda grant also belonged. The capital of the Gomins was at Candrapura, modern Candor in Goa, and it may be conjectured that it was named after an earlier Candravarman of the same family. But my suggestion regarding the reading and interpretation of l. 1 and the first two akṣaras of l. 2 are only tentative.

The rest of l. 2 is all right in Mr. Dikshit's transcript; I would only suggest avanata in place of his bhuvanata. In l. 3 the text reads °rāchurita (to be corrected to °rācchurita) and yugale° (with °na of yugaleṇa at the beginning of the next line). Possibly a word like cūḍā occurs at the beginning of l. 3, but a little below the level of the line owing to the hole for the ring of the seal. Line 4 reads °na taḥi(h)ta-prīṭikaraṇ maḍa(ḡha ?) satraka-nāma-vāṭa° with [°*n=da**][*ta[ṇi**] at the beginning of the next line. The gift of king Candravarman to the great monastery at Śivapura (located at Candor in Goa) was therefore a vāṭa which means "an enclosure, a piece of enclosed ground, court," or "a garden, park, orchard, " The epithet lālita-pritika possibly points to the second meaning. The concluding part of the sentence in 11.5-6 reads: sarva-deya[na] ya[ta]ta[na] sarva-parihāreṇa. Then comes a description of the boundaries of vāṭa (l. 6): *ullarato nirgrantha-kṣetr-āpas[āman*]*, etc. Nirgrantha may be a personal name; though it is tempting to suggest the correction nirgrantha. Mr. Dikshīt reads ca at the beginning of l. 7. The context however seems to require pūrvataḥ, though I am unable to make anything out of the traces on the impression. The rest of l. 7 reads: *kṣetram bhagna-talūka-vyāghra-pūṣāṇa-pariyanta** with [**kam*] at the beginning of the next line. Pariyanta seems to be a Prakritism for Sanskrit pariyanta and vyāghra-pūṣāṇa may refer to a damaged stone of a sculptured tiger on the bank of a pond. Mr. Dikshīt reads to at the beginning of l. 8; but his reading of the rest of that line and 11.9-10 seems to be all right. I would only suggest *udaka-pōta[si*] mūnta[m*]* and *pratiṣṭhā[sthi]ta-varṣ[e*] [dri] [ti*]ye*. Dakṣiṇa-paścataḥ in l. 8 may indicate "to the south and west" instead of the usual "to the southwest." I cannot be sure about the name of the month which may have contained three akṣaras one at the end of l. 9 and two at the beginning of l. 10. Lines 11-12 give a verse in the anuṣṭubh metre the first half of which is clearly *ātma (tina)nā v=āpareṇ=āpi yo dattam sa(m*) hare=pu'nah**. The third and fourth pādas of the stanza which are in l. 12 cannot be satisfactorily deciphered, though the first and last words may respectively be puṇya and yathā.

With the exception of the doubtful lines 1 and 12, therefore, my reading of the Goa grant of Candravarman runs as follows:

FIRST PLATE

- 1 ... ..
 2 **śrī-candravarṃma-mahārājena avanata-nānā-sāmanā-
 3 [cūḍā?] māpī-marīcibhir=ā[ e* ] churita-pāda-padmayugale-
 4 na lali ( li ) ta-pratikaram maḍa(dha ?) satraka-nāma-vāta-

SECOND PLATE: First Side

- 5 [ n=da* ] tta[m*] śivapura-mahāvihārāya sarvva-deye [ na yu ]-
 6 kṛta[m] sarvva-parihāreṇa uttarato nirkrantha-kṣetrāvas[ānam*]
 7 [pūrvvataḥ?] kṣetra[m*] bhagna-taṭāka-vyāghra-pāśāṇa-pariya( rya )nta-
 8 [kam] dakṣiṇa-pāścimataḥ parvvātasya udaka-pāta-

SECOND PLATE: Second Side

- 9 [sī*] mānta[m*] sarvva-sapada-rājapurusa-praveśavivarjita[m] [cai?]-
 10 [tra?] -māse kṛpa-pakṣe daśamyām rāṇya-pratīṣṭi (ṣṭhī)- ta-vara[e*] [dvi]- 11 [ti*] ye [ti*]
 ātmā(tma)nā v=āpareṇ=āpi yo dattam sa[m*] haret=pu [naḥ*] [ i* ]
 12 ... ..

The meaning is perfectly clear. I do not think any translation of the lines is necessary.

STUDIES IN THE GROWTH OF MODERN TAMIL

BY

C. S. SRINIVASACHARI

I

Valuable pioneer work was done by the early European missionaries in the encouragement of South Indian vernaculars, particularly of Tamil. The celebrated St. Francis Xavier, who commenced his Indian missionary career among the Paravas of the Fishery coast near Cape Comorin, arranged to have the Creed, the Ave Maria, the Lord's Prayer and the Decalogue rendered into Tamil and himself committed the translations to memory.<sup>1</sup> Robert De Nobili and Constantius Beschi (1680-1747) produced really wonderful work by their untiring labours in this field. Nobili served the famous Madura Mission for about half a century from 1606 when he landed in India and combined in his own person the Sanyāsin and the Pandit, both of the essentially Hindu type. Father Beschi, better known as Viramaha Munivar in literary tradition, spent the years 1710-47 in labouring in the Tamil districts and acquired marvellous mastery over classical Tamil, "as no other European seems to have ever acquired over that or any other Indian language."<sup>2</sup> Father Nobili<sup>3</sup> aimed at gaining a hearing from the Brahmans and at showing himself to be their equal in nobility of social status as well as in learning; and in order to gain adherents, he had to preserve them by all lawful means from social ostracism. With respect to the acquisition of Śāstric learning, he was necessarily a pioneer. The writings that he had left come to near twenty volumes embodied in Tamil, Telugu and Sanskrit.

---

<sup>1</sup> R. Caldwell: History of Tinnevely (1881), p. 233.

Father Beschi of the Society of Jesus: His Times and Writings (1913), pp. 2-4.

<sup>3</sup> D'Orsay gives an account of Nobili in his Portuguese Discoveries, Dependencies and Missions in Asia and Africa (1893), pp. 251-261; vide Caldwell: pp. 332-344.

Even before Nobili's time Tamil books were printed as early as 1577-79. Soon after Nobili's time the first printed Tamil Dictionary was brought out at Cochin in 1679 by Father A. de Proenza and in the following year there appeared a new Tamil Grammar by Baltasar da Costa. The famous Danish Mission at Tranquebar published in 1716 the well-known Tamil Grammar of Ziegenbalg<sup>1</sup>. All these are very rare, or not available at all.

Beschi deserves most prominent mention in this respect. He was an Italian missionary priest of the Order of Jesuits and brought out a number of works, grammars, dictionaries, theological treatises and classical poems. His well-known work on 'The Grammar of the Common Dialect of the Tamil Language' was written in 1728 for the use of his confreres in the mission. It was published in the Tranquebar Press in 1737 and later translated into English twice, first in 1806 and then more authoritatively by G. W. Mahon in 1848. Father Besse says that Anquetil du Perron, the pioneer French Orientalist, presented an abridged French translation of his grammar to the Bibliothèque Nationale of Paris. Beschi's Grammar of High Tamil was written in Latin and dated 1730. It remained unpublished for nearly two centuries, when the texts along with an English translation were brought out by B. G. Babington. Beschi is credited with two works on the Tamil language: (a) The Tonnul Vilakkam all in Tamil; and (b) The Clavis (humaniorum litterarum sublimioris Tamalici idiomatis). Both these works are divided into five parts, embracing prosody, rhetoric, composition, orthography and etymology. The first work has been published several times; and a prose version of it is included in the Rev. W. Taylor's Catalogue Raisonné; of Oriental Manuscripts with the Government of Madras; while the work itself is examined as Ms. No. 2179. Mr. Taylor says that the Ms. prose version has the appearance of having been a class book, when the Madras College had a native school attached to it. The noted French scholar of Tamil, Julius Vinson, ranks the Clavis among the doubtful works

<sup>1</sup> G. Grierson: Linguistic Survey of India (Vol. IV, Munda and Dravidian)—p. 302.

The first Tamil types were cut by J. Gonsalves, at Cochin, in 1577. The first dictionary printed was a Tamil-Portuguese one brought out at Cochin in 1679 by Proenza.

of Beschi, though Dr. A. G. Burnell, the author of South Indian Palaeography, had no doubt about Beschi having written it; and he had it printed at Tranquebar in 1876 from a manuscript, which he thought had been "revised by the author in person." There was also his great Tamil Classic, The Tembavai, in 36 cantos, a long and highly wrought religious epic on St. Joseph, which "the Tamils could not believe was the work of a foreigner."<sup>1</sup>

Beschi's works in prose are the following:

(1) The Vēdiar-Oloukham, a series of considerations touching the duties of one called to an apostolical life. The style of this is said to be rich and sparkling, whilst the argumentation is close and forcible, the thoughts profound and striking, and the imagination displayed in it large and exalted.

(2) The Gniana-Oupartai also in prose, a didactic and doctrinal work of a very elevated style.

(3) The well-known Paramaria-Gouron-Cadei or tale of the foolish priest and his disciples, also known as The Adventures of Guru Noodle.

(4) A commentary in Tamil and in Latin on the Kural.<sup>2</sup>

Beschi was averse to introducing any Sanskrit terms and expressions into his Tamil works and aimed at acquiring a perfectly pure and idiomatic style. His Śādur Agarūdi i. e. quadruple dictionary consists of five parts and was first composed in the years 1732-47, and was later published by the Madras College under the supervision of two Tamil pandits who revised the manuscript and added a supplement. It has been reprinted several times. His Tamil-Latin Dictionarium has a long Latin preface in which the author compares himself to St. Paul "the custodian of the garments of those who stoned St. Stephen"; and praised Father Bourzes, the author of a Tamil-Latin-Dictionary, which had been very useful to him in this compilation. He also planned a Portuguese-Latin-Tamil Dictionary, of which the Mission House at Trichinopoly possesses the second part.<sup>3</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Nelson: The Madura Country, a Manual (1868), Part III, p. 299.

<sup>2</sup> Latin reproduced in G. W. Pope's The Sacred Kural (1886) and based on a Ms. used by Graul.

<sup>3</sup> A Dictionary of the Common Dialect (Tamil) is also attributed to him, as well as a Tamil-English Dictionary, mentioned in the preface to

( continued on the next page )

Protestant missionary effort followed suit and the well-known pioneer missionaries of the Tranquebar Danish Mission, Ziegenbalg and Plutschö, learnt Tamil "without dictionary, grammar or munshi." They translated the New Testament into Tamil in the years 1708-11 and subsequently took up the Hebrew Bible. The Tamil version of the Old Testament begun by Ziegenbalg was completed in 1725; it was the Magnum opus of the missionaries and received two letters of appreciation and encomium from King George I of England. Besides the Tranquebar Mission Press, which subsequently brought out a history of the church in Tamil, the S. P. C. K. started a press for Tamil printing in Madras in 1711 and cooperated with the former. Ziegenbalg's Dictionarium Tamulicum was written in 1712; a Tamil Grammar, by C. T. H. Walter, appeared in 1739 and the famous Tamil Grammar of Fabricius and Breithaupt was issued in a second edition in 1789. Among these early missionaries, the scriptural system of instruction, the training of school masters and catechists, the his Vēḍiār Olukkam. These are however not available. He is also credited with a Tamil-French Dictionary (1744). The popularity of the Quadruple Dictionary is evidenced by "the large number and the wide provenance of cadjan manuscripts of this work." Its title, as originally published by J. Vinson, is as follows:—"Thesaurum Linguae Tamulicæ ad pleniorẽ planiorẽque scriptorũ Tamulensium intelligentiam collegit ac quatuor in partes digessit Constantius Josephus Beschius e Societate Jesu, in regno Madurensi Missionarius ad usum ejus-dem Societatis Missionariorum A. D. MDCCXXXII." Its value is best summarised as follows:—"This Dictionary broke off completely from the methods of the ancient, indigenous works. Its introductory verse declared that the metrical form of the early Nikāṣṭa works was purposely abandoned, as it tended to obscurity, rather than clarity. A strictly alphabetical order was followed. In respect of the lexical matter, the ancient 'hard word' tradition was abandoned for the first time and several ordinary words were included." The 4 parts comprise (1) peyar, giving the several meanings of every word; (2) poruḷ, grouping together words of the same meaning; (3) tokai, showing the subordinate species of the technical and general terms of science and literature; and (4) toṭai, forming a rhyming dictionary. This work contains an index treatment of all the special features of the Nikāṣṭa works. (see The Tamil Lexicon, University of Madras, Introduction, pp. XXXVI et seq.

(continued from the previous page)

publication of manuals of the grammars of the vernaculars and of translation of the Bible, were the methods employed, and they opened not merely western education among the people, but also an era of critical study of these languages. Under the illustrious Christian Frederick Swartz, who laboured in the Ohola country for nearly half a century from 1750, and his contemporaries and colleagues, Gericks, Kohloff and Kiernander, translation of scriptures and other works went on increasing, with large aids from the S. P. C. K. In 1779, appeared the 'Malabar and English Dictionary' of Fabricius and Breithaupt.

Government was not behind hand in the encouragement of Tamil literature. It undertook the publication of the works in the Dravidian languages, worked a press of its own attached to the College of Fort St. George, which was similar in character and function to the College of Fort William started by Wellesley. The College also supervised the instruction of munshis and of other persons who were trained as law officers and pleaders in the native courts. One of the chief objects of the College was to promote the acquisition of "a knowledge of the general grammar and connection of the several languages of South India and of some acquaintance with the sources whence they spring." One of the earliest scholars trained by the College was Muttuswami Pillai, the biographer of Beschi. Chidambaram Pandaram, the head Tamil master of the College, wrote a book on the Tamil language, entitled 'A Brief Exposition of the Tamil.' The translation of the Vijñānśastryam and of the Vyavahārikūṣṭham, corresponded with the 8th and 9th books of Sir William Jones's translation of the Institutes of Manu. Government greatly helped the Rev. Mr. Rottler in the compilation of his famous Tamil Dictionary. The continued assistance rendered by the College Board to Mr. Rottler and his successor, Mr. Taylor, in the compilation of the former's Tamil-English Dictionary is seen in the association of T. Venkatachala Mudali, a certified teacher of the College, with the work of revision. This work refers nearly all words to their roots or primitives; the synonyms were largely drawn from the Śādur Agarādi, while Beschi's manuscript dictionary, Tamil and French, by Du Bourges seem to have been made use of to some extent, as well as Fabricius' Tamil and English Dictionary.<sup>1</sup>

In 1851, one Captain Ouchterlony solicited patronage for his Tamil-English Lexicon. In 1853 the College Board solicited from Government authority for retaining the Rev. Mr. W. Taylor's services for the formation of a Catalogue Raisonné of the Oriental Manuscripts accumulated in the College Library. According to C. P. Brown, who had a hand in accumulating the Mackenzie Mss. in the Madras College Library, the method adopted by Taylor was unsatisfactory, as he was acquainted with colloquial Tamil alone and unskilled in chronology, and did not use the right method and phraseology in explaining the works. In 1854, the Rev. M. Winslow, American Missionary in Madras, solicited from Government patronage to his prospectus of a Comprehensive Tamil and English Dictionary of High and Low Tamil. This work superseded all earlier works and helped in proving that "in its poetic form, the Tamil is more polished and exact than the Greek, <sup>1</sup> Rottler's work was valuable in several respects; but it was "too limited in its vocabulary and deficient in astrological, mythological and scientific terms." It was particularly lacking much that was in usage among the Tamils of Jaffna.

The epoch-making Tamil and English Dictionary of the Rev. M. Winslow (1862) was compiled with the help of well-known Tamil scholars like Rāmānuja Kaviśvār, Viśākapparamai Iyar, Viraswami Chettyar, Āṣimūlam Mudaliyar and Abraham Allisae and based on material collected by lexicographers like Percival, Spaulding, Tissera and Knight. This work included both the common and poetical dialects of the Tamil language and the principal astronomical, astrological and mythological, as well as the botanical, scientific and official terms as well as the names of many authors, poets, heroes and gods, besides information on the religion, philosophy and customs of the Tamils.

The development of Tamil lexicography was due to Dr. G. W. Pope, Visvanatha Pillai, the compiler of the Jaffna Dictionary, C. W. Katiraiavel Pillai, A. Kumaraswami Pillai and others, who developed both the unilingual and bilingual sides. The Madura Sangham Dictionary was based on the work of C. W. Katiraiavel Pillai but it is not full throughout its course. The crowning achievement in Tamil Lexicography is The Tamil Lexicon published under the authority of the University of Madras (1924-1936 in six volumes and a supplement). Its fullness and erudition have illustrated the statement of Sir J. A. H. Murray that the growth of Lexicography develops slowly "adown the age."

and in both dialects with its borrowed treasures more copious than the Latin." About the same date Caldwell's work on Dravidian Affinities ( A comparative Grammar of the Dravidian on South Indian Group of Languages ) was published, Government rendering him also some help. Thus before the Company's rule ended a brighter day had dawned for Tamil studies with the publication of the works of Winslow, Caldwell and others, both linguistic and literary.

Works undertaken on behalf of the Madras Government like Ellis, Mirasi Tenure, Robertson's Glossary in Tamil and English of words used in the law-courts, may also be mentioned in this connection, as having helped in the promotion of linguistic studies to some extent. Mr. Richard Clarke of the Madras Civil Service collected a great volume of material relating to terms used in Government records, including Muhammadan law-terms; and his Mss. were useful to Professor Wilson in the compilation of his valuable Glossary. The publications of the Madras School Book Society, started in 1820, formed a most enlightened development of vernacular literature. The abolition of the College of Fort St. George in 1854, and the constitution of a Board of Examiners instead, closed a most useful side of Governmental activity. Now that the critical study and promotion of the vernaculars is in full progress, it behoves us to remember gratefully and cherish the good pioneer work done by missionary enterprise and both directly and indirectly by Government agency also, which was promptly and willingly taken advantage of by Indian scholars and students. It is not necessary to pursue the history of the development of Tamil in these fields.

II

Turning to the development of modern prose, till we come to the exegetical period in the history of Tamil literature which may be said to have lasted from about 1200 to 1400 A. D. we could scarcely hear of any prose work at all. The Jains and the Brahman Vaiṣṇavas had some of their Purāṇas and religious works translated or rendered in prose. But these works were mostly sectarian and were written in a composite or Sanskrit-Tamil style and in contrast to it the commentaries of great scholars like Guṇasāgara, Nacchinārkinīyar or Adiyārkunallār were written in chaste Tamil.

Coming down to modern times, works written wholly and deliberately in prose and not reckoning commentaries as such, modern prose may be said to begin with Beschi's Vēdiyar Oḻoukkam. This famous missionary of the 18th century might be deemed to have been the father of the modern Tamil story also. He published two pieces of Tamil prose composition—Aiveka Paripūrṇa Gurukathai (Adventures of Guru Noodle) and Vēdiyar Oḻoukkam—addressed not to scholars, but to the common people; and he made Tamil literary prose, for the first time, "come down to the level of the people at large, and in so doing, acquire simplicity in its diction, easiness and agility in its movements quite in consonance with their subjects." Beschi's prose style was in the colloquial as distinguished from the grammatical dialect and, though good, is not of 'pre-eminent excellence.' And now, after the lapse of two centuries, his prose works are in comparatively greater demand than his poetry, which, howsoever much admired by scholars, is not read largely.

According to the learned Dr. R. Caldwell, good colloquial prose in Tamil, so necessary for the story and the novel, began only in the 19th century as an entirely new style of composition and the father of this species of composition in Tamil was Tāndavarāya Mudaliar at one time a teacher in the college of Fort St. George, an institution that was mainly devoted to the training of civilian cadets in the languages and laws of the country. His Tamil prose version of the Panchatantra is marked by a flowing, elegant and yet perfectly intelligible style. Ārumukha Nāvalar, a scholar of Jaffna (1832-1876) took up the task and wrote a number of works in prose covering variety of topics, like biographies of saints, essays on miscellaneous subjects and readers for students, all written in a style which was "neither archaic nor foreign ... and free from the old monotony and mere agglomeration and capable of being used for a variety of purposes." The proper Tamil prose style was made by him, easy, clear and elegant with a very agreeable rhythm.

There has been a considerable amount of literary activity in Tamil from almost the beginning of the 19th century. The inroduction of printing which could be traced back, in the field of Tamil types, even to the first decade of the 18th century, gave a powerful impulse to the publication of classical works, and in a lesser measure, to the production of new works, the major portion of which was in prose. According to the Rev. J. Murdoch's Classified Catalogue of Tamil Printed Books (printed in Madras up to 1865) there were at that date 103 Tamil works in poetry and drama and 42 tales as against works in Bengali numbering 53 and 53 respectively. Though superior in point of numbers, Dr. Murdoch tells us that the Tamil publications were "merely reprints of old books or feeble modern imitations of them and that there was far more intellectual activity in Bengal."

The new Tamil school of novelists proper may be said to open with Vēdanāyakam Pillai (1824-89) who wrote a romance named Pratāpa Mudaliūr Charitram and a story entitled Suguna Sundari Charitram. Both contain good maxims and the ideas conveyed are above any charge of being sectarian; and the style of the former work is regarded as a model for romance writers. Professor P. Sundaram Pillai of Trivandrum (1855-97) wrote the Manonmaṣiyam, a good Tamil drama in five acts, based on Lytton's 'The Secret Way', one of the Lost Tales of Miletus. It is "full of purple patches," rich in dramatic beauty and flowing with scientific and philosophical ideas; and its "Invocation to God" has become a household property among the Tamils.

Rajam Iyer, the editor of 'Awakened India,' a monthly journal devoted to religion and philosophy, wrote a very arresting novel 'Kamalāmbāl' or 'The Fatal Rumour,' depicting the vicissitudes of a middle-class Brahman family of the Tamil country and containing "vivid descriptions and brilliant character-sketches." A. Madhaviāh, another talented writer, wrote an incomplete novel, by name, Sāvitri Charitram, in an early volume of the Tamil Journal, Viveka Chintāmaṇi, and some time later, brought out his great novel, Padmāvatī, in two parts. Mr. Madhaviāh has been judged to be a typical realistic novelist. He himself writes in the preface to 'Padmāvatī' that the first works really entitled to be called novels in Tamil were Prema-kalāvatī and Pratāpa Mudaliūr Charitram. Of these two the former may not deserve the name of novel proper on account of a number of features; while the latter may be said to belong more to the category of romance. Madhaviah holds that, in the novel proper, characters belonging to the lower orders of society may be made to speak in their broad brogue, but wherever the author has to describe the narrative or an incident or situation, his style must be grammatically faultless, easy and elegant.

One Saravana Pillai, a native of Jaffna, wrote a realistic novel, Mohanāngi, based on Kingsley's Hypatia. S. Ramaswami Aiyangar wrote his Kamalini; and C. R. Srinivasa Aiyangar published several works, Vidyāranya Nagar, the Tiller's Daughter, the Ungrateful Son, etc. Rajavelu Chettiar has written the interesting story, Anbūnanthan. In the last three decades and more the land has been flooded with hundreds of novels which are adaptations of detective stories of the west or renderings of erotic and exciting narratives like the novels of G. W. Reynolds and the French School of Flaubert, Zola, etc. They display in an abundant and even nauseating degree of the sensationalism, the lack of moral purpose and the catering to the vulgar passions of the ordinary readers that are characteristic of the novel of the present day in a large measure. The output of such novels is abundant. Vaduvur K. Doraiswami Aiyangar and Arni Kuppuswami Mudaliar have written novels by the dozen which have had a wide circulation; and there is, besides, the growing practice of issuing novels in serial parts in journals which are weeklies or monthlies. As one writer, Purnalingam Pillai, well remarks, "what was pure and instructive at first became lax and lewd, and though the plots are well knit, they cannot be placed in the hands of boys and virgins with safety. However questionable the morals of legions of novels and novel stories issued from the press, month by month, prose works are multiplying in Tamil, and the great want, once felt, is now being met, though not in the desired form and manner. In most cases the present day novelists care less for style than for producing impressions or tickling the readers."

Popular Journals, weekly and monthly, have become, in an increasing measure, the vehicles of serially published novels. The Swadesamitran Weekly and the very popular Ananta Vikatan are outstanding examples of this class of service for the novel. Kalaimagal and Kalki are also popular and very effective in the imparting of instruction on various subjects, scientific, cultural and otherwise, to the youth and the women of our Tamil land.

The drama is but little removed from the novel. Sundaram Pillai's Manonmaniya already referred to and the learned V. G. Suryanarayana Sastri's Rupavati, Kalavati and Manaviyayam are generally marked by a judicious mixture of prose and poetry. The prolific plays, both comic, farcical, moralistic and otherwise of Rao Bahadur P. Sambanda Mudaliar, a most popular playwright and actor, still going strong, after an active career of nearly five decades, Lakshmana Pillai's Veela Natakam fashioned after Sophocles, his Satyavati modelled on Shakespear's Cymbeline and his Ravi Varma, a historical drama in verse and prose combined, may also be noticed, besides the Rajabhakti an adaptation from a Marathi drama by Mr. V. C. Gopalaratnam and the Kattai Vandī of Professor K. Swaminathan, modelled on Gilbert. These are but selective illustrations. This notice of the modern Tamil drama is necessary here, as the popular drama has been and is the twin of the popular novel also. The novel, like the drama, is in a large measure, a love tale or based on some striking plot or incident, fictitious or founded on some personal experience or historical incident. As in the drama, it has "a plot or plots and characters, denouements and catastrophes, and dialogues and narrations." In the field of novel-writing only English-educated Tamil writers have made a name and achieved success. It is as yet too early to predict the full effect and the future of the detective novels. In some the construction of the plot and the development of interest and vividness of style have a great value. The historic and domestic novel is still in its infantile stage of development and small in quantity. There have been translations and adaptations from Bankim Chander Chatterji, from Tagore and from a few other famous Indian writers.

Mr. T. M. Ponnuswami Pillai, who was for long an official at Rangoon, wrote a few novels with the purpose of giving a good social turn to Tamil life. These are held to be entirely devoid of obnoxious elements. Rajam Iyer and Madhaviah already mentioned, Pandit S. M. Natesa Sastry, who was also well-known for his studies in Tamil Epigraphy, Rangaraju who wrote many novels, the well-known Vedanāyakam Pillai and the Dramatist P. Sambanda Mudaliar, who has given to the Tamil stage an entirely new turn both in the technique of acting and in the subject matter of plays, may be remembered in this connection.

The Panchatantram of Tāndavarāya Mudaliār is held by critics to be the best Tamil prose work extant and combines a happy choice of expression, a good selection of vocabulary and grammatical correctness. An ideal is found as regards the balance of style in the classic commentary on the Jivakachintāmaṇi of Nachohinārkinīyar. A peculiar dignity of style is noticed in the prose of Sivagnana Yogi while lucidity of style contributes to the simple charm and excellence of Arumuga Navalar's prose. The new school of Tamil scholars would place particular stress upon choice of expression and on the preference of Tamil words wherever possible to words of Sanskrit origin. Word-coining for new sciences and branches of knowledge is going on, but the arrival at suitable formulae for proceeding in this important field has been attended with numerous complexities and difficulties. It is not fully realised in every quarter that a growing language cannot but take up words, expressions and idioms even from other languages with which it has been brought in close and enduring contact.

As regards biography proper it has not been well developed as one of the features of modern Tamil. A model work in this field has been set up on a learned and classic scale by Mahamahopadhyaya V. Swaminatha Aiyar, the 'Prince' of Tamil scholars and editors, fortunately yet spared to us, in his two-volumed 'Life of Minakshisundaram Pillai of Trichinopoly' and in his very informative Autobiography appearing in parts. Both these works may be held to embody, in one element or another, all the principal features in the revival of Tamil studies during the last century. As has been remarked by an eminent authority, "A new impetus was given to prose composition only during the early part of the last century by the Tamil pandits of the early Madras University of whom Tāndavarāya Mudaliār, Viraśwami Chettiyar, and Saravapapperumal Aiyar deserve special mention. In the latter part of the nineteenth century a number of Tamil prose works, translations as well as original productions, were published by learned Tamil scholars. The labours of the late T. E. Srinivasa Raghava Chariyar and Arumuga Navalar may still be in the memory of every lover of Tamil literature. And the foremost among the living writers of Tamil prose and scholarly commentaries is undoubtedly Mahamahopadhyaya V. Swaminatha Aiyar Avergal..... who may be styled the Nachchinarkiniyar of the present day." <sup>1</sup>

Thus Tamil prose which first appeared in the shape of passages interspersed in lengthy poetical compositions, and subsequently in the shape of commentaries, was used by Jaina and Vaishnava writers more fully in their works in what was known as the manipravala style. This development produced a literature of philosophical disquisitions, stories, translations and criticisms; and it is making itself felt in the sphere of the novel and the drama. Thus prose, as contrasted with the Tamil of poetry and and the Tamil of the stage, is coming into its own; and for Tamil prose a good time is ahead.

"There is a good time coming yet,
A good time coming,
The proper impulse has been given,
Wait a little longer." <sup>2</sup>

<sup>1</sup> M. Srinivasa Iyengar: Tamil Studies (First Series), 1914, p. 230.

<sup>2</sup> V. S. Chengalvaraya Pillai: History of Tamil Prose Literature, 1928, p. 50.

The curious reader who cares to go into the details of the Tamil Literary figures, both writers and patrons, is referred to Mm. V. Swaminatha Aiyar's work, Tamil of the Sangam Age and the Tamil of the later Ages, (Madras 1929).

THE HARMONISING OF LAW WITH THE REQUIREMENTS OF ECONOMIC CONDITIONS ACCORDING TO THE ANCIENT INDIAN DHARMAŚĀSTRAS, ARTHAŚĀSTRAS
AND GRHYASŪTRAS<sup>1</sup>

BY

DR LUDWIK STERNBACH, UNIVERSITY KRAKOW, LWOW (POLAND)

1. The particular rules of the law are always changeable. The History of Law shows that this change in the particular rules depends on the change of circumstances prevailing between one period and another and that this change of circumstances is in the first place to be found in the change of the economic situation. Depending as they do on the economic changes the legal rules have to be changed or rather have to be harmonised with the changed economical circumstances. This phenomenon is to be found in all the law-codes in which one can trace the development of legal rules. To trace the rules concerning the harmonising of the Law with the requirements of economic conditions according to the Ancient Indian Dharmaśāstras, Arthaśāstras and Grhyasūtras is not an easy task. No chronology exists in India. The whole problem becomes complicated because the sources were not written down in the same place and these lawbooks were applicable in different territories of India. Although it is possible to assign probable dates and places to the composition of these sources on basis of language we can never rely upon such a hypothesis. Probably the greater part of the rules which we find in the law-sources had been transmitted from mouth to mouth before they were written down by a writer. One of the writers may have written down all that he heard on the subject, although some of the rules which he gives are archaic and of no value. Another writer sometimes gives his own views, sometimes the views of other savants and law-schools and sometimes he combines his views with those of the savants and the law-schools. On the basis of the Ancient Indian Law-sources it is not possible to say with certainty that the laws which were valid at the time they were written down had not been progressively evolved. Therefore, from the point of view of law, the Indian law-system can be discussed only as a static and not as a dynamic law, although there is no doubt that the Indian Law, like all other laws, has its gradual development. Only the stages of the development are in the majority of cases not known. Therefore, it is necessary to restrict the scope of

---

1. The paper was presented to the XI th All India Oriental Conference in Hyderabad.

this thesis. But in Ancient Indian Law which contains the germ of all modern institutions of law, we can find some examples of the harmonising of Law with the requirements of economic conditions, although the Ancient Indian Law could be considered as static. We shall find here some interesting institutions which are related to this problem. I cite as a classical problem of this harmonising, the institution of interest. In no other law-system do we find so many important facts bearing upon this problem.

2. Although Megasthenes has stated that the notion of interest is unknown in Ancient India<sup>1</sup> there is no doubt that such a notion prevailed in ancient times. This can be deduced from the fact that the most ancient law-sources contained not only a mention of this institution but devoted much space to it.

The opposite of wealth (धन) is debt (ऋण). The development of this last notion is similar to that of the Roman debitum. The general meaning of 'obligation' is still preserved in the law-books through the doctrine of the three debts which consist of sacrifices, generation of a son and the recitation of the Vedas, which have to be dedicated to the gods, ancestors and ṛṣis. On the contrary the Vedas know already the word 'ṛṇa' as meaning 'obligation of payment' just as Indian arithmetic expresses the term of 'minus' by 'ṛṇa', plus by 'dhana' or 'śva'. The recovery of a debt ṛṇādāna is the first of eighteen titles of law and in the majority of prescriptions concerning the legal proceedings the action for debt occupies the first place. Even the entire legal proceeding in Mānava Dharmasāstra and Nārada Smṛti forms only one part of the law of debt. Accordingly Jolly correctly states that the ancient age of the latter institution is manifested in the strong emphasis on religious motive, viz. that the unpaid debts pursue the debtor in his successive existence and that he will be born again as a slave in the house of his creditor in order to repay the debt by his labour.<sup>2</sup> Elsewhere it is stated from a strictly religious point of view that the profession of a money-lender kusīdīn and especially of an usurer vārdhugīn is not moral<sup>3</sup>. The usurer is compared to a thief.<sup>4</sup>

A. In India the caste-system has always been of great importance in the formulation of legal rules. It is the same in the case of interest. The Brahmins and in some cases the Brahmins as well

1 Ute daneisasi ute isasi daneisesthai. Fr. 27. B.

2 Nār. I-8

3 J. Jolly-Recht u. Siste p. 97

4 Y. I-123, vide Vas. II-41.

67 [Annals, B. O. R. I.]

as the Kṣatriyas are not allowed to lend money on interest<sup>1</sup>. This is not permitted even in case of need. It is so stated in one of the most ancient Dharmaśāstras i.e. in the Mānava-Dharmaśāstra<sup>2</sup>. But the Yājñavalkya-Dharmaśāstra, a slightly more advanced Law-book is in this instance in favour of the harmonising of law with the requirements of economic conditions and partially breaks the religious rules by determining that the lending of money on interest is for a Brahman a kind of maintenance in case of need<sup>3</sup>. According to the Yājñavalkya-Dharmaśāstra a Brahman as well as a Vaiśya could in case of need lend money on interest for the purpose of gain.

According to some Law-books there exist six categories of interest.<sup>4</sup>

Kāyikā (कायिका) corporal interest i. e. the interest connected with manual labour or that which arises from the use of a pledged female quadrupede to be milked or of a male out to carry burdens<sup>5</sup>.

Kālikā (कालिका) periodical interest i. e. the interest which is due every month<sup>6</sup>.

Cakrasiddhi (चक्रसिद्धि) i. e. interest on interest<sup>7</sup> (compound interest).

Kūṛitā (कुरिता) stipulated interest i. e. the interest promised by the borrower<sup>8</sup>. It has to be paid always and is stipulated by the debtor himself, over and above the ordinary rate of interest and was promised in times of distress<sup>9</sup>.

Śikhāṛddhi (शिक्षारद्धि) hair interest i. e. interest which grows every day<sup>10</sup>. This interest is named 'hair interest' because it grows constantly like hair and does not cease growing except on the loss of the head that is to say, on payment of the principal<sup>11</sup>.

Bhogatābha (भोगतābha) interest by enjoyment i. e. the use of a mortgaged house or the produce of a field<sup>12</sup>.

1 Vaa. II-40

2 Mn. X-117.

3 Y. III-41, 42

4 Brh., G.

5 Brh. XI-6, G. XII-35.

6 Brh. XI-5, 6.

7 Brh. XI-6.

8 Brh. XI-6, G. XII-35, Kṣty. 498.

9 Brh. XI-9.

10 Brh. XI-7, Kṣty. 499.

11 Brh. XI-8.

12 Brh. XI-8, Kṣty. 500.

It is obvious from these six categories of interest that even when only one kind of interest was known it was necessary for the institution of interest to adapt itself to the economic conditions. As long as the institution of interest was not widely spread it was enough to have one general term: interest. Economic conditions, commerce, economic life, etc. created the distinction for example between 'stipulated interest', 'half interest' and 'corporal interest'. There is also the question of the determination of the day of payment and in 'stipulated interest' the question of admission of a higher rate of interest which ordinarily were admitted in the Law-books<sup>1</sup>. Generally the rate of interest was determined and laid down in the Law-books.

B. The rate of interest was determined in one way when a pledge was given and in another way when it was not given<sup>2</sup>.

Concerning the rate of interest the majority of the Law-books refers to Vasistha's<sup>3,4</sup> quotation<sup>5</sup>. There it is reported that the legal interest for money lent is at the rate of five Māṣas a month for twenty Kārṣāpapas<sup>6</sup>. According to other Law-books the rate of interest amounts monthly to 1/80th part of the capital<sup>7</sup>. According to all Law-books the rate of interest in case of a pledged loan amounts monthly to 1½ per-cent that is yearly to 15 per-cent.

There are many exceptions to this rule which as in the Roman Law refer to the harmonising of Law with the requirements of economic conditions.

And so although the rate of interest paid per month is in Kauṭilya's Arthaśāstra<sup>8</sup> considered just, we find there the following sentence: 'Five paṇas per month per-cent is commercial interest, ten paṇas per month per-cent is permissible in business which takes one across forests. Twenty paṇas per month per-cent is permissible among sea-traders<sup>9</sup>. Also we read in the Yājñavalkya-Smṛti that he whose trade takes him across the forest has to pay ten per-cent and sea-traders twenty per-cent<sup>10</sup>.

1 VI.

2 Y. II-37, Mn. VIII-140.

3 Vas. II-51.

4 Vide G. XII-29.

5 Mn., Nār., and others.

6 Twenty Kārṣāpapas are equal to four hundred Māṣas.

7 Y. II-37, Mn. VIII-140, N.I-99, K. III. Ch. 3. Brh. XI-34.

8 K. III. Ch. 11.

9 K. III. Ch. 11.

10 Y. II-38.

It is clear that the rate of interest which in normal circumstances amounts to fifteen per-cent per year is much higher in cases when the borrower is expected to greater risk or danger. The increase in the rate of interest depends upon the greatness of risk. If it concerns commercial enterprises in which the debtor or his merchandise must travel through a forest, the rate of interest amounts to hundred and twenty per-cent per year and if it concerns commercial enterprises in which the debtor or his merchandise must travel by sea—two hundred and twenty per-cent per year<sup>1</sup>. It ought to be also noted that in these cases it was permissible to agree voluntarily upon the term of interest<sup>2</sup>.

Therefore in such enterprises where the capital appears to be endangered it is not possible to advance loans with a fixed rate of interest which amounts to  $1\frac{1}{2}$  per-cent per month because the lender realises that in such a contract he is running too great a risk.

Therefore the law harmonised with the requirements of economic conditions permits in such cases to receive higher rates of interest or to agree to higher rates of interest.

The same applies to the higher rates of interest in trade and commerce; and here the capital appears to be more endangered than in normally pledged loans. It is, however, connected with the rates of interest concerning to the not pledged loans.

Normally in the case of a commercial or trade loan the rate of interest amounts to two per-cent per month i. e. twenty four per-cent per year<sup>3</sup>. However, this principle is not anywhere clearly determined but it follows from Yājñavalkya's Smṛti<sup>4</sup>. Most of the ancient commentators agree to this viewpoint<sup>5</sup>. From this we can see that here is another example of the harmonising of Law with the requirements of economic conditions. Such a not pledged loan provided for in the Ancient Indian Law-books, like the Law-books of other nations, is more exposed to danger than a pledged loan. In order that not pledged loans may be granted, the Ancient Indian Law-books allow higher rates of interest, that is, instead of  $1\frac{1}{2}$  per-cent per month—two per-cent per month, so as to safeguard against the risk.

1. It ought to be noted that in Ancient India the danger by travelling by sea was greater than the danger in travelling through forests.

2. Y. II-38.

3. Mn. VIII-141, N. I-101.

4. Vide Y. II-37, Mn. VIII-142, N. I-100, VI. VI-2, Vas. II-48 (in which according to the order of the castes two, three, four and five per-cent monthly can be taken as interest).

C. It can be also found in the Ancient Indian Law-books that on some loans no interest is to be raised or that interest can be raised only at a lower rate than the ordinary rates of interest as for example "loans out of friendship." It is a pressumptio juris that interest accrues on such loans only after the lapse of half a year, but after this lapse of time the debtor has to pay the normal rates of interest as prescribed in the Law-books; the lender has however the right to conclude an agreement in which any rate of interest may be stipulated<sup>1</sup>, but as a rule it was not allowed to stipulate the rates of interest higher than was permitted in the Law-books. When the creditor claims back the capital with or without the interest and the debtor refuses to repay it on demand, the creditor who advanced the loan out of friendship is entitled to claim together with the capital interest of the rate of five per-cent per month.<sup>2</sup> And this rule is a further proof of the harmonising of Law with the requirements of economic conditions. We find here a kind of a conventional penalty which was introduced because of economic conditions (loans made out of friendship.)

D. It must be borne in mind that in the case of an agreement in which the pledge is used by the creditor no interest can be asked.<sup>3</sup> This rule is connected with the harmonising of Law with the requirements of economic conditions. According to Madh., Gov., Nar., and Ragh,<sup>4</sup> the Law-books understand by pledge, that is being used, the field, the cattle and the slave. The field can be cultivated and the products of the field can be collected by the creditor. The cattle and the slaves can be usufructed. Instead of paying the interest it is more convenient to the contractors to agree to use the pledge and this because of economical circumstances.

E. Because of the economic conditions Kauṭilya too declares that 'interest on debts due from persons who are engaged in protracted sacrifices or who are suffering from a disease, or who are detained in the houses of their teacher for studies or who are either minors or too poor, shall not accumulate.'<sup>5</sup> It is a debatable point whether the author speaks here of compound interest or of simple interest. However, for the purpose of the 1 N. I-108, 109. See also Kāty. 505.

2 N. I-109.

3 Y. II-59, Mn. VIII-143, VI. VI-5, G. XII-32.

4 Vide S. B. E. XXV. P. 278; Loiseleur Des Longchamps: Lois de Manou, ad VIII-143.

5. K. III. ch. II.

harmonising of Law with the requirements of economic conditions this is immaterial. It is worth while to note that even the most ancient Law-books do not contain a similar rule. In order to avoid any insecurity this rule was probably incorporated into the Law-books by Kaṭilya. Indeed the conviction existed that a sick man who can not earn was not liable to pay interest or compound interest.<sup>1</sup>

F. The Ancient Indian Law-books have limited the possibilities of a usurer not only by the determination of the admissible scale of the rates of interest but also by the determination of the duration of the obligation of paying interest. According to the Ancient Indian Law-books the maximum duration of the obligation of paying interest varies. And so, for example, the duration of the obligation of paying interest on corn ends in some instances after receiving half of the capital, in others after receiving the capital five-fold.<sup>2</sup>

Nārada rightly states that in some countries the loan may grow till twice the amount of the principal has been reached. In other countries it may grow till it becomes three, or four, or eight times the principal.<sup>3</sup> The difference depends on the customs of the countries.

For the problem of the harmonising of Law with the requirements of economic conditions these rules are of importance because the limitation of possibilities of a usurer emphasises the application of Law to the economic conditions. They are also important because the duration of the obligation of paying interest to the creditor is dependent also on the importance of the relative objects in the economic life. For example the capital which consists of gold can be only doubled while the capital which consists of spirituous liquors can be increased eightfold.<sup>4</sup>

In order to understand better this matter I specify it according to the Ancient Indian Law-books.

Principally on gold the interest may make the debt double<sup>5</sup>, on

1. It is of great interest that K. further states that debts neglected for ten years, except in the case of minors, aged persons, sick persons, persons involved in calamities or persons who are sojourning abroad or have left the country except in the case of disturbances in the kingdom shall not be received back. We read here about the rules of debts and of exceptions from these rules which are very characteristic and throw light on the application of Law to the economic conditions. Vide also Vas. II-49.

2. K. & Bṛh.

3. N. I-106.

4. Bṛh.

5. Y. I-39, Mn. VII-151, Bṛh. XI-14, Vi. VI. 11, Vas. II-44, N. I-107.

clothes and base metals<sup>1</sup> treble<sup>2</sup> and according to other Law-books fourfold,<sup>3</sup> on grain it is allowed to raise the original amount four times. The same applies to edible plants,<sup>4</sup> beasts of burden and wool<sup>5</sup> though, according to other Law-books, treble.<sup>6</sup> After the debt has been double or treble etc. no further interest can be levied on the capital. Concerning the interest on stocks K.<sup>7</sup> regulates that interest on stocks shall be one half of the profit if it remains on the same place and has to be paid as each year expires. Borrowed money, which is lent for a long time abroad or is joined to the capital of the contractor has to give double of the contributed capital. We find here another good example of the harmonising of Law with the requirements of economic conditions which is similar to the rule of the higher rate of interest by travelling by sea etc. It also shows that the capital, which is more endangered i. e. which is sent for a long time abroad earns more interest than an ordinary loan. According to some Law-books, a loan of grain can rise four times<sup>8</sup> or five times<sup>9</sup>. According to Kaut.<sup>10</sup> interest on grain has to be paid after the ripening of the crops. It may rise to a minimum of half the loan dependent on the prices. In other words the scale of the percentage of the grain, which has to be paid, depends on the market price of the grain. Therefore, when the grain is cheaper at the time of harvest, than at the time of sowing, the debtor must pay the difference in the price of the grain.<sup>11</sup> For this purpose the interest has not to be paid until after the harvesting of the grain.

This is one more example of the harmonising of Law with the requirements of economic conditions. It ought to be emphasised that, here too, Kautilya's Arthashastra is the only Law-book which deals with this question.

The interest on the produce of a field shall not increase more than five times the value of the object but<sup>12</sup> on rice and edible plants<sup>13</sup> not more than four times.<sup>14</sup>

1. Such as tin or lead.

2. Bṛh. XI-13.

3. Clothes. Y. I-39, VI. VI-13, Vas. II-44, N. I. 107.

4. or fruit

5. Brh. I-13.

6. Y. I-39, VI. VI-13, Vas. II-44, N. I-107.

7. K. III. ch. II.

8. Mn. VIII-151, 153.

9. vide Mn. VIII-153.

10. Bṛh. XI-13.

11. K. III. ch. II.

12. J.J. Meyer-Das altindische Buch vom Welt-und Staatsleben, Leipzig p. 273.

13. G. XII-36.

14. Bṛh. XI-13.

The interest on clothes shall not increase more than treble the capital according to Brh.<sup>1</sup> while many objects like wool increase fourfold<sup>2</sup> or fivefold.<sup>3</sup> On cotton<sup>4</sup> thread<sup>5</sup>, leather<sup>6</sup> the interest is unlimited or no interest should be exacted<sup>7</sup>.

On base metals<sup>8</sup>, flavouring substances,<sup>9</sup> roots<sup>10</sup> it is treble.

According to some Law-books the interest on flowers shall not increase more than treble<sup>11</sup>, according to other Law-books, in such a case no interest is allowed.<sup>12</sup>

The interest on fruits shall not increase more than treble,<sup>13</sup> and, according to other Law-books, not more than the fourfold<sup>14</sup> or fivefold<sup>15</sup> or in such cases no interest is allowed<sup>16</sup>.

The interest on beasts or beasts of burden,<sup>17</sup> as well as products of animals<sup>18</sup> shall not increase more than fourfold and, according to other Law-books, more than fivefold.

The interest on salt,<sup>19</sup> oil,<sup>20</sup> sugar,<sup>21</sup> honey,<sup>22</sup> in other words all this what is sold by weight<sup>23</sup> shall not increase more than eightfold.

On spirituous liquor<sup>24</sup> the debt may increase to eightfold while in the case of a loan on substances from which spirits may be extracted<sup>25</sup> no interest is allowed or the interest is unlimited.<sup>26</sup>

1 Brh. XI-13.

2 Brh. XI-13.

3 G. XII-36, Mn. VIII-151.

4 Vi. VI-16.

5 Vi. VI-16, Brh. XI-16.

6 Vi. VI-16, Brh. XI-16.

7 S. B. E. XXXIII, ad Brh. XI-16.

8 Brh. XI-13.

9 Vas. II-45.

10 Vas. II-46.

11 Vas. II-46.

12 Brh. XI-16.

13 Vas. II-46.

14 Brh. XI-13.

15 Mn. VIII-151.

16 Brh. XI-13.

17 Brh. XI-13.

18 G. XII-36.

19 Brh. XI-14, Katy. 510-512.

20 Brh. XI-14, Katy. 510-512.

21 Brh. XI-15, Katy. 510-512.

22 Brh. XI-15.

23 Vas. II-47.

24 Brh. XI-14, Y. II-39, N. I-107, Vi. VI-14 Katy. 510-512.

25 Brh. XI-16.

26 Vi. VI-16.

On grass and wood no interest is allowed,<sup>1</sup> on bricks no interest is allowed<sup>2</sup> or the interest is unlimited<sup>3</sup>. On weapons and charcoal the interest is unlimited<sup>4</sup>.

Of female slaves and cattle the offspring shall be taken as interest<sup>5</sup> and on such objects as have not been referred to above the debt may double.

We see here that the possibilities of a usurer were limited:

(a) by the determination of the admissible scale of the rates of interest;

(b) by the determination of the duration of the obligation of paying interest.

G. But life is stronger than legal codes. For the Ancient Indian conditions the rates of interest determined by the Ancient Indian Law-books were too low. Under such circumstances the real economic conditions were an obstacle for the granting of a loan. Therefore, it was necessary to find an outlet. This outlet is a good example, perhaps the best example, of the harmonising of Law with the requirements of economic conditions.

The outlet is as follows: If a person can not pay the capital which was borrowed on the due date he can conclude in writing a new agreement and take a new loan if he pays all the interest which is in arrears<sup>6</sup>, or if he can not pay all the interest, he can in the newly concluded agreement add this interest to the capital<sup>7</sup> (Capitalisation of interest.) Through this capitalisation it was possible to receive higher interest than was allowed by the law. In this way the grant of such loans, which, according to the Law, must remain without interest, is made easy and is made to yield larger and larger interest. It was only necessary to conclude a new contract in which the amount of the loan consisted of the original amount of the loan plus the additional interest.

In such a manner the rule of the determination of the duration of paying interest is made null and void. Life and economic conditions have once more asserted themselves.

3. We find another example of the harmonising of Law with the requirements of economic conditions in Kautilya's Arthashastra.

1 Bṛh. XI-16.

2 Bṛh. XI-16.

3 VI. VI-16.

4 VI. VI-16.

5 Y. I-39, VI. VI-15, N. I-107.

6 Mn. VIII-154.

7 Mn. VIII-155.

68 [Annals, B. O. R. I.]

Kautilya even regulates the price for merchandise which is produced in the country and that which is imported from abroad. In Ancient India, some foreign merchants and therefore some foreign merchandise were considered necessary<sup>1</sup>. Sometimes this was not so much for economic reasons as for political reasons, as this made it possible for the king to receive taxes for the import of foreign merchandise. But this consideration is of no value for us, because here we are not concerned with the motive, but the principle; the fact remains that such merchandise was not available in the country<sup>2</sup>. The economic conditions of that time which were joined inseparably with the interest of the king necessitated the granting of privileges to foreigners.

However, according to the local economic conditions it was not desirable that the prices for the merchandise should fluctuate. That was the reason for the introduction of special regulations. Also through the introduction of special regulations it was possible for the king to regulate the prices which were of great importance for the regulation of market-prices indirectly had a great influence on the economic conditions of an agricultural state.

We find in Kautilya's Arthashastra that 'the Superintendent of Commerce shall ascertain demand or absence of demand for, and rise or fall in the price of, various kinds of merchandise which may be the products either of land or of water and which may have been brought in either by land or by water centralisation path. He shall also ascertain the time suitable for their distribution, purchase and sale.'<sup>3</sup>

We find there further the following sentence: 'That merchandise, which is widely distributed shall be centralised and its price enhanced. When the enhanced rate becomes popular, another rate shall be declared.

That merchandise of the king which is of local manufacture shall be centralised; imported merchandise shall be distributed in several markets for sale. Both kinds of merchandise shall be sold to the people at favourable rates.

He shall avoid such large profits as will harm the people.

There shall be no restriction as to the time of sale of those com-

1 J. J. Meyer-Das altindische Buch vom Welt-und Staatsleben, Leipzig, p. 149/42 V.

2 K. II, ch. 16.

3 K. II, ch. 16. According to the translation by Shamasastry.

modities for which there is frequent demand; nor shall they be subject to the evils of centralisation.<sup>1</sup>

'The superintendent shall show favour to those who import foreign merchandise. They shall be favoured with remission of the trade-taxes, so that they may derive some profit<sup>2</sup>.

It results from Kaṭilya's Arthasāstra that the bestowal of privileges on the foreigners, who have imported merchandise was made for the purpose of obtaining foreign merchandise which was necessary for the daily use and therefore for the purpose of regulating the economic conditions. We find in Kaṭilya's Arthasāstra the following sentence: 'As regards the sale of the king's merchandise in foreign countries: Having ascertained the value of local produce as compared with that of foreign produce that can be obtained in barter, the superintendent will find out by calculation whether there is any margin left for profit after meeting the payments to the foreign king such as toll, road-cess, conveyance-cess, tax payable at military stations, ferry-charges, subsistence to the merchant and his followers and the portion of merchandise payable to the foreign king. If no profit can be realised by selling the local produce in foreign countries, he has to consider whether any local produce can be profitably bartered for any foreign produce.'<sup>3</sup>

We also find in Kaṭilya's Arthasāstra, what all the superintendent of Commerce has to do to amass and to preserve foreign merchandise<sup>4</sup>.

The prohibition of import and export with reference to the economic conditions is treated also in Kaṭilya's Arthasāstra treated and some other Dharmaśāstras<sup>5</sup>.

Principally these deal with the question of the exclusion of the import merchandise which causes harm or is useless to the country and of the import of merchandise which is useful. Such a merchandise has to be imported free of duty<sup>6</sup>.

As it is necessary for the normal economic life that commodities of daily use must be sold at a fixed price, the Ancient Indian Law-books regulate the prices of such merchandise by fixing of price-taxes. We find in Yājñavalkya's Smṛti a sentence which states

1. K. II. ch. 15. According to the translation by Shamasastry.

2. K. II. ch. 15. According to the translation by Shamasastry.

3. K. II. ch. 16. According to the translation by Shamasastry.

4. K. II. ch. 15.

5. K. II. ch. 21. Vide Mn. III-399, Y. II-261, VI. V-130.

6. K. II. ch. 21.

that the sale and purchase shall be conducted daily according to the value fixed by the king<sup>1</sup>. It is even punishable to demand a higher price. For such people who agree upon the determination of the price to the disadvantage of the workmen and artists, although the fluctuations of the price are known to them the highest fine is applicable<sup>2</sup>. The same punishment will be applied for those merchants who do not purchase the foreign articles at the price fixed by the king and who buy them cheaply and those sell them at a higher price<sup>3</sup>.

4. As the motive for the bestowal of special facilities on foreign merchants was the necessity of foreign merchants for the economic conditions of Ancient India so also the motive for the laying out of reservoirs and irrigation-dams was the necessity of such constructions for the economic conditions of Ancient India.

That the irrigation-dams, tanks etc. were of great importance for the economic conditions of Ancient India is obvious from Kautilya's Arthasāstra<sup>4</sup>, and also indirectly from Yājñavalkya's Dharmaśāstra<sup>5</sup>.

From them it is possible to understand the special Laws concerning the construction of irrigation works. We find especially in Kautilya's Arthasāstra that, in the case of construction of new works such as tanks, lakes etc., taxes on the land below such tanks shall be remitted for five years. For repairing neglected or ruined works of similar nature, taxes shall be remitted for four years. For improving or extending water-works, taxes shall be remitted for three years. In the case of acquiring such newly started works by mortgage or purchase, taxes on the lands below such works shall be remitted for two years.<sup>6</sup> These laws concerning the reduction of taxes are similar to the exemption from taxes of new buildings, known to recent times. Because of economic conditions then prevailing special facilities for payment of taxes were granted in Ancient India and are even now granted for the purpose of economic welfare. Now-a-days the multiplication of new buildings was intended to prevent the hoarding of money, in Ancient India it was the creation of new irrigation works for the purpose of improving the fertility of the fields which was the highest aim of the economic policy.

1. Y. II-251. Vide Mn. VIII-402.

2. Y. II-249. Vide K. II. ch. 6.

3. Y. II-250.

4. K. V. ch. 6.

5. Y. II-157.

6. K. III. ch. 9. according to the translation by Shamasastri.

That this was the true aim is seen from the fact that the duration of the exemption of taxes depends on the scale of expenses.

5. We have seen that the motive for the bestowing of facilities on foreign merchants was the need of foreign merchants for the economic life in Ancient India. The case is similar where the formation of villages is concerned. A deserted land is from the point of view of Ancient Indian economics—a negative entry in the balance of the Ancient Indian State, or rather of the Ancient Indian Kings. Kautilya's Arthashastra understands well that an increase of the wealth of the citizens increases the universal prosperity and therefore increases also the wealth of the State i. e. of the king.<sup>1</sup> Therefore, Kautilya's Arthashastra tries,—although from a machiavellistic standpoint,—to enrich the king and especially by populating the deserted land. The suggestion for such a colonisation is supported by the introduction of special laws, which once more point to the harmonising of Law with the requirements of economic conditions.

As regards the colonisation of a deserted land, Kautilya's Arthashastra asks which land has to be colonised: a plain or watery land?<sup>2</sup>

The answer is: 'A limited tract of land with water is far better than a vast plain<sup>3</sup>. Plains, which are suitable for the growth of both early and late crops and which require less labour and less rain for cultivation are better than the reverse of these<sup>4</sup>. Watery lands, that are suitable to the growth of grains are better than those which are suitable for crops other than grains.'<sup>5</sup>

'Of two watery tracts, one of limited area and suitable for the growth of grains, and another, vast and suitable for crops other than grains, the latter is better, inasmuch as its vast area may not only be used to grow spices and other medicinal crops, but also to construct forts and other defensive works in large numbers: for fertility and other qualities of lands are artificial<sup>6</sup>. Of the tract of land with forts and that which is thickly populated, the latter is better; for that which is thickly populated is a kingdom in every sense. What can a depopulated country like a barren cow be productive of?<sup>7</sup>

1. K. II. ch. 1.

2. K. VII. ch. 11.

3. K. VII. ch. 11 according to the translation by Shamasastry.

4. See Note 3.

5. See Note 3.

6. See Note 3.

7. See Note 3.

' Such a land which was recognised as most suitable for colonisation has to be colonised by the king either by inducing the inhabitation of other tracts to immigrate or by causing the thickly-populated centres of his own kingdom to send forth their surplus population.<sup>1</sup>

By this way of trying to attract people in such a country we see very well how the Law was applied to the requirements of economic conditions. Kauṭilya's Arthaśāstra determines: 'Those who perform sacrifices, spiritual guides, priests, and those learned in the Vedas shall be granted Brahmadaya lands yielding sufficient produce and exempted from taxes and fines. Superintendents, Accountants, Gopas, Sthānikas, Veterinary surgeons, Physicians, Horse-trainers, and Messengers shall also be endowed with lands which they shall have no right to alienate by sale or mortgage'.<sup>2</sup>

When the colonisation takes place the king has to grant exemption from taxes. He shall regard with fatherly kindness those who have passed the period of exemption from taxes.<sup>3</sup> The king 'shall carry on mining operations and manufacture, exploit timber and elephant forests, offer facilities for cattle-breeding and commerce, construct roads for traffic both by land and water, and set up market towns. He shall also construct reservoirs'.<sup>4</sup> The king has to regulate too the internal conditions of a colonised village. 'Owing to the fact that the newly colonised villages had to look after their own interest and the men found pleasure in the fields, the king's treasury, free labour, commodities, grain and liquids have become enriched'.<sup>5</sup>

It ought to be noted that the land may be confiscated from those who do not cultivate it and given to others. Lands prepared for cultivation shall be given to tax-payers only as personal property.<sup>6</sup> Unprepared lands shall not be taken away from those who are preparing them for cultivation.<sup>7</sup> Lands which were not cultivated may be given for cultivation to village labourers and traders; owners of lands which are not quite suitable for cultivation might pay less to the government. Those owners may be also favourably supplied with seeds, cattle and money.<sup>8</sup> Kauṭilya's

1. See Note 3 p. 541.

2. See Note 3 p. 541.

3. K. II. ch. I.

4. K. II. ch. I, according to the translation by Shamashastry.

5. K. II. ch. I.

6. K. II. ch. I.

7. K. II. ch. I.

8. K. II. ch. I.

Arthasāstra regulates too that the king has to give the cultivators seeds, cattle and money.<sup>1</sup>

It is to be noted that the author of Kautīlya's Arthasāstra is in this case also out to increase the king's treasure.

In connection with the king's duty to support the cultivators Kautīlya's Arthasāstra says that 'the king shall bestow on cultivators only such favour and remission as will tend to swell the treasury, and shall avoid such as will deplete it. A king with depleted treasury will eat into the very vitality of both town and country people.'<sup>2</sup> This principle we find in recent times too.

It has to be accepted that according to this principle the conquered country is exempted from taxes<sup>3</sup>. The same applies to a poor country and country in great danger. It applies especially to people who have to suffer much from hostile neighbour i. e. people 'who live on the border of the kingdom or who have not enough subsistence'<sup>4</sup>. There is no doubt that this principle shows us a good example of the harmonising of Law with the requirements of economic conditions.

6. I have given some examples of the exemptions of taxes which for the purpose of economic conditions were introduced in Ancient Indian Law-books. These exemptions of taxes can be divided into personal and impersonal exemptions. It was said that these exemptions which point to the harmonising of Law with the requirements of economic conditions were introduced not for the purpose of protecting the subjects but for the purpose of enriching the treasury of the king. In the epics and in these law-books, which are free from the Machiavelism of Kautīlya's tax-policy, we can find rulings on tax-policy of the king, which are not only very praiseworthy but also very suitable. These rulings take into consideration the economic condition of the tax-payers i.e. the king's subjects. Below there are some such examples from the Mānava-Dharmaśāstra, Mahābhārata etc.

'Out of affection for his subjects, he must not bring about his own ruin by forswearing to collect his revenue from them, nor cause their ruin by his greed; by so bringing about his own ruin, he will become an oppressor of his own self, as well as of his subjects'.<sup>5</sup>

1 K. V. ch. 2. & V. ch. 3.

2 K. II. ch. 1. according to the translation by Shamasastri.

3 K. XIII. ch. 5.

4 K. V. ch. 2.

5 Mn. VII-13, See Y. I-338-339.

'As leeches, calves and bees, little by little draw their respective sustenances, so the king shall draw his revenue from his realm little by little, each year'.<sup>1</sup>

'The king has to milk the cow as a bee collects honey from the flowers. He has to do what a herdsman, who receives the milk from his cow does. He neither worries the udders nor lets the cow go hungry'.<sup>2</sup>

'A good king has to milk his country as a calf sucks the milk of the cow. Because, when the calf sucks from the cow it becomes strong and can bear burdens'.<sup>3</sup>

'But if it is otherwise and the cow is milked to excess, the calf becomes meagre and useless for the owner'.<sup>4</sup>

'It is said that an avaricious king who imposes unjust taxes which are not sanctioned by law on his subjects causes damage to himself'.<sup>5</sup>

'The king shall never exact taxes from those, who can not pay. He has to get them gradually, with goodness, and by lawful methods'.<sup>6</sup>

Many things can easily be acquired by a king 'who supports his country and grants facilities to his subjects and is satisfied with that which is within easy reach'. 'Does not the king then receive enough of wealth to satisfy his claims, then his whole land will be his treasury and his treasury his bed-room'.<sup>7</sup>

'Like he who needs milk, never gets it, if the udders of his cow are cut, so the king will never be in a position to use his kingdom if he does not impose taxes in a legitimate manner'.<sup>8</sup>

'The king has to be clever and should milk the country every day like a cow, but he should not cut the cow's udders'.<sup>9</sup> 'He who treats the cow well, will always receive fresh milk; In the same way it will be possible for the king to enjoy the fruits of his country, if he reigns over his country in an orderly manner'.<sup>10</sup> 'The country which is

1 Mn. VII-129. See Mārkaṇḍeya (Parāśa, p. 404.)

2 MBh. XII-88-4.

3 MBh. XII-87-29.

4 MBh. XII-87-21.

5 MBh. XII-7-15.

6 righteous rules.

7 MBh. XII-88-12.

8 MBh. XII-87-22.

9 MBh. XII-87-23.

10 MBh. XII-71-16.

11 MBh. XII-120-33.

12 MBh. XII-71-17.

protected by the king bears fruits and money like a mother who willingly gives her breast to her child'.<sup>1,2</sup>

These rules are not only found in Mānava-Dharmaśāstra and Mahabharata but also in Kautilya's Arthaśāstra<sup>3</sup>; they were applicable only if the king possesses a treasure. A king who finds himself in great financial trouble and needs money may collect taxes in another way.<sup>4</sup> The economic situation does not allow him to act in a manner in which a good king ought to act. On account of the economic situation the king has to act like a thief, in the manner prescribed by the machiavelistic school of Kautilya. From the motive,<sup>5</sup> 'the enrichment of the treasure of the king', it can be accepted that he could act in the following manner not only against traitors and the godless but also against his subjects.<sup>6</sup>

I quote some sentences found in Kautilya's Arthaśāstra, which are a good example of the harmonising of Law with requirements of the economic conditions especially when they are compared with the above mentioned rules about the correct way of collecting the taxes.

It is not possible to inflict twice the taxes. 'The Collector General shall seek subscriptions from citizens and country people alike under false pretences of carrying this or that kind of business. Persons taken in concert shall publicly pay handsome donations and with this example, the king may demand of others among his subjects. Spies posing as citizens shall revile those who pay less. Wealthy persons may be requested to give as much of their gold as they can. Those who, of their own accord or with the intention of doing good, offer their wealth to the king shall be honoured with a rank in the court, an umbrella, or a turban or some ornaments in return for their gold. Spies under the guise of scribes, shall, under the pretence of ensuring safety, carry away the money not only of the society of heretics and of temples, but also of a dead-man and of a man whose house is burnt, provided that it is not enjoyable by Brāhmins.

The Superintendent of Religious Institutions may collect in one place the various kinds of property of the gods of fortified cities and country parts and carry away the property to the king's treasury.

Or having on some night set up a god or an altar, or having

1 MBh. XII-71-19.

2 vide MBh. XII-8-15, 17, 18. Nītiviv. 61-12., Śukran. VI-2-220/240.

3 K. II. ch. 1.

4 K. V. ch. 2.

5 K. II. ch. 2 in fine.

6 vide K. V. ch. 2. and K. II. ch. 1.

opened a sacred place of ascetics or having pointed out an evil omen, the king may collect subsistence under the pretence of holding processions and congregations to avert calamities.

Or also he shall proclaim the arrival of gods, by pointing out to the people any of the sacred trees in the king's garden which has produced untimely flowers and fruits.

Or by causing a false panic owing to the arrival of an evil-spirit on a tree in the city, wherein a man is hidden making all sorts of devilish noises, the king's spies, under the guise of ascetics, may collect money with a view to propitiate the evil-spirit and send it back.

Or spies may call upon spectators to see a serpent with numberless heads in a well connected with a subterranean passage and collect fees from them for the night. Or they may place in a borehole made in the body of an image of a serpent, or in a hole in the corner of a temple, or in the hole of an ant-hill, a cobra, which is, by diet, rendered unconscious, and call upon credulous spectators to see it on payment of a certain amount of fee. As to persons who are not by nature credulous, spies may sprinkle over or give a drink of such sacred water as is mixed with anaesthetic ingredients and attribute their insensibility to the curse of the gods. Or by causing an outcast person (abhūyāktā) to be bitten by a cobra, spies may collect revenue under the pretext of undertaking remedial measures against ominous phenomena.

Or one of the king's spies in the garb of a merchant, may become the partner of a rich merchant, and carry on trade in concert with him. As soon as a considerable amount of money has been gathered as sale-proceeds, deposits and loans, he may cause himself to be robbed of the amount.

Or else a spy, in the garb of a rich merchant, or a real rich merchant famous for his vast commerce, may borrow or take on pledge vast quantities of gold, silver, and other commodities, or borrow from corporations bar gold, or coined gold for various kinds of merchandise to be procured from abroad. After having done this he may allow himself to be robbed of it the same night.

Prostitute spies under the garb of chaste women, may cause themselves to be enamoured of persons who are seditious. No sooner are the seditious persons seen within the abode of the female spies than they shall be seized and their property confiscated to the Government. Or whenever a quarrel arises between any two seditious parties of the same family, poisoners, previously engaged for the purpose, may administer poison to one party; and the other party may be accused of the offence and deprived of their property.

An outcast, under the guise of a high-born man, may claim from a seditious person a large amount of money professed to have been placed in the latter's custody by the claimant, or a large debt outstanding against the seditious person; or a share of parental property. An outcast may pretend to be the slave of a seditious person; and he may represent the wife, daughter, or daughter-in-law of the seditious person as a slave-woman or as his own wife: and when the outcast is lying at the door of the seditious person's house at night or is living elsewhere, a fierce spy may murder him and declare:—'The claimant of his own property or wife has been thus killed. And for this offence others i.e., the seditious person and his followers shall be deprived of their property.

Or a spy, under the garb of an ascetic, may offer inducements to a seditious person to acquire more wealth by taking in aid the art of witchcraft, and say:—'I am proficient in such witchcraft as brings inexhaustible wealth, or entitles a man to get admission into the king's palace, or can win the love of any woman, or can put an end to the life of one's enemy, or can lengthen the duration of one's life, or can give a son to any one, if desired.' 'If the seditious person shows his desire to carry on the process of witchcraft securing wealth, the spy may make rich offerings, consisting of flesh, wine, and scent to the deity near an altar in a burial-ground wherein a dead body of a man or of a child with a little quantity of money has been previously hidden. After the performance of worship is over, the hidden treasure may be dug out and the seditious person may be told that as the offerings fell short, the treasure is proportionately small, that the richest of offerings should be made to acquire vast amount of treasure, and that he may purchase with the newly-acquired wealth rich offerings. Then he may be caught in the very act of purchasing commodities for offering.

A female spy, under the garb of a bereaved mother, may in connection with the above case, raise an alarm crying that her child was murdered for the purpose of witchcraft.

When a seditious person is engaged in sorcery at night or in a sacrificial performance in a forest, or in sports in a park, fiery spies may murder him and carry away the corpse as that of an outcast.

Or a spy, under the garb of a servant of a seditious person, may mix counterfeit coins with the wages he has received from his master and pave the way for his arrest.

Or a spy, under the garb of a goldsmith, may undertake to do some work in the house of a seditious person, and gather in his employer's house such instruments as are necessary to manufacture counterfeit coins.

A spy, under the garb of a physician, may declare a healthy person of seditious character to be unhealthy and administer poison. Or a spy, attending as a servant upon a seditious person may not only call for an explanation from another fraudulent spy as to how certain articles necessary for the installation of a king and also the letters of an enemy came into the possession of his master, but also volunteer an explanation himself<sup>1</sup>.

7. No doubt we can find in the Ancient Indian Law-books many more examples of the harmonising of law with the requirements of economic conditions, but I believe that the above-mentioned examples are the most interesting and for that reason I have dealt with only a few legal institutions.

---

1. K. V. ch. 2. according to the translation of Shamasastry.

EPIC QUESTIONS

By

V. S. SUKTHANKAR

II. The Parvasaṅgraha Figures.

The Parvasaṅgrahaparvan (Ādi, adhy. 2) is a document of considerable importance.<sup>1</sup> But its value has been unduly exaggerated by some scholars, a circumstance which has led to some highly misleading results and some curious conclusions. It is thus supposed that Kṛṣṇa Dvaipāyana Vyāsa had himself counted and noted down the number of ślokas he had composed, and that our Parvasaṅgraha was composed by Vyāsa himself. No doubt it is sometimes stated in the Parvasaṅgraha chapter that that sage had stated the extent of each of the eighteen parvas. But this attribution to Vyāsa is naturally only pūjārthe (honoris causa). It is nowhere suggested in the work itself that the first two adhyāyas of our epic were composed by Vyāsa. They could not be, because they are obviously only a report of the conversation which took place between the Sūta (Ugrasravas, son of Lomaharṣaṇa) and the sages assembled at Śaunaka's twelve-year sacrifice in the Naimiṣa Forest. The erroneous supposition regarding the authorship of this adhyāya has led to the naïve attempt on the part of some scholars to produce a text—a so-called critical text—of the Mahābhārata containing the same number of adhyāyas and ślokas as that given in the Parvasaṅgraha.<sup>2</sup> Such an attempt is already negatived by our manuscripts and testimonia, which contain many variants of the figures in the Parvasaṅgraha. Thus the figures for the Ādiparvan itself vary, according to different sources, between 7984 (Kāśmīrī Version and the Critical Edition) and 9984 (Āndhra-Bhāratamu). That is sufficient to discourage any attempt at too close a reliance on the data of this adhyāya of the Ādiparvan. It has been common experience that figures in ancient works, if at all complicated, seldom come out right, and the figures of the Parvasaṅgraha are probably no exception to this rule.

1. Cf. my Prolegomena to the Ādiparvan, pp. XXVII ff.; "Epic studies (III)" ABORI, vol. 11, pp. 277 ff.

2. Cf. P. P. S. Sastri in the Introduction to vol. 15 of his Mahābhārata (Southern Recension), p. xxii: "Vyāsa's description of his Mahābhārata that he composed is in 18 parvas of 2,000 chapters and 100,000 stanzas is not a fanciful account but an accurate statement. And I have tried to substantiate this in this edition of the Principal Text of the Southern Recension."

The figures given in the Parvasaṅgraha could have been obtained in one of many different ways. The most probable suggestion has been that they were arrived at, not by actual counting of the stanzas, as we should ordinarily do now, but by computing the extent in some other way. Even now we speak of a story of 5000 words or a broadcast talk of 1500 words, and so on. The individual words are never counted in such computations; the figures are only approximations. The figures given in our Parvasaṅgraha chapter must be approximations of that type. They are not "ślokas" or stanzas as we ordinarily understand them; but are, properly speaking, what are technically known as, "granthas", a grantha being a unit of measurement of written matter equal to 32 akṣaras.

Assuming this to be the case, the first difficulty is that the figures given in the lists appear not as round numbers, as we should expect them to be, but are apparently correct to the last digit; for instance, the extent is given not as 8000 ślokas, but as 7987. We actually come across such figures as these: 6698, 7998, 8909, 14525, where true approximations would be 6700, 8000, 8900, 14,500, and so on. The approximation seems to me to have been reached by some such process as this. First, an average was obtained by counting carefully all letters in a certain number of lines. This average was then multiplied by the number of lines in a page and the total number of complete pages. The number of "granthas" of the last page, which was rarely fully written out, seems to have been computed separately, and added to the previous total. The grand total of letters (akṣaras) was then divided by 32 to give the number of "ślokas" or "granthas," fractions being omitted. That is how figures like those mentioned above must have been obtained. They are careful approximations, but approximations all the same. Moreover, as has been pointed out by me elsewhere,<sup>3</sup> it would be impossible to count the exact number of stanzas in a composite text made up of ślokas, tristubhs, "fancy metres" and prose passages, which we actually find in many of the parvans of the Mahābhārata, as for instance in the Ādi, Āraṇyaka and Anuśāsana.

The figures we find in the Parvasaṅgraha chapter are fairly old; we cannot say now exactly how old. They are certainly prior to 1000 A.D., when the Javanese Bhārata and the Āndhra Bhāratamu were composed; because both these works contain similar lists, which agree in many particulars with our list.

Here are the figures given in three different sources.

---

3. Prolegomena, p. XCIX.

TABLE I

Adhyāyas			Parvan	Slokas
C	B	A		A	B	C
South. Rec.	Jav. Version	Crit Ed.	—	Crit. Ed.	Jav. Version	South. Rec.
218	618	218	I. ĀDI	7984	8884	9884
72	72	72	II. SABHĀ	2511	2511	4511
269	272	269	III. ĀRANYAKA	11,664	11,224	11,664
67	—	67	IV. VIRĀṬA	2050	2015	3500
186	186	186	V. UDYOGA	6698	6928	7998
118	117	117	VI. BHISHMA	5884	5884	5884
170	170	170	VII. DRONA	8909	8984	8909
69	69	69	VIII. KARNA	4900	4970	4900
59	121	59	IX. SALYA	3220	3220	3220
18	18	18	X. SAUPTIKA	870	870	870
27	70	27	XI. STRI	775	770	775
339	333	339	XII. SĀNTI	14,525	14,525	14,525
156	—	146	XIII. ANUSĀSANA	6700	—	12,000
133	133	133	XIV. ĀŚVAMEDHIKA	3320	4420	4420
42	92	42	XV. ĀSRAMAVĀSIKA	1506	1508	1906
8	8	8	XVI. MAUSALA	300	300	300
3	—	3	XVII. MAHĀPRASTHĀNIKA	120	123	120
5	—	5	XVIII. SVARGĀROHANA	200	200	200
1959		1948	Total	82,136		95,586

[ The average number of " ślokas " per adhyāya is about 45. ]

The above is a conspectus of the figures for the adhyāyas and ślokas of the eighteen parvas of the Mahābhārata according to (1) the Critical Edition, (2) the Javanese Version,<sup>4</sup> and (3) the Southern Recension by Professor P. P. S. Sastrī.

Observations on the figures of the above Table.

I. Ādi: The first figure (8) of the Javanese number for the adhyāyas of the Ādi (818) is obviously wrong; the other digits agree in the three texts. So we may take as correct the figure 218<sup>5</sup>, which is given us by the Critical Edition and Southern Recension, the Vulgate reading (227) being certainly a mistake.—The number of ślokas is no doubt a problem. I have adopted the figure given by the Śārada MS. and one "K" MS. (K1)<sup>6</sup>, which is confirmed by the Rajaguru MS. from Nepal<sup>7</sup>, and I am still inclined to suppose that that was the original figure. The Javanese and Southern figures 8884 and 9884 respectively differ by 1000 exactly, the Javanese figure being the same as that of the Mid-Indian group (Bengali-Devanāgarī).

II. Sabhā: The numbers are here absolutely certain. As regards the adhyāyas, there is perfect agreement between the three sources, all of them giving 72, which is also the exact number of adhyāyas of our Critical Edition of the Sabhā now passing through the press. The Vulgate figure (78) for the śloka is therefore unquestionably wrong.—The śloka number is also certainly 2511, as the Southern Recension, in which the first figure has been increased to 4, is demonstrably inflated to make it conform with the interpolated text, and the additional stanzas of the Southern Recension do approximately amount to 2000. The correct figures for Sabhā are therefore 72 and 2511.

4. The figures for the Javanese Version have been taken from Juynboll's Ādiparva, Oudjavaansch prozageschrift, Gravenhage, 1906, pp. 5-6. The passage is reproduced in a note by H. Kern, "Inhoudsopgave van 't Mahābhārata in 't Kawi" in Bijdragen, ser. III, Vol. IV, pp. 92-93. Kern has given in this paper a comparative table of the Indian and the Javanese figures.

5. Kern, op. cit., p. 95 also remarks that the Javanese figure 818 is incorrect, and that it should be 218.

6. See the Critical Edition of the Ādiparva, p. 878.

7. See my "Epic studies (VII)," ABORI, vol. 19 (1928), pp. 215 ff.

III. Aranyaka (commonly known as Vana): As regards the adhyāyas, the Javanese records 272 against the concordant figure 269 of all Indian versions. The latter may be taken to be the right figure, the discrepancy of the Javanese, which is negligible, remaining unexplained.—The same is true of the figure for the ślokas, the concordant figure (11,664) of all Indian versions being the original Parvasamgraha figure.

IV. Virāṭa: The Javanese figure for the adhyāyas is unfortunately missing. But as our Critical Edition of the Virāṭaparva has successfully identified the adhyāyas on the basis of the colophons given in MSS., there is no reason to doubt that the correct figure is 67, as given by the Sanskrit Parvasamgraha.—The three sources give three different figures for the ślokas. The Southern Recension is obviously inflated, and may therefore be ignored, its figure having been revised—as in Sabbā—to accord with its interpolated text. It is likely that the Javanese translator has confused the Sanskrit words for 50 and 15 (pañcāśat and pañcadaśa). The first two digits of the figures given in the Critical Edition and the Javanese Version do agree. We may therefore reasonably assume the original figure to be 2050, which is given by the Critical Edition of the Parvasamgraha, though the two last digits naturally remain somewhat uncertain.<sup>8</sup>

V. Udyoga: The three sources agreeing exactly as regards the number of adhyāyas of the Udyoga, the figure 186 may be taken as certain.—The figures for the ślokas, on the other hand, are in a chaotic condition, the three texts giving three different figures 6698, 6928, 7998; which agree only in respect of the last digit! The figures for the ślokas remain, therefore, doubtful.

VI. Bhīṣma: The number of adhyāyas in the Bhīṣma is given by the Critical Edition and the Javanese Version as 117, but the Southern Recension gives their number as 118. In any case, the difference is not very significant, and the number may be assumed to be 117 or 118.—There is no such doubt regarding the number of ślokas, which is unanimously given as 5884.

VII. Droṇa: There is likewise considerable agreement as regards the adhyāyas and ślokas of the Droṇa. The adhyāya number is 170.—As regards the number of ślokas, the first two digits (89) are certain. And since both the Critical Edition and the Southern Recension agree on the figure 8909, that is indicated as the correct figure. The probability in favour of this figure is strengthened owing to the circumstance that the last two figures of the Javanese Version (84) are in all probability due to contamination with the previous śloka-figure 5884, which ends in 84. We may therefore adopt with confidence the concordant figure of the Indian versions 8909, the difference between the Javanese and the Indian numbers being 75; the error is in any event not more than 1 per cent.

8. See Raghu Vira, Virāṭaparvan, Introduction, p. XXIV; and Sakthankar "Epic studies (III)," ABORI vol. 11, pp. 277 ff.

VIII. Karna: The figures for Karna are exactly of the same type. The three sources agree in giving 69 as the number of adhyāyas.—The Javanese MSS. give the number of ślokas as 970, which is obviously wrong, it being almost certain that the word for 4000 has been omitted by the scribe by oversight;<sup>9</sup> so we get the original Javanese figure as [4]970. We may tentatively adopt the figure 4900, on the concordant evidence of Indian versions. The difference between the Indian and Javanese figures being only 70, the discrepancy is only about 1.4 per cent.

IX. Śalya: In this parvan there is fortunately no doubt about the śloka number, which is unanimously given as 3220.—And again, fortunately, as regards the adhyāya number, the discrepancy between the Indian (39) and Javanese (121) figures is so great that the Javanese may be ruled out as hopelessly corrupt. There is another test we may apply, the Javanese figure<sup>10</sup> (121) for adhyāyas gives the average of about 27 ślokas to an adhyāya, while the Indian average is 54. Now the total number of adhyāyas in the Mahābhārata is supposed to be 2000, and the number of stanzas 100,000 (śatasahasrāpi<sup>11</sup>), which gives the average of ślokas to an adhyāya as 50 and that is much nearer the average for the Indian figure for the adhyāya number of the Śalyaparvan than the Javanese figure.

X. Sauptika: The figures for the Sauptika call for no remarks. They are uniformly given in all the three sources as 18 and 870 respectively.

9. Kern, loc. cit., also recognises that the first figure has been omitted by mistake in the Javanese text.

10. Kern, loc. cit., likewise considers the Javanese figure (121) as very suspicious.

11. See the Critical Edition of the Ādiparvan, additional passage No. 485*, given on page 241.

XI. Stri: The sources do not agree as regards the number of adhyāyas, but the Javanese figure (70) which is nearly two and half times as large as the Indian (27) is extremely improbable.<sup>12</sup> We may therefore tentatively take the concordant Indian figure (27) as correct.—The difference between the Javanese and Indian figures for the ślokas is only five. It should seem that the last digit was lost in the Javanese tradition; if that be so, the correct number is 775, as given unanimously by the Indian MSS.

XII. Śānti: The śloka figure for Śānti (14,525) is given unanimously by all the three of our sources, which is a fortunate coincidence and also a remarkable proof of the reliability of our tradition. The Vulgate figure (14,725) for the ślokas is positively wrong.—There is a difference of only six between the Javanese and Indian figures for adhyāyas, the Indian tradition giving the figure as 339, the Javanese as 333. The agreement between the different Indian versions is a weighty point in favour of 339, which we may tentatively assume to be the correct figure.

XIII. Anuśāsana: The evidence of the Javanese Version is unfortunately missing, the version ignoring this parvan altogether, for some reason which it is hard to guess. It cannot be argued that it is included in the Śānti, since there is no appreciable increase in the number of adhyāyas or ślokas of the Javanese Version of the Śānti, as there would surely have been, had the two parvans been amalgamated as is done sometimes.<sup>13</sup> There being also no agreement between the various Indian versions, the figures for both adhyāyas and ślokas of the Anuśāsana remain uncertain.

XIV. Āśvamedhika: The number of adhyāyas is unanimously given as 133, which may therefore be accepted as the correct figure.—There is a discrepancy as regards the number of ślokas: the Critical Edition gives the figure as 3320, while the Javanese and the

12. As in the case of the Śalyaparvan, Kern (loc. cit.) regards the Javanese figure as very doubtful.

13. It is perhaps worth noticing that so late a commentator as Vādirāja (cf. P. K. Gode, ABORI, vol. 17, pp. 203-210, who assigns him to the seventeenth century), treats the Śānti and Anuśāsana as one parvan and has colophons like:

इति श्रीमद्भारते शतसाहस्रिकायां संहितायां वैपातिक्यां शान्तिपर्वणि आनुशासनिके श्रीम-
ह्वरिहर्षे नाम वट्टाष्टादशतमोऽध्यायः ॥ इति शान्तिपर्व समाप्तम् ॥

—which is quoted by Professor P. P. S. Sastri in the Introduction to vol. 17, (Anuśāsana Parvan, part 2,) p. xxiv.

Southern Recension agree in giving the figure as 4420, this being one of the rare instances in which the Javanese and the Southern Recension agree against the Northern Recension. The Southern Recension contains here an additional sub-parvan, comprising 23 adhyāyas and about 1700 ślokas, known as the Vaiṣṇavadharma parvan. There is no mention of any such parvan in the list of 100 parvans, given in the Parvasaṃgraha, though some Southern MSS. do insert, in another place, a line which mentions the Vaiṣṇavadharma among the contents of the Āśvamedhika. In this Section, Yudhiṣṭhira is instructed by Śrī-Kṛṣṇa in the Dharma of the Vaiṣṇavas, which seems hardly necessary, after the instruction he had received from Bhīṣma in more than 21,000 stanzas on general Dharma (Śānti and Anuśāsana). The higher Southern number must therefore be regarded as due to this inflation, and can in any case not be accepted. Nevertheless the peculiar agreement between the Javanese and the Southern is a disturbing factor. The number therefore may be regarded as doubtful.

XV. Āśramavāsika: There is not much doubt about the adhyāyas of this parvan, though the Javanese Version has a high figure (92) against the unanimous Indian figure 42, which may be assumed to be the correct figure.<sup>14</sup>—As regards the number of ślokas, there is a slight discrepancy of 2 between the Critical Edition and the Javanese Version, the former being 1506, the latter 1508. But the last digit in this number is not in doubt; it must be six. The Southern Recension gives the figure 1906, which must be regarded as extremely doubtful, since even Professor Sastri, who has edited the Southern Recension, could not find more than 1108½ stanzas for this parvan.<sup>15</sup> There has been clearly a mistake in the counting of the stanzas of this parvan, and the Southern figure being palpably incorrect, we may utilize the approximate agreement between the Critical Edition and the Javanese Version and adopt 1506 as the probable original Parvasaṃgraha figure for the Āśramavāsika.

XVI. Mausala: All sources agree in giving the number of adhyāyas as 8 and the number of ślokas as 300, which may accordingly be taken as the correct figures. The text also seems to contain actually 300 stanzas. Consequently the vulgate reading 320, in the Parvasaṅgraha chapter, is clearly faulty and has been properly rejected.

14. Kern (loc. cit.) likewise suggests reading 42 for 92 of the Javanese.

15. It is interesting to note, as pointed out by Professor Sastri, Nannaya's Āndhra-Bhāratamu gives 1106 as the figure of ślokas in the Āśramavāsika parvan. That probably is due to a fresh count.

XVII. Mahāprasthānika: The Javanese figure for the number of adhyāyas is missing; but the Indian sources, including the MSS., uniformly divide this short parvan into three adhyāyas; and the unanimous Indian reading cannot be called into question.—The number of ślokas may also be regarded as correctly given in the Critical Edition, which is supported by the Southern Recension, though the Javanese Version adds, erroneously, three to the number, giving the figure as 123. I surmise that this addition of three to the śloka number is a wrong transposition from the adhyāya number, which is missing in the Javanese Version. The Vulgate figure (320) for the ślokas is absurd and unquestionably incorrect.

XVIII. Svargārohaṇa: As in the previous case the adhyāya number is lost in the Javanese Version; but there cannot be any doubt that the correct figure is 5, which is given by all editions and MSS. of the Mahābhārata.—The śloka number is unanimously given, by our three sources, as 200, which is a sufficiently correct approximation of the actual extent of this last parvan of the Great Epic; and the Vulgate figure (209) may be unhesitatingly rejected.

The table on the following page gives the figures for the adhyāyas and ślokas, book by book, arrived at by a collation of the various extant versions of the Parvasaṅgraha chapter of the Ādiparvan.

TABLE II

Table giving the authentic figures for the Adhyāyas and Slokas of the eighteen Parvans of the Mahābhārata, based upon a collation of the MSS. of the Sanskrit Parvasaṅgrahaparvan and of the Javanese Version (ca. 1000 A.D.).

Parvan	Adhyāya	Sloka
I. ĀDI	218	?
II. SABHĀ	72	2511
III. ĀRANYAKA	269	11,664
IV. VIRTĀṬA	67	2050
V. UDYOGA	186	?
VI. BHĪṢMA	117 (or 118)	5884
VII. DRONA	170	8909
VIII. KARṆA	69	4900
IX. SALYA	59	3220
X. SAUPTIKA	18	870
XI. STRĪ	27	775
XII. SANTI	339	14,525
XIII. ANUSASANA	?	?
XIV. ĀSVAMEDHIKA	133	?
XV. ĀSRAMAVĀSIKA	42	1506
XVI. MAUŚALA	8	300
XVII. MAHĀPRASTHANIKA	3	120
XVIII. SVARGĀROHAṆA	5	200

DEVĪ-BHĀGAVATA OR BHAGAVATĪ-PURĀNA?

BY

S. N. TADPATRIKAR

One of the long-contested points, in Puranic literature, is the claim set forth by the Devībhāgavata to be included among the eighteen major Purāṇas—the claim contested by those attached to Śrīmadbhāgavata; and a substantial literature<sup>1</sup> has grown round this problem. Although it is not proposed to deal with this point at great length, it may be noted, in passing, that the Devībh. has, all through its text, claimed this status, while the latter, i. e. Śrīmadbh., quite unconscious of any such necessity, does not seem to have put forth any such claim, in the whole body of its text.

These references, in the body of the text have been sufficiently dealt with and discussed by scholars, but, I am afraid, no manuscript-evidence has so far been set forth by anybody, and it is mainly to this important side of the evidence that I wish here to draw the attention of scholars. I do not propose to take notes from the Mss. of Śrīmadbhāgavata, as that Purāṇa does not seem to have troubled itself about its status; but it is the Devī., which has, off and on, so scrupulously and promiscuously, set its claim, as the Bhāgavata, mentioned as one of the 18 major Purāṇas; and so I give below some suggestive evidence that I found in studying the Mss. of Devībh.

The Govt. Mss. Library at the B. O. R. Institute has, in its collection, only two Mss. of Devībh., and curiously enough, both these Mss., in their way, supply us with data that would lead us to re-consider this important problem, from another point of view, untackled, so far, by any scholars, I mean, a detailed study of the adhyāya colophons, as we find them in these two Mss. Printed editions may, I think, be safely left out here, as all of them would uniformly have the name Devībh. in their adhy. colophons.

---

<sup>1</sup> For details see भागवतनामा उपसंहार (Marathi) pp. 383-403; also Winternitz (Hist. Ind. Lit. p. 535) refers to this controversy.

First we take Ms. No. 114 of A 1881-82. This Ms., though placed under one number, consists, properly speaking, of two Mss, both incomplete. Skandhas 1 and 2, having the date Śake 1715 and the name of the copyist as Tryambak Dhundiraj Navathe, at the end of the Skandhas and having both the name and date deleted by use of yellow pigment, give the adhy. colophons as : श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे...स्कंधे ; while the second part of the Ms. having Skandhas 7, 8, 10-12 reads the adhy. colophons as देवीभागवते महापुराणे...स्कंधे. This part, having quite different sort of paper and a different style of handwriting, too, gives at the end of Skandha 12, the date Śake 1734 and the name of the copyist as Madhav Rayarikar. Let us call these two parts D<sup>1</sup> and D<sup>2</sup>.

The second Ms., which bears No. 115 of A 1881-82, is unfortunately a fragment and contains Skandhas 2 ( complete ), 3 ( fol. 23-52 missing ), 4 ( having only the first 12 fol. and breaking off at 7. 39 ), 5 ( complete ) and 6 (breaking off at fol. 49) the last in this fol. being an incomplete adhy. colophon इति श्रीभगवती.

This copy, though a fragment, has, in its adhy. colophons, all sorts of permutations and combinations of the four items or more precisely, two items, with two alternatives for each item :

a ) the name of the purāṇa, which is either भागवत महापुराण or भगवती पुराण, and ( b ) name of the different parts, which is either स्कन्ध or अंश. I give below a statement of these adhy. colophons, so as to make this important point clear.

—Skandha 2 has ( a ) भागवत generally with महापुराण, and ( b ) स्कन्ध for all its 12 adhys.

—Skandha 3 has for its adhy. 28, इति श्रीभगवतीपुराणे तृतीयस्कंधे ; for adhy. 30, which is the last in the Skandha, the colophon has still another epithet : इति श्रीभगवतीपुराणे अष्टादशसाहस्र्यां संहितायां तृतीयस्कंधे ; while adhy. 29 gives the name as देवीपुराण, having Skandha for ( b ). At the end of adhy. 2 we have भगवती महापुराणे...स्कंधे while adhys. 1, 3-11 and 26 27 have श्रीभागवते महापुराणे...स्कंधे; adhy. 6 and 9 and 27 having the epithet अष्टादश साहस्र्यां संहितायां, also, colophons of adhy. 12-25 are lost on missing folios.

—Skandha 4 is incomplete and has only six adhy. colophons ; of these adhys. 1, 2 and 5, have ( a ) भगवतीपुराणे and ( b ) चतुर्थस्कन्धे; while adhys. 3, 4, 6 have (a) भागवते महापुराणे and (b) चतुर्थस्कन्धे.

—Skandha 5 presents still more interesting varieties in this respect and the following tabular statement will give a correct idea of the different combinations of (a) and (b).

Name of Purāṇa	Name of Part	No. of Adhys
श्रीभागवती पुराणे	अंशे	1, 4-6, 8, 13, 15, 17, 18-24, 26, 29, 31 35
—do—	omitt	2, 14, 16, 25, 27.
—do—	स्कन्धे	34
श्रीभागवते महापुराणे	—do—	3
—do—	अंशे	7, 9, 12, 30, 32
—do—	omitt	10, 28, 33
श्रीभागवते (om. महा०)	अंशे	11

—Skandha 6 has, as stated above, complete colophons for 25 adhys.; colophon for adhy. 8 is lost on a missing folio, while that of adh. 27 is incomplete and hence of doubtful use, for our scrutiny. Of the 25 adhys. only 4 and 7 have 'श्रीभागवतीपुराणे पञ्चमे'; but for the rest, the colophons read भागवतीपुराणे and स्कन्धे.

It would be considered as impatient to arrive at some definite conclusion on the authority of a single fragmentary Ms., yet in the face of the interesting and important data presented above, it is very difficult for the present writer to put aside the temptation of placing before the interested readers some ideas by way of suggestion, and they may be taken for what they are worth.

Let us first consider the question of this Ms., as a copy of some exemplar. The professional scribe, who copied Mss. for centuries past, was not, as the Mss. themselves would now show, a very learned man, and usually tried to write out his copy of the exemplar as faithfully as he could, without making any intentional changes in the body of the text. Thus we can safely say that the present Ms. was copied from another and an older one, which read its adhy. colophons, as we find them here. Against this mixed tradition of adhy. colophons, we have the present tradition presented in printed editions and Mss. of the type of D<sup>2</sup> above, which read अदिश्रीभागवते महापुराणे...

स्कंधे, uniformly. Is it not possible to conclude from the fragmentary Ms. above that the mixed tradition, presented there, shows some intermediate transitional state of nomenclature, when the old tradition was trying to preserve its existence against aggression of the new one.

Add to this some facts put forth by the supporters of Śrīmad-Bhāgavata, in course of the controversy of the last century. They give numerous extracts from the present text of the Devī-Bhāgavata, asserting, off and on, its claim to be regarded as the Bhāgavata of the 18 major Purāṇas. This tendency apparently led to adhy. colophons being purposely made to read श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे...स्कंधे, as we find them in D<sup>1</sup> and also in some places in the fragmentary Ms.

With a little help of imagination, the following state of things can easily be conceived :

The purāṇa was originally called, fittingly, श्रीमगवतीपुराण and each of its parts was called अंश.

Then with the growing popularity of Śrīmad-Bhāg. comes in the period of controversy, when the devotees of Devī at once went to the other extreme and named their Purāṇa श्रीमद्भागवत महापुराण with the name स्कंध for its parts. The name was boldly asserted to be grammatically derived from भगवती as भगवत्याः इदं भागवतम् !

Then the two extremes mixed indiscriminately, and we come across all different sorts of adhy. colophons, as in the present fragment before us.

And last comes the present order of things, where, to distinguish this purāṇa from its rival, the word देवी was added to the name भगवत and we have the adhy. colophons, as we find them, in this last stage, in printed editions.

This arrangement of different stages would be readily accepted as conclusive if, to the evidence of these adhy. colophons, we were to come across some Ms. of this भगवतीपुराण, whose text is free from all its persistent assertions about its being the major Purāṇa, the Bhāgavata; but till then this, it is hoped, would serve as some sort of a leader to the final goal.

APABHRAMŚA AND THE ĀBHĪRAS.

BY

G. V. TAGARE

References to Ābhīrokti as a vibhāṣā in Bharata<sup>1</sup> and as Ap. in Daṇḍin<sup>2</sup> seem to have led Dr. Gune<sup>3</sup> to posit that Ap. is the corruption of Pk.s in the mouth of the foreigners (Ābhīras), as "the results as to the age of Ap. accord well with the history of Ābhīra migration in India which caused such a change in the spoken language of the country".

We have a number of purāṇic, inscriptional and literary references to Ābhīras and their migration and location and the remnants of their name are found all over Aryan India. To mention a few :

The Mahābhārata classes them with Śūdras dwelling on the banks of the Indus.<sup>4</sup> As a tribe they are mentioned with Dravida, Puṇḍra and Śabara<sup>5</sup>, again with the Barbaras, Yavana, Garga.<sup>6</sup> They encamped on the Sarasvatī which disappeared in abhorrence of them<sup>7</sup>. A prominent place was given to them in Droṇa's suparṇa-vyūha<sup>8</sup>. They attacked Arjuna when he entered the Pāñcanada with Kṛṣṇa's widows.<sup>9</sup>

The Rāmāyaṇa classes them with Surāṣṭra, Vāhika and

---

<sup>1</sup> Nāṭyaśāstra XVII-49 ( Kāvya-mālā Ed. ).

<sup>2</sup> Kāvya-darśa I. 36.

<sup>3</sup> Intro. to Bh. K. pp. 59-60.

<sup>4</sup> Mbh. Bhīṣma Parvan 305 ( Cal. Ed. II p. 344 ).

<sup>5</sup> evaṃ te Dravidābhīrāḥ Puṇḍrāś ca śabarais saha : Vyūhatvam parigatā Vyūthānāḥ kṣatradharmataḥ : Mbh. XIV. 30. 16. This seems to be an attempt to class them with Kṣatriyas.

<sup>6</sup> Mbh. II. 78. 99.

<sup>7</sup> Mbh. II. 35. 10.

<sup>8</sup> Mbh. IX. 37. 219 ( 2119 ? ).

<sup>9</sup> Mbh. XVI. 7. 223 or 211 ( ? ).

} As quoted by Gune in his Intro. to Bhavishattakāḥ.

Bhadra<sup>1</sup> and the Maru, Anumaru and Śūra<sup>2</sup>. The Visṇu Purāṇa<sup>3</sup> mentions it along with Parāta, Surāṣṭra and Śūra.

Nothing definite is known as to the dates of these works and the genuineness of these passages. Manu's attempt to classify them (X. 15) and identify them with Kṣatriyas (X. 43, 45) leaves us equally in darkness as to the origin, home or history of the Ābhīras and their position in Hindu society in ancient times.

That they were a warlike tribe is admitted by all. Probably they were a nomadic people as they are associated with various peoples and provinces. Ancient Indian sociologists were puzzled as to what position should be allotted to them after assimilating them into Hinduism. Even at the time of Patañjali it was a debatable point<sup>4</sup> whether Ābhīras are a subcaste of Śūdras or a separate class, in which Patañjali subscribed to the latter view<sup>5</sup>, which perhaps was included later among the Vaiśyas.<sup>6</sup>

Ptolemy (100 A. D.) regards them as a tribe dominating the district 'Abīria' on the Indus.<sup>7</sup> In 181 A. D. Kṣatrapa Rudrasimha speaks of his general Rudrabhūti as an Ābhīra.<sup>8</sup> Bharata<sup>9</sup> classes them with wild tribes e. g. Śābara, cāṇḍāla etc. He refers to their dialect as an uncultured dialect (a vibhāṣā) spoken by pastoral people, and locates them probably on the Indus, Sindha and the foot of the Himalayas. The Nasik cave Inscription<sup>10</sup> of 300 A. D. speaks of the reign of an Ābhīra prince called Īvarasena, son of Śivadatta. In about 360 A. D. the Allahabad pillar Inscription of Samudra Gupta mentions the Ābhīras together with Mālavas as powerful tribes occupying

<sup>1</sup> Rām. IV. 43. 5.

<sup>2</sup> Rām. IV. 43. 19.

<sup>3</sup> II. 3. 16.

<sup>4</sup> Vide the discussion on the compound 'Śūdrābhīram' in the Mahābhāṣya I. 2. 3 on Pāṇini I. 2. 73.

<sup>5</sup> Iha tsvat śūdrābhīram iti Ābhīra-jāyantarūpi | Mahābhāṣya I. 2. 3.

<sup>6</sup> Vaiśyabheda eva Ābhīro gavādyupajīvi | Hemacandra-Abhidhāna-cintāmaṇi 522.

<sup>7</sup> Quoted by Wilson in 'Indian Caste' Vol. I, p. 111.

<sup>8</sup> Inscriptions of Rudrasimha as quoted by D. R. Bhandarkar, IA, 1911, p. 16 (†) and Enthoven: Tribes and Castes of Bombay, I. p. 121.

<sup>9</sup> Nāṭya Śāstra XVII, 49, 55, 61.

<sup>10</sup> Quoted by Bhandarkar and Enthoven in Tribes and Castes of Bombay I.

Rājasthan, Malwa, South-western and Southern provinces just beyond the limits of the Gupta Empire.<sup>1</sup> Thus in the 4th cent. A. D. some Ābhīras seem to be permanently settled in Malwa and had their own ruling dynasties.

Bhandarkar-Enthoven<sup>2</sup> think that Purāṇas refer to the paramount sovereignty of this period after the Āṇḍhrabhrīyas and this sovereignty disappeared by the 6th cent. A. D. Dr. Gune thinks that, during this period and subsequently, Ap. must have begun to develop a literature of its own—a fact in keeping with the literary evidence when the Ap. appears as an important literary language.<sup>3</sup> They were a supreme power in Surāṣṭra as, when the Kāthīs invaded it in circa 8th century, the country was under the sway of the Ābhīras.<sup>4</sup> Ferista<sup>5</sup> mentions a tradition that the fort of Aśirgad was built by Asa Ahir. Udbhata, a Kāśmīrī rhetorician of the 8th century, refers to the beauty of Ābhīra women.<sup>6</sup> Dhanañjaya<sup>7</sup> (10th cent. A. D.), Namisādhū<sup>8</sup> (11th cent. A. D.) and Hemacandra<sup>9</sup> (12th cent. A. D.) also refer to Ābhīras and their speech.

The main problem is: can we identify the speech of the Ābhīras with Ap. as we now understand it? Or to put it in other words: is not Ap. an outcome of the normal evolution of the IA? I admit that, being a ruling tribe for some time, they must have contributed something of their own to the development of the IA. But so were the Greeks, Śakas and Hūṇas and a number of other tribes who entered India in the early centuries of the Christian era or thereabout.

<sup>1</sup> Quoted by Bhandarkar and Enthoven—Ibid. V. Smith. Early History of India, p. 286. Dr. Gune thinks that Ahriwar (Sk. Ābhīravāṣṭa) to the south of Jhansi is perhaps the principality mentioned in the above inscription.

<sup>2</sup> Tribes and Castes of Bombay, I. p. 33.

<sup>3</sup> Daṇḍin—Kāvyādarśa I. 36.

<sup>4</sup> Enthoven—Tribes and Castes of Bombay, I. p. 24.

<sup>5</sup> Ibid.

<sup>6</sup> Ābhīra-vāma-nayanaśrīta-mānasasya dattam mano Yadupate tadidam grhāṇa: quoted by Apte in his Sanskrit Dictionary.

<sup>7</sup> Daśarūpa II. 42.

<sup>8</sup> On Rudraṭa's Kāvyālamkāra.

<sup>9</sup> Abhidhāna-cintāmaṇi (vide 15 above).

The Ap. of Pk. grammarians shows the following peculiar features of its own :

(1) Vowel changes—a general weakening of pronunciation e. g.  $o > u$ ,  $m > ^*v$ .

(2) Smoothening of Prākṛit conjuncts.

(3) Change of  $s$  to  $h$  in morphology.

(4) Analytic tendency in declension and conjugation resulting in reduction of cases, conjugational forms etc.

(5) Pleonastic affixes e. g.  $ka$ ,  $ḍa$ ,  $la$  etc.

(6) Abundance of Deśi words and Dhātuvādesas.

Being unacquainted with the Dravidian and Austro-asiatic philology I am not in a position to say anything on the last point. But are not the remaining features indicative of the normal growth of the IA? There is no necessity of assuming a foreign influence for the change of  $s$  to  $h$  for in the IA  $s$  is closely allied with  $h$ .<sup>1</sup>

Like some other linguistic tendencies which are not represented in literature this must have been regarded as an un-literary feature during the centuries when Pk. literature was predominant (though we have a number of cases showing the existence of this in Pk. literature) till at last it became popular with the elite and was freely used during the so-called Ap. stage of the IA.

General weakening in pronunciation resulting in vowel changes and smoothening of conjuncts and analytic tendency in declension and conjugation are in no way peculiar to Ap. Inscriptional and literary Pks. (including Pali and Aṃg.) show them (vide Bloch: L'Indo-Aryen). Pleonastic affixes e. g.  $-ka$ ,  $-al$  (e. g.  $bālaka$ ,  $dayālu$ ,  $kṛpālu$ ) are an inheritance from Sk.

So there is nothing peculiar to Ap. which we must attribute to foreign tribes. That Ābhīri might have been a dialect of Ap. in which literature was composed is understandable and we have the authority of Namisādhu,<sup>2</sup> who records a traditional classification of Ap. in which Ābhīri is a dialect and finally adds that Ābhīri though a sub-dialect of Ap. is also seen in Māgadhi. So Māgadhi also seems to have one dialect of this name as noted by Namisādhū.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Vide Bloch: L'Indo-Aryen on L'Aspirée.

<sup>2</sup> tathā Prākṛtam eva 'pabhraṃs' aḥ | sa cānyair upanāgarābhīr-grāmyatva-bhedena tridhoktas tannirasaśrīṭham uktam | etc. on Rudraṭṭa II, 12.

At this stage of my studies I am inclined to believe that Ābhīri is one of the dialects of Ap.; its identification with Nāgara i. e. literary or cultured Ap. (not necessarily of the Nāgara Brahmins of Gujrat) is doubtful. A bulk of Ap. literature, though composed out of Gujrat, is regarded as Nāgara Ap. Lyrics etc. must have been composed in the Ābhīri just as there are a number of songs etc. in the Ahirāṇi of today. But its identification as a synonym for Ap. is doubtful.

<sup>1</sup> Ābhīri-bhāṣāpabhraṃśasthā kvacid Māgadhyam api dīyate: Ibid

X<sup>V</sup> AĒTVA-DAĞA IN AVESTA.

BY

IRACH J. S. TARAPOREWALA

In SBE. 18 ( pp. 389-430 ) E. W. West has a long dissertation on the practice of x<sup>v</sup> aētuk-das as mentioned in the Pahlavi works. It is a very exhaustive dissertation and the author has mentioned practically every passage in Pahlavi literature known to him in which the word occurs, or where the practice is referred to.

In modern times among the Zoroastrians, both of Iran and of India, the word means "marriage of near relatives" i. e. of first cousins. This certainly seems to have been the sense in some of the passages quoted by West. But in the majority of the passages quoted the meaning is very clearly, and in explicit words, that given to it by European scholars, viz., "incestuous marriage between father and daughter, mother and son or brother and sister". Greek, Roman, Armenian, Arab and Chinese writers have mentioned this practice as having been in vogue amongst the Iranians. So shocking is the very idea to our modern sense of decency that Parsi scholars have made valiant attempts to prove that the word x<sup>v</sup> aētuk-das means merely "marriage of near relatives" i. e. of first cousins and that it never meant the incestuous marriages such as have been described by Greek, Roman and other "foreign" writers. The most notable attempt in this direction has been that of Dastur Darab Dastur Peshotan Sanjana in his paper entitled "The Alleged Practice of Next of Kin Marriages in Old Iran" ( London, 1888 )<sup>1</sup>.

1. This paper has been reprinted as an appendix to his book, Zarathushtra in the Gāthās and the Classics ( pp. 205-226 ). It is also included in his Collected Works ( Bombay, 1932, pp. 462-499 ). Mention might also be made of Dastur Darab's other dissertation on "The Position of Zoroastrian Women in Remote Antiquity" (Collected Works, pp. 506-524) where also this matter has been touched upon. A. V. W. Jackson in his Zoroastrian Studies ( New York, 1928 ) gives a useful bibliography of this subject ( p. 139, fn. 19 ). He mentions there, besides Dastur Darab, the following: E. W. West in SBE., 18, pp. 389-430; L. C. Casserelli, Philosophy of the Mazdaean Religion under the Sassanids, pp. 156-160; J. Darmesteter, Le Zend-Avesta, i, pp. 126-134; H. Hübschmann, "Ueber die persische Verwandtenheirath" in ZDMG., 43 ( 1889 ), pp. 308-312; Rapp, "Die Religion und Sitte der Perser und den übrigen Iravier nach den griechischen und römischen Quellen" in ZDMG., 19 ( 1865 ), pp. 1-89 and 20 ( 1866 ), pp. 49-143; Bach, Zoroastrian Ethics, pp. 129-132; and L. H. Gray in the Encyclopædia of Religion and Ethics, 8, pp. 456-459. The last named is particularly illuminating.

The contention of West is fully borne out by the evidence he has collected, and he asserts emphatically that "in the Pahlavi translations and writings of the better class, which, in their present form, probably range from the sixth to the ninth century, we find many references to Khvētāk-das between those next of kin<sup>2</sup>, and only one obscure reference to the marriage of first cousins". He goes on to say that "marriages between the nearest relations are defended chiefly by reference to mythical and metaphysical statements regarding the creation, and to the practice of the progenitors of mankind; they are also advocated with all the warmth and vehemence that usually indicate much difficulty in convincing the laity, and this zealous vehemence increases as we descend to the dark ages of the Pahlavi Rivāyat, the compilation of which may perhaps be attributed to some writer of the thirteenth or fourteenth century. Unless, therefore, the Parsis determine to reject the evidence of such Pahlavi works as the Pahlavi Yasna, the Book of Ardā Virāf, the Dinkard, and the Dādistān-i Dīnik, or to attribute those books to heretical writers, they must admit that their priests, in the later days of the Sasanian dynasty, and for some centuries subsequently, strongly advocated such next-of-kin marriages, though, probably, with little success. That a practice now reprobated by all Parsis should have been formerly advocated by their priests, need not excite the surprise of those who consider how slavery was advocated by many Christians, on spiritual grounds within the present generation<sup>3</sup>, and how the execution of supposed witches was similarly advocated a few generations ago".<sup>4</sup>

In later days, in the Persian Rivāyats, "which may have commenced from the fifteenth century", we find that the word x<sup>v</sup> āēta-k-das means the marriage of first cousins and that there are "obscure allusions made to the other forms as being long extinct".<sup>5</sup>

2. West means here union between father and daughter, mother and son, or brother and sister, as the context clearly shows.

3. SBE. 18 was published in 1882.

4. The quotations are from West in SBE. 18, pp. 427-428.

5. Quotations from West, loc. cit. The marriage of first cousins (specially of the children of two brothers) is regarded as particularly desirable among orthodox Zoroastrian Iranis even to this day. Until quite recently such married

It would be interesting to investigate the use of the word in the extant Avesta texts. Hübschmann has treated the question fairly well in the ZDMG., 43 (1889), pp. 308-312. But the subject might be treated de novo.

The corresponding Avesta word is  $x^v aēta-daθa$ . It is obviously a compound formation of which the first member ( $x^v aēta$ ) is from the pronoun  $x^v a$ . This pronoun is found as  $x^v a$ -,  $hva$ -<sup>6</sup> or  $hva$ - and it means "one's self" or when it is used adjectivally it means "one's own";<sup>7</sup> cf. Skt. स्व, Lat. su-us etc. The Sanskrit translations almost always render this by स्व (or some compound formation with स्व) wherever the word occurs, for the Pahlavi almost always has  $x^v ēs$ - (Mod. Pers.  $khācēsh$ ). As compounds with  $x^v a$  as first member may be quoted  $x^v a-dāta$  (natural, lit. self-created) in contrast to  $sti-dāta$ <sup>8</sup>;  $x^v a-θwarōta$  (self-produced) etc. We also get the adverbial  $x^v aθ$  (स्वतः) several times in the Vendidad.

From this pronoun we find other derivative words:  $x^v aēta$ ,  $x^v aētat$  and  $x^v aētao$  (<sup>9</sup>tu). Of these  $x^v aēta$  is found only once in the Gāθa Ahunavaiti (Yas. 34.12). Bartholomae, rather strangely, it seems to me, translates the word as "good to follow",<sup>10</sup> deriving it from  $x^v a$  (regarded as variant of hu) and  $-ta$ , past participle of i, to go. The  $x^v a$  as a variant of hu is quite possible, especially as the u changes to v in combination with the following vowel;<sup>11</sup> but still there are other difficulties in the way of accepting this explanation of Bartholomae. The corresponding Sanskrit form would be युवित. In the first place the guna grade in the Avesta would be hard to explain, for with the past participial ending ta the root is couple were regarded as even sacred, so much so that one could recite one's prayers in front of such persons in the absence of other lights.

(Continued from previous page)

6. hu has been often used in the Avesta as an emphatic pronoun, in the sense of "even he" or "he alone", as in Yas. 22.4, 8 etc. See Bartholomae, Altiranisches Wörterbuch, 1844 f.

7. Barth., Wb. 1783 ff., 1845 f., 1858.

8. Ven. 2.40; the Skt. rendering, quoted by Barth. (Wb. 182), is स्वतः.

9. Wb. 1858 (gut zu gehen, wohlgegangbar).

10. Cf.  $x^v aθna$  in Yas. 30.3, which I take to mean "well-working" or "skilful". Cf. Skt. स्वतः in RV. 10.63.3 and 78.1, see Grassmann, Wörterbuch zum Rigveda, 1637.

always in the weak grade. But a more formidable difficulty would be the construing with the past participle. The actual passage (Yas. 34. 12) is:

sīsā nōo Aśā paθō Vanhəuš x<sup>v</sup>āitəng Manahō

Bartholomae translates thus: "Teach us through Aśa the paths of Vohu Manah (which are) good to follow." The rendering "good to follow" (wohlgangbar) for a past participle seems to me rather strained.

Spiegel seems more on the right lines when he renders this as "the paths which belong to Vohu Manō" i. e. which are his own, taking x<sup>v</sup>āitəuš as from x<sup>v</sup>a-. The sense seems to be "the paths that are specially pointed out by Vohu Mano".

The next derivative, x<sup>v</sup>āitāt, occurs twice (Yas. 20. 1 and 39. 5) and in both places with the third derivative x<sup>v</sup>āitav-(<sup>v</sup>tu). Yas. 20.1 reads:

para ahmāi vohu vahistəm cināsti, yaθa x<sup>v</sup>āitave x<sup>v</sup>āitātəm.

All scholars, though differing somewhat in the exact details, are agreed in regarding both the last words as derived from x<sup>v</sup>a- (𐬭𐬀) "one-self" and the general sense of these two words seems to be "the most special (i. e. precious) possession of one's own self".<sup>11</sup>

The other passage (Yas 39. 5) is from Yasna Haptanhāiti, a fairly ancient text of the Avesta,<sup>12</sup> and is as follows:

vanhəuš x<sup>v</sup>āitātū x<sup>v</sup>āitūš vanhəuš Ašahyā θwū pairi-jasāmaida.

Here too the phrase x<sup>v</sup>āitūš x<sup>v</sup>āitātū should have the same sense as in the former passage; the wish expressed is to "reach Thee (Ahura Mazda) through the x<sup>v</sup>āitāt of the good x<sup>v</sup>āitūš and of holy Aśa".

And so we must now try to make out the sense of x<sup>v</sup>āitav-(<sup>v</sup>tu). This word is found in a number of passages besides the two just

11. Moulton (Early Zoroastrianism, p. 363) renders this rather freely as "blessed to go in", but even thus the difficulty of construing the past participle remains.

12. Barth. (Wb. 1859) says "dem Zugehörigen als Zuehör"; Harlez. (Avesta<sup>2</sup>, Paris, 1881, p. 303) translates "une qualité essentielle à celui qui la possède."

13. Through internal evidence of language and contents it seems to be next to the Gāthās in age. It comprises chapters 35-42 of the Yasna.

considered, which, it may be noted, are from the older Avasta texts. There are altogether nine other passages in which the word occurs and seven of these are from the Gāthās, one from the Yasna Haptaṅhāiti (Yas. 40. 4) and one is a rather pointless quotation from Yas. 33. 4 (Gāthā Ahunavaiti) in the Vistāspa Yāṣ.<sup>14</sup> So this last may be left out of consideration completely. It is further to be noted that in only two of these passages is the word used by itself, these are both from the Gāthās, viz., Yas. 46. 5 (Spentāmainyu) and Yas. 53. 4 (Vahishtoisti). In the remaining six the word is associated with vərəzəna and airyanan.<sup>15</sup>

Hence we should first consider the meaning of the three words x<sup>v</sup>aštav-, vərəzəna and airyanan and then try to make out why these three have been mentioned together so often. Bartholomae thinks that these three words refer to the three chief "classes" of Zoroastrian society and that they represent warriors, agriculturists and priests respectively. But among the passages where these three words appear (Yas. 32. 1; 33. 3; and 48. 4; 46. 1; and 49. 7) there is only one (Yas. 49. 7) where these words occur in the proper order (priest, warrior, agriculturist) if Bartholomae's suggestion is accepted. In all the rest x<sup>v</sup>aštav- is first and except in Yas. 46.5 vərəzəna always comes before airyanan. This in itself would go against Bartholomae's suggestion that these three words denote the three "classes" of the Aryans.<sup>16</sup> Throughout all literature, both in Iran as well as in India, the order has always been - priest, warrior, agriculturist.

It seems moreover intrinsically impossible that Zarathushtra should mention these "classes" in the Gāthās. Moulton has doubts if "there was any priestly order at all in Zarathustra's system". He thinks that "the exclusion of the old Aryan āθrauan from the 14. Barth., Wb. 1859 (under x<sup>v</sup>aštav-), note 1.

15. In Yasna Haptaṅhāiti (Yas. 40.4) haxəman has been used instead of airyanan.

16. Commenting on this Moulton remarks that in these passages airyanan always stands last, "a modesty which the priestly class has nowhere else shown" (EZ, p. 355, fn. 2). He also points out that Jussel has noticed this as well.

Gāthās can hardly be accidental".<sup>17</sup> Moulton also notes that perhaps the earliest hint of a priestly class, as such, is in Yasna Haptahāiti (Yas. 42. 6).<sup>18</sup> The "four classes" are mentioned by name in Yas. 19, 17, where the name for "caste" is pištra,<sup>19</sup> which, like the Sanskrit वर्ण, has originally the meaning of "colour" and "suggests the presence of distinct races". Moulton therefore comes to the conclusion that "we can hardly understand the Gathas on the assumption that Zarathushtra himself belonged to a separate and higher priestly caste". I fully agree that no teacher of a new faith, certainly not a teacher of the eminence of Zarathushtra, would ever arrogate to himself a special position in a class higher than that of the people whom he addressed. Probably the germ of the caste-system did exist in ancient Aryan polity, but neither in the Gāthās nor in the contemporary portions of the Vedas is there any evidence of the caste-system as we know it in later history.

It seems, however, that the three words x<sup>3</sup>ōētan (𐬭𐬀𐬎𐬎𐬀), vr̥θzēna and airyaman do refer to different groups of people. They are most probably groups of the disciples of the prophet. We might be almost justified in regarding them as the various "orders" of the disciples arranged by the Prophet in the order of their spiritual knowledge and their ability to help actively in the work of the Teacher. We have various similar orders of the disciples of the Buddha, and we also read of the Ashāb (Companions) and various other groups associated with Muhammad. Of the three the most worthy and the most helpful seem to have been the x<sup>3</sup>ōētan and the vr̥θzēna and the airyaman are evidently next in importance.

The word airyaman occurs also as the name of a divine being both in the Avesta and in the Veda. In the Rgveda, though the name occurs quite a hundred times, still the deity "is so destitute of individual characteristics that in the Naighantuka he is passed over in the list of gods".<sup>20</sup> The word has often the connotation of "comrade"

17. Moulton, loc. cit.

18. Op. cit., p. 116.

19. Barb, W<sup>5</sup>, 908.

20. Macdonell, Vedic Mythology, p. 45.

or "friend" and is apparently used in that sense both in the Veda and in the Avesta. The one Ha of the Yasna (54) specially devoted to Airyaman as a deity is appropriately recited during the Zoroastrian marriage service, because this ancient Aryan deity represents comradeship. Hence it seems to me that very appropriately the general "brotherhood" of Zoroaster's followers has been called airyaman.

Among the believers there must have been some active workers, people who took a share in the establishment of the new order and who worked actively in opposing the ancient "faith of the Daēvas".<sup>21</sup> These active workers among the followers of Zarathushtra would rightly be named vr̥zēna, from the root vr̥z, to work, to be active.

Finally came the x<sup>v</sup>āitav, a word which is cognate with the Sanskrit स्वतन्त्र, which is used several times in the Rgveda in the sense of "powerful within oneself" or "self-reliant".<sup>22</sup> These were the people who had been following the methods of spiritual culture taught by the Master, and they built up a sort of "spiritual noblesse" within the fold.

Thus the three, airyaman, vr̥zēna and x<sup>v</sup>āitav, represent three grades among the followers of Zarathushtra. I would provisionally render these names by Friends, Co-workers and Self-reliant respectively. And these renderings fit the passages where they occur.<sup>23</sup>

Now we come to the compound x<sup>v</sup>āitav-daθa, which occurs both in the masculine and the feminine forms, daθa and daθā (daīθi). This compound occurs several times in the Avesta, but not in the Gāthās. Its two chief occurrences are in Yas. 12. 9 (which is linguistically the earliest) and Vis. 3. 3. The latter passage is repeated in Gah 4. 8 with only the change of the verb āstāya (I instal) to yazamaide (we worship, or revere). This same passage is also repeated in the Vistāspa Yašt (17) with the cases changed from the accusative to the genitive.

21. In Yas. 32.1 there is a mention of the Daēvas side by side with these three groups of Zarathushtra's followers. The word daēva here (as also elsewhere in the Gāthās) merely means a follower of the older form of worship.

22. Grassmann, Wb., 1522.

23. A good discussion of these three is also to be found in P. Thieme, Der Fremdling in Rigveda (Leipzig 1938), chap. 4 (pp. 101-107).

The most remarkable occurrence of x<sup>v</sup>āitva-daθa is in Ven. 8. 13, where it is found twice, once as masculine and once as feminine. This passage is clearly a later one and the clause in which both these forms occur is probably a later interpolation. This passage has been discussed in some detail in the Appendix.

In the Pahlavi version of all these Avesta passages the word x<sup>v</sup>āitva-daθa has been rendered by x<sup>v</sup>āituk-dak. This seems to be merely a transcription of the Avesta word and therefore it gives us no clue as to the original meaning of the word in the Avesta.<sup>24</sup> The Pahlavi word however is always translated, as we have already seen, as "marriage with next of kin" or, if used as an adjective, it means "one who has consummated such a union."

Bartholomae derives x<sup>v</sup>āitva-daθa from x<sup>v</sup>āitav- (one's own kin) and vadaθa (marriage), and he gives to it the sense "one who marries his (or her) next of kin," or where it applies to the religion (as in Yas. 12. 9) he takes it to mean "where next of kin marriage is ordained".<sup>25</sup> In this derivation the vadaθa is only a hypothetical word postulated from the root vad-, to lead, which with upa means "to marry". Bartholomae gives as cognates Church Slavic veda- and Lithuanian vedu, I marry. He also quotes two occurrences of upa vad from Ven. (4.44 and 14.15)<sup>26</sup>. This derivation, however, has been disputed by Justi<sup>27</sup>, who maintains that the Pahlavi form x<sup>v</sup>āituk-das or x<sup>v</sup>ēituk-das is a mere transcription and that if it had been derived as suggested it should have been x<sup>v</sup>āitōdaθa.<sup>28</sup>

24. Nairyoasang's Sanskrit version of Yas. 12.9 also merely transcribes the Avesta word वृजपुत्रदधवर्त्तम् which he explains further as वृजपुत्रदधं पत्न्याः पदं किं वृजपते एव कर्तुम् (i. e. the religion in which the x<sup>v</sup>āitva-daθa is performed in a large measure). Note that x<sup>v</sup> is transcribed as वृज.

25. Wb. 1860.

26. Ibid. 1343 f. Barth. has made this suggestion of deriving the word in the Grundriss der iranischen Philologie, i. 1, 268.12 (p. 135.) By the ordinary rules of Avesta orthography x<sup>v</sup>āitva-vadaθa would become x<sup>v</sup>āitvadaθa.

27. See Grund. d. iran. Phil., ii, p. 434 and fin.

28. See specially his remarks (loc. cit., fn. 6) where he seems to agree with Dastur Darab.

Hence he suggests that the Avesta word does not mean any sort of marriage at all<sup>29</sup>.

If we examine all the passages ( except Ven. 8.13 ) dispassionately and without prejudice<sup>29</sup> it would be clear that the meaning sought to be given to x<sup>v</sup>aēta-daba by Bartholomae does not fit in at all. In Yas. 12.9 the context is about the finest traits of the Māzdayasna Faith of which x<sup>v</sup>aēta-daba is one of the epithets. The passage says :

" I solemnly dedicate myself to the excellent religion of Mazda-worship, which is quarrel-removing, weapon-lowering, x<sup>v</sup>aēta-daba and holy... "

Common sense should suggest that in accord with the high ethical sense of the rest x<sup>v</sup>aēta-daba should be something equally elevating. It is strange that Western scholars have been content to give the Pahlavi sense to the Avesta word and thus have dragged in the next-of-kin marriage which is entirely unsuited to the context. Kanga, I think, has struck the right note when he renders this word by " self-devoted " or " patriotic ", i. e. " devoted to the welfare of his native country ". He also gives another sense पेशावतपणु आपनार " giving relationship or family connection ", which suggests the development of family affections rather than next-of-kin marriages<sup>30</sup>.

Among European scholars Hübschmann is the one who has approached this question " dispassionately and without prejudice ",<sup>31</sup> In discussing this passage he definitely says that the dragging in next-of-kin marriage is out of the question. He also quotes Geldner in support.<sup>32</sup>

29. By " dispassionately and without prejudice " I mean here not being led away by the meaning of the seeming Pahlavi derivative like x<sup>v</sup>aēta-dab. It is obviously wrong to understand a word in an earlier text in the sense it acquired at a later period.

30. See his Dictionary of the Avesta Language, p. 158.

31. In his article mentioned above in fn. 1.

32. Geldner in his Studien zum Avesta has translated this passage ( p. 134 ) where he has put in the usual next-of-kin marriage, but in a note ( p. 137 ) he doubts whether this rendering is quite suitable and correct.

The other passage where the word occurs is Visparad 3.3, which is repeated with slight changes in Gāh 4.8 and in Vistāspa Yašt 17. Here too the context is against dragging in next-of-kin marriage. This passage (Vis. 3.3) may be translated thus:

"I instal the youth of good thoughts, of good words, of good deeds and of good conscience. I instal the youth, the declarer of the message. I instal (the youth who is) x<sup>v</sup>āitva-daθa. I instal him who goes about (teaching) through the land. I instal (him) full of wisdom, who travels about (teaching)".

Here too the whole spirit of the passage rules out entirely the bringing in of next-of-kin marriage.

We have already seen above that x<sup>v</sup>āitav- ('tu) can be best translated as "self-reliant" or "independent in spirit". The meaning has to be something uplifting and ethical. The word x<sup>v</sup>āitva-daθa may therefore best be taken as made up from x<sup>v</sup>āitu- or some cognate form with the addition of daθa a derivative from the root dā, to give, or dā, to hold. The meaning of the whole compound would therefore be "which holds to self-reliance", when applied to the faith (i. e. teaching this virtue), and when applied to the youth it would mean "who is self-reliant" (i. e. independent in spirit). This sense suits the context of both passages far better than next-of-kin marriage. One of the fundamental teachings of Zarathushtra is the complete "spiritual independence" of man.<sup>33</sup> Spiritual perfection is to be attained by every person's own effort,<sup>34</sup> and self-reliance is therefore a cardinal virtue.

By way of supporting the idea that next-of-kin marriages were ordained even in the earlier texts, Bartholomae mentions as an instance Queen Hutaosa, the wife of King Vistāspa, who, he asserts, was also his sister.<sup>35</sup> But Moulton has shown that this view will not stand critical examination, and that there is nothing in the text quoted by Bartholomae (Yašt 15. (Rām Yt.) 35) to support this contention.<sup>36</sup>

33. Another suggestion is to take x<sup>v</sup>āitva as equivalent to Ekt. 𐬨𐬀𐬯𐬀 i. e., independence (selfhood), or realisation of the self.

34. Cf. Yašt 30.2.

35. Wb. 1822.

36. EZ., pp. 306 f.

From all this discussion it seems quite clear that the word  $x^v aēta-daθa$  in the Avesta does not refer to "next-of-kin" marriage, but that it means "holding to self-reliance". This is in consonance with Zarathushtra's teaching that every man is free to choose his own path in life and that consequently each must develop the virtue of self-reliance.

In later Pahlavi writings the word  $x^v aētūk-das$  did certainly mean "next-of-kin marriage", and it would seem that in Ven. 8. 13 the Avesta word is also used in the same sense. But that passage is certainly an interpolation of the Pahlavi days and as evidence it is absolutely worthless. It is obviously illogical to give to a word used in some of the earlier texts the secondary meaning it came to acquire at a period when the spirit of the ancient faith had deteriorated and a lot of questionable practices had crept in.

APPENDIX.

Vendidad, 8. 13.

The passage of the Vendidad in which the word  $x^v aēta-daθa$  occurs is a very wierd one. Its contents mark it out as belonging to a very late period of Zoroastrian history and as depicting a very much degraded form of the faith.

The passage concerns the purification of corpse-bearers after having handled the dead body and a question is asked as to what urine is to be used for the purpose. The reply is:

$ūai^1 mraot^8 Ahurū^3 Mazdāio^4$  :

$^{11} pusaam^5 vā^4 staūram^7 vā^3; nōi^3 naram^{10} nōi^{11} nārinam^{12},$
 $parag^{12} dāiibya^{14}, vā^{15} anhēn^{16} x^v aēta-daθas^{17}-ca^{18} x^v aēta-daiθis^{19}$
 $ca^{20}; aēte^{21} māesma^{22} māesayanta^{23}, yaēibya^{24} aēte^{25} nasa^{26}-kaqa^{27}$
 $frusnyāonte^{28} xarvāos^{29}-ca^{30} tanūm^{31}-ca^{32},$

Translation :

Thereupon said Ahura Mazda<sup>17</sup> :

37. It was the common practice of the later writers of Zoroastrian Theology to put their dogmas in the form of questions and answers. The question is usually put in the mouth of Zarathushtra peresat Zarathuštrō Ahurēm Mazdām... (Zarathushtra asked Ahura Mazda...) and invariably Ahura Mazda answers as in the passage quoted. Thus the composers of the Vendidad sought to get a double sanction and sanctification for the wierdest of dogmas and religious practices.

"(The urine should be) either of small cattle or of large cattle; not of men nor of women, except the two who are a man who is x<sup>v</sup> aēta-daθa and a woman who is x<sup>v</sup> aēta-daθi: let them discharge urine, in which these corpse-bearers may wash (their) hair and (their) bodies".

The whole tone of the subject-matter as also the language of the passage shows clearly that it was composed during the period of the degradation of the Zoroastrian religion.<sup>38</sup> The very idea of the passage is so very wierd and revolting that the late Ervad Kavasji Edalji Kanga was constrained to twist the words and the construction in order that he may not shock his readers. His translation is original as well as ingenious.

Upto the words "not of men nor of women" he agrees with all other translators. Then he goes on in his peculiar fashion:

"(of the cattle large or small) which he has got in his stalls (lit. which he has kept for himself) both male and female, he should collect the (fresh) urine coming out of their bodies, he should make them pass urine, in which..." (The rest agrees with the others.)

The difficulty for Kangaji begins with the 13th word paragət. He begins by saying that the word is "puzzling" and after a rather fanciful derivation he concludes that the word would mean "exuding or coming out of the body". Then he construes it as an adjective qualifying the 32nd word mašma, and he adds that the phrase paragət mašma might mean "fresh exuded urine". Connecting up two far separated words is palpably absurd. Then again he renders the words x<sup>v</sup> aēta-daθa and x<sup>v</sup> aēta-daθi most ingeniously as male and female animals "which he has got in his stalls" (lit. which he has kept for himself).<sup>39</sup> But in the glossary appended to the first edition of the Vendidad he gives the usual meaning "marriage with relations" adding in brackets the words "original sense".<sup>40</sup>

38. "The grammatical chaos which prevails so often in the prose parts of the Avesta demonstrates that the later Avestan dialect was dead when these belated efforts at composition were made. They may therefore very well be due to the Sassanian editors themselves, to whom in any case we owe the collection and preservation of our Avesta" (Moulton, EZ., p. 34).

39. See his Gujarāṭi translation of the Vendidad (1st ed. 1874), part I, pp. 91-92.

This is certainly most ingenious, but it is not at all convincing and it goes against all principles of grammar. It must, however, be mentioned in justice to Kangaji, that he was practically forced to resort to such methods because he had made up his mind to defend the teaching of the Vendidad against the attacks of Dr. John Wilson and other Christian missionaries and therefore he had to produce a translation which would not shock the orthodox feelings of the Zoroastrians of his day.<sup>41</sup>

The time has now arrived, however, to face the truth squarely and to admit that there is much that is undesirable in the Avesta and Pahlavi writings which had hitherto passed as "sacred revelations". Many passages represent later degraded beliefs or ancient forms of magic and superstition, which had been actually denounced by the Prophet but which had crept in again during the period of decay. A careful investigation of the history and origin of these beliefs and of the circumstances in which they were introduced within the body of Zoroastrian dogma should be undertaken, for thus alone could we hope to get a truer perspective of Zoroastrian culture.

Except Kangaji no other scholar (certainly no western scholar) has tried to gloss over this passage from the Vendidad. Spiegel translates x' ašva-daθa here as "relatives" (Verwandten).<sup>42</sup> Harlez is more explicit, for he translates: "excepté de deux genres de personnes, ceux et celles qui ont épousés des parents du premier degré". He also adds a very clear footnote:<sup>43</sup> "Ce genre d'inceste, recommandé par la loi religieuse de l'Iran faisait obtenir un mérite supérieur à ceux qui l'avaient commis; de là, la singulière faveur dont ils sont ici les objets".

40. Op. cit., part II, p. 70.

41. At the end of his translation (part I, pp. 351-363) he replies at length to the various attacks made by the missionaries on the Parsi religion, particularly on the Vendidad.

42. Spiegel, Avesta die heiligen Schriften der Parsen (1859), I, p. 143; in Bleek's English rendering (1864) it is on p. 70.

43. Harlez, Avesta, p. 91, and fn. 4.

Bartholomae's rendering is also quite explicit, he renders x<sup>v</sup> āitva-datha as "in Sippenhe lebender (Mann)" (a man living in consanguinous union)<sup>44</sup>

The translation should therefore be:

Thereupon<sup>1</sup> said<sup>2</sup> Ahura<sup>3</sup> Mazda:<sup>4</sup>

"(The urine should be) either<sup>5</sup> of small cattle<sup>6</sup> or<sup>7</sup> of large cattle,<sup>8</sup> not<sup>9</sup> of men<sup>10</sup> nor<sup>11</sup> of women,<sup>12</sup> except<sup>13</sup> the two<sup>14</sup>, who<sup>15</sup> are<sup>16</sup> the man-who-has-married-his-next-of-kin<sup>17</sup> and<sup>18</sup> the woman-who-has-married-her-next-of-kin:<sup>19</sup> let them<sup>21</sup> discharge<sup>22</sup> urine,<sup>23</sup> in which<sup>24</sup> these<sup>25</sup> corpse<sup>26</sup>-bearers<sup>27</sup> shall-wash-clean<sup>28</sup> (their) hair<sup>29</sup> and<sup>30</sup> (their) bodies,<sup>31</sup> (ca<sup>32</sup> and ca<sup>33</sup> have been left out in the translation.)

Annotations:

paragət—This is the word which had "puzzled" Kangaji. It is the acc. sg. neu. of parəonk or parək and it has been used here adverbially;<sup>45</sup> cf. Skt. पराक् (पराक्), which is itself derivable from परा and अक् (अक्). The word literally means "going beyond" or "getting away from", hence the meaning is here "being outside (a general rule)", i. e. "excepting". The meaning suggested by Kangaji might be fitted in but certainly not his construction.

maišma maīzayāūta—The two words are cognate, the first being the acc. plu. and meaning "urine".<sup>46</sup> The second word is the causal form of the root maēr which is cognate with Skt. मृहते, Grk. miasma (soiled) and Homeric mī inō (to sully, to make dirty).<sup>47</sup> The word is used in the Avesta for "urine" used as a means of ritual purification. The word is often defined specifically as gao-maīsa or "bull's urine".

It may be added here that Hübschmann definitely thinks that the words paragət....x<sup>v</sup> āitva-dathis-ca are a later interpolation.<sup>48</sup> I fully agree with him and think that this interpolation was made by one of the priests of the degraded form of Zoroastrianism which prevailed in the last days of the Sasanians and continued for two or three centuries after the Arab conquest.

44. In Wolff's rendering Avesta, die heiligen Bücher der Parser (1924), based on Barth's Wb., this passage occurs at p. 366.

45. Barth., Wb. 860.

46. Ibid. 1180. The word is always used in the plural.

47. E. Boisacq, Dictionnaire étymologique de la langue grecque.

48. For the ritual use of urine see Schrader, Reallexicon, 1021.

49. Op. cit., p. 309.

THE SHEET ANCHOR OF INDIAN HISTORY

BY

D. S. TRIVEDA

It was Sir William Jones<sup>1</sup>, the founder of the Royal Asiatic Society, who in 1795 supplied the so-called sheet-anchor of Indian Chronology. He was struck with the resemblance between the name of Candragupta and that of Sandracottus of the Greeks. He assumed the date of Candragupta to be the same as that of Seleucus and thus reduced those of preceding events to a form more consistent with the European notions of history and chronology. Professor H. H. Wilson puts forth the following arguments<sup>2</sup> to support 'fully and fairly' the above supposition. They are: the resemblance among the names of Candragupta, of Xandrames by which Diodorus calls Sandracottus, and of Candramas by which he is sometimes designated by Indian authors; his low birth, and his usurpation, the situation of his kingdom as described by Megasthenes; the name of his people Frasil with the Greeks, corresponding to Prācyas, the term applied by Hindu geographers to the tract in which Magadha is situated; and his capital, which the Greeks call Palibothra, and the Hindus call Pataliputra.

Jones gave no argument for his identification. It was just and proper that he should have only pointed it out, as he was not then acquainted with any other Candragupta but Candragupta Maurya of Viśakhadatta's Mudrārāksasa. Professor Wilson entered the controversy and tried to give weight to Jones's conjecture but did not go deep into the matter. Mount Stuart Elphinstone declared<sup>3</sup> that the effect of the inconsistency (regarding Candragupta's date) would not be sufficient to prevent our retaining a strong conviction of the identity of Candragupta and Sandracottus even if no further proof had been obtained.

It was Professor Max Müller who took up the subject<sup>4</sup> seriously and considered at length the problem of Indian chronology. In spite of his vast learning and sincerity of purpose he could not es-

1. Asiatic Researches, IV. p. xxxii; p. 11.

2. Hindu Theatre, III. 3.

3. History of India, London, 1911, p. 152.

4. A History of Ancient Sanskrit Literature by F. Max Müller, (Fünfling Press Edition), pp. 134-154.

cape his natural bias and temperamental predilection towards Greek veracity and authority and the consequent poor opinion of the Hindu, Buddhist, and Jaina historians and chroniclers of India. To him it seemed useless to find out which of the chronological systems (of the northern Buddhists, of the southern Buddhists, and the system of the Purāṇas) is the most plausible; and it would make confusion worse confounded if we attempted a combination of the three. 'According to Chinese chronology Aśoka would have lived 850 or 750 years before Christ, and according to Ceylonese chronology, 315 years B.C. Either of these dates is impossible because it does not agree with the chronology of Greece, and hence both the Chinese and Ceylonese dates must be given up as equally valueless for historical calculations. There is but one means through which the history of India can be connected with that of Greece, and its chronology can be reduced to its proper limits. Although we look in vain in the literature of the Brāhmanas or Buddhists for any allusion to Alexander's conquest, and although it is impossible to identify any of the historical events, related by Alexander's companions, with historical traditions of India, one name has fortunately been preserved by classical writers who describe the events immediately following Alexander's conquest, to form a connecting link between the history of East and West. This is the name of Sandracottus or Sandrocypsus, the Sanskrit Candragupta.'

According to Prof. Max Müller the identification admits of no reasonable doubt. If it is objected that the Greeks called the king of the powerful empire beyond the Indus, Xandrames, or Aggramen, the learned professor would suggest that Aggramen is a mere misspelling for Xandrames. He maintained at first that the two names Xandrames (= Candramas, a synonym of the moon) and Sandracottus (= Candragupta, the protected of the moon) were intended for one and the same king. But later on he admitted that Xandrames was undoubtedly intended as different from Candragupta and Xandrames must have been a king of the Prasii before Sandracottus, and during the time of Alexander's wars. At the time of Alexander's invasion Sandracottus was very young, and being obliged to fly before Alexander, whom he had offended, he collected bands of robbers, and with their help succeeded in establishing the freedom of India. Plutarch says distinctly that Sandracottus reigned soon after Xandrames, and according to Justin it was Sandracottus and not Xandrames who waged wars with the captains of Alexander and hence Xandrames must be a different king from Sandracottus. According to McCrindle<sup>5</sup>, Diodorus distorts the name of Sandracottus into Xandrames and this again is distorted by Curtius into Agrammes. The name of Candragupta is written by the Greeks as Sandroktos, Sandrakottas, Sandrakottos, Androkottos and Sandroktus. Prof. Max Müller is compelled to remark that 'every attempt to go beyond, and to bring the chronology of the Buddhists and Brāhmanas into harmony has proved a failure' and yet he concludes 'whatever changes may have to be introduced into the earlier chronology of India, nothing will ever shake the date of Candragupta (Maurya). That date is the sheet-anchor of Indian chronology.'

The identification of Candragupta Maurya with Sandracottus of Greeks seems to have been the greatest mistake ever committed in the field of Indian chronology, literature and history. This sheet-anchor of Indian chronology has been accepted by many historians of repute without examining it seriously. Texts have been amended and distorted, dates changed and traditions trampled under foot to suit this identification since A. C. 1795. Troyer in his valuable edition of the Rajatarangini, Coopiah in his Ancient History of India and T. S. Narayan Sastri in his Age of Śaṅkara tried to refute this identification and suggest that the Sandrakottus of the Greeks was really Candragupta the founder of the Gupta Dynasty. The last tried to tear off this wrong synchronism to pieces but the untimely icy hands of death separated him from us and in him India lost a scholar of an independent school of research. I would try to show that the three sets of names, viz. Xandrames, Sandracottus and Sandroktus represent different kings and Alexander invaded India in the time of Candragupta I of the Gupta Dynasty and not during the early days of the Mauryan Empire.

The Greeks are uniform in their account in applying the name Xandrames, Andrames or Agramen to the last king of the empire conquered and superseded by the founder of the new dynasty at Pataliputra, who was actually reigning there at the time of Alexander's invasion. Quintus Curtius (IX. 2) says, 'that the father of Xandrames had murdered the king, and under the pretence of acting as guardian to his sons got them into his power and put them to death; that after their extermination he begot the son who was then king, and who, more worthy of his father's consideration than his own, was odious and contemptible to his subjects.' The names have been hopelessly confused. Here Xandrames stands for Samudragupta whose father Candragupta I had murdered the king Candrasri (=Xandrames) who was the penultimate king of the Āndhra Dynasty. This king Candrasri had a very short reign of 3 years only. Candragupta I as a Senāpati acted as the guardian of the sons of Candrasri<sup>6</sup> who was murdered along with his sons. He begot a son of the queen of Candrasri and perhaps the son was named Pulomā who was odious and contemptible and was a king merely in name for 7 years only. Thereafter putting this his own child also to death, he became the king himself and founded a new dynasty of the Guptas. The name Androkottos also may point to the Āndhra Dynasty meaning Āndhragupta i. e. the protector of the Andhras—a title that might have been assumed in his early years by Candragupta I. Moreover, the Purāṇas ascribe to Candragupta I also a period of 7 years only and a similar number of years is ascribed to Pulomā (Kalyāṇavarman of the Kaumudi-Mahotsava) the last of the Āndhras.<sup>6a</sup> According to K. P. Jayaswal, Candragupta I, having his caste against him and being somewhat of a usurper, was disliked by the Magadhans of his day, particularly as he failed to adapt himself to the traditional Hindu way of government. He showed a hostile, repressive attitude to the people of Magadha. The Kaumudi-Mahotsava records that Candā-Sena (Candragupta) had put leading citizens into prison. Candragupta I had thus several elements arrayed against him. A cry was raised that he was not a kṣatriya, he had killed his aged adoptive father, he had called in the aid of the hereditary enemies of Magadha, the Licchavis, he had married a lady who was neither a Magadhan nor a Brahmanical Hindu. (To this we may add that he had defied the imperial authority of Kalyāṇavarman-Puloman of the Āndhra dynasty). Alberuni, therefore, recorded a true and historical tradition when he said that the king associated with the Gupta era was cruel and wicked.

5. Translation of the Fragments of the India of Megasthenes, collected by Dr. E. A. Schwanbeck: Bonn, 1846, edited by J. W. McCrindle, 1877, p. 45 n. and further references in the same book.

Prof. Max Müller does not differentiate between the two words Sandrokokottus and Sandrokuptus. It seems plausible that the word Sandrokuptus refers to a distinct king altogether and according to

6. Magadha Rājason ki Nayi Vamsāvali, Sahitya, Patna, Vol. III, part II, pp. 37-52.

6a. History of India (150 A. D. to 350 A. D.), p. 117.

74 [Annals, B. O. R. I.]

McCrindle this is the best form. This Sandrokuptus (Justin XV. 4) seized the throne of India after the prefects of Alexander had been murdered. Seleucus crossed the Indus and waged war on Sandrokuptus, king of the Indians who dwelt about it, until he made friends and entered into relations of marriage with him. It was not long after that Sandrokuptus presented Seleucus with five hundred elephants, and with six hundred thousand men attacked and subdued all India. He was a distinguished general and a brave soldier. The Hindu accounts represent Candragupta Maurya as all but overwhelmed by foreign invasion, and indebted for his preservation to the art of his minister more than to the forces of his kingdom. Samudragupta was made of a different mettle. According to Megasthenes's account he overran the whole of India and his dominion extended from the mouths of the Ganges to the regions beyond the Indus as far as the Parapanisos range. In fact the king surpassed Heracles in courage and the greatness of his achievements. No such deeds are ascribed to Candragupta Maurya who was a mere puppet in the hands of Cāpakya, who, by his Machiavellian policy, destroyed the Nanda dynasty and placed Candragupta on the throne. The Buddhist accounts<sup>7</sup> also are agreed that he owed his sovereignty entirely to Cāpakya and was not 'called to royalty by the power of the gods and by prodigies' as stated by Justin.

Serious Discrepancies.

The Great Indian War<sup>8</sup> was fought in B. C. 3137. Jarāsandha, the Great Emperor of Magadha, was killed at the hands of the Pāṇḍavas, and thereafter his son Sahadeva became an ally of the Pāṇḍavas. He was killed in the Bhārata battle and his son Mārjari came to the throne of Magadha. He belonged to the Brāhadratha dynasty. Since then 32, 5, 12 and 9 kings of the Brāhadratha, 7. Cf. The Mahāvastu, as edited by Dr. E. P. Jayasval in his 'An Imperial History of India', Lahore, 1934.

बाणाक्ष इति विद्वान् क्रोधसिद्धस्तु मानवः ।
ममान्तर्धो नाम वै क्रोधः सिद्धस्तस्य च बुद्धिः ॥ 454
तेन क्रोधाभिभूतेन मानिने जीविताद्भुता ।
हृत्वा तु वायवं तीव्रं श्रीणि जन्मनि वै तदा ॥ 455
वर्षिकालामिजीवीसी मदिता द्विजकुलितः ।
तेन मन्त्रप्रभावेन स देहमाहुर्यं मजेत् ॥ 456
आहुर्यं तनुमाचष्ट वर्षिकालं स जीवदेत् ।

8 (a) Journal of Indian History, Madras, XVI, pp. 239-48.

(b) P. V. Kane Volume, 1941, pp. 515-25.

Pradyota, Śiśunāga, and Nanda dynasties ruled for 1005, 138, 362 and 100 years respectively.<sup>9</sup> Thus Candragupta Maurya came to the throne in B. C. 1532. The Macedonian Empire itself did not exist at such an early date. Hence it can in no way be the date of the invasion of Alexander who flourished some 1200 years later. The word Maurya occurs nowhere in the accounts of the Greeks. The Mudrārākṣasa mentions neither the Yavana king nor his marriage alliance with the daughter of Seleucus Nicator.

Low Birth.

Justin remarks 'Candragupta was born of humble life.' One may be humble in two ways, either by birth or by position. Candragupta Maurya<sup>10</sup> was neither. He belonged to the warrior tribe of the Mauryas who are mentioned in the Durgāsaptasatī of Mārkaṇḍeya Purāṇa. The Buddhists also mention the Mauryas of Pippalivans who shared the remains of Buddha along with the other Kṣatriya tribes of India. The Guptas would seem to belong to a low class for none but a low-born person would feel himself proud of his mother's ancestry<sup>11</sup>. Candragupta I was formerly a Sensapati of the Āṇḍhars and in all probability he belonged to a low class by birth<sup>12</sup>. Even Samudragupta always takes pride in being a 'grandson of the Licchavis' (Licchavidāuhitṛa).

No Mention of Buddhism

'It is indeed a remarkable circumstance that the religion of Buddha should never have been expressly noticed by the Greek authors, though it had existed for two centuries before Alexander.' Elphinstone's explanation<sup>13</sup> that the appearance and manners of Buddhist followers were not so peculiar as to enable a foreigner to distinguish them from the mass of the people, does not seem to be convincing, for Megasthenes, with assiduous observation and inquiry, collected the materials from which he composed his famous work

9. See my forthcoming book 'The pre-Mauryan History of Bihar.'

10. See my article 'Candragupta Maurya ki Jāti, Kuśavāhā Kṣatriya Mitra, Kasī, 1993, v. 2.

11. Cf. उक्तमा आत्मना स्वानाः पितुः कृपाणां मर्यादाः ।

मातुलेनाधनाः स्वानाः स्वहरेणाधमाधमाः ॥

12. Dr. K. P. Jayswal in his 'An Imperial History of India', pp.155-6 says : "We have thus evidence from different sources converging at one point, i.e. that the Guptas were Kṣrākṣara Jāṭis—originally from the Punjab. Kakkar Jāṭis in my opinion are the modern representatives of the original community of the Guptas."

13. Elphinstone's History of India, p. 227.

on India, called the Indica, the merits of which were so conspicuous that it became of paramount authority and the main source whence subsequent writers derived their accounts of India. Megasthenes makes a division of the philosophers in two classes, saying that they are of two kinds, one of which he calls the Brachmanes and the other the Sramanes. The Brachmanes are best esteemed, for they are more consistent in their opinions. Of the Sarmanes he tells us that 'those who are held in most honour are called Hylobioi. They live in the woods, where they subsist on leaves of trees and wild fruits, and wear garments made from the bark of trees. They abstain from sexual intercourse and from wine. They communicate with the kings, who consult them by messengers regarding the causes of things, and who through them worship and supplicate the deity.' The Hylobioi corresponds with the Sanskrit Vānaprastha (proceeded to the woods). Next in honour to the Hylobioi are the physicians,<sup>14</sup> since they are engaged in the study of the nature of man. According to Elphinstone the habit of the physicians seems to correspond with those of the Brāhmaṇas of the fourth stage (i.e. Samnyāsin). It is a capital question who the Sramanes were, some considering them to be Buddhist, and others denying them to be such. Weighty arguments are adduced on both sides, and Lassen contends that the description of the Sramana agrees better with the Brāhmaṇa ascetics. The Sramanas are called Germanes by Strabo and Samanaeans by Porphyrius. They may have belonged to the sect of Jina or to another as Colebrookethinks.

The Bouitta.

We read: 'Among the Indians are those philosophers who follow the precepts of Bouitta whom they honour as a God on account of his extraordinary sanctity.' The passage admits of a different rendering: 'They (the Hylobioi) are those among the Indians who follow the precepts of Bouitta.' Some think that here the followers of Buddha are clearly distinguished from the Brāhmaṇas and Śramaṇas. But it is clear that the word Bouitta does not and cannot refer to Buddha at all but to the Bhautikas—the worshippers of nature (Bhūtas) or the followers of Sāṃkhya who recognise the elements only.

It seems Buddhism was already extinct in India long before Alexander's invasion of India. Brahmanism with all its antecedents

---

14. Is the Greek word used equivalent to the word Yogi (Yoga=combination of medicines) ?

had come into vogue and had been established on a firm footing by Śaṅkarācārya the greatest propagator of Vedānta. Megasthenes rightly says that the Indians do not raise monuments to the dead, but consider the virtue which men have displayed in life and songs in which their praises are celebrated, sufficient to preserve their memory after death. The Buddhists were very fond of caityas and still it is stated that the Indians did not raise monuments to the dead. Buddha attained Nirvāṇa<sup>15</sup> in B. C. 1790 and with the advent of Kumāṛila and Śaṅkara in the sixth century B.C., the Buddhists could not hold their own against Brahmanism and Colebrooke is right when he says, "It may therefore be confidently inferred that the followers of the Vedas flourished in India when it was visited by the Greeks under Alexander and continued to flourish in the time of Megasthenes who described them in the fourth century before Christ."

No Synchronism.

It is impossible to seek an identification of Amītrochades (ami tracchid) with Bimbisāra to whom no heroic deeds are attributed by any of the authorities. It would be a more befitting title for Samudragupta who overran the whole of India and crushed his enemies. The Greek writers do not mention Cānakya who was such a prominent figure in the court of Candragupta Maurya. Professor K. Cattopādhyāya's explanation<sup>16</sup> that he soon retired to the forest may be a plausible conjecture, but requires definite proofs in absence of which it falls flat. Cānakya in his Arthaśāstra<sup>17</sup> does not speak of the Śramāṇas.

Megasthenes says: "For when by his insolent behaviour, he had offended Nandrus and was ordered by that king to be put to death, he sought safety by a speedy flight." Here the Editor adds in the footnote, "Nandrus has been substituted for the Common reading Alexandrum." It shows how the historians have been working under preconception and have even tried to modify or alter the readings to suit this identification. Alexander-Sandracottus synchronism has thus unfortunately become in the course of the innumeral decades the only starting point for the historians to calculate backward and forward, although there is hardly any justification to accept this wrong synchronism.

15. A New Date of Lord Buddha, B. C. 1790 (in Press).

16. The Date of Kālidāsa, Indian Press, 1926.

17. The Arthaśāstra according to Drs. A. B. Keith and Beni Prasad is a very late production probably of the fourth century A. C. In that case would not the non-mention of Śramāṇas be natural?

No Allusion.

There is absolutely no allusion or veiled reference to any foreign invasion in any Indian account at the fall of the Nanda dynasty and the foundation of the Mauryan dynasty. But subsequent to the downfall of the Andhras<sup>18</sup> ( B. C. 327 ) according to the Purāṇas there was great anarchy throughout the country and the whole country was divided into minor principalities. The Purāṇas do refer to the invasion of the Mlecchas at the close of the Āndhra dynasty<sup>19</sup>. These invaders would seem to be none other than the Persians under Darius and the Greeks under Alexander.

According to Megasthenes, the 'Sati' system was widely prevalent in India when he visited it whereas the Arthashastra is silent on the point. The Greek ambassador speaks of seven castes, whereas Kauṭilya mentions only four. Of course, historians have always tried to reconcile the statements of these two narrators who were separated from one another by a thousand years by advancing suggestions and arguments which carry no conviction.

The Andhras.

Although it may look strange, yet the Āndhras are mentioned by the Greek writer as a powerful race. He says, " Next come the Andarae a still more powerful race, which possesses numerous villages and thirty towns defended by walls and towers, and which supplied its kings with an army of 1,00,000 infantry, 2000 cavalry<sup>20</sup> and 1,000 elephants. " ' The Āndhras of Dekhan, before the time of Megasthenes had spread their sway towards the north as far as the upper course of the Narmadā and the lower districts of the Gangetic basin. ' In fact, the Āndhras had only recently been dislodged from the throne of Magadha and were still very powerful. Neither the Indian accounts nor the Greek ones ever hint at any struggle between the Āndhras and Candragupta Maurya. But the Allahabad Pillar Inscription and the Raghuvarṇā of Kālidāsa do speak of the invasion of Kālingadeśa ( which includes a great part of the Āndhradeśa ) by the Magadha Emperor.

Evidence of the Purāṇas.

According to the Paurāṇika authority the Āndhra dynasty

18. Journal of Indian History, XIX, p. 14.

19. Cf. आन्ध्रगणमिव कले तु पश्वो म्लेच्छवंशजाः ।

सिन्धुमतीत्यायास्वन्ति भारतबीजिपुत्रस्य ॥

20. If Śātavāhanas are meant, they are said, according to the Kathāsarit-sāgara, to have had no cavalry.

came to end<sup>21</sup> in B. C. 327 and was succeeded by the Gupta dynasty of which Candragupta I was the first king. Candragupta, I the Sandracottus of the Greeks, ruled for 7 years only and was succeeded by Samudragupta who had a long reign of 51 years. The Allahabad Pillar inscription hints<sup>22</sup> that he was welcomed by the courtiers with deep sighs for he came to the throne after setting aside the claims of the other sons of Candragupta I. Megasthenes says that the king, in addition to his family name, must adopt the surname of Palibothra as Sandracottus, for instance, did. We know that none of the kings of the Maurya dynasty had any ending added to their names. But about the kings of the Gupta dynasty it is well known that the names of all the kings ended in Gupta and besides that all the kings of the dynasty held the title of āditya as a mark of their prowess. The Allahabad Pillar inscription refers to the present of girls<sup>23</sup> by many kings to Samudragupta.

Some modern historians place Candragupta Maurya's accession in B. C. 326 and others bring it down to B. C. 312. This faulty calculation would seem to be due to the acceptance of this wrong synchronism and it may be easily questioned if Alexander invaded India just before the foundation of the Mauryan Empire, and learned Indologists must find out some other Candragupta in whose reign Alexander might have invaded India. Consequently it may be said that Megasthenes did not visit the court of Candragupta Maurya.

I would suggest that Alexander invaded India in the time of Candragupta I and it was Samudragupta who defeated Seleucus Nicator who offered the hand of his beautiful daughter as a token of submission and the so-called Piyadasi inscriptions<sup>24</sup> may be ascribed to Candragupta II of the Gupta dynasty.

21. See the references under foot-notes 6 and 18.

22. Cf. अयोर् द्विभुवश्च मावपिभुवैस्त्वर्जितै रोगमिः

सभ्यैश्चक्षुसितेऽ तुल्यकुलजस्तानानोद्वेष्टितः ।

स्नेहव्याकुलितेन बाध्यश्रुणा तस्मैक्षिणा चक्षुषा

यः निशमिहितो विरीक्ष्य निखिलां राशेर्बभूवसिति ॥ ४

23. Cf. आत्मनिवेदन-कन्योपासनदान.

24. See my article : The Piyadasi Inscriptions—Do they belong to Candragupta II, Daily Herald, Lahore, 16 Feb. 1936.

HARIṢEṆA'S DHARMAPARIKṢĀ IN APABHRAMSA

BY

A. N. UPADHYE

[(1) Various Dharma-parikṣās (DP). (2) DP of Amitagati. (3) DP of Vṛttavilāsa. (4) DP of Padmasāgara. (5) Apabhraṃśa DP of Hariṣeṇa: (a) Its Mss. (b) Its extent and aim. (c) Information about Hariṣeṇa, his date and the composition of DP. (d) Predecessors of Hariṣeṇa. (e) Works of Hariṣeṇa and Amitagati compared with regard to their plot, general contents, descriptions, common expressions etc. (f) Prakritisms in Amitagati's DP and the possibility of its being indebted to a Prakrit original. (g) Whether Amitagati is directly indebted to Hariṣeṇa's DP. (h) Crucial difference in the two texts. (i) Sanskrit quotations in Hariṣeṇa's DP. (j) Dhūrtakhyāna and DP.]

1. Referring to consolidated lists of Mss., we come across a large number of Jaina texts bearing the title Dharmaparikṣā<sup>8</sup> (DP). We may enumerate especially those that can be distinguished with some specific details. (1) DP, in Apabhraṃśa, by Hariṣeṇa who composed it in Saṃvat 1044 (-56=A. D. 988). (2) DP, in Sanskrit, by Amitagati, the pupil of Mādhavasena; it was completed in Saṃvat 1070 (-56=A. D. 1014). (3) DP, in Kannada, by Vṛttavilāsa who is assigned to circa A. D. 1160. (4) DP, in Sanskrit, by Saubhāgyasāgara of Saṃvat 1571 (-56=A. D. 1515). (5) DP, in Sanskrit, by Padmasāgara, the pupil of Dharmasāgaragaṇi of the Tapāgaccha; it was composed in Saṃvat 1645 (-56=A. D. 1589). (6) DP, in Sanskrit, by Mānavijayagaṇi, the pupil of Jayavijaya; it was composed by him in the middle of the 18th century of the Vikrama era for his pupil Devavijaya. (7) DP with Vṛtti, in Sanskrit, by Yaśovijaya, the pupil of Nayavijaya of the Tapāgaccha; he was born in Saṃvat 1680 and passed away at the age of 53 years.<sup>1</sup> (8) DP by Jinamaṇḍana, the pupil of Soma-sundara of the Tapāgaccha. (9) DP by Paśvavīrti. (10) DP, in Sanskrit, composed by Rāmacandra at the request of Devacandra, the pupil of Padmanandī, a descendant of Pūjyapāda. Though the Mss. are available, and some of them are lately printed, most of them are names to us, as long as their contents are not exhaustively and critically studied in comparison with other works.

---

1. As the Springer Research Scholar, University of Bombay, when I was inspecting some Prakrit Mss. in the Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute, Poona, I came across this Apabhraṃśa Dharmaparikṣā of Hariṣeṇa. I showed this work to Pt. Premi and Prof. Hiralal; and they have expressed their wish that this text should be published at an early date.

2. The most exhaustive and upto date thesaurus in this respect is the Jīva-ratnakōśa of Prof. H. D. Velankar. It is in the Press being published by the B. O. R. I., Poona. Thanks to the single-handed labours of Prof. Velankar that this Kōśa, when published, would certainly prove a magnificent source-book of superlative importance. It is very kind of the Author and the Publisher that I could use the advance-formes of this Kōśa on which this list of Dharmaparikṣās is mainly based.

2. It is Amitagati's DP that has been most exhaustively studied.<sup>2</sup> Mironow has given a detailed analysis of the contents, besides adding critical remarks on the language and metres of the work. The plot of the story is not in any way complicated. Manovega, who is a confirmed Jaina, wants to convert his friend Pavanavega whom he takes to Pāṭaliputra to the assembly of Brāhmaṇas. He gets himself assured that the Brahman disputants do not belong to any of the ten classes of foolish people, about whom ten stories are narrated, the last story including the sub-stories of four rogues that tell marvellous tales full of lies. In different sessions with the Brahman disputants, Manovega tells incredible stories and absurd incidents about himself; and when they feel astonished and are not ready to believe him, he tries to justify his details by quoting similar stories from the Mahābhārata, the Rāmāyaṇa and other Purāṇas. Being present at all these sessions, Pavanavega is convinced about the unnatural and inconsistent character of the Purāṇic stories, and he is duly converted to the faith of Manovega. The contents of the work clearly show three divisions distributed all over the text. Whenever there is an occasion, Amitagati adds lengthy didactic discourses profusely using Jaina dogmas and terminology. Secondly, there are popular stories of amusing motives which are not only instructive but also highly humorous; and they are intelligently woven into the body of the work. And lastly, a great bulk of the work is devoted to different stories

3. See also Jaina Sūtriyāna Saṃkṣipta Itihāsa by Mr. M. D. Desai, Bombay 1933.

4. N. Mironow: Die Dharmaparikṣā des Amitagati, Leipzig 1903; also Winternitz: A History of Indian Literature, Vol. II, pp. 561 ff. The Sanskrit text of this DP has been published by Pannalal Bakaliwal with his Hindi Translation, Bombay 1901. Another edition giving the Marāṭhī translation of Pt. Bahubali Sharma and the Sanskrit text in the Appendix has appeared lately, Sangli 1931. It is claimed that the translation is mainly based on the Kannaḍa text of Vṛttavilāsa and Amitagati's work is casually used. On comparison I find that the claim is not justified. The translation does not show any trace of Vṛttavilāsa's text. It closely follows the Hindi rendering of Bakaliwal, and the text also is reprinted from the earlier edition.

from Purāṇas that are to be attacked as unworthy of any belief; and at times the Jaina recensions of the popular stories are also added just to demonstrate how reasonable they are.

As seen from his other works and from the didactic stratum of his DP, it is evident that Amitagati can write chaste Sanskrit; but in the DP, especially in the stratum of popular anecdotes, we come across a large proportion of Prakritisms. This has led to the surmise that he might have been indebted to some Prakrit work. The method of exposing the inconsistency of Purāṇic tales was already handled by Haribhadra in his Dhārtākhyāna.<sup>5</sup> These popular anecdotes, stripped of their religious back-ground, are genuine pieces of Indian folklore; and they show an ingenious insight into human psychology.

3. The DP of Vṛttavilāsa (circa A. D. 1160) is a Campū work in Kannada.<sup>6</sup> It is divided in ten chapters. The author says that his work is based on an earlier Sanskrit composition; and on comparison we find that he follows Amitagati. The plot is the same, though there are differences in details. The Kannada DP is still in Mss.; but from the selections published in the Prākkāṇyamālika, I find that Vṛttavilāsa writes graceful Kannada both in prose and verse.

4. The DP of Padmasāgara, composed in Samvat 1645, has been subjected to a searching study by Pt. Jugalkishore<sup>7</sup> who arrives at the following conclusions: Padmasāgara has taken over bodily 1260 verses from Amitagati's DP; and other verses are adapted with minor changes here and there. He has added a few verses of his composition. He does not admit the division of cantos. All the references, direct or indirect, to Amitagati are carefully omitted; and nowhere does the author refer to Amitagati. His plagiarism has not been thorough from the sectarian point of view, because some details, not quite consistent with Śvetāmbara dogmas, have remained in this work. Thus Padmasāgara

5. See the concluding paragraphs of this Paper.

6. R. Narasimhaacharya: Kannāḍaka Kavīcarita, Bangalore 1904, p. 169. Exhaustive selections from this Kannada DP have been published many years back in a Poetical Anthology, Prākkāṇyamālika (pp. 405-532). The face page etc. being torn in the copy of my uncle, I am unable to give the place and year of publication. From the typography it appears to have been printed at Mangalore. I have with me a palm-leaf Ms. of this text and it is written in Śaka 1342 (+ 78 = A. D. 1420). It is not in a good condition: still I shall be glad to lend this Ms., if any Kannada scholar undertakes a critical edition of this work.

7. Jaina Hitai: XIII. 7, pp. 314-324.

not only entirely follows Amitagati, but also bodily copies from his DP.

5. Leaving the remaining Dharmaparikṣā texts whose Mss. or editions have not been accessible to me as yet, I propose to discuss in this paper about Harīṣeṇa's DP the special features of which are that it is in the Apabhraṃśa language and that it is composed twenty-six years earlier than Amitagati's DP in Sanskrit. In fact, among the DP texts, so far discovered, it is the earliest; and besides it mentions a still earlier DP in Prākṛit by Jayarāma which has not come to light as yet.

(a) There are two Mss. of Harīṣeṇa's DP (Nos. 617 of 1875-76 and 1009 of 1887-91) in the Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute, Poona. Though the date is not given, No. 1009 is comparatively modern as indicated by the paper and hand-writing. It is well-preserved, but it has unwritten space on folios 56a, 57, 69 and 69a, with gaps in the text. No. 617 is older in appearance. The edges are brittle, the paper also shows signs of earlier age, and now and then paṇimātrās are used in its writing. It bears a date, Samvat 1595, in an incomplete remark written in a different hand which indicates that the Ms. is older than A. D. 1538. Page No. 137 is partly broken and folio No. 4 is missing. Both the Mss. together supply the complete text; and from a close comparison of the first Samdhi, I find that they are sufficiently independent and not the copies of each other.

(b) The work is divided into eleven Samdhis, and each Samdhi has 17 to 27 Kaṭavakas. The actual number of Kaṭavakas stands thus in different cantos: I = 20, II = 24, III = 22, IV = 24, V = 20, VI = 19, VII = 18, VIII = 22, IX = 25, X = 17 and XI = 27. The total number of Kaṭavakas is 238, and they are composed in different Apabhraṃśa metres some of which are specifically mentioned in the body of the text. The total Granthas, as given in the Ms., come to 2070. The colophons state that Budha<sup>8</sup> Harīṣeṇa is the author of this DP which propounds Caturvarga, viz., Dharma, Artha, Kāma and Mokṣa. The colophon, for instance, at the close of the work, runs thus:

इयं धम्मपरिक्खणं नजवग्गाहिद्वियाए
बुद्ध-हरिसेण-कयाए एयारस्सो संबि सम्मत्तो ।

(c) Harīṣeṇa like some other Apabhraṃśa poets gives good many details about himself in the opening and the concluding

8. Budha appears to be an honorific designation something like our present-day Paṇḍita.

Kadavakas. In the territory of Mevāḍa there was one Hari, expert in various arts, in the Dhakkada-kula of Siri-ujāūra (v. l. Siri-ojapura).<sup>9</sup> He had a pious son Govaddhana (Sk. Govardhana) by name. Guṇavati was his wife, and she was devoted to the feet of Jina. They had a son Hariseṇa who became famous as a learned poet. He left Cittaūdu (Sk. Citrakūṭa) and came to Acalapura on some business ( niya-kajjā ). There he studied metrics and rhetorics, and narrated or composed this DP when 1044 years of the Vikrama era had elapsed (i. e. A. D. 988). The relevant lines are quoted below:

Saṁdhi XI, Kāḍa. 26:

इह मेवाड-देसि जण-संकुलि	सिरिउजउर-विमाय-घकड-कुलि ।
पाव-करिद-हुंम-दारण-हरि	जाउ कलाहि कुतलु नामें हरि ।
तासु पुत्त पर-गारि-सदोयह	गुण-गण-गिहि कुल-गयण-दिवायर ।
गोवहुण नामें उणणउ	जो सम्मत्त-रवण-संपुणउ ।
तहो गोवहुणसु भिय गुणघइ	जा जिणवर-पय गिस वि पणवइ <sup>10</sup> ।
ताए जणित हरिसेण-नाम सुउ	जो संजाउ विबुह-कइ-विस्सुउ ।
सिरि-चित्तउडु चडवि अचलउरहो <sup>11</sup>	गउ भिय-कज्जे जिण-हर-पउरहो ।
तहि छंदालंकार पसाहिय	धम्मपरिस्स एह ते साहिय ।
जे मज्झिम-मणुय आयण्णहि	ते निच्छत्त-भाउ अवगण्णहि ।
ते सम्मत्त जेण मलु खिज्जइ	केवलणाणु ताण उप्पज्जइ ।
पत्ता—तहो पुणु केवल-णाणहो गेय-पमाणहो	जोव-एएतहि सुहउउ ।
बाहा-सहिउ अणंतउ अइसयंतउ <sup>12</sup>	नोक्ख-सुक्ख-फलु पयडियउ ।

Saṁdhi XI, Kāḍa. 27:

विष्णुम-गिव-परिवत्ति-कालए <sup>13</sup>	वधगए वरिस-सहस-चउतालए ।
इउ उणणु भविय-जण-सुहयर	दंस-रदिय-धम्मसय-सायर ।

The occasion of the composition is explained thus by Budha Hariseṇa. Once it struck him that the human intelligence is wasted, if an attractive poem is not composed. It is quite likely that a man of mediocre intelligence, like a coward on the battle-field, might be ridiculed. But still, knowing full well his weakness in metrics and rhetorics, he wrote this work, without any hesitation as to how it would be entertaining, on account of his attachment for Jainism and through the favour of Siddhasena.

9. Is it that Siri is a part of the name of that town? It is to be noted that Dhanapāla, the author of the Bhavisaṁkṣa-Kāḍa in Apabhraṁśa also belonged to Dhakkada family.

10. v. l. जा जिणवरद्विपयविप १०४४.

11. v. l. चरवि अमलउरहो.

12. v. l. अहसपदत.

13. v. l. परिपत्तिपकालर.

(d) Amongst his predecessors Harisena mentions Caturmukha, Svayambhū and Puṣpadanta. The mouth of Caturmukha was the very home of the goddess of learning; Svayambhū was a great divinity as it were, knowing both Loka and Aloka; and Puṣpadanta was a super-man whom the goddess of learning never abandoned. As compared with them, Harisena says that he is a man of meagre intelligence. Puṣpadanta completed his Mahapurāṇa in A. D. 965; and Caturmukha and Svayambhū are also referred to by him. Caturmukha flourished earlier than Svayambhū.

The Dharmaparikṣā was formerly composed by Jayarāma in Gāthā metre, and the same Harisena is narrating in Paddhādīyā metre here.

The above details are found in the opening Kaḍavaka which runs thus :

Saridhī I, Kaḍa. 1 :

सिद्धि-पुरंधिहि कंतु सदै तणु-मण-वयणे ।
भक्तिण्णि णणवेवि चित्तिउ बुह-हरिसणे ॥

मणुय-जम्मि बुद्धिए कि किल्लइ	सकहए जाइ कल्लु ण रदजइ ।
ते करंत अबियाणिय आरित्त	हासु जइहि भइ रणि गव-पोरिस ।
अउसइ कव-विरयणि संवभु वि	पुप्फयंतु अण्णाणु णिसुंभिवि ।
तिण्णि वि जोग्ग जेण तं सौसइ	अउसइ-सुहे थिय ताव सरासइ ।
ओ सरंभु सो देउ पहाणउ	अह कह लोवा-लोव-वियाणउ ।
पुप्फयंतु णवि माणुसु बुचइ	ओ सरासइ कयावि ण मुचइ ।
ते एवंविह हउं जइ माणउ	तह छंदाळकार-विहणउ ।
कल्लु करंतु केम णवि लज्जामि	तइ विलेस पिय-अणु किह रंजामि ।
तो वि जिण्णिद-धम्म-अणुराणं	बुह-सिरि-सिद्धसेण-सुपसाणं ।
करमि सयं जि णल्लिचि-दल-थित जइ	अणुहरेइ णियमु मुसाइल ।

धत्ता—जा जयरामं आसि विरदय गाह-पवंधि ।

साहामि धम्मपरिक्ख सा पद्धदिया-कंधि ॥

It appears that Siddhasena is the preceptor of Harisena, and he is remembered thus in the last canto also :

Saridhī XI, Kaḍa. 25 :

धत्ता—सिद्धसेण-पय वंदहि दुक्खित गिंदहि जिण हरितेण णवता ।

तहि थिय ते खग-सइयर कय-अम्मायर विविह-सुहइ पावता ॥

(e) In view of the facts that the works of both Harisena and Amitagati have the same title and that one preceded the other by 26 years, one is naturally led to compare these two texts in details. The two texts show remarkable agreement; and, so far as the sequence of events is concerned, the different cantos of Amitagati's DP can be roughly apportioned in correspondence with the various Samdhis of Hariṣeṇa's DP:<sup>14</sup> H I=A I. 17-III. 43; H II=A III. 44-VII. 18; H III=A VII. 19-X. 51; H IV=A X. 52-XII. 26; H V=A XII. 27-XIII; H VI=the details given by Hariṣeṇa about Lokasvarūpa are not found to that extent in any one place in Amitagati's DP; H VII=A XIV. 1-XV. 17; H VIII=A XV. 18 etc.; H IX=A XVI. 21 etc.; H X=for the description of Kalpavṛkṣas see XVIII in A; and H XI=A XX, a few opening verses.

In some places the exact correspondence cannot be marked out for the simple reason that the didactic and dogmatic topics are not to be found to the same extent and at the same place in both the texts. The details of Logaṭhī (Lokaṣṭhī) given by Hariṣeṇa in Samdhi VII are not included at the corresponding place by Amitagati; nor does he give all those details to that extent in his work at any one place. In the canto VIII Hariṣeṇa devotes a few Kaḍavakas to the Jaina version of Rāma-legend; but all these details are ignored by Amitagati. Similarly a special Kathā, about Rātribhojana-viramana, with some local colour, added by Hariṣeṇa in canto XI is dismissed with a few theoretical remarks by Amitagati who, however, adds more didactic discourses on other rules of conduct in that context. But for such sections here and there, it has been possible for me to mark out bunches of verses in Amitagati's text in correspondence with the Kaḍavakas of Hariṣeṇa. Amitagati's division of the text into twenty cantos is more unnatural than Hariṣeṇa's division into eleven Samdhis. So far as the events of the plot and their sequence are concerned, both the works are in close agreement. The ideas are the same, and the manner of handling them is very often identical. Amitagati has a special aptitude for didactic exhortations and pithy remarks containing moral maxims and worldly wisdom; he is more eloquent in his condemnation of sense-pleasures and worldly temptations; he grips at every opportunity to propound the particular view of life according to Jaina ethical rules meant for house-holders and monks; and even the dry dogmatic details he dresses in a fluent style. In the contexts of such topics we get more details in Amitagati's DP than in Hariṣeṇa's DP. Despite the identical plot, they differ in the extent of their didactic and dogmatic details.

The descriptions of Amitagati are of the pattern of ornate poetry of classical Sanskrit writers, while those of Hariṣeṇa are moulded under the influence of Apabhraṃśa poets like Puṣpadanta; so we do not find any significant parallel ideas and common words in the description of towns etc. The method of narrating the Madhubindu Dṛṣṭānta (H. I. 13-4 and A. II. 3 etc.) is somewhat different, though the details are identical.

14. H stands for Hariṣeṇa's DP and A for Amitagati's DP.

In a few places it is possible to detect nearly common phrases in contexts not necessarily of traditional dogmatics :

( i ) Harīṣeṇa I. 19 -

तं अवरार्हं
खमसु वराहं ।
तो हसिऊर्ण
मखेएणं ।
भणिओ मितो
तं परधुतो ।
माया-गेहिय
अणपाणे हिय ।

( ii ) Harīṣeṇa II. 5 -

इय दुष्णि वि दुग्गय-तणय-तण
णिण्हेविणु लखइ-भारमिणं ।
आइय गुरु पूर णिएवि मए
वायउ न उ जायेए वायमए ।

( iii ) Harīṣeṇa II. 11 -

णिहण जाणेविणु जारएहि
तप्पिय-आगमणासंकिएहि ।
मुक्की शव ति झाडे वि केम
परिक्क पंथि थिय बोरे जेम ।
णिय-पिय-आगमणु मुणंतिवाए
किउ पवसिय-पिय-तिय-वेसु ताए ।

( iv ) Harīṣeṇa II. 15 -

भणित तेण भो णिसुणहि गहवइ
छाया इव दुगेज्ज महिला-मइ ।

( v ) Harīṣeṇa II. 16 -

भणित ताय संसारे असारए
को वि न काहु वि दुइ गह्वारए ।
मुय-भणुएँ सहु अखु न गच्छइ
सयणु मसाणु जाम अणुगच्छइ ।

( i ) Amitagati III. 36-7 -

यत्त्वं धर्ममिव त्वक्त्वा
तत्र भद्र चिरं स्थितः ।
हमिताव्यं ममाशेषं
दुर्विनीतस्य तत्त्वया ॥
उक्तं पवनवेगन
हसित्वा शब्दवेतसा ।
को घृतो मुखने धूर्त-
वेक्ष्यते न वर्षवदेः ।

( ii ) Amitagati III. 85 -

ते जगाव खवरारुजस्ततो
भद्र भिर्धनशरीरभूरहं ।
आगतोऽस्मि तृणकाष्ठविक्रयं
कर्तुमत्र नगरे गरीयसि ॥

( iii ) Amitagati IV. 84-85 -

पलुरागममथैव विटोचैः
सा विलुण्टए सकलानि धनानि ।
मुच्यते स्म बदरी दरयुक्ती-
स्तस्करौरिव कलानि पथिस्था ॥
सा विधुच्य दयितागमकारं
कल्पितोत्तमसतीजनवेधा ।
तिष्ठति स्म भवने व्रजमाणा
वधना हि सवजा वनितानाम् ॥

( iv ) Amitagati V. 59 -

चोरीव स्वार्थतमिष्ठ
बहुज्जालेव तापिका ।
छायेव दुर्महा बोधा
सन्ध्येव क्षणरागिणी ॥

( v ) Amitagati V. 82-5 -

तं निजगाद तदीयतनूज-
स्तात विधेहि विशदसमनास्त्वम् ।
कंचन धर्ममपाकृतदोषं
यो विदधाति परत्र सुखानि

धम्माहम्मु णवर अणुलम्माड
गच्छइ जीवहु सुह-दुह-संगड ।
इय जाणेवि ताय दाणुल्लड
चित्तिज्जइ सुपत्ते अइमल्लड ।
इदु-देउ पिय-मणि झाइज्जइ
सुह-गद-गमणु जेण पाविज्जइ ।

पुत्रकलत्रपचनादिषु मध्ये
कोऽपि न याति समे परलोके ।
कर्म विहाय कृतं स्वयमेकं
कर्तुमलं मुखदुःखशतानि ॥
कोऽपि परो न निजोऽस्ति दुरन्ते
जन्मवने भ्रमतां बहुमार्गे ।
इत्थमथैव विमुच्य कुबुद्धिं
तात हितं कुरु किंचन कार्यम् ॥
मोहपात्य सुदृप्तनुजादौ
देहि धनं द्विजलाघुजनेभ्यः ।
संस्मर कंचन देवममीष्टं
येन गतिं लभसे सुखदात्रीम् ॥

(/ ) Amitagati has a thorough mastery over his expression, and his Subhāṣita-saṃdoha<sup>15</sup> is a fine specimen of ornate poetry composed in a pretty chaste style. He 'feels himself quite at home in the grammar and lexicography of Sanskrit, and the formation of different verbal forms offers him no difficulty.' Many Prakritisms have been detected in his DP; but they are comparatively few, and not in any way striking, in his Subhāṣita-saṃdoha. The Prakrit influence seen in the DP is not of a superficial nature confined to a few loan-words here and there, but has reached the use of verbal forms as can be seen from the facts that 'most frequently the verb is found in the form of Past Passive Participle, which, in later Prakrit, nearly replaces the active forms;' and 'worthy of note is the use of the Indicative for the Imperative (in dual and plural). The latter arises out of some identical terminations in Prakrit. Further, in view of the fact that 'Amitagati uses without much ado Prakritisms for which he could have easily found Sanskrit equivalents'. Mironow arrives at the conclusion that certain parts of this work are based on a Prakrit original. Some of the proper names like Chauhāra (VII. 63) and Saṃkarāṣṭa-maṭha (VIII. 10) lend support to the view that some stories must have been inherited from a Prakrit source. In one place he offers the etymology of yoṣṭ; and the expressions do indicate that they are being re-written from a Prakrit original, otherwise there is no propriety in tracing Sanskrit yoṣṭ to the root juṣ-joṣ. Those verses (VI. 16-17) run thus :

15. Edited in the Kāvya-mālā, No. 82; edited with German translation by R. Schmidt, Leipzig 1908; and published with Hindi translation by Siddhānta-pracārī-sabha, Calcutta.

16. Die Dharmaparikṣā des Amitagati, pp. 7-9.

यतो ज्ञेयमिति क्षिप्रं विश्वं योषा ततो मत्त ।
विदधाति वतः कोषं भामिनी भव्यते ततः ॥
वतश्छादयते दीपस्ततः स्त्री कथ्यते वृषैः ।
विलीयते यतश्चित्तमेतस्यां विलया ततः ॥

The above indications are sufficient to lead us to the conclusion that Amitagati is working with a Prākṛit original : the didactic sections, of course, are freely shaped by him. Not only we feel convinced but even Amitagati also was confident of his command over Sanskrit : he tells us that he finished the DP within a couple of months and his Sanskrit Ārūḍhanū in four months.<sup>17</sup> If such a Śiṅhrakavi thought of composing certain works in Sanskrit following the Prākṛit models, there is nothing surprising. Moreover Amitagati was a contemporary of Muñja and Bhoja who had given great patronage to Sanskrit learning of the age. His Ārūḍhanū is as good as a close Sanskrit rendering of Śivārya's Prākṛit Ārūḍhanū and his Pañcasāṅgraha is mainly based on the Prākṛit Pañcasāṅgraha a Ms. of which has been lately brought to light by Pt. Paramanand.<sup>18</sup> Thus there is every likelihood in Amitagati's composing his Sanskrit DP based on some earlier Prākṛit original.

(g) With the discovery of Harīṣeṇa's DP in Apabhraṃśa, which was written 26 years earlier than Amitagati's DP and with which Amitagati fully agrees so far as the sequence of the details and the events of the plot are concerned, it has been necessary to tackle the question whether Amitagati is indebted to Harīṣeṇa for his plot. In this connection we should not forget that Harīṣeṇa has given out an important fact that he only wrote in Paddhadiya metre what was already there composed by Jayarāma in Gāthā metre. This means that even Harīṣeṇa had before him a DP written by Jayarāma in gāthas, the dialect of which might have been Māhārāstri or Sauraseni. No Ms. of this Prākṛit DP, as far as I know, has come to light; nor is it possible to identify this Jayarāma with other authors of that name known to us.<sup>19</sup> As long as this work is not discovered and compared with the subsequent works of Harīṣeṇa and Amitagati, any answer to the above question is only tentative. The way in which Harīṣeṇa refers to the earlier

17. On Amitagati's date and works see the latest article by Pt. Premī, Jaina Siddhānta Bhāṣakā Vol. VIII, 1, pp. 39-35.

18. Anekānta, III, 3, p. 258.

19. See the Index of the History of Classical Sanskrit Literature by M. Krishnamachariar Madras, 1937.

DP indicates that almost all his material was present in Jayarāma's work. This naturally induces us to take the position that the entire plot of DP should go back to Jayarāma, and the question of Amitagati's borrowing it from Hariṣeṇa should not arise. It is quite possible that Amitagati might have composed his DP based on the Prākṛit original of Jayarāma, just as he has composed his Pañcasāṅgraha and Ārādhana based on the earlier Prākṛit works of the same name. In writing a Sanskrit work it is easier to use a Prākṛit (i.e. Māhārāṣṭrī or Śauraseni) original than an Apabhraṃśa one.

(h) In order to answer the above question, I would like to adopt one more approach to the problem. There are many passages in Amitagati's DP where we get palpable Prākṛitisms. If these are found in Hariṣeṇa's DP, no legitimate conclusion follows, because both Hariṣeṇa and Amitagati might have worked with Jayarāma's text before them. But if they are not found in Hariṣeṇa's work in that context, we are led to say that Amitagati is indebted to some other earlier Prākṛit work, possibly that of Jayarāma. I am putting together some such cases below:

- |   |  |
|---|--|
| (i) At III. 6 Amitagati uses the word haṭṭa ,  | (i) In the corresponding enumeration of places Hariṣeṇa has not used that word: see I. 17.   |
| (ii) At V. 39 Amitagati uses the root jemi , so also at VII. 5 which runs thus:ततोऽत्रादीन्मयो नास्यदक्षिते यदि भूषणम् ।न जेमति तदा साथोसर्वथा किं करोम्यहम् ॥ | (ii) Inspecting the corresponding passages we find that Hariṣeṇa does not use that root in the Kaṭavaka II. 14; and in the second passage (II. 24) he uses the root bhemi thus -ता दुदर पमरह णउ भुंजइअइ लहो णउ आहरणइ दिवइ । |
| (iii) Amitagati gives the etymology of yoṣṭ thus (IV. 16):यतो जोषयति क्षिप्रंविश्वं बोधा ततो मत्वा ।विदधाति यतः कोषंभामिनी मण्यते ततः ॥                        | (iii) There is no doubt that Amitagati's etymology is based on a Prākṛit original; but Hariṣeṇa gives no such etymology in the corresponding passage. See II. 18.  |
| (iv) At XIII. 23 Amitagati uses the word grahila .   | (iv) In the corresponding passage (V. 14) Hariṣeṇa has not used the word gahilla .  |

- (v) At XV. 23 Amitagati uses the word kacūra. (v) In the corresponding Kaṣavaka (VIII. 1) this word is not used by Harīṣeṇa.

The above test is enough to exclude the possibility that Amitagati is working with this Apabhraṃśa work alone before him. Moreover we find some differences too here and there. Harīṣeṇa gives the name of the town Vijayāpuri (Apabh. Vijayāūri) at I. 8, but in the corresponding passage (I. 48) Amitagati has Priyāpuri.<sup>30</sup> In another context Harīṣeṇa gives the name of the village Maṅgālaū (II. 7), while Amitagati reads Saṅgālo (IV. 8).<sup>31</sup> I quote below the passages, and I feel that the original Prakṛit passage is somewhat differently understood by Harīṣeṇa and Amitagati.

Harīṣeṇa's DP, II. 7—

तो मणवेउ भणइ सुकजालउ
अथि गासु मलए मंगालउ ।
मनरु पामि तहि पिबलउ गिइवइ
तासु पुरु पामे महुयरगइ ।

Amitagati's DP, IV. 7b-8—

उवाचेति मनोवेगः
श्रूयतां कथयामि वः ॥
देशो मलयदेशोऽस्ति
संगालो गळितासुखः ।
तत्र गृहपतेः पुत्रो
नाम्ना मधुकरोऽभवत् ॥

In view of the above discussion, it is a reasonable conclusion that both Harīṣeṇa and Amitagati have worked with a common Prakṛit original before them; and, as far as the facts are available, it might have been Jayarāma's Prakṛit DP. Harīṣeṇa has plainly mentioned this source, though Amitagati is silent on that point. If a few common phrases are detected, as noted in paragraph No. e, it only means that they are independently inherited from the common source. Amitagati being completely silent about his source, we cannot dogmatically say that he might have used this Apabhraṃśa text also beside the earlier Prakṛit original.

(i) In its major portion DP is devoted to demonstrate the incredible and inconsistent character of the Purāṇic tales; and it is in the fitness of things that verses from Purāṇas and Smṛtis should be quoted by way of Pūrvapakṣa. For instance, Haribhadra quotes Sanskrit verses in his Prakṛit Dhūrtakhyāna; and it is quite likely that Jayarāma also did the same in his DP. Harīṣeṇa's DP has got more than a dozen Sanskrit quotations; and they are of greater value than those correspondingly found in Amitagati's DP, because

30. The Prakṛit name might have been Vijāūri.

31. This difference might have arisen out of the orthographic confusion between s and m which look nearly alike in Prakṛit Mss.

Amitagati appears to have taken liberty with these verses. A Prākṛit or Apabhramśa writer will retain them as they were inherited, but one who is composing his work in Sanskrit might change them here and there to make them a part of his work. Amitagati has not introduced these verses with words uktam etc. I am giving below all these verses quoted by Hariṣeṇa, along with Amitagati's versions, so that attempts might be made to detect their sources. It is interesting to note that some of the verses occur, perhaps as quotations, in the Yasastilakacampū (A. D. 959) of Somadeva.

(1) Hariṣeṇa's DP, IV, 1, p. 22 of Ms. No. 1009 -

तथा वाचम्—

मत्स्यः कूर्मो बराहश्च नारसिंहोऽथ वामनः ।
रामो रामश्च कृष्णश्च बुद्धः कल्की च ते दश ॥
अक्षराक्षरनिर्मुक्तं जन्ममृत्युविवर्जितं ।
अन्ययं सत्यसंकल्पं विष्णुव्यायी न सीदति ॥<sup>22</sup>

These two verses are given by Amitagati in the following form :

व्यापिनं निवृत्तं श्वेदं जलमरणमूदनम् ।
अच्छेयमन्ययं देवं विष्णुं ध्यायन्न सीदति ॥
मौनः कूर्मः पृथुः पोत्री नारसिंहोऽथ वामनः ।
रामो रामश्च कृष्णश्च बुद्धः कल्की दश स्मृताः ॥ X. 58-9.

(3) Hariṣeṇa's DP, IV, 7, p. 24 -

अपुत्रस्य गतिर्नास्ति स्वर्गो नैव च नैव च ।
तस्मात् पुत्रमुखं दृष्ट्वा पद्माद्रवति भिक्षुकः ॥<sup>23</sup>

Amitagati's verse runs thus -

अपुत्रस्य गतिर्नास्ति स्वर्गो न तपसो यतः ।
ततः पुत्रमुखं दृष्ट्वा श्रेयसे क्रियते तपः ॥ XI. 8.

(3) Hariṣeṇa's DP, IV, 7, p. 24 -

नेष्टे मृते प्रव्रजिते ह्रीये च पतिते पते ।
पद्मस्वापसु नारीणां पतिरन्यो विधीयते ॥<sup>24</sup>

We may compare with the above the following verse of Amitagati—

पत्यौ प्रव्रजिते ह्रीये प्रनष्टे पतिते मृते ।
पद्मस्वापसु नारीणां पतिरन्यो विधीयते ॥ XI. 12.

22. In these quotations I have only corrected a few scribal errors here and there.

23. This verse occurs in Yasastilakacampū (Bombay 1903) Vol. II, p. 286.

24. This verse is identical with Parāśarasamīti IV. 23, quoted by Mironow, p. 31, of his Die Dharmaparikṣā etc. It is also attributed to Manu and found in the Smṛticandrikā, see the supplement to the Manusmṛti, Gujarati Press ed. Bombay 1913, p. 9, verse 126.

(4) Harīṣeṇa's DP, IV. 9, p. 24a -

का त्वं सुन्दरि जाह्नवी किमिह ते भर्ता हरो नन्दयं
अन्मस्त्वं किल वेदि मन्मथरत्नं जानात्वयं ते पतिः ।
स्वामिन्सत्यमिदं न हि प्रियतमे सत्यं कुतः कामिना
इत्येवं हरजाह्नवीगिरिसुतासंजल्पनं पातु वः ॥

I do not find anything corresponding to this in Amitagati's text.

(5) Harīṣeṇa's DP, IV. 12, p. 25a -

अहस्या कः कपाटं प्रहरति कुटिले माधवः किं वसन्तो
नो चक्री किं कुललो न हि धरणिधरः किं द्विजिह्वः फणीन्द्रः ।
नाहं घोरादिमदीं किमस्ति खगपतिर्नो हरिः किं कपीशः
इत्येवं गोपक्या चतुरमभिहितः पातु वक्षकपाणिः ॥<sup>25</sup>

Amitagati has not got any verse similar to this.

(6) Harīṣeṇa's DP, V. 9, p. 31a -

तथा चोक्तं तेन—

अश्वदेवं न वक्तव्यं प्रत्यक्षमपि यद्गच्छेत् ।
यथा वानरसंगीतं तथा सा श्रूयते शिला ॥

The following two verses of Amitagati express the same -

यथा वानरसंगीतं त्वयादर्शितं वने विभो ।
तरन्ती सलिले दृष्टा सा शिलापि मया तथा ॥
अश्वदेवं न वक्तव्यं प्रत्यक्षमपि वीक्षितं ।
जानानिः पण्डितैर्नूनं वृत्तान्तं नृपमन्त्रिणोः ॥ XII. 72-3.

(7) Harīṣeṇa's DP, V. 17, p. 34 -

भो भो भुजंगतक्ष्णवलोलजिह्वे
बन्धुकपुष्पदलसन्निभलोहिताक्षे ।
पृच्छामि ते पवनभोजनकोमलाङ्गी
काचित्पथा शरदचन्द्रमुक्ती न दृष्टा ॥

There is nothing similar to this in Amitagati's text.

(8) Harīṣeṇa's DP, VII. 5, P. 43 -

अग्निर्वाचापि दत्ता वा यदि पूर्ववरो मृतः ।
सा चेदक्षतयोनिः स्यात्पुनः संस्कारमर्हति ॥<sup>26</sup>

The following verse of Amitagati ( XIV. 38 ) stands for the above verse though there is a slight difference in the meaning.

एकदा परिणीतापि विपन्ने दैवयोगतः ।
भर्तार्यक्षतयोनिः स्त्री पुनः संस्कारमर्हति ॥

<sup>25</sup> This verse, with some variations, is found included in the Saṅgītaratnadhāṇḍavāra, p. 38, verse 166 of the section of Dāśāvatāra ( Bombay 1891 ).

<sup>26</sup> Vasiṣṭhasmṛiti XVII. 64 nearly agrees with this in contents.

- (9) Ibidem, p. 43-

अष्टौ वर्षाण्युदीक्षेत ब्राह्मणो पतितं पति ।
अप्रसूता च चत्वारि परतोऽन्यं समाचरेत् ॥

Amitagati's verse (XIV, 39) runs thus-

प्रतीक्षेताष्ट वर्षाणि प्रसूता वनिता सती ।
अप्रसूता च चत्वारि प्रोषिते सति मर्तुरि ॥

- (10) Harisena's DP, VII, 8, P. 43a-

पुराणं मानवो धर्मः साङ्गो वेदधिकितिकम् ।
आज्ञासिद्धानि चत्वारि न हन्तव्यानि हेतुभिः ॥<sup>27</sup>

This verse is identical with XIV, 49 in Amitagati's DP.

- (11) Ibidem p. 43a-

मानवं व्यासवाशिष्ठं वचनं वेदसंयुतम् ।
अप्रमाणं तु यो ब्रूयात् स भवेद्ब्रह्मघातकः ॥

The corresponding verse of Amitagati (XIV, 50) is like this-

मनुव्यासवाशिष्ठानां वचनं वेदसंयुतम् ।
अप्रमाणयतः पुंसो ब्रह्महत्या दुरुत्तरा ॥

- (12) Harisena's DP, VIII, 6, p. 49 -

गतानुगतिको लोको न लोकः पारमार्थिकः ।
पश्य लोकस्य सूक्ष्मं हारितं ताम्रभाजनम् ॥

Amitagati's verse (XV, 64) is in the first person -

दृष्टानुसारिभिल्लोकैः परमार्थविचारिभिः ।
तथा स्वं हार्यते कार्यं यथा मे ताम्रभाजनम् ॥

- (13) Harisena's DP, IX, 25, p. 61 -

प्राचाघाताभिप्लवतिः परधनहारे संयमः सत्यवाक्यं
काले शक्त्या प्रदानं युवतिजनकथायूकभावः परेषाम् ।
वृष्णास्रोतोनिभङ्गो गुल्लु च विनतिः सर्वसत्त्वानुकम्पा
ताम्राम्यं सर्वशालेष्वनुपहतमतिः श्रेयसामेय पन्थाः ॥<sup>28</sup>

This is from Bhartṛhari's Nīṭisāṭaka (No. 54).

Amitagati has expressed these ideas in various contexts; but at that context we have not got any verses corresponding to this.

- (14) Harisena's DP, X, 9, p. 64.

(a) स्वयमेवाशतां मारी यो न कामयते नरः ।
ब्रह्महत्या भवेत्तस्य पूर्वं ब्रह्मावर्षादिदम् ॥

27 This and the following verse occur in Yasastilakacampū Vol. II, p. 119. Verse No. 10 is identical with Manusmṛiti XII, 110-1.

28 This verse occurs in Yasastilakacampū vol. II, p. 99 with a few different readings: pradeyam for pradānam, bhūtānukampā for sattvānukampā, vidhāṇi for matīṇi and mārgaṇi for pañthāṇi. With a couple of different readings, namely vinayāṇi for vinatīṇi and bhūtānukampā for sattvānukampā this verse is found included in the Subhāṣitaratnabhūṣaṇagūṇam, p. 282, verse 1056.

(b) मातरमुपैहि स्वस्वामुपैहि पुत्रार्थं न कामार्थं ।

I have not been able to spot out any remarks of Amitagati corresponding to the above.

(j) Haribhadrasūri's (circa A. D. 700-770) Dhūrtākhyāna in Prākṛit<sup>29</sup> is a fine specimen as a forerunner of the type of literature represented by Prākṛit and Sanskrit texts called DP. The aim of these works is to expose the incredible character of the Purāṇic stories. Haribhadra has achieved his object in an extremely intelligent manner. The plot is simple. Five rogues meet, and they come to an understanding that everyone of them is to narrate his experiences. He who can denounce them to be a lie should give a feast to all; and he who justifies him, in the best possible manner, by giving similar details from the Purāṇas would be recognised as the foremost Rogue. Everyone offers funny and inconsistent experiences which are followed by their justification by some companion or the other who narrates similar incidents from the Purāṇas. The whole Ākhyāna is not only interesting but also creates definite bias against the reliable character of various Purāṇas. Haribhadra does not explicitly play the rôle of a partisan of Jainism, though he has passingly suggested it at the end (V. 120-1). The attack against the Purāṇas is implicit and suggestive with Haribhadra, but with the authors of the DP (namely, Harisena and Amitagati) it is outspoken and violent. Both of them have tried to administer, along with the attack, heavy doses of Jaina theology, dogmatics and ethics. Haribhadra jocularly smashed the structure of Purāṇic myths, but Harisena and Amitagati have gone a few steps further that they want to erect instead a superstructure of Jaina preachings. We do not know the exact extent of purely Jaina details in Jayarāma's work; Harisena has enough of them; and Amitagati has more than enough.

I feel no doubt that the first author of the DP (i. e. Jayarāma, as far as we know) might have known the Dhūrtākhyāna or some other recension of it. The motive and purpose are the same, but the works are executed in a different manner. The persons of the main story, the situations, the associations 29 In his study of the DP Mironow has already referred to the Dhūrtākhyāna. I am very thankful to Prof. Jinavijayaṃ, Bharatiya Vidyā Bhavana, who kindly sent to me the advance forms of the bare text of the Dhū, which is being edited by him, on hearing from me about this newly found DP in Apabhraṃśa.

and the structure of the plot are all different from those found in the Dhūrtākhyāna. The ten sub-stories and the stories of four fools included in the DP definitely indicate that some other texts like Dhūrtākhyāna might have been used. The DĀ has some incredible stories common with the DP, for instance, the elephant-Kamāṇḍalu episode. (DĀ, I 17 etc. and DP, XII 77 etc.), the episode of the detached head eating fruits on the tree (DĀ III. 17 etc. and DP XVI. 34 etc.), etc. Here and there we come across the same Purāṇic tales such as the episode of Indra-Ahalyā, Yamapatni swallowing fire, Brahma-Tilottama etc.; but the Purāṇic details given to justify the common incredible stories, noted above, are not identical both in DĀ and DP. It means that Jayarāma and his followers like Hariṣeṇa and Amitagati have independently and extensively ransacked the Purāṇas for inconsistent stories and incredible details. At any rate the DĀ and its successors like the DP are a fine specimen of Indian literature which is both interesting and instructive. The caustic prick which such works might have given to the zealous followers of Purāṇic religion has not much effect on the dispassionate student of Indian literature: for him every novel aspect adds to the wealth of the great literary heritage of the past.<sup>30</sup>

30 This Paper was submitted to the Eleventh All-India Oriental Conference, Hyderabad.

THE PALACE OF HIRANYAKAŚIPU<sup>1</sup>

| BY

M. V. VAIDYA

Hiranyakaśipu is an outstanding figure belonging to hoary antiquity and is prominently mentioned in the epic and the Purāṇic mythology. Tradition asserts that his fall was caused by Viṣṇu in his Man-lion incarnation. According to some Purāṇas and later tradition, he was the arch-enemy of Viṣṇu and his worship, while his son Prahlāda, in disapprobation of his father, became an ardent devotee of Viṣṇu. The story of Hiranyakaśipu accordingly typifies a triumph of Viṣṇuism and it is natural to expect that it should have a special importance in Vaiṣṇava literature, which it most certainly has.

The Purāṇas represent a state of thought-transition when the Vedic deities are receding into back-ground and the great triad of high-gods is emerging to dominate the whole field of religious expression. In this transition, it is natural that those attributes which once qualified the erstwhile important god are pressed in the service of another who replaces him in authority. Thus in the new order Indra yields his place to Viṣṇu and the function of protecting the tribe of gods devolves upon the latter, Indra becoming merely a leader of the divine host. In a few cases, legends belonging to gods of the earlier epoch would be connected to the newly-high; so, to me it appears that the legend of Hiranyakaśipu (in its earliest version) belongs to this category, as it presents, in essentials, the myth of the killing of Nāmpu by Indra transferred to the credit of Viṣṇu, but with a change in environment and a shift of emphasis.<sup>2</sup> The legend, being popular, passed

1. I gratefully record here my obligations to Dr. Sukthankar, who really has inspired me to write this paper.—I have used for references, the Critical Edition of the Saṁhita (in press) edited by Prof. Edgerton, the editions of Brahma, Matya and Padma Purāṇas in the Ānandāśrama Sanskrit Series and the Chitrashala edition of the Harivamśa. The critical text of the Saṁhita was kindly made available to me, for the purposes of this article, by Dr. Sukthankar.

2. See, Hopkins, Festschrift Windisch, p. 72. In ancient tradition both Indra and Viṣṇu are grouped together among the Ādityas. Both of them assume theriomorphic forms (for Indra, cf. Keith, The Religion and Philosophy of the Veda and Upanishads, ch. 3, pp. 62-63). This may have helped the transference of myths. The myth of Rāma, who is another avatāra of Viṣṇu, is also derived, according to Prof. Jacobi, from the Indra-Vṛtra myth.

in the hands of the poets of Purāṇas, who worked on it, and eventually it deteriorates into a sectarian story in glorification of the avatāras of Viṣṇu.

Thus the story of Hiraṇyakaśipu occurs in the Purāṇic tradition in at least two distinct forms, which are prima facie of uneven quality. One of these is the account found in the Vāyu and the Brahmāṇḍa Purāṇas and is printed by Kirfel in his Purāṇa Pañcalakṣaṇa in section C of Vaṁśā (pp. 193-196). Kirfel has grouped together these two Purāṇas as they are closely allied in several respects and are in substantial verbal agreement. The other form, which is longer and more elaborate, occurs in the Harivaṁśa (3.41-47), the Matsya (adhy. 161-163), and the Padma Purāṇas (5.42); and a shorter version of it earlier in the Harivaṁśa (1.41.39-78) and the Brahmāṇḍa<sup>3</sup> (213.44-79).

The Vāyu-Brahmāṇḍa version of Hiraṇyakaśipu's story seems entirely unconnected with the first version (which has two—the longer and the shorter—forms), and shows no verbal parallelisms with it. It varies from the latter also in point of details and gives us a brief report of Hiraṇyakaśipu's penance, prowess and fall. The account is primitive and ungarnished, and is inserted in the narration of primeval creation, which seems to be its legitimate and original context. Here the Vaiṣṇava colouring of the later aspects of the story is entirely lacking.

The other version, however, has no necessary and therefore natural context, being introduced in the description of the incarnations of Viṣṇu. This entire theme is secondary, not being comprised under any one of the five traditional divisions of a Purāṇa. The version under discussion is sometimes inserted alone, without reference to the other avatāras of Viṣṇu, but has no contextual connection with either what precedes or follows. So it is rather loose and has no fixity of context. It, therefore, as is also apparent from its developed and flagrantly sectarian aspect must be later<sup>4</sup> than the Vāyu-Brahmāṇḍa version.

3. A yet another form of the story which is styled Prahlāda-carita occurs in Viṣṇu-purāṇa (1.17-120). To it seems related a very late account of the Padmapurāṇa (6.265). In both these places Prahlāda is represented in the rôle of a moraliser, and the dialogue between him and his father appears as if it served some dramatic or mimetic purpose in ancient days.

4. The terms "late" and "early", as used here, may be rather misleading as they do not refer to any exact point of time or age. They merely denote relational sequence as they needs must in textual criticism of composite and fluid tradition having divergent versions and being spread over wide periods of time.

It is curious, that this second account of the legend again has two versions, verbally identical, but one of which is brief while the other has attracted many accretions to it and is thus much expanded. It is peculiar that both these forms occur in the Harivaṃśa itself, at two different places of insertion, viz. at 1.41.39-78 and 3.41 to 3.47. The shorter form of the version (Hari. 1.41.39-78) is again discovered in the Brahmapurāṇa (213.44-79). I have compared the texts of the Hari. and the Brahma for this passage and have gleaned the following typical variants:

Harivaṃśa	Brahma-purāṇa
1. 41.	213.
40 राजन् 44 साध्वी 46 सप्तविंशतिस्था 53 नक्षत्राणि दिशो दक्ष 61 भगवान् .. अव्यक्तः प्रकृतिर्ध्रुवः 66 पुरा धर्षितवांस्तु सः 68 न्यवसन् 72 उत्पुष्काम्लपत्राक्ष	44 नाम् 48 साध्वी 50 विद्वांसि च 57 आकाशे च सर्वशः 62 भगवान् .. अव्यक्तः प्रकृतिर्ध्रुवम् 67 तदा धर्षितवांस्तथा 69 विवर्त्तन् 73 उत्पुष्काम्लपत्राक्ष, etc., etc.

It will be readily seen from a critical study of the above list that the variants in the Brahmapurāṇa are clearly inferior and therefore cannot by any means be original. They can be explained to have arisen on no other hypothesis but that of their being secondarily derived from the Harivaṃśa text, which is certainly superior. It must be conceded that what we find in Brahma is a slightly deteriorated form of the text as occurring in the Hari. This means that Brahma must have copied this account from the Harivaṃśa, which result accords well with a similar finding of Prof. Walter Ruben<sup>5</sup>.

This version is seen repeated in an expanded form in the Harivaṃśa in another place (3.41 to 3.47) and in Matsya (151-163) and Pādma (5.42) Purāṇas. The expansion mainly consists in an elaborate description of the sabhā of Hiraṇyakaśipu and a long passage where are introduced, inter alia, names of countries and rivers, that shook in fear of Hiraṇyakaśipu's wrath. The description of Hiraṇyakaśipu's palace is extremely interesting as it presents striking parallelisms with about two dozen stanzas from the Sabhā-

5. Vide JRAS (1941) 247-258, 337-358, "The Puranic Line of Heroes", Ruben's enquiry is also based essentially on text-critical considerations.

parvan. I am persuaded that these are borrowed directly from the Great Epic and are assimilated by the Purāṇas. This requires no elaborate proof, as the very manner in which they are taken over, points towards this conclusion. I have been unable to discover from what source the other parts of the accretions in the expanded form are derived—they look like a farrago of different strains—but I suspect that the names of countries and peoples from the Digvijaya section of the Sabhā may have in some measure influenced part of this narration where names of countries etc. are listed.

It will be presumptuous to assert with certainty the priority, of one book to the other in the case of the three books, viz., the Harivaṃśa, and the Matsya and Padma Purāṇas where the expanded form of Hiraṇyakaśipu's story is seen, as the whole account itself is derivative and inflated. Its original is the shorter account that we meet in the Harivaṃśa at an earlier place ( 1. 41. 39-78 ). It is possible that the redactors of the Harivaṃśa themselves worked upon the shorter account, and expanded it by eking it out with new matter borrowed from tradition and inserted it at a later place, which procedure is not quite unfamiliar to Hari. On the other hand, it is also possible that one or the other of the two remaining Purāṇas accomplished the expansion and the expanded form got back into the later part of Hari. by a sort of textual refraction. The former alternative, however, seems to me preferable as I believe that even in the expanded form the text of Hari. is prior to that in the Mat. and the Pad. I further think, that the Padma has copied from the Matsya. Accordingly the sequence of the three texts is: ( 1 ) Hari. ( 2 ) Mat. and ( 3 ) Pad., the latter two copying from the immediately preceding text. I will briefly state reasons that support this position.

In choosing his boons Hiraṇyakaśipu speaks to Brahmā :

पाणिप्रहारेणैकेन सम्बल्यस्त्राहणम् ।

यो मां नाशयिष्यं शक्तः स मे मृत्युर्भविष्यति ॥

This stanza occurs in Hari. in the expanded account at 3.41-16, but is silently omitted in both the Purāṇas. The motive of this omission, which is deliberate, is obviously the removal of internal inconsistency. Had the stanza been unoriginal, Hari. would never admit it in its narration as it is contextually a complete misfit. For, the denouement of the story states that Nṛsiṃha struck down Hiraṇyakaśipu by tearing him to pieces with his mighty claws and not by one fell knock-out blow of the fist :

समुत्पत्य ततस्तीक्ष्णैर्मृगेन्द्रेण महानखैः ।

तत्रोद्भूतसहायेन विदार्य निहतो युधि ॥ (Hari, 3.47. 13-14)

The stanza, moreover, is authenticated by the shorter account (Hari. 1.41-52) and really belongs there as the end of Hiraṇyakaśipu is described there as :

दैत्यं सोऽप्रतिबलं दीतं हस्तशार्दूलविक्रमम् ।

हस्तदैत्यगणैर्गुप्तं हतशानेकपाणिना ॥ (Hari. 1.41.78)

Here we see that while expanding the story the Harivamśa has preserved the original stanza, while the Purāṇas dropped it as contextually discrepant,—a sure mark of later refinement. There are also instances where the text has more and more deteriorated in transmission. I will cite only one typical instance to illustrate my meaning.

Shorter version in Hari. (1.41.70) : वेदव्रह्मयं ब्रह्म ब्रह्मदेवं सनातनम् ।

Expanded from In Hari. (3.41.32) : देवं देवमयं यज्ञं ब्रह्म देवं सनातनम् ।

Mat. and Pad. (16.29 and 42.29 resp.) : देवदेवं यज्ञमयं वासुदेवं सनातनम् ।

We see here the successive transformation of the line from the more difficult to an easier form and which is more significant, how it is given a sectarian colouring by the reading वासुदेवं in the Purāṇas. Here the process of corruption is transparent and at once determines the relative priority of the shorter account to the longer form in the Hari. itself, while the Purāṇas come still later.

The same result follows from a consideration of individual variant readings.<sup>6</sup> I will cite here a few instances where the two Purāṇas agree to differ from the Harivamśa and where the Hari. text is manifestly superior.

Harivamśa	Matsya and Padma
शतानि दश पञ्च • किन्नरैः गन्धर्वैरसुरगणैः इतो देवगणैः सह प्रतिनम्बुर् मुनीन्सर्वान् वीर्यवान् प्रतिपत्स्यथ कान्त्या चन्द्र इवापरः	दश वर्षशतानि • पद्मरैः गन्धर्वैरसुरसर्पा गणैः इतः सर्वैर्दिवोकसैः विप्रजम्बुर् महाभागान् दानवः प्रतिपद्यत शरी कान्त्येव चापरः, etc., etc.

6. It is not always safe to rely on this point, as the individual readings of texts of this type show variations and fluctuations of such an amazing diversity that it is often useless to attempt analysing them in order to find guiding or regulating principles which explain their differences.

It is clear from their inferior readings that the Purāṇas must have copied their texts from the Hari. Now turning to the mutual relationship of the Purāṇas, it seems that the Padma has borrowed its text from the Matsya; for the text of the Matsya is closely allied to that of the Harivamśa,<sup>7</sup> while that of the Padma further diverges from the two as the following instances will show :

Harivamśa and Matsya	Padma
एते दिव्या वरास्तात मया दत्तास्तवाद्भुताः तत्प्रसीदस्व सुरान् वर्ध विष्णुः करिष्यति दर्पितः पाणि संसृज्य पाणिना	एष दिव्यो वरस्तात मया दत्तास्ताद्भुतः तत्प्रसादस्व तदा स्वयं विष्णुः करिष्यति <sup>8</sup> मर्षितः पाणी संसृज्य पाणिना

The possibility of Padma having directly borrowed from the Harivamśa is precluded, as its text shows no important readings where it is in agreement with Hari independently of Matsya. It is therefore plausible that the text in the Padma is copied from Matsya, which is corroborated by its numerous agreements with the latter in contradistinction to Hari, (see above).

The most interesting aspect, as I said, of this expanded version of Hiranyakaśipu's story is however, its utilization of stanzas from the Sabhāparvan in describing Hiranyakaśipu's palace and its denizens. These stanzas are methodically culled from different chapters of the Sabhāparvan where the divine "Halls" (Sabhās) of Indra, Yama, Varuṇa, Kubera and

7. In some cases it may be found that the Matsya text is superior to that in the Hari, but this can be explained by the fact that the Vulgate version of Hari is corrupt and untrustworthy. Matsya must have copied from a purer text. Critical editions of these and similar texts is a great desideratum.

8. This reading has led to the curious gloss in the foot-note: कृद् विंशत्यभिनि कपोद स्वनिदम् (1)

Brahmā are described. I will cite them below with important variants occurring in the three texts of the expanded version.

(1) Mbh. 2.7.2

Hari. 3.41.46<sup>cd</sup>-47<sup>ab</sup> विस्तीर्णां योजनशतं शतमध्यर्धमायता ।
Mat. 161.39 वैहायसी कामगमा पञ्चयोजनमुच्छ्रिता ॥
Pad. 5.42.37<sup>cd</sup>-38<sup>ab</sup>

[a) Hari. Mat. Pad. विस्तीर्णाः. —b) Hari. उच्छ्रिता (for आयता). —c) Hari. विहायसी; Mat. Pad. वैहायसी. Hari. Mat. Pad. कामगमा. —d) Hari. Pad. 'मुच्छ्रिता'; Mat. 'विस्तीर्णाः']

(2) Mbh. 2.7.3

Hari. 3.41.47<sup>cd</sup>-48<sup>ab</sup> जराशोककृमापेता निरातङ्गा शिवा शुभा ।
Mat. 161.40 वेङ्मासनवती रम्या दिव्यपादपशोभिता ॥
Pad. 5.42.38<sup>cd</sup>-39<sup>ab</sup>

[a) Hari. Mat. Pad. निष्पक्ष्मा (for निरातङ्गा). Hari. शिवां शुभा; Mat. Pad. शिवां सुखाय. —c) Hari. शुभासनवती रम्या; Mat. वेङ्माहर्म्यवती रम्या; Pad. वेङ्मासनवती रम्या. —d) Hari. Mat. Pad. ज्वलन्तीति तेजसा.]

(3) Mbh. 2.9.2

Hari. 3.41.48<sup>cdef</sup> अन्तःसलिलमास्थाय विहिता विश्वकर्मणा ।
Mat. 161.41 दिव्यरत्नमयैर्दक्षैः फलपुष्पैर्द्विभुता ॥
Pad. 5.42.39<sup>cd</sup>-40<sup>ab</sup>

[a) Hari. Mat. Pad. 'संयुक्ता' (for 'मण्डपः'). —b) Hari. Mat. Pad. विहिता. —c) Pad. दिव्यवर्णमयैर्दक्षैः. —d) Hari. Mat. Pad. 'द्विभुता'.]

(4) Mbh. 2.9.3

Hari. 3.41.49 नीलप्रीतासितश्यामैः सितैर्लोहितकैरपि ।
Mat. 161.42 अवतानेस्ताया शुभेः पुष्पमञ्जरिधारिभिः ॥
Pad. 5.42.40<sup>cd</sup>-41<sup>ab</sup>

[a) Mat. 'नीलसितश्यामैः'. —b) Mat. कृष्णैः; Pad. श्वेते (for सितैः). —c) Pad. अवतानेता (v. l. 'तानेता'). —d) Hari. Mat. मञ्जरीशतधारिभिः; Pad. रत्नमञ्जरी. ]

(5) Mbh. 2.10.4

Hari. 3.41.50<sup>ab</sup>, 51<sup>ab</sup> रश्मिपती भास्वरा च दिव्यगन्धा मनोरमा ।
Mat. 161.43 सिताभ्रशिखराकारा ह्रस्वानेव हृष्यते ॥
Pad. 5.42.41<sup>cd</sup>-42<sup>ab</sup>

[All the three texts transpose ab and cd. —a) Hari. प्रभावती. Pad. रश्मिमती स्वभावेन. —b) Hari. Mat. Pad. दिव्यगन्धः. —c) Hari. Mat. Pad. शिखराभ्रवर्णकाशा (Pad. 'शा'). —d) Hari. प्रवन्ती वायु हृष्यते; Mat. प्रवन्ती च स्पृष्टवन्तः; Pad. प्रवन्ती चान्यहृष्यतः.]

(6) Mbh. 2-11-10

Hari. 3-41-51<sup>cd, 52<sup>ab</sup></sup>

Mat. 161-44

Pad. 5-42-42<sup>cd, 43<sup>ab</sup></sup>

सुसुखा सा सभा राजन्न शीता न च धर्मदा ।

न क्षुत्पिपासे न ग्लानिं प्राप्य तां प्राप्नुवन्त्युत ॥

[ a ) Hari. Mat. Pad. ना ( Mat. सु-; Pad. न ) सुखा न च दुःखा सा. — c ) Mat. Pad. ग्लानिं वा ( for न ग्लानिं ). — d ) Hari. क्षी; Mat. Pad. ने ( for [ उ ] न ). ]

(7) Mbh. 2-11-11

Hari. 3-41-52<sup>cd, 53<sup>ab</sup></sup>

Mat. 161-45

Pad. 5-42-43<sup>cd</sup>

नानास्मैरिव कृता सुविचित्रैः सुभास्वैरः ।

स्तम्भैर्न च धृता सा तु शाश्वती न च सा क्षर ॥

[ a ) Hari. विरचिता; Mat. Pad. उपकृतां ( for इव कृता ). — b ) Hari. Mat. विचित्रैः सुभास्वैरः; Pad. सुविचित्रैः कृता ( v. l. सुभा ) स्वैरः. — Pad. om. cd. — c ) Hari. स्तम्भैर्न विचित्रैः; Mat. स्तम्भैर्न विधृता सा वै. — d ) Hari. शाश्वता च सा; Mat. शाश्वता सा ( for न च सा सा ). ]

(8) Mbh. 2-11-12

Hari. 3-41-53<sup>cd, 54<sup>ab</sup></sup>

Mat. 161-46

Pad. 5-42-44

अति चन्द्रं च सूर्यं च शिखिनं च स्वयंप्रभा ।

दीप्यते नाकटुष्टस्मा मासयन्तीव भास्करम् ॥

[ b ) Hari. वाचकं ( for शिखिनं ). — d ) Hari. भास्वरणीव. Pad. मासयन्ती च भास्करम्. ]

(9) Mbh. 2-8-5

Hari. 3-41-54<sup>cd, 55<sup>ab</sup></sup>

Mat. 161-47

Pad. 5-42-45

सर्वे कामाः स्थितास्तस्यां वै दिव्या वै च मानवाः ।

रसयन् प्रभूतं च भक्ष्यभोज्यमारिदम् ॥

[ a ) Hari. Mat. सर्वे च कामाः प्रभूता; Pad. सर्वे च कामिरे तस्यां. — b ) Pad. सुधनायैव मानवाः. — c ) Hari. Pad. रसयन्तः प्रभूताश्च; Mat. रसयुक्तं प्रभूतं च. — d ) Hari. * भोज्यं तेषां सर्वं; Mat. * भोज्यमनन्तरं; Pad. * भोज्यान्प्रभूतम्. ]

(10) Mbh. 2-8-6

Hari. 3-41-55<sup>cd, 56<sup>ab</sup></sup>

Mat. 161-48

Pad. 5-42-46

पुष्पगन्धाः स्रजस्तत्र नित्यपुष्पफलद्रुमाः ।

रसयन्ति च तोयानि शीतान्पुष्पानि चैव ह ॥

[ a ) Mat. * गन्धस्रजश्च; Pad. * गन्धाः स्रजश्च. — b ) Pad. नित्यफल- . — cd ) Hari. Mat. Pad. उप्ये शीतानि तोयानि शीते चोष्णानि सन्ति वै ( Mat. च ). ]

(11) Mbh. 2-10-6<sup>ab</sup>Hari. 3-42-2<sup>ab</sup>Mat. 161-71<sup>cd</sup>Pad. 5-42-67<sup>ab</sup>

दिवाकरनिभे पुष्ये दिव्यास्तरणसंघटे ।

a ) Hari. रम्ये; Mat. Pad. दिव्ये. — b ) Hari. * संसृजे; Mat. Pad. * संसृज,

(12) Mbh. 2-10-9

Hari. 3-42-4

Mat. 161-73

Pad. 5-42-68

तत्र देवाः सगन्धर्वा गणैरम्भरसा वृताः ।

दिव्यज्ञानेन गीतानि गान्ति दिव्यानि भारत ॥

[ Mat. Pad. subst. for ab, a different line. —ed ) Hari. दिव्यज्ञानेन दिव्यानि जगन्गीतानि गायन्ताः; Mat. Pad. दिव्यज्ञानेन ( Pad. "तत्त्वानि" ) गीतानि जगन्गन्धर्वसत्तमाः. ]

(13) Mbh. 2-10-11

Hari. 3-42-5

Mat. 161-74

Pad. 5-42-69

विश्वाची सहजग्या च प्रम्लोचा उर्वशी इरा ।

वगौ च सौरभेयी च समीची वृन्दुदा लता ॥

[ b ) Hari. Mat. प्रम्लोचेत्वमिविध्रुता; Pad. प्रम्लोचेति च विध्रुताः. —c ) Hari. दिव्या च; Mat. Pad. विद्याय ( for वर्गा च ). Hari. सौरभेया. —d ) Hari. Mat. Pad. समीची पुञ्जिकस्थला ( Mat. "स्वली; Pad. "स्वला" ); cf. No. 14, and v. 1. ]

(14) Mbh. 2-10-10

Hari. 3-42-6

Mat. 161-75

Pad. 5-42-70

मिश्रकेशी च रम्भा च चित्रसेना शुचिस्मिता ।

बाह्येन्द्रा घृतावी च मेनका पुञ्जिकस्थला ॥

[ b ) Mat. चित्रसेना ( for "सेना" ); Pad. चित्रा शुचिचित्रा. —c ) Mat. बाह्यकेशी ( v. 1. "मेना" ); —d ) Hari. Mat. Pad. चोर्वशी तथा ( for पुञ्जिक ); cf. No. 13, and v. 1. ]

(15) Mbh. 2-10-12

Hari. 3-42-7

Mat. 161-76

Pad. 5-42-71

एताः सहस्रशङ्खान्मा वृत्तगीतविहारदाः ।

उपतिष्ठन्ति धनदं पाण्डवाभरसा गणाः ॥

[ b ) Hari. Mat. Pad. वृत्त- ( for वृत्त- ); —cd ) Hari. Mat. Pad. उपतिष्ठन्ति ( Pad. उपतिष्ठन् ) सज्जानं हिण्यकशिपुं पञ्च ( Hari. नदा ). ]

(16) Mbh. 2-10-5

Hari. 3-42-8

Mat. 161-70<sup>ab72d</sup>Pad. 5-42-67<sup>d</sup>

तस्या वैश्वणो राजा विचित्राभरणाभरः ।

क्षीसहस्रावृतः श्रीमानास्ते ज्वलितकुण्डलः ॥

[ This stanza is recorded mutatis mutandis only by Hari.; Mataya has only three pādas ( bed ) in scattered sequence, while Padma has only one ( d ). —a ) Hari. द्विरण्यकशिपुस्तत्र. —c ) Hari. Mat. क्षीसहस्रैः वरिष्ठः. —d ) Hari. नखी ( for आस्ते ). ]

(17) Mbh. 2-9-13

Hari. 3-42-10

Mat. 161-78<sup>cd</sup> -79<sup>ab</sup>Pad. 5-42-72<sup>cd</sup> -73<sup>ab</sup>

वर्तिरोचनो राजा भरकः पृथिवीजयः ।

प्रह्लादो विप्रविलिख कालखड्गाय सर्वेशः ॥

[ a ) Hari. वैरोचनस्तत्र; Mat. विरोचनस्तत्र; Pad. वैरोचनस्तत्र. —b ) Hari. पृथिवी-जयः; Mat. Pad. "दीप्तः". —c ) Hari. प्रह्लादो. —d ) Mat. Pad. गर्विष्ठ महासुरः. ]

(18) Mbh. 2-9-13

Hari. 3-42-11

Mat. 161-79<sup>cd</sup>-80<sup>ab</sup>Pad. 5-42-73<sup>c</sup>-74<sup>b</sup>

सुहृदुर्मुखाः राज्ञः सुमनाः सुमतिः स्वनः ।

षटोदरो महापाशैः कथनः पिठस्तथा ॥

[ a ) Hari. अहन्ता क्रोचहन्ता च; Mat. सुरहन्ता सुताना च; Pad. सुरहन्ता दुःखकर्ता. ]

—b ) Hari. खरः; Pad. तथा ( for स्वनः ) Mat. प्रमतिः सुमतिर्पराः. ]

(19) Mbh. 2-9-14

Hari. 3-42-12

Mat. 161-80<sup>cd</sup>-81<sup>ab</sup>Pad. 5-42-74<sup>cd</sup>-75<sup>ab</sup>

विश्वरूपः सुखस्य विरुपौश्व महाशिरः ।

दशग्रीवश्च वाली च मेघवासा दशवतः ॥

[ a ) Hari. °रूपश्च सुखस्य. —b ) Hari. विश्वस्य महाशिरः; Mat. स्वदशश्च महाशिरः; Pad. विश्वकायो महाशिरः. —d ) Hari. महाशिरः; Mat. Pad. महाशिरः. ]

(20) Mbh. 2-9-15

Hari. 3-42-13

Mat. 161-81<sup>cd</sup>-82<sup>ab</sup>Pad. 5-42-75<sup>cd</sup>-76<sup>ab</sup>

कैटभो विटद्रुतश्च संह्रादथेन्द्रतापनः ।

दैत्यदानवसंघाश्च सर्वे रुचिरकुण्डलाः ॥

[ a ) Hari. कटभो विटद्रुतश्च; Mat. कटभो विटद्रुतश्च; Pad. कटभो विटद्रुतश्च. —b ) Mat. प्रजनः; Pad. ज्वलनः ( for संह्रादः ). —c ) Mat. Pad. ते ( for च ). ]

—d ) Hari. Mat. Pad. ज्वलिनः ( for रुचिरः ). ]

(21) Mbh. 2-9-16

Hari. 3-42-14

Mat. 161-82<sup>cd</sup>-83<sup>ab</sup>Pad. 5-42-76<sup>cd</sup>-77<sup>ab</sup>

अग्निषो मौलिनः सर्वे तथा दिव्यपरिच्छदाः ।

सर्वे लब्धवराः शराः सर्वे विगतमृत्यवः ॥

[ a ) Hari. Mat. वाग्मिनः; Pad. वाग्मिः ( for मौलिनः ). —b ) Hari. सर्वे सुचरितवराः; Mat. सर्वे चरितवराः; Pad. सर्वे च चरितवराः ( cf. No. 22 ). —d ) Pad. विहितवृत्ते. ]

(22) Mbh. 2-9-17<sup>cd</sup>Hari. 3-42-15<sup>cd</sup>Mat. 161-84<sup>ab</sup>Pad. 5-42-78<sup>ab</sup>

उपासते महात्मानं सर्वे सुचरितवराः ।

[ a ) Hari. उपासते; Mat. °सति. —b ) Hari. Mat. Pad. सर्वे विव्यपरिच्छदाः ( cf. No. 21 ). ]

(23) Mbh. 2-7-23<sup>cd</sup>-24<sup>ab</sup>

Hari. 3-42-16

Mat. 161-84<sup>cd</sup>Pad. 5-42-78<sup>cd</sup>

विमानैर्विभिर्धैर्दिव्यैर्प्राजमानैरिवाग्निभिः ।

अग्निषो भुवितावान्ये यान्ति वायान्ति चापरे ॥

[ a ) Hari. विविधैः प्रवेष्टुः; Mat. Pad. विविधाकारैः. — b ) Hari. इवार्चयति. — Mat. Pad. om. ed. — c ) Hari. भूषणपरा ( for सुवि° ). — d ) Hari. हेलवा ( for चाले ). ]

From these passages it will be clear that the expanded version has modelled its description according to the example set by the Sabhāparvan descriptions and on an identical plan. It first appeared in the Harivaṃśa,—a work closely related to the epic, being in fact its concluding book,—making use of these stanzas to embellish its narrative. The version thus expanded was copied by the Matsya, from which it was borrowed by the Padma in its turn. There can absolutely be no doubt that these are genuine epic stanzas, most natural and necessary in their context and are proved to belong to the earliest form of the Sabhāparvan which can be reconstructed on the authority of MSS. evidence, as they are recorded in the Critical Edition of the Sabhāparvan edited by Prof. Edgerton. It is impossible to think that these stanzas may belong to the floating tradition and got into the Purāṇas quite independently of the epic. For in the Purāṇas they are obviously of a patch-work character and are indiscriminately put together. In bringing them together the redactors have forgotten to remove even apparent incongruities within the text itself. For example, the submarine character of Varuṇa's palace as well as the top-most situation of Brahmā's hall ( अन्तःसलिलमास्थाय etc., and अति चन्द्रं च सूर्यं च etc., ) are both predicated about Hiraṇyakaśipu's sabhā, in one breath.

Thus it is seen that the Mahābhārata has been looked upon as a source-book even by the authors of Purāṇic tradition, which must therefore be later than the Epic. The motive that actuated the compilers of Purāṇas seems to be sectarian as in this case it is clearly the glorification of Viṣṇu, whose incarnations must have assumed definite shape after Kṛṣṇa became the supreme God. Divinity of Kṛṣṇa is accepted in the Mahābhārata, while it is fully established in the Harivaṃśa. The Purāṇas are posterior even to Harivaṃśa and therefore we find sectarian tendencies culminating themselves in them.

That the Mbh. should be proved anterior to the Hari. and Purāṇas is nothing surprising, as it can be shown to be so in numerous other passages where overlapping of the epic and Purāṇic texts is detected. This result, however, is specially note-worthy in this particular instance as it vindicates the authenticity of the description of different sabhās in the Epic, which has been held to be late.<sup>9</sup>

---

9. Cf. Hopkins, Epic Mythology, foot-note (1), p. 58: "...As these are the only passages where Sudharmā occurs as a hall, common in Hariṣ. and the Purāṇas it is probably an indication that the "Halls" are a late description, a supposition favoured by other evidence of the same character regarding their inhabitants (perhaps a loan from the Jains, who have a heaven and gods called Sudharma)."

SOME CONTRIBUTIONS OF ALVARS TO THE PHILOSOPHY OF BHAKTI

BY

K. C. VARADACHARI

I

We have vast literature on the bhakti school but scarcely an adequate account of the important part played by the ālvārs or Seers of South India. The ālvārs are the mystico-religious Vaiṣṇava saints who have given a new orientation to bhakti by making it more catholic and universal. Bhakti indeed is devotion of God and as a path it has been counselled in the Bhagavad-Gītā as more supreme than either sāṅkhya (jñāna-mārga) or yoga or karma. In the ālvār-literature we have a profound worship of the Divine in his five-foldness and not merely devotion and duty but a radical surrender of oneself. The five-foldness of the Deity is a special doctrine of the Pāñcarātra-school and Śrī Vaiṣṇava ālvārs<sup>1</sup> accept the nature of the manifested Divine as five-fold as Vāsudeva, Vyūha (cosmic functionaries), Vibhava (the descents of the Divine or Avatāras), Antaryāmi and Arca (image). The ālvārs lay great stress on this most approachable form (subhāśraya) of arca in so far as it is that

---

<sup>1</sup> For the first time in ālvār-literature we have the mention of the special pāñcarātra doctrine of five-foldness of the Divine nature in creation in the Tiruccanda-viruttam of Tirumalāśai-ālvār (4th century). 17th verse runs thus :

"The One person, three persons, in all four persons; Being thus the enjoyable person, and the person realized through meritorious deeds and the Person of many manifestational forms, O Prime Lord, lying on the serpent in the Ocean of Milk and beyond it, You are the transcendent Unique Form."

cf. Śrī-vacana-bhāṣya: Pillai Lokācārya: 39. sūtra: "Antaryāmi-form is like the waters deep in the bowels of the earth; Para-form is like the enveloping waters (outside the egg); Vyūha is like the milk-ocean (difficult to attain); Vibhavas are like mighty floods, whilst Arcas are overflowing tanks with waters of the above."

which the devotee can imagine and realise as leading upto the highest transcendent God himself. The arca can be of any of the four forms such as Vāsudeva, or cosmic deities like Saṅkarṣaṇa, Aniruddha, Pradyumna or Acyuta. The Vaikhāṇasa school has indeed made provision in the temple worship for the five beras or forms corresponding to the four-fold divisions given above. It would be necessary to consider philosophically the justification of the worship of the icons which form the fundamental vitality of popular religion in India, but I shall deal with that elsewhere. In the meanwhile it may be stated that if worship of ancestors and heroes is justifiable the worship of the descents of the Divine, the avatāras, *vibhūti*s of God is justified.

The ālvāras worked out a synthesis between the Vedic and the śāgama views about the nature of God and defined the means of approach to Him. In this too their originality consisted in pointing out vigorously the futility of the path of mere bhakti that is not followed upto its logical conclusion in the universal realisation of God-indwellingness in all creation.

II

Śrī Veṅkaṭanātha writing on the unique method of the ālvāras as self-surrender, total and integral, says that it is distinguished from bhakti.

"Because of the lack of strength to pursue the methods of bhakti and others which depend upon merit,

Because of the lack of intelligence to discriminate (the true from the false),

Because of the incapacity to learn from the śāstras or from holy discussions, Good men, differing from one another in all these four or in one or two or three, verily for the sake of liberation seek the Lord through direct prapatti (svatantra-prapatti)."<sup>1</sup>

Thus here we have the qualifications for bhakti, namely, the arduous path of devotion, which requires intelligence that is awakened and the capacity to learn from the scriptures as to the method of devotion and the facilities to hear and live in the company of holy men. The main distinction then between the prapatti or self-surrender and bhakti that is dependent on the qualifications of devotion or one-pointedness of mind, intelligence and capacity to imbibe scriptural teaching and facilities to hear holy discussions lies essentially in the one demanding qualifications and the other none. The reference of Śrī Venkaṭa-nātha to good men (śantaḥ) is surely to the ālvārs and the ācāryas who followed their teaching loyally. If this be so can we legitimately say that this is a development whereas it is a departure from the bhakti? Not so, if we look at the general use of the theory of bhakti which has become a general theory of devotion universalised and without distinction of caste or āśrama.

<sup>1</sup> Rahasya-traya-sūtra : prapatti-yogyādhikāra.

The devotional doctrine is defined by Venkaṭanātha as the contemplation of the Supreme Lord without depending on anything else, with one-pointed mind. This requires loving pure (sāttvika) spiritual discrimination which causes the clear knowledge of the Divine to arise. But prapatti equally grants the fruits of the bhakti being more universal in its application. The ālvārs had inclined to the view that self-surrender to God does not involve the possession of the disciplines of the jñāna and karma and bhakti yoga.<sup>1</sup>

III

The ālvār's consciousness is of the universal being who is anxious to save the seeker who is prepared to surrender his all to Him and stake his all in the love and power and glory of God. This is the essential promise of all Śaraṇāgata-doctrines. From the Vedic literature downwards we have the promise of refuge, abhaya-pradāna, grant of freedom from fear. Rgveda X. 125.5 states that God out of His Grace grants everything to the soul and makes it a sage, a mighty being and a knower of Brahman.<sup>2</sup> God's prasāda or grace is most closely linked up with man's total surrender or refuge-seeking, though this must be known to be neither a cause-effect relation nor yet a bargain. For God's

<sup>1</sup> Rahasya-traya-sūtra : Upāya-vibhāgādhikāra.

<sup>2</sup> ahameva avayam idam vadāmi juṣṣam devabhir uta mānuṣebhiḥ |
yam kāmāye tam tamugram kṛṇomi tam brahmāṣṭam tam ṛṣim tam
sumedhām ||

grace is immeasurable only demanding a slight occasion (vyāja) for His revealing His grace and love for all. The statement that bhakti is a upāya or means to God-realisation or liberation is to be understood not in the instrumental or causal sense of necessity just as some persons hold that magic or sounds or mantras have the power to force the gods to grant fruits even in a mechanical manner. On the contrary, we know that the power of jñāna or karma or even bhakti is essentially limited; they lead upto the metaphysical or effectual or devotional askesis; the fruits of such knowledge depend upon the grace of God himself. Hence the statement that not through jñāna-askesis but through His grace alone consequent on great devotion does one achieve the vision of the Highest Being or liberation. The instrumentality of bhakti or jñāna thus is only a upacāra usage. God's grace is the most important fact which makes man become divinised. Man's knowledge and works may only lead upto it but cannot by any means make for the descent of grace, for then the self or self-consciousness of the soul intrudes itself. The prasāda of God is a veritable gift of the Divine whether it be the Vision eternal or the Foundational knowledge that saves, or the Peace that is the field wherein the Lord erects Himself or descends. That is why prasāda is many times declared to be the peace of mind. Without this prasāda, there can be no release, mukti, or even a possibility of jumping the life to come. It is not all knowledge, knowledge even of the categories that saves, but the divine knowledge, knowledge granted by the divine, that saves. This saving-knowledge is what is to be got by a seeker and for this purpose the only quick and total path is self-surrender. Thus have the ālvārs stated. This is what we find to have been intimated by the famous mantra, Īśa. 18 ( Rgveda I. 159. 1 ), which is used in various contexts under many occasions. "We shall the speech of surrender, nama uktim, dispose." The Śvetāśvatara ( VI. 18 ) uses the most important word of surrender as the means to God's grace, śaraṇam aham prapadye. The Taittirīya ( Nārāyaṇanuvāka, 5.1 ) gives direction to sacrifice oneself to the Divine. The Gītā makes most clear reference to the doctrine of prapatti, and it is the view of the ālvārs and ācāryas of Śrī Vaiṣṇavism that Gītā teaches the prapatti or self-surrender doctrine as the path and the way to liberation.<sup>1</sup> At the very beginning Arjuna makes his surrender ( II. 7 ). Śrī Kṛṣṇa advises that surrender alone is the means to cross over illusion that is difficult to pierce ( VII. 14 ); and again in the closing chapter ( XVIII. 62, 66 ) Śrī Kṛṣṇa reiterates the path of surrender as that which will save.

The efficacy of prapatti to lead up to the manifestation of prasāda is fully explained in the Pāñcarātra āgamas and the Vaiṣṇava. The worship of the Arca-form of God forms the important part of these two āgamas and the worship is followed up by self-surrender. The self-surrender is the preliminary to all activities and is directed towards liberation. Even after liberation the knowledge of dependence on the Divine ( jñāna ) being firmly rooted the individual continues to worship and surrender to the Divine. In the Pāñcarātra school in almost all its āgamas there is mention of the six-fold practice of surrender. The Ahīr-budhīya Saṁhitā ( 37. 25-26 ) enumerates the five aṅgas of surrender as ānukūlyasya saṁkalpa, prātikūlyasya varjanam, Goptṛva-varaṇam, rakṣayati viśvāsaḥ, kārpaṇya. With more or less uniformity Nārada Pāñcarātra ( I. 17 ) confirms this.

Rāmāyaṇa which is considered by Śrī Vaiṣṇava writers to be the Śaraṇāgati-veda par excellence enunciated the efficacy of the self-surrender and the prasāda nature of God.<sup>2</sup> In the Bālakāṇḍa we find the Devas seeking refuge from the torments of Rāvaṇa and asuric forces ( XV. 16 ; XV. 24 ). We find Lakṣmaṇa surrendering to his divine brother in the Ayodhyākāṇḍa. In the forest Śrī Bharata performed Śaraṇāgati, as well as the sages of the Dandaka-forest. In the Kiṣkindhā-kāṇḍa, Sugrīva sought refuge and was granted refuge. In the Sundara-kāṇḍa we have the surrender of Trijaṭa, and in the Yuddha, that of Vibhīṣaṇa. Above all we find Śrī Rāma making the supreme statement that even if it be Rāvaṇa who sought refuge He would grant it. Vibhīṣaṇa, it is acclaimed, performed the Self-surrender along with its five aṅgas of ānukūlyasya saṁkalpa, prātikūlyasya varjanam, goptṛva-varaṇam, rakṣayati viśvāsa and kārpaṇya and ātma-nikṣepa.

<sup>1</sup> Rahasya-traya-sūtra : Upāya-vibhāgādhikāra, final verse.

<sup>2</sup> Abhaya-pradīpānāṁ 10 chapters ; Veṅkaṭanātha : ( 20 esoteric sermon ) deals with this point most fully.

The above brief sketch is to intimate that the background of the ālvārs' psychology of devotion was soaked in the scriptural Vedic and purāṇic tradition.<sup>1</sup>

The history of bhakti coupled with self-surrender or prapatti consists in a three-fold process of arriving at the Vision of the Lord. The first three ālvārs who belonged to the same period following the path of synthesis<sup>2</sup> arrived at the knowledge of the Divine through transcendent knowledge (para-jñāna), transcendent devotion (para-bhakti) and finally parama-bhakti. Poygai ālvār was so struck by the majesty and beauty of the natural phenomena and their unique order that he asked himself the question of the Creator and knew the supreme causa sui. God was the all-ruler and all-creator. Pudattālvār saw the Lord to be not merely the causa sui but that he is an Object of our devotionalised knowledge (para-bhakti). The third ālvār Pay-ālvār, profiting by the paths of knowledge of the Divine and of the devotionalised knowledge was enabled to perceive that all, that those two grant, was merely a glamorous cosmic vision; the inner nature of God, the personal Ruler immortal and universal, <sup>1</sup> We have found in the purāṇic references of the ālvārs wide differences between the versions of certain stories; for instance, Mārkaṇḍeya is said to be a devotee of Nārāyaṇa though a pupil of Rudra. Rudra himself is said to be a great teacher of the Nārāyaṇa doctrine. (cf. Tirucchanda-Viruttam, verse 8 and Nāṇmukha-Tiruvandādi 15, 17 and 18 verses). A complete investigation into these variations has been undertaken by me and will be published elsewhere.

<sup>2</sup> Mudal Tiruvandādi, 1

Deeming the world as bowl, the full ocean as ghee, the fierce-rayed
Sun as the wick,
I have twined a garland of verse for the feet of the red-flaming-discus-wearer... "

Irandām Tiruvandādi, 1

Devotion as the lamp-bowl, aspiration as Ghee, the melted mind as the wick,
With a melting soul have I lighted the bright flame of Love to Nārāyaṇa... "

Munrām Tiruvandādi, 1

The Mother have I seen in the Lord of Ocean hug !
That Form of golden splendour have I seen !
That radiant Sun-like form have I seen ! .....

who is more than the impersonal is to be known through surrender to Him. This surrender is parama-bhakti, the fullest Vision, that is knowledge and devotion expressing themselves in the total dependence-nature on the Divine. Pey-ālvār was granted the Vision of the intimate saustīya form, the kalyāṇa-tamam rūpam,<sup>1</sup> which Arjuna sought as the other form crowned with mace and discus<sup>2</sup> along with the mother of the Universe. The fourth ālvār, who is said to have been a free-thinker, a Buddhist, Jain and Śaiva seer and poet before he was converted by the third ālvār to Śrī Vaiṣṇavism, points out that the object of the religious quest should be the Highest that the mind can know in the causal and redemptive categories. If it be anything less than the highest there can only result bondage and not freedom. Once this surrender is made God becomes the master, the Kṣetrajña, the knower and ploughman of the field. "Is it necessary to plant the seed of effort in the field of ancient sam-sāra of Kṛpā?" God does all, only man should be absolutely His. What is necessary is to worship, to adore, to surrender at his feet and at the feet of all those who have done so.

Tirumalīśai's philosophy of religion is a complete exposition of the need to realise the fullness and greatness of God and His cosmos, His Grace and His excellences. The other ālvārs continue and elaborate the neat conclusions of the first four ālvārs. The Great Śaṭagopa, the author of the Tirumōzhi, who is considered to be the chief of the Śrī Vaiṣṇavas, has described the many attributes of God. According to him, though he got, through God's grace, divine knowledge and even devotion (para-jñāna and para-bhakti)<sup>3</sup> without the help of Vedic rites or

<sup>1</sup> Is. 16.

<sup>2</sup> B. G. XL 43-5.

<sup>3</sup> Parabhakti, para-jñāna and paramabhakti-this is said to be the order of succession in the experience towards vision. Commenting on Śrī Rāmānjan's Śaraṇāgati-gadya, Sudarśana (Śrīmataprakāśhācārya) writes: uttarottara saṅkṣātkārābhiniवेशāḥ parabhaktiḥ, saṅkṣātkārah para-jñānam, uttarottara-bhavaḥ bhiniवेशāḥ paramabhaktiḥ. Parabhakti is the cause of para-jñāna, and this in turn is the cause of paramabhakti which is complete or total devotion to God. Śrī Veṅkaṭanātha's view is similar to that of Sudarśana. In the Tātparyā-Candrikā, commenting on Yāmunaācārya's final verse of the Gitārikhasaṅgraha we find that the view is similar to the development

( continued on the next page )

jñāna or meditation, he could not have his wishes fulfilled. In other words, we find that he was lamenting the absence of his Lord, Viśṇu,<sup>1</sup> and could not experience at will the Divine. In other words satya-saṅkalpatva did not form one of his siddhis. This he found to be possible only through surrender to the Divine Lord completely, that is, without remainder. This surrender he made to the Arcā-form of God at Tirupati. He made it very clear that bhakti must necessarily fulfil itself in surrender.<sup>2</sup>

Śrī Kulaśekhara, the Royal saint who renounced his throne preferring worship of God, has revealed the richness of the devotion that becomes knowledge and experience through viśṇu or viraha, sneha, madhura and vātsalya. Surrender is to be made to the supremest object alone and not to any and every object however much near and dear it may actually appear to be in the forms of child and lover and son. The Perumāl Tirumozhi breathes a spiritual atmosphere that is rare even amidst the ālvārs.<sup>3</sup>

The worship of the Divine includes in a real sense love of his creation and most surely those who have also yielded themselves to the Love of the Divine. The bhāgavatas or the souls that have become devoted to the beauty of God and greatness of God are to be worshipped. Śrī Kulaśekhara in his Perumāl Tirumozhi sought to move amidst them and dance with them with joy of the love of God. Madhurakavi, the disciple of Śaṭagopa, exalted the devotion to the Ācāryas or teachers as being equally important on the path. Surrender to the Divine may be made through the intercession and mediation of the saints of God and not directly since we may not be fit to do so ourselves or the circumstances may not be opportune for it. The path to liber-vouchsafed by the Poygai, Padattar and Poy of parañjāna, parabhakti and paramabhakti, which mean knowledge of the Divine, devotionalised knowledge of the Divine and Direct Vision of the integral dependence of oneself on the Divine.

( continued from the previous page )

<sup>1</sup> Tiruviruttam.

<sup>2</sup> cf. B. G. Manmanā bhava madbhaktiḥ madyājñi mādh namas kuru :

<sup>3</sup> cf. My forthcoming article on the Religious Philosophy of the First four Ālvārs and Kulaśekhara in the J. S. V. O. I.

ation according to Madhurakavi lies in the service of the Ācārya. Śrī Veṅkaṭanātha writes of Madhurakavi, "Those who are dependent for protection on the feet of the Lord Śaṭagopa, the path shewn by the holy Madhurakavi will prove beneficent as it had been for him."<sup>1</sup>

Whilst we know that the above ālvārs had been visiting several shrines (tirupatis) singing about the respective deities and making their complete surrender to them and thus realizing all that they wanted, happiness here and happiness in everything, when we come to Periyālvār or Viṣṇucitta, we find that he worshipped, not at shrines but at his own residence, a small image of Śrī Kṛṣṇa. He decorated this image, sang songs to it, gave offering to it, played with it, indeed he made it his one single companion. God was worshipped as his child. A slight intimation of this attitude was already made by Śrī Kulaśekhara when he in the person of Devaki sang cradle-songs to Kṛṣṇa.<sup>2</sup> But this reaches a total action in Viṣṇucitta's life. It is mentioned in Īśvara Saṁhita that there are two kinds of icon-worship, svārtha and parārtha. That form which is worshipped by any individual at his own home as his personal companion, who protects him and grants him fruits is svārtham, whereas the communal deity installed in the temples is called parārtham. Prapatti can be made at either place. Viṣṇucitta worshipped in both ways as he seems to have supplied flower garlands to the God at the Srivilliputtur temple also, in addition to worshipping at home. Both are efficient as objects of worship and are to be known as one God only.

The child-mother relation as pointed out was already utilised by Śrī Kulaśekhara, just as the lover and beloved relationship was utilized by Śaṭagopa (in his Tiruviruttam and Tiruvoymozhi) and Śrī Kulaśekhara (Perumāl Tirumozhi V), and very early by Tirumalīśai's Nāmmukān Tiruvandūdi, v. 39, where the ālvār says that 'He will draw a mystic omen-circle on sand' a practice common among all young maidens waiting for their beloved to prophesy whether they will be successfully met. This whole process of expression of the relationship between man and God which is intimated to be one of dependence of man on god is reversed or inverted in the child-mother or father relationship which, psychologically speaking, is a defensive reaction of the ideal of non-seeking of anything from the Divine who is All and knows what the individual is and should be in his Divine Nature. Man's fullest surrender is only for the utter belonging to the Divine seeking nothing, asking nothing, and being nothing apart from him. This niskāma is the fullest point of surrender too as it is in karma or jñāna. This is a very unique development and most luminously is it clear in the experiences of Śrī Kulāśekhara. Tiruppāñālvār expanded the teaching of Śaṭagopa and praised above all the important place that Arca-worship and surrender to it means. Godā or Āndāl, the foster-daughter of Viṣṇu Citta (Periyālvār), in a very comprehensive work revealed a path of transformation of the love consciousness to the highest level of supramental union with God with the help of Ācāryas and worship of god as the beloved. Bhakti here was transformed into supreme bhakti, prema or priti.<sup>1</sup> Tirumāṅgai ālvār, the most prolific hymnist, has praised the Utter renunciation of self and feeling of kārpānya or helplessness or akimcānya as the most essential fact about śaraṇagati which leads to liberation. In this very important element of kārpānya and akimcānya there is built up the entire foundation of a total transformation due to a total surrender or offering or sacrifice.

<sup>1</sup> Rahasyatrayasūtra : Guruparemparāprabhāvam.

<sup>2</sup> Perumāl Tirumozhi, VI.

Todaradippadi ālvār accepted the doctrine of the Absolute devotion to be identical with the theory of akimcānya. In other respects his loyalty to the worship of the Arca is clearly visible.

This brief survey of the bhakti as viewed by the ālvārs clearly reveals that what they were inculcating was not the mere bhakti of devotional path prescribed to the orthodox followers of Vedic knowledge and Vedic karma as the fulfilment of their desires in God. On the contrary the bhakti of the ālvārs was definitely not limited to the Vedic jñāna or the Vedic karma but to Parama bhakti which is expressed by the total surrender of the individual seeking refuge and liberation and all fulfilment in and through God only. God dwells in man and all and it is man's business to make the body the temple of worship of the divine in man and in all. The Gītā intimated, as we have shown, that he who has the kārpanya, he who has found no other refuge, for him the only one course open is to surrender to the Divine. As is the goal so should be the means ; exalted ends require exalted powers of the Divine to lead man to them. This leads to the highest happiness, highest knowledge, highest Union.

<sup>1</sup> "Divine Lady": JSVOI, Vol. II, pt. 2.

All the Ācāryas of the Śrī Vaiṣṇavas beginning with Ālāṇḍār or Yāmunācārya accepted this to be the central truth of the Gītā. Śrī Rāmānuja, though he has not taught in the Śrī Gītābhāṣya about the efficacy of prapatti, has, in his Śaraṇāgati-gadya discussing the subsidiary nature of prapatti to Bhakti-yoga, said that prapatti is an independent means to God. In Bhakti yoga there are certain limitations as to varṇa and āśrama, not so in prapatti or refuge-seeking ; the only qualification for prapatti is to have no qualification, not even the ability to seek help oneself. For that is the state of utter or total disappearance of oneself from the field of action and is the state of utter vacuity or dynamic reception of help from the Divine. Into such a vessel alone does the supramental Grace descend.

Prapatti in addition to its general efficacy makes one not merely a sage and a superman or siddha ; it makes it possible for man to enjoy god here and now. The ālvārs in one sense can be said to be, in the language of the Advaita, Jīvanmuktas, *vibhūti*s of the divine and not freed souls. To Tirumalāśālālvār came the great truth that mind is not an obstruction or a means to vision of the Divine ( N. T. 81 ). Asking himself the question whether happiness could be had only in the state of release, the same ālvār says that happiness in the state of saṁsāra even can be had for it is after all not due to place that happiness results but due to the uninterrupted possession of the Love of God and his reciprocating Grace.

" O Lord decorated with honied tulaśī garland !
Even though I attain the blessedness immeasurable on attaining Heaven on separation from your feet the Love of thee which has fettered my mind to thee with the ten-fold rope ( of devotion ) firmly, will itself become my Happiness ( anāmaṣam )." ( N. T. 83 )

This view is also that of Āṇḍāl and others.

The ālvārs' bhakti thus is a more comprehensive and fundamentally universal devotion of God through surrender entire or total of the individual, whose all actions are refunded to the Divine, in and through whom the Divine Godhead acts through His perennial grace. It does not recognise difference of caste or even other types of adhikāra or fitness or capacity. This bhakti is the universal acceptance of God's temporal and Divine or transcendent Universes, wherein the devotee shall move as a child and companion and beloved and servant of the Divine, free and perfect, with a consciousness that is divinised.

THE POSITION OF A PREPOSITION IN THE LANGUAGE OF THE BRĀHMAṆAS*

BY

SIDDHESHWAR VARMA

The term "Preposition"

The term "preposition" has now become very loose, sometimes including, and sometimes excluding, verbal prefixes. In this paper the term "preposition" excludes verbal prefixes, signifying only its adnominal use, i. e. in connection with a case, nominal, pronominal or adjectival. The object of this paper is to investigate whether, in the prose of the Brāhmaṇas, there are any prepositions, in the strict sense, i. e. prepositions placed before a case, and if so, which are those prepositions? Or, are there any prepositions which are really postpositions, and if so, which are those post-positions?

Wackernagel, in his Vorlesungen über Syntax, II, p. 193, points out that in the classical prose of both Greek and Latin, as in modern German, the position of a preposition before a case is the rule. In this respect the prose of the Brāhmaṇas shows a considerable difference from Greek and Latin. Of the 41 so-called prepositions occurring in the Brāhmaṇas, only the following 12 can be strictly called prepositions, as they always precede a case:—

ā, sūkam, upari, tīras, pascāt, avastāt, adhasāt, prāk, parāḥ, arvāk, parācchinan, avāḥ.

Statistics indicating their frequency are as follows:—

* Abbreviations:—

AB	Altareya Brāhmaṇa, Bibliotheca Indica, 1895.
Śāh B	Śākhāyana Brāhmaṇa, Lindner's Edition, 1887.
GB	Gopatha Brāhmaṇa, Bibliotheca Indica, 1872.
TB	Taittirīya Brāhmaṇa, Ānanda Āśrama, Poona, 1898.
SB	Satapatha Brāhmaṇa, Bibliotheca Indica, 1893, and Weber's Edition, 1855.
JB	Jaiminiya Brāhmaṇa, Caland, 1919.
SB	Ṣaḍvīṃśa Brāhmaṇa, Vidyāsāgara's Edition, 1851.
JUB	Jaiminiya or Talavakāra Upaniṣad Brāhmaṇa, Oertel, 1894.
ŚāhB	Śaṅkhitopaniṣad Brāhmaṇa, Burnell, 1877.
SBK	Satapatha Brāhmaṇa of the Kāṇva recension, Caland, 1925.
TA	Taittirīya Āraṇyaka, Ānanda Āśrama, Poona, 1897-8.
AA	Altareya Āraṇyaka, Kelsh, 1919.
Tāp B	Tāpīya Māhā-Brāhmaṇa, Bibliotheca Indica, 1870-74.
SB	Sāmavidhāna Brāhmaṇa, Burnell, 1873.
MB	Mantra Brāhmaṇa, Satya-Vrata, 1890.

Preposition	Number of occurrences in the Brāhmanas.
ā "from"	47
sākam "with"	6
upari "above"	2
tīras "through," "beyond"	2
paścāt "behind"	2
avastāt "below"	2
adhasāt "under"	2
prāk "before"	2
parāṇ "beyond"	1
arvāk "below"	1
parācīnam "beyond"	3
avāṇ "below"	2

The above figures show that except in the case of ā, the frequency of the other prepositions (though some of them, like paścāt, are much more frequently used as adverbs) is so poor that it would be difficult to assert categorically that they were always used strictly as prepositions in the language. At any rate, they are strictly prepositions as we find them.

Examples:—

(1) ā

- ā nakhebhyaḥ* "up to the nails" (ŚB I. 4.3.10).
ā pratyāśravaṇāt "up to the announcement" (ŚB I. 5.2.9).
ā vaṣaṭkārāt "up to the utterance of vaṣaṭ" (ŚB I. 5.2.11).
ā uttamāyāḥ "up to the last one" (ŚB I. 5.2.13).
ā tisṛṣṭām dogdhoḥ "up to the milching of the three (cows)" (ŚB I. 7.1.15).
ā vedeḥ "up to the altar" (ŚB I. 9.2.24).
ā tamitoḥ "until exhaustion" (ŚB II. 4.2.21).
ā (a) stamayāt "up to the setting (of the sun)" (ŚB III. 2.2.1).
ā satyāyāi "up to the pressing (of Soma)" (ŚB III. 2.2.7).
ā (a) ntaṁ "up to the end" (ŚB III. 5.3.7).
ā mūlaśākhābhyāḥ "with the branches, beginning from the root"
 (AB II. 1).
ā sarvamedhāt "up to the Sarvamedha" (GB I. 2.4).
ā tṛtīyasavanāt "up to the third pressing" (ŚB IV. 1.2.26).
ā etasmāt kālāt "up to this time" (ŚB IV. 2.4.5).
ā mahatā ukthāt "up to the great Uktha" (ŚB XII. 6.1.41).
ā pipīlikābhyāḥ "upto ants" (ŚB XIV. 4.2.9).

ū pūrvābhyām anuyājyābhyām "up to the first two after-offerings" (Śān B I. 5).

ū haviṣkṛta udvādanāi "until the uttering aloud of the word haviṣ-kṛt" (Śān. B. VI. 13).

ū haryābhyām "up to the ears" (Tāp B VIII. 7.7).

ū daśamāt puruṣāt "up to the tenth man" (Tāp B XVIII. 9.4).

(2) sākam

sākam devānāḥ "with the gods" (ŚBK I. 6.4.8).

sākam aśvena "with the horse" (JB 63).

sākam sūryeṇa "with the sun" (TB I. 6.6.2).

(3) upari

upari bhūmeḥ "above the ground" (AA I. 2.4).

upari mūrdhnaḥ "above the head" (JUB I. 14.4.4).

(4) tiraḥ

tiraḥ...tanūmāsi "through the darkness" (ŚB I. 4.1.29).

tiraḥ...manuṣyebhyaḥ "beyond men" (ŚB III. 1.1.8).

(5) paścāt

paścād dhiṣṇasya "behind the seat" (AA. V. 1.4).

paścād grhyasyāgneḥ "behind the Grhya fire" (AB VIII. 10).

(6) avastāt

avastāt śirṣṇaḥ "below the head" (ŚB IX. 3.1.6).

avastād...dīvāḥ "under the firmament" ŚB (IX. 3.1.6)

(7) adhasāt

adhasād hanvoh "under the jaw-bones" (ŚB XIII. 2.3.4).

(8) prāk

prāg homāt "before the homa" (AB VII. 12).

prāg avakāśebhyaḥ "before the vacant places" (TA V. 11.6).

(9) parāḥ

parāḥ...itāḥ "beyond this" (Tāp B IX. 8.6).

(10) aroṇk

aroṇk sahasrāt "below a thousand" (Śān B XVIII. 3).

(11) parūcīnam

parūcīnam ādityāt "beyond the sun" (JB 4).

parūcīnam agniṣṭomāt "beyond Agniṣṭoma" (JB 63).

parūcīnam saṁvatsarāt "beyond the year" (JB 63).

(12) avān

avān nābhēḥ "below the navel" (ŚB VI. 1.1.3, ŚBK II. 2.4.10).

The following three may be also safely called prepositions though a few occurrences are also met with in which they are post-positions: —purā, arūcīnam, bahīrdhā.

The following figures will indicate their relative frequency:—

Preposition

Number of Occurrences
 Preceding a case    Succeeding a case

purā "before"	62	2
arūcīnam "on this side from"	9	1
bahirdhā "outside"	11	2

Examples :—

(1) purā

- purā...homaṭ* "before homa" (ŚB IV. 1.1.19).
purā āhutiḥhyah "before the offerings" (ŚB IV. 2.1.20).
purā tṛtīyasavanāt "before the third pressing" (ŚB IV. 3.5.8).
purā astamayāt "before (the sun's) setting" (ŚB IV. 5.3.11).
purā...staraṇāt "before the spreading" (SB I. 2.5.26).
purā...vadhāt "before killing" (ŚB I. 6.4.21).
purā vaṣaṭkārāt "before the utterance of vaṣaṭ" (ŚB I. 7.2.14).
purā...āyusaḥ "before (the normal) age" (SB II. 1.3.4).
purā...pravāditoh "before uttering" (AB II. 15).
purā āhānāt "before invocation" (AB II. 38).
purā asmāt sarvāt "before all this" (ŚB VI. 1.1.1).
purā paśoh "before the animal's (sacrifice)" (ŚB VI. 2.1.10).
purā...payasyājai "before the milk-offering" (ŚB VI. 2.2.39).
purā vasatyai "before the place of piling up fire" (ŚB VI. 8.1.12).
purā samvatsarāt "before a year" (GB I. 1.31).
purā jaraṣaḥ "before old age" (GB II. 2.19).
purā udatoḥ "before (the sun's) rising" (ŚBK I. 3. 1'1).
purā yajñāt "before the sacrifice" (ŚBK I. 5.1.22).
purā agnihotrāt "before Agnihotra" (ŚB XII. 4.3.2).
purā saṅgrāmāt "before a battle" (ŚBK II. 2.3.18).
purā barhiṣaḥ "before the grass" (ŚBK II. 2.3.23).
purā āhavanīyāt "before Āhavanīya" (ŚB XIV. 2'2'1).
purā kālāt "before time" (ŚB XIV. 5.1.11).
purā tamasaḥ "before darkness" (Śān B II. 9).
purā patnīacānyājebhyah "before the offerings to the wives" (Śān B XXVII. 4).

In the following occurrences purā is a postposition:—

- ataḥ purā* "before this" (ŚB VIII. 6.2.1).
tataḥ purā "before that" (ŚB IV. 1.3.12).

(2) arūcīnam

- arūcīnam divaḥ* "on this side of the firmament" (ŚB VI. 2.3.8).
arūcīnam antarikṣāt "on this side of the atmosphere" (ŚB VI. 2.3.8.; ŚB VIII. 2.1.2).

arvācīnam madhyāt "on this side of the middle region"

(ŚB VIII. 2.1.11).

arvācīnam ādityāt "on this side of the sun" (JB 4; ŚB X. 5.1.4).

Only in the following occurrence, arvācīnam is a postposition.—

tataḥ...arvācīnam "on this side of that place" (JB 94).

(3) bahirdhā

bahirdhā yajñāt "outside the sacrifice" (ŚB I. 3.1.11).

bahirdhā...agneḥ "outside the fire" (ŚB VI. 8.2.1).

bahirdhā...lokebhyah "outside the worlds" (ŚB IX. 2.1.21).

bahirdhā...prāṇebhyah "outside the breaths" (ŚB XI. 7.2.4).

bahirdhā...rūṣṭrāt "outside the kingdom" (ŚB XII. 9.3.4).

bahirdhā...āyathmāt "outside the abode" (ŚB XIII. 1.3.5).

In the following two occurrences bahirdhā is a postposition:—

asmāt...sarvaasmāt bahirdhā "outside all this" (ŚB X. 2.3.18).

ātmano bahirdhā "outside the body" (ŚB VIII. 7.2.16).

Now we come to six prepositions ṛte, antarā, upariṣṭāt, ūrdhvam, parasū and puras. One would hesitate to call them "prepositions" in the literal sense, because in a considerable minority of occurrences they also appear as postpositions. The following are the statistics of their relative frequency:—

Preposition.	Number of Occurrences
	Preceding a case	Succeeding a case.
ṛte "without"	18	4
antarā "between"	18	10
upariṣṭāt "after," "above"	17	9
ūrdhvam "above," "after"	26	9
parasū "before"	43	23
puras "before"	2	1

Examples:—

(1) ṛte (as a preposition)

ṛte svarāt "without tone" (JVB I. 21.9).

ṛte (a) unāt "without food" (Tāp B XVI. 8.9).

ṛte goḥ "without a cow" (ŚB II. 2.4.13).

ṛte yūpāt "without the sacrificial post" (ŚB III. 7.3.1).

ṛte ādibhyām "without both of us" (GB II. 1.17).

ṛte prāṇāt "without life" (ŚB VII. 3.1.45).

ṛte kṣatrīt "without the Kṣatriya caste" (ŚB IV. 1.4.2).

ṛte brahmaṇaḥ "without the Brāhmaṇa caste" (ŚB IV. 1.4.3).

ṛte cakṣurbhyām "without the two eyes" (ŚB XI. 1.6.29).

ṛte devabhyah "without the gods" (ŚB XIV. 2.2.8).

ṛte vācaḥ "without speech" (Śān B II. 7).

In the following four occurrences ṛte is a postposition :—

- tvad ṛte* "without thee" ( AB II. 27 ).
devatābhya ṛte "without the gods" ( ŚB XIII. 3.8.6 ).
mud ṛte "without me" ( ŚB XIV. 9.2.13 ).
prāṇebhya ṛte "without breaths" ( ŚB IX. 2.1.15 ).

(2) antarū ( as a preposition )

- antarū imam ca lokam amum ca* "between this and that world"
 ( ŚB IX. 2.3.17 )
antarū vedyantam ca gārhapatyam ca "between the margin of the altar and the Gārhapatya" ( ŚB X. 2.3.2 ).
antarū diśasca raśmībhīśca "between the directions and the rays" ( ŚB X. 5.4.4 ).
antarū dyāvopṛthivī "between heaven and earth" ( ŚB XIII. 3.8.6 ).
antarū pitarāṇ mātaraṇ ca "between father and mother" ( ŚB XIV. 9.1.4 ).
antarū ūrū "between the thighs" ( Śān B III. 9 ).
antarū imāṇ lokān "between these worlds" ( AB IV. 18 ).
antarū agnī "between the two fires" ( TB I. 4.4.10 ).
antarū hotuśca dhiṣṇiyāṇ brāhmaṇūccaḥśinaśca "between the seats of the hotar and the Brāhmaṇacchaḥśina" ( TB I. 7.6.1 ).
antarū śamyē "between the pegs of the yoke" ( Tāp B VI. 5.21 ).
antarū prāseṇau "between the ropes of the yoke" ( Tāp B VI. 5.21 ).
antarū agniṣṭomas "between the two Agniṣṭomas" ( Tāp B X. 4.2 ).
antarū utsedhaniśedhau "between the utsedha and the nisedha Sāmans" ( Tāp B XV. 9.12 ).

In the following occurrences antarū is a postposition :—

- śiraścaśiṣau ca antarū* "between the head and the shoulders" ( ŚB III. 3.2.18 ).
enāu antarū "between these two ( bullocks )" ( ŚB III. 3.4.12 ).
ene antarū "between these two ( bricks )" ( ŚB VIII. 6.1.22 ).
pade antarū "between the quarters of verses" ( JB 74 ).
udhayāu antarū "between both" ( JB 136 ).
pravargyam ca ādityam ca antarū "between the Pravargya and the sun" ( TA V. 3.1 ).

(3) upariṣṭāt ( as a preposition ).

- upariṣṭād jātavedasya* "after the hymn jātavedas" ( AB III. 36 ).
upariṣṭād etasyai "above this one" ( JVB I. 6.1 ).
upariṣṭāt śīrṣṇaḥ "on the head" ( ŚB V. 4.1.14 ).
upariṣṭād ratnānām "after (the offerings of) gems" ( ŚB. V.3.2.1 ).
upariṣṭāt saṁvatsarasya "after a year" ( JB 164 ).

- upariṣṭād viṣvataḥ* "after the midday" (Śān B XXIV, 3).
upariṣṭād madhucchandasya vaiśvadevasya "above the all gods of the Madhucchandasya" (Śān B XXIV, 1).
upariṣṭāt pragāthasya "after the Pragātha" (Śān B XIX, 10).
upariṣṭād mṛtyoḥ "after death" (ŚB XI, 2.3.5).
upariṣṭāt stotrasya "after the stotra" (ŚB IX, 4.4.11).

In the following occurrences upariṣṭāt is a postposition:—

- asyā upariṣṭāt* "after this" (ŚB, I, 7.2.19).
abhiṣekasya...upariṣṭāt "after the sprinkling" (ŚB V, 3.5.6).
ajasya upariṣṭāt "on the goat" (ŚB VI, 4.4.15).
āśādhya upariṣṭāt "after (full moon) in the Āśādhya" (Śān B I, 3).

(4) ūrdhvam (as a preposition).

- ūrdhvaṁ gārhapatyāt* "after the Gārhapatya" (ŚB X, 1.5.2).
ūrdhvaṁ sarvaśuśadhāt "after the Sarvaśuśadha sacrifice" (ŚB, X, 1.5.2).
ūrdhvam āhāvāt "after the invocation" (AB II, 38).
ūrdhvaṁ nābheḥ "above the navel" (ŚB VI, 1.1.3).
ūrdhvaṁ antarikṣāt "above the atmosphere" (ŚB VI, 2.3.8).
ūrdhvaṁ prithivyāḥ "above the earth" (ŚB VI, 2.3.8).
ūrdhvaṁ savanebhyāḥ "after the pressings" (ŚB XI, 5.9.7).
ūrdhvam asmād lokāt "above this world" (ŚB XIII, 6.1.10).
ūrdhvaṁ madhyāt "above the middle region" (ŚB XIII, 6.1.11).
ūrdhvaṁ...divaḥ "above the firmament" (ŚB XIV, 6.8.3).

As a postposition, ūrdhvam generally follows pronouns or pronominal adverbs only in two occurrences it follows a noun:—

- ita ūrdhvam* "after this" (ŚB VI, 2, 3.3, ŚB VI, 7, 2, 9; SB VII, 5, 1, 36; SB VIII, 5, 1, 2).
ata ūrdhvam "after this" (GB I, 3, 18; ŚB X, 5, 1, 4; GB II, 2, 14).
tata ūrdhvam "after that" (Śā B II, 2, 1).
asya ūrdhvam "after this" (AA V, 1, 4).
pratihārād ūrdhvam "after the Pratihāra" (Śān B XVII, 6).
prayātād ūrdhvam "after (the fire) brought on the altar" (ŚB X, 1, 4, 11).

(5) purastāt (as a preposition).

- purastāt purnamāṣasya* "before the full moon of Phālguna" (ŚB I, 6, 2, 6).
purastād abhiṣekasya "before the sprinkling" (ŚB V, 3, 5, 6).
purastāt sūktasya "before the hymn" (AB II, 33).
purastād ātmanaḥ "before the body" (ŚB VI, 5, 3, 4).
purastād...eṣām "before them" (GB I, 2, 24).

- purastāt viśvataḥ* "before midday" (GB I. 2.14).
purastāt dīkṣāyūḥ "before initiation" (GB II. 2. 11).
purastāt stotrasya "before stotra" (SB IX. 4. 4. 11).
purastāt pragāthasya "before the Pragātha" (Śān B X. 2).
purastāt paridhāniyūḥ "before the final verse" (Śān B XVIII. 3).
purastāt...nidhanasya "before the conclusion" (JB 18).
purastāt prṣṭhyasya śaḍahasya "before the Prṣṭhya-śaḍaha" (JB 163).
purastāt ukthūnām "before the litanies" (AB III. 10).
purastāt mūrutasya "before the hymn to the Marutas" (AB VI. 30).
purastāt dhruvāyai "before the ladle called Dhruvā" (SB I. 3.1.13).
purastāt phālgunāyai paurṇamāsya "before the full moon of Phālguna" (SB II. 6.3. 11).

In the following occurrences purastāt occurs as a postposition:—

- āhavanīyāgārasya purastāt* "before the place for the Āhavanīya" (SB I. 7.1.8).

- tasya...purastāt* "before it", (AB II. 6).
tūbhyām...purastāt "before both of them" (SB IV. 1.5,16).
etasya karmaṇaḥ purastāt "before this rite" (SB VII. 2.3.7).
etasya ṛtoḥ purastāt "before this season" (SB VIII. 3.2.6).
sainatsarasasya purastāt "before the year" (JB 157).
sarvāsām purastāt "before all" (AB III. 48).
kṣatrasya purastāt "before the Kṣatriya" (Tap B II. 16.4).

(6) puras (as a preposition).

- purāḥ...ebhyaḥ lokēbhyāḥ* "before these worlds" (SB VI. 3.3.1).
purāḥ cakram "before the wheel" (JB 86).

As a postposition:—

- asmaḥ purāḥ* "before us" (SBK II. 2.1.18).

It will appear, therefore, that though in a large majority of occurrences ṛte etc. are used as prepositions, in a considerable minority of occurrences they are also used as postpositions. When we take into account the fact that in classical Sanskrit these five indeclinables have become generally postpositions, it may perhaps be presumed that their treatment as postpositions started in the age of the Brāhmaṇas and gradually went on increasing.

The following seven "prepositions" are strictly postpositions, being always placed after a case:

- vinā, pūrvam, ardhā, adhaḥ, accha, sūrdham, agre.*

The following figures will indicate the relative frequency:—

- "Preposition" (really postposition)    Number of occurrences.

vinā "without", "excepting"	1
pūrvam "before"	1
arvāṇ "on this side of"	2
adhaḥ "below"	1
accha "towards"	2
sārdham "with"	2
agre "before"	2

The number of occurrences of these postpositions is evidently too meagre, and so it will not be safe to assert without reserve that they were always actually postpositions, though they are postpositions as we actually find them.

Examples :—

- (1) vinā
pradeśamūtraṇ vinā "excepting the distance of a span" (ŚB III. 5. 4. 5)
- (2) pūrvam
kṣatrūṇ pūrvam "before the Kṣatriya" (AB VIII. 1).
- (3) arvāṇ
tataḥ...arvāṇ "on this side of it" (AB VII. 1), amutaḥ...arvāṇ "on this side of it" (TA V. 12.3).
- (4) adhaḥ
ātmano (a)dhaḥ "below the body" (ŚB IV. 2.4.15).
- (5) accha
Āṅgīraso (a)ccha "to Āṅgīrasas" (ŚB III. 5.1.16), agre samam...accha "towards Soma" (AB III. 25.)
- (6) sārdham
vidyayā sārdham "with knowledge" (Sām B 3), pañcāśatā sārdham "with (the other) fifty" (AB VII. 18).
- (7) agre
asmūd agre "before him" (Sām B XXIII. 2), ṛtvijām agre "before the priests" (AB V. 34).

The four "prepositions" prati, anu, abhi and adhi may also be safely called postpositions, considering the overwhelming majority of their occurrences as postpositions.

The following figures will indicate their relative frequency —

"Preposition" (really postposition)	Number of Occurrences
	Succeeding the case	Preceding the case
prati "towards," "for," "to"	27	1
anu "after"	125	10
abhi "for," "towards"	54	6
adhi "on," "from"	91	4

Examples

(1) prati (as a postposition)

- savanūni prati* "for the pressings" (ŚB VI. 2.2.10)
madhyam prati "about the middle" (ŚB IV. 6.8.5).
tam prati "to him" (ŚB I. 4.3. 11-20; ŚB I. 6.1. 16-18).
enām prati "to it" (ŚB II. 2.1.16).
parivyayaṇam prati "about the waist" (ŚB III. 7.1.13).
vanaspatin prati "for the trees" (ŚB VI. 6.3.3.).
tṛtīyasavanam prati "about (the time of) the third pressing" (GB II. 6.6).
ṛṣin prati "for the sages" (ŚBK II. 1.2.8).
tat prati "towards it" (ŚB VII. 1.1.44).
padam prati "for the quarter (of a verse)" (ŚB XIV. 8.15.8).
trayān vidyān prati "for the three-fold lore" (Śaṅ B VI. 12).
baliṣṭpavamānūn prati "in comparison with baliṣṭpavamāna" JB.92
pādau...prati "at the feet" (JB 92).
Yajñāyajñāyām prati "in comparison with the yajñāyajñāya" (JB 92).
puruṣān puruṣān prati "to each and every man" (AA III. 2. 3).
ṛcam sūktam prati "(a counter part) to a verse (even) to a hymn" (AB III. 11).
imam...prati "about him" (AB VIII. 7).
sūryasyodayanam prati "about the sunrise" (TA I. 6. 1).
trīn stomān prati "for the three Stomas" (Tāp B II. 5. 2).
stotraṃ prati "for the Stotra" (Tāp B XIX. 13. 8).
Kārapacavaṃ prati "about the country named Kārapacava" (Tāp B XXV. 10. 23).
triplakṣm prati "about the country named Triplakṣa" (Tāp B XXV. 13. 4).

Only in the following occurrence, prati is a real preposition.

prati prajñāyai "for enlightenment" (TB I. 2. 5. 3).

(2) anu (as a post position)

- etad anu* "after this" (ŚB I. 2. 2. 17).
juhūm anu "having a share in the ladle called juhū" (ŚB I. 3. 2. 11).
dhruvām anu "having a share in the ladle called dhruvā" (ŚB I. 4. 5. 6).
manuṣyān anu "following the men" (ŚB I. 5. 2. 4).
devān anu "following the gods" (ŚB I. 5. 2. 4).
yajñam...anu "depending upon the sacrifice" (ŚB I. 8. 3. 27).
patim...anu "depending upon the husband" (ŚB I. 9. 3. 14).

- prāṇam anu* "after the breath" (ŚB II. 2. 1. 10).
pitarām anu "after the father" (ŚB II. 2. 4. 11).
asmūn anu "after us" (ŚB II. 2.4.11).
anupashitām anu "according to the absence" (ŚB II. 3.1.13).
devayam...anu "according to both" (ŚB II. 3.1.24).
toṣm anu "after thee" (ŚB II. 4.2.19).
agnīm...anu "after Agni" (ŚB II. 5.1.19).
avāntaradiśo (a)nu "in the intermediate directions" (ŚB II. 6.1.10).
dīkṣitam...anu "after the initiated one" (ŚB III. 2.1.31).
prthivīm anu "along the earth" (AB VIII. 27).
nihitām anu "in accordance with the action" (AB VIII. 14).
bhreṣam anu "through the failure" (AB V. 33).
yāvad anu prthivī "as far as the earth extends" (AA II. 1.7).
kṣatrah ca...viśah ca anu "depending upon the Kṣatriya and the Vaiśya" (JB 137).
yajñāyajñāyaḥ chidram anu "after the yajñāyajñāya is faulty"
 (JB 62).
sarvān lokān anu "along all the worlds" (Śaṅ B XX. 1).
ukthūnām anu "on account of the coming together of hymns" (Śaṅ B XI. 8).

In the following few examples, anu is a real preposition:—

- anu diśah* "along the directions" (ŚB X. 6.3.2).
anu homam "according to the Homa" (ŚB IV. 5.4.8).
anu mātrām "according to the magnitude" (ŚBK II. 1.3.1).
anu vyṣḍhīm "in view of the adversity" (ŚB II. 3.1.7).
anu prajātim "according to the birth" (ŚB II. 3.1.6).
anu...apahatīm "after the destruction" (AB VI. 1).
indrasyānu vyṣḍhīm "in accordance with the deprivation of Indra" (AB VII. 28).

(3) abhi (as a postposition)

- kam abhi* "for whom?" (ŚB I. 2. 3. 4).
prajāṃ abhi "for progeny" (ŚB II. 3. 1. 29).
ātmanam abhi "for the body" (ŚB II. 3. 1. 29).
prācīm abhi "towards the east" (ŚB II. 3. 3. 16).
anargam lokam abhi "for paradise" (ŚB II. 3. 3. 16).
anyatra carantam abhi "towards one who is walking elsewhere"
 (ŚB III. 2. 2. 27).
svapantam abhi "towards one who is sleeping" (ŚB III. 2. 2. 27).
devayam...abhi "for two purposes" (ŚB III. 5. 4. 1).
agnīdhram abhi "about (i.e. near) the Āgnīdhra" (ŚB III. 6. 1. 28).
kṣatriyam abhi "towards the Kṣatriya" (ŚB III. 9. 3. 3).

- vārṣikam abhi* "towards the rainy season" (ŚB V. 5. 2. 4).
ātmano (a)ḥi prāṇāḥ "breaths in the body" (Śaṅ B II. 2).
tau...abhi...vajram "the bolt against them" (Śaṅ B III. 6).
bṛhatīm...abhi vratam "the vow with regard to the Brhātī" (Śaṅ B XVIII. 2).
mām abhi udaya "from me thou shalt rise" (JB 117).
gāyatrīm...abhi "like Gāyatrī" (JB 131).
udantam abhi "towards the border" (AB III. 13).
senām abhi "towards the army" (AB III. 23).
antarikṣalokam abhi "towards the atmospheric world" (AB VI. 9).
svasārīram abhi "in your own body" (TB I. 2. 1. 8).
prūṣaṇīyam abhi "for the Prūṣaṇīya ceremony" (TB I. 5. 9. 3).
śrīyam abhi "towards prosperity" (TB I. 7. 5. 1).
prajāpātim abhi "towards (i.e. near) Prajāpati" (TB II. 1. 6. 5).
apo (a)ḥi amrīyata "died in the waters" (TB III. 2. 5. 1).
imām lokān abhi "unto these worlds" (JVB I. 10. 1).
vāyūm abhi "to Vāyu" (JVB III. 21. 1).
sad abhi "for a substantial object" (Tāp B IV. 8. 13).
śvasānam abhi "for (the ceremony) on the next day" (Tāp B IV. 9. 18).
devām abhi "towards the gods" (Tāp B XVIII. 1. 4).

In the following occurrences abhi is a real preposition:—

- abhi śuktāni ca kṛṣṇāni lomāni* "on the white and dark hair" (ŚB VI. 7. 1. 7).
abhi dvīdevatyān "for the two deities" (ŚB IV. 1. 5. 16).
abhi naḥ "towards us" (JB 211).
abhi mā "towards me" (JB 41).
abhi...enūḥ "towards them" (AB II. 12).
abhi manase (a) syamānaḥ "driven to thought" (AA II. 3. 5).

(4) adhi (as a postposition)

- kṛṣṇājinam adhi* "on the black antelope's skin" (ŚB I. 1. 4. 3).
dīco (a)dhi "from the sky" (ŚB I. 2. 4. 18).
āhartari...adhi "on the bringer" (ŚB I. 3. 3. 10).
amasyā adhi "after this" (ŚB I. 7. 2. 16).
agneradhi "from Agni" (ŚB I. 9. 1. 19).
adbhāyo (a)dhi "from the waters" (ŚB II. 6. 3. 7).
yayoh...adhi "on which" (ŚB III. 1. 3. 26).
ājyauṣṭāpānyā adhi "on the pan for melting ghee" (ŚB III. 1. 4. 17).
ēṣu lokeṣu adhi "in these worlds" (ŚB III. 2. 1. 3).
upānaḍbhyaṁ adhi "after (the wearing of) sandals" (ŚB V. 5. 3. 7).
asyāḥ...adhi "on this (earth)" (ŚB VI. 1. 2. 29).

- tapaso (a)dhi* "after pain" (ŚB VI. 1. 3. 9).
paśubhyo (a)dhi "from animals" (ŚB VI. 5. 1. 4).
relaso (a)dhi "on the seed" (ŚB VII. 1. 1. 10).
amuto (a)dhi "beyond that world" (ŚB VII. 1. 1. 35).
ātmano (a)dhi "from the body" (ŚB VII. 4. 1. 2).
prāṇebhyaḥ...adhi "from the breaths" (ŚB VII. 5. 2. 6).
śahasre (a)dhi "below (i. e. less than) a thousand"
 (ŚB IV. 5. 8. 14).
aśmano (a)dhi "from the cloud" (ŚB IX. 1. 2. 4).
vanaspatibhyo (a)dhi "from the trees" (ŚB IX. 1. 2. 5).
yajamānād adhi "after the Yajamāna" (ŚB IX. 3. 3. 17).
devabhyo (a)dhi "after the gods" (ŚB IX. 3. 3. 17).
goradhi "after the cow" (ŚB IX. 3. 3. 17).
mithunād...adhi "from the couple" (ŚB IX. 4. 1. 5).
prthivyām adhi "on the earth" (ŚB IX. 5. 1. 53).
prajāpateradhi "after Prajāpati" (ŚB XI. 1. 6. 14).
asmāt...adhi "from him" (ŚB XII. 5. 2. 15).
ūrjī...adhi "on strength" (ŚB XII. 8. 3. 5).
tasmin...adhi "on it" (ŚB XIII. 2. 8. 1).
sukaso (a)dhi "from the shed" (ŚB XIII. 5. 2. 16).
bṛhatyām adhi "on the Bṛhatī" (ŚB XIII. 5. 4. 28).
gāyatre (a)dhi "on the Gāyatrī" (Śān B XIV. 3).
mat...adhi "from me" (JB 48).
ātmanah...adhi "from the Ātman" (JB 48).
ahorātrayoh...adhi "for (the possession of) the day and the night" (JB 74).
asmīn...adhi "on this (dog)" (JB 92).
praddānāt...adhi "on the offering" (JB 103).
uraso (a)dhi "from the breast" (JB 150).
ūrōradhi "from the thigh" (JB 198).
śiśne (a)dhi "on the penis" (AB III. 37).
agneḥ...adhi "over Agni" (AB IV. 7).
ṛṅasbhyo (a)dhi "after those which contain a ṛ" (AB V. 9).
baśṭājīnam adhi "on a goat's hide" (TB I. 3. 7. 7).
pitṛ...adhi "after the father" (TB I. 3. 10. 2).
yeneradhi "from the cause" (TB I. 4. 4. 8).
śīrṣam adhi "on the head" (TB I. 6. 5. 4).
chandaso (a)dhi "from the metre" (TB III. 8. 12. 1).
caturhatyubhyo (a)dhi "from the four mantras called the caturhatar" (TB III. 12. 5. 1).
sarvasmād bhuvanād adhi "over the whole world" (TA I. 2. 1).
kaśyapād adhi "through Kaśyapa" (TA I. 7. 2).

vāyora adhi "from Vāyu" (JUB IV. 14. 4).

abhre bhya (a) dhi "from the clouds" (JUB IV. 14. 4).

viditū adhi "from the known" (JUB IV. 18. 4).

simā bhya (a) dhi "from the Sāmas called the Simās" (Tāṇ B XIII. 9. 4)

pāp mano (a) dhi "from evil" (Tāṇ B XVII. 1. 9).

kṛṣṇā jine (a) adhi "on the black antelope's skin" (Tāṇ B XVII. 11. 8.)

vīrye... adhi "on the power" (Tāṇ B XVIII. 8. 8).

trṣṭubh (a) dhi "on (the use of) the Trṣṭubh" (Tāṇ B XXI. 9. 13).

In the following occurrences adhi is a real preposition:—

adhi prajāpate "from Prajāpati" (Tāṇ B XX. 4. 2).

adhi... asmin... loke "upon this world" (JB 103).

adhi... ame "over (his) food" (AA II. 3. 1).

adhi yone "from the origin" (SB VIII. 2. 2. 5).

adhi... samānām "over his friends" (AA II. 3. 1).

One would hesitate to call the following nine indeclinables as postpositions, for in a considerable minority of occurrences they also occur as prepositions, as the figures given below will show:—

Preposition	Number of Occurrences
	Succeeding a case	Preceding a case
ati "over", "above"	6	2
antikam "near"	5	1
abhlāt "around"	20	12
parastāt "beyond, after"	8	4
paras "beyond"	5	3
antareva "between"	48	16
antar "in"	26	14
saha "with"	53	26
ardham "near"	3	1

Examples:—

(1) ati (as a postposition)

imām lokām ati "beyond these worlds" (SB I. 2. 1. 12)

sarvam lokamati "above the whole world" (AA II. 3. 3)

sahasram ati "over a thousand" (Sāṇ B XVIII. 3)

As a preposition:—

atimām lokām "beyond these worlds" (SB XI. 1. 2. 8)

ati... ātmanam "exceeding oneself" (AB IV. 6)

(2) antikam (as a postposition)

tasya... antikam "near him" (SB I. 4. 5. 3)

aśvatthasyāntikam "near the fig tree" (SB XIII. 8. 1. 16)

asyā antikam "near her" (JB 205).

me (a)ntikam "near me" (JB 205).

asyāntikam "in his neighbourhood" (JVB II. 14. 4).

As a preposition:—

antikam...asya "near it" (GB II 2. 4).

(3) abhitāḥ (as a postposition) vapām abhitāḥ "on both sides of the caul" (ŚB VI. 3. 1. 20).

tan...abhitāḥ "around him" (ŚBK I. 4. 3. 4).

agnim...abhitāḥ "around Agni" (ŚBK II. 2. 3. 14).

enam abhitāḥ "around him" (ŚB IV. 3. 4. 11).

asyābhitāḥ "around him" (ŚB VIII 5. 1. 15).

yajūṁśyabhitāḥ "on both sides of the yajus verses"

(ŚB IX. 1. 1. 44).

yūpam abhitāḥ "on both sides of the sacrificial post"

(ŚB XIII. 2. 6. 9).

atirūtram abhitāḥ "on both sides of the Atirārta ceremony"

(ŚB XIII. 6. 1. 9).

ātmanam abhitāḥ "about the body" (Śaṅ B XVI. 10).

divākīrtiyam abhitāḥ "on both sides of the divākīrtiya chant"

(Tāp B XXIV. 14. 4).

As a preposition:—

abhito (a)gnim "around the fire" (ŚB I. 3. 5. 15).

abhitāḥ...śiraḥ "about the head" (ŚB III. 2. 3. 20).

abhita ātithyam "on both sides of the Ātithya ceremony"

(ŚB III. 4. 1. 1).

abhito nāsikām "on both sides of the nose" (ŚB IV. 2. 1. 25).

abhito yūpam "on both sides of the sacrificial post".

(ŚB IV 2. 1. 25).

abhita itaras "around the other two" (Śaṅ B XIII. 5).

abhito viśuvantam "on both sides of the Viśuvant day".

(Śaṅ B XXVI. 1).

abhitāḥ...agnim "round Agni" (AA II. 1. 1).

abhito hotṛśadanam "around the seat of the hotar" (AA V. I. 3).

abhito a niruktam "round the hymn for the Rbhus" (AB III. 30).

abhito athakāram "on both sides of the word atha"

(Tāp B. XIII. 4. 4).

(4) parastāt (as a postposition)

sahśatsarasya parastāt "after a year" (AB II. 33).

etāvalatḥ kālasya parastāt "after so much time" (ŚB X. 6. 5. 4).

tasya parastāt "after it" (Śaṅ B XVI. 5)

etasya brhātisahasrasya sampannasya parastāt "after this being.

produced as a thousand Br̥hati " ( AA II. 2. 4 ).

As a preposition :—

parastūt sāmudheninām "after the Sāmudhenī verses" ( Śān B III. 3 ).

parastūt antarikṣasya "beyond the atmosphere" ( JB 103 ).

parastūt pavitrasya "after the filtering cloth" ( TB I. 4. 1. 1 ).

parastūt nakṣairāṇām "beyond the stars" ( TB I. 5. 3. 4 ).

( 5 ) para ( as a postposition ).

asmāt paraḥ "away from us" ( ŚB I. 2. 3. 4 ).

te paraḥ "far from thee" ( ŚB I. 3. 2. 15 ).

itāḥ paraḥ "except there" ( ŚB VI. 1. 3. 17 ).

kūpasya paraḥ "beyond a well" ( JB 103 ).

dvitīyūt...lokāt paraḥ "beyond the second world"

( Tān B XX. 11. 6 ).

As a preposition :—

paraḥ mūjavataḥ "beyond the Mūjavat Mountain" ( ŚB II. 6. 2. 17 ).

paraḥ...asmāḥlokāt "beyond this world" ( GB II. 6. 2 ).

( 6 ) antareṇa ( as a postposition )

te (a)ntareṇa "between these two" ( AB I. 29 ).

imāu lokāvantareṇa "between these two worlds" ( ŚB IX. 2. 3. 14 ).

dyāvopṛthivī antareṇa "between heaven and earth" ( ŚB XI. 5. 7. 2 ).

puroḍāśūvantareṇa "between the two cakes" ( Śān B III. 6 ).

oṣṭhāvantareṇa "between the lips" ( Śān B III. 7 ).

ardharcūvantareṇa "between two half-verses" ( Śān B XI. 1 ).

prūtaranuvākaḥ copāśīṣvantaryāṇau cūntareṇa "between the morning litany and the Upāśīṣu and Antaryāma cups"

( Śān B XI. 8 ).

pūroruṇ ca sūktam cūntareṇa "between the Pūroruṇ and the hymn" ( Śān B XIV. 4 ).

gāyatrīśca jagatīścūntareṇa "between the Gāyatrī and Jagatī verses" ( Śān B XVII. 9 ). ukthe (a)ntareṇa "between the two litanies" ( Śān B XXX. 1 ).

tūnantareṇa "among them" ( ŚB I. 1 ).

pūrvārūpattararūpe (a)ntareṇa "between the anterior and the posterior forms" ( AA III. 1. 5 ).

gārhapatyāhavanīyāvantareṇa "between gārhapatya and Āhavanīya" ( AB VII. 12 ).

tad ubhayaṃ antareṇa "between these two" ( AB VIII. 15 ).

ete devate (a)ntareṇa "between these two deities"

( TB III. 10. 11. 7 )

ubhe diśāvantareṇa "between both the directions"

( ŚB XIII. 8. 1. 5 )

prāṇām antareṇa "without the breaths" (Śaṅ B XXV. 12)

As a real preposition—

antareṇa sadah...havidhūnūni "between the shed and the carts" (AB I. 30),

antareṇa parisṛtaḥ "in the midst of the small stones"
(ŚB VII. 2. 2. 9.)

antareṇa triṣṭubhaśca kakubhaśca "between the triṣṭubhas and the kakubhas" (ŚB VIII. 6. 2. 10)

antareṇa pakṣasamdhim "within the joint on the side"
(ŚB VII. 3. 1. 21)

antareṇa vedīm colliravedīm ca "between the altar and the northern adjunct altar" (ŚB VII. 3. 1. 27)

antareṇa yūpaṃ cūgnīm ca "between the sacrificial post and fire" (ŚB IV. 5. 2. 8)

antareṇa dakṣiṇām diśam "in the southern direction"
(ŚB VIII. 2. 1. 9)

antareṇaṅnī "between the two fires" (ŚB XII. 4. 1. 2)

antareṇorū "between the thighs" (ŚB XII. 5. 2. 7)

antareṇa stanaṃ vā bhruvaṃ vā "between the breasts or the eyebrows" (ŚB XIV. 9. 4. 5)

antareṇa catvūthkarau "between the pit and the mound"
(Śaṅ B XVIII. 9)

antareṇaṅnīnam "without the body" (Śaṅ B XXV. 12)

antareṇa tāluke "between the palates" (TA VII. 6. 1)

(7) antar (as a postposition).

vraje (a)ntaḥ "within the stable" (ŚB I. 3. 4. 16)

kuṣṭhorantaḥ "in two receptacles (or instruments)" (ŚB III. 6. 2. 9)

puruse (a)ntaḥ "into man" (ŚB V. 2. 4. 10)

yonau antaḥ "in the womb" (ŚB X. 2. 3. 6)

amṛte (a)ntaḥ "in immortality" (ŚB X. 5. 2. 3.)

apsu antaḥ "in the waters" (ŚB X. 5. 4. 3)

keṣu antaḥ "in which things" (ŚB XIII. 5. 2. 15)

samudre (a)ntaḥ "in the ocean" (JB 199)

bhuvaneṣu antaḥ "in the worlds" (AA II. 1. 6)

asmin...antaḥ "within it" (JUB I. 20. 4)

akṣamantaḥ "within the eye" (JUB I. 41. 7)

gurbhe (a)ntaḥ "within the womb" (JUB III. 10. 12)

samvatsare (a)ntaḥ "in the year" (Tāp B XVIII. 9. 7.)

As a preposition:—

antar vedyām "within the altar" (GB II. 4. 6)

antarātman "in the soul" (ŚB X. 6. 3. 2)

82 [Annals, B. O. R. I.]

antarudare "in the abdomen" (ŚB XI. 5. 2. 5)

antaḥ pitruṣe "in man" (ŚB XIV. 8. 10. 1).

antar vṛtre "within Vṛtra" (Śaṅ B XV. 2).

antaḥ cakṣuṣi "in the eye" (ŚB II. 6).

antaḥ candraṃsasi "in the moon" (JB 7).

antar haviṛdhāne "in the cart" (JB 10).

antar asmin "in it" (TB II. 8. 8. 10).

(8) saha (as a postposition)

indreṇa saha "with Indra" (ŚB I. 2. 3. 2).

tena...saha "with him" (ŚB I. 6. 4. 2).

sakhibhṛjām...saha "with two friends" (ŚB I. 6. 4. 3).

prāṇaiḥ...saha "with breaths" (ŚB I. 9. 1. 15).

teṣāṃ saha yeṣāṃ saha "(offering) to them with whom he is" (ŚB II. 4. 2. 19).

saha...ulbena "with foetus" (AB I. 3).

devaiḥ saha "with the gods" (AB I. 28).

vidyayā saha "with knowledge" (ŚB VI. 3. 1. 10).

kṛtṛyā saha "with the earth" (GB I. 3. 22).

stomena saha "with a Stoma (song of praise)" (GB I. 5. 24).

anyayā saha "with another" (GB II. 3. 18).

yeṇa...saha "with which" (GB II. 6. 6).

avadānena saha "with a fragment" (ŚBK I. 5. 1. 33).

jarāyuyā saha "with the after birth" (ŚB IV. 5. 2. 5).

yugmābhīḥ saha "with you" (ŚB VIII. 4. 2. 2).

devaiḥ saha "with the gods" (ŚB VII. 6. 3. 23).

mithunena saha "with a pair" (ŚB IX. 4. 1. 7-12).

annena saha "with food" (ŚB X. 4. 1. 21).

namucinā...asureṇa saha "with the demon Namuci" (ŚB XII. 7. 1. 10).

vāvātayā saha "with the queen named vāvātā" jyotiṣā saha "with light" (ŚB XIV. 3. 1. 31).

prāṇaiḥ saha "with breaths" (ŚB XIV. 4. 3. 26).

strībhiḥ saha "with women" (ŚB XIV. 7. 1. 14).

vidyayā saha "with knowledge" (Śaṅ B 3).

ṛtubhiḥ...saha "with the seasons" (Śaṅ B VII. 10).

marudbhīḥ...saha "with the Marutas" (JB 54).

vīraiḥ saha "with brave men" (JB 94).

kalibhiḥ saha "with the Kalis" (JB 210).

yajñena...saha "with the sacrifice" (TB I. 3. 10. 10).

mātrā saha "with (my) mother" (TB II. 1. 1. 3).

ṛājaputrāiḥ saha "with princes" (TB III. 8. 5. 1).

arājabhiḥ...saha "with those unfit for kingship" (TB III. 8. 5. 1).
sūtagrāmanībhiḥ saha "with chariot drivers and village head-men" (TB III. 8. 5. 2).

ksattrīṣaṃgrāhītibhiḥ saha "with distributors of food and trainers of horses" (TB III. 8. 5).

aṅgaḥ...saha "with (his) limbs" (JUB I. 48. 3)

māṃsaḥ...saha "with meats" (JUB I. 4. 8. 5).

mādhyandīnena savanena saha "with the midday pressing (Tāp B VIII. 3. 5).

vīryeṇa saha "with strength" (Tāp B XIII. 2. 6).

As a preposition :—

saha vaśaṣṭkūreṇa "with the utterance of vaśaṣṭ" (ŚB I. 7. 2. 12).

saha...vāsasū "with a garment" (AB I. 3).

saha...ulbena "with the after birth" (AB I. 3).

saha...ahnā "with day" (GB II. 4. 10).

saha...vācū "with speech" (ŚBK I. 5. 1. 26).

saha trīvanūktābhyām "with those recited three times"
 (ŚB VII. 3. 2. 9).

saha ojasū "with power" (ŚB IV. 3. 3. 9).

saha śarīreṇa "with the body" (ŚB X. 4. 3. 9).

saha mithunena "with a pair" (ŚB VIII. 6. 1. 12).

saha prajāyū "with offspring" (ŚB VIII. 6. 1. 21).

saha patnībhiḥ "with wives" (Śān B XII. 3).

saha rājñā "with the king" (Śān B XXVII. 6).

saha sarveṇa...yajñeṇa "with the whole sacrifice" (JB 102).

saha śraddhaya "with faith" (AB VIII. 15).

saha prāṇeṇa "with the breath" (JUB III. 33. 3).

saha saṃgrāhitrū "with the trainer of horses" (TB I. 7. 9. 6).

saha...manasā prāṇeṇa svareṇa "with the mind, breath and voice" (JUB III. 34. 3).

saha nidhanena "with the nidhana" (Tāp B V. 5. 8).

saha ghoṣaiḥ "with the sounds" (Tāp B VII. 8. 14).

(9) ardham (as a postposition)

āhavanīyaśyārdham "near the Āhavanīya" (ŚB VII. 3. 1. 6).

naḥ...ardham "near (from) us" (ŚB XI. 4. 1. 2).

asyārdham "near it" (ŚB II. 3. 10. 3).

As a preposition :—

ardham āgnīdhrasya "near the Āgnīdhra" (ŚB III. 6. 1. 28).

General Results—

The general results from the above data may be tabulated as follows :—

Prepositions

Strictly	Safely	Doubtfully
ū "upto"	purā "before"	ste "without"
sūkam "with"	ariūcinam "on this side"	antarū "between"
upari "above"	bahirdhā "outside"	uparistū "after"
tīras "through"		ūrdhvam "after"
pāścāt "behind"		parastū "after"
avasūt "below"		puras "before"
adhasūt "below"
prāk "before"
parā "beyond"
arvāk "below"
parūcinam "beyond"
avān "below"

Postpositions

Strictly	Safely	Doubtfully
vinū "without"	prati "towards"	ati "above"
pūream "before"	anu "after"	antikam "near"
area "on this side of"	abhi "for, towards"	abhitah "around"
adhas "below"	adhi "on, from"	parastat "beyond"
accha "towards"		"after"
sārdham "with"		paras "beyond"
agre "before"		antareṇa "between"
		antar "in"
		saha "with"
		ardham "near"

From the above list, we get 21 prepositions, and 20 postpositions. The meaning conveyed by them, when used as prepositions or postpositions, does not differ much. Thus prāk, purā and puras when used as prepositions signify "before" but pūream and agre when used as prepositions similarly signify "before". The only semantic difference lies in a larger variety of meanings when they are used as postpositions, e. g. the sense of "near" (antikam, ardham), towards (accha, abhi, prati), "from" (adhi), "around" (abhitah) is generally conveyed by postpositions.

Curiously enough, among prepositions ū is the only one which occurs as a verbal prefix as well: the other prepositions (strictly used) have never occurred as verbal prefixes. Regarding ū Delbrück (Altindo Syntax, p. 432) says "the statement that the preposition governs a case is at the most applicable to ā and purū in their connection with the ablative, for the period with which we are concerned." i. e. the adnominal use of ā was the earliest to appear. Was the strict use of ā as a preposition due to the fact that being the first to emerge in connection with a case, the habit of placing the prefix before a verb reacted on the preposition's adnominal use?

As many as five postpositions, however, occur as verbal prefixes as well. They are prati, anu, abhi, and ati.

Moreover, the largest number of occurrences, whether as prepositions or postpositions, are of those which can occur as verbal prefixes (with the exception of purū), as the following table will show:—

Prepositions	Number of occurrences	Postpositions	Number of occurrences
ā	47	anu	125
purū	62	abhi	54
		adhā	91
parastāt	43	parastāt	23

Although, therefore, we find in the language of the Brāhmaṇas postpositions and prepositions equally used, the comparative number of occurrences indicates that the postpositions predominate in this language. This seems to be a favourable ground for the development of a similar tendency in modern Indo-Aryan languages, in which we find postpositions predominating.

The particular Brāhmaṇas which prefer prepositions or postpositions

The following list will indicate the trend of the particular Brāhmaṇas for prepositions or postpositions:—

Names of Brāhmaṇas using it (with the number of occurrences)

Indeclinable	As a preposition	As a postposition
parastāt	SB 10	SB 10
	AB 7	AB 3
	GB 11	SB 1
	Śāṇ 5	JB 2
	JB 2	AB 2
	TB 3	TB 1
	TA 1	Taṇ B 1
	Tāṇ B 2

Indeclinable	As a preposition	As a postposition
upariśāt	Śān B 2 JB 1 AB 1 TA 1 JUB 1	ŚB 3 Śān B 1
anatrā	Śān B 1 AB 1 TB 2	ŚB 3 JB 2
ite	Tāp B 1 GB 1 Śān B 1 JUB 1	AB 1 ŚB 3
paras	ŚB 1 JB 1	ŚBK 1
purā	AB 2 GB 2 ŚBK 4 Śān B 2	ŚB 14
bahirdhā	ŚB 6	ŚB 2

A comparative study of the above ~~and will show~~ that the prepositions predominate in Brāhmaṇas other than the ŚB, that purā which, according to Delbrück (see p. 652 above) was one of the first prepositions used adnominally, does not occur as a preposition at all in ŚB, but as a postposition throughout. This indicates that the development of postpositions so predominant in classical Sanskrit and so wide-spread in modern Indo-Aryan languages finds a prominent precursor in ŚB. Perhaps these facts may indicate the later style of ŚB.

We find, then, that the position of a preposition in the language of the Brāhmaṇas does not correspond to that in Greek and Latin, wherein it precedes a case as a rule (Cf p. 633 above) but sometimes precedes and sometimes succeeds a case. That this phenomenon is not confined to Sanskrit, but is Indo-Iranian, may be indicated by a similar phenomenon in Avestan, in which, according to Reichelt (Avestisches Elementarbuch, p. 266) the prepositions are found before as well as after a case. While Avestan purā "before" corresponding to Skr. purā always precedes a case (Ib. p. 275), aiuiō "around" corresponding to our abhitāḥ, generally succeeds a case (p. 273), a phenomenon very similar to that in the language of the Brāhmaṇas (cf. pp. 636, 647 above) regarding these two prepositions.

Prepositions intervened from a case by several words

The prose of the Brāhmaṇas indicates a remarkable freedom in the position of a preposition. Like the verbal prefix, it was not placed immediately before or after the case connected therewith. Wackernagel (Vorlesungen II, pp. 193-194) has noted a similar freedom in Greek, Latin, as he mentions the intervention of particles, enclitic pronouns, and even a verb, between the preposition and the case governed by it (II. pp. 194-195).

The most frequent occurrence of intervention is that of particles, but the occurrence of many particles with other parts of speech is not uncommon. The following sentence will illustrate this freedom of intervention:—

adhi u ha vai śaśvad asminn eva loka(a)sau lokah "that world, indeed, always depends upon this world" (JB 103). Here we have three particles, (u, ha, vai), an adverb (śaśvad), a pronoun (asmin) and another particle (eva) intervening between the preposition adhi and the case loka governed by it.

Besides the particles, pronouns accented or enclitic, frequently intervene between the preposition and the case, as the following examples will show:—

yena tvā saha yājayema "with whom we may conduct the sacrifice for thee (tvā)" (JB 140).

bahirdhā tad agneḥ karisyāmah "we will put it (tad) outside Agni" (ŚB VI. 8. 2. 1).

yenedaṃ saha vyāśnavāmahi "with whom we may enjoy it" (GB II. 6. 6).

atha ya ene so (a)ntareṣa puruṣaḥ kṛṣaḥ "Now he (so) who is a black person between these two" (ŚB XI. 6. 1. 13).

tayor viyator yo (a)ntareṣākūśa āsīt "That which (yo) was the empty space between these two extended ones" (ŚB VII. 1. 2. 23).

tasya yāv abhita (a)gnistōmau "those two Agnistōmas which (yon) are on both sides of it" (AB IV. 15).

yaṃ sarve (a)nu paśavaḥ "whom all (sarve) animals follow" (ŚB III. 8. 4. 1).

The occurrence of a noun or nouns between the preposition and the case is even more remarkable, and is quite common:—

yad ūrdhvaṃ Yājñavalkya divo yadarvāk pṛthivyāḥ "O Yājñavalkya (being the noun intervening) that which is beyond the sky, and that which is on this side of the earth" (ŚB XIV. 6. 8. 3).

tenaitūṃ rātriṃ sahājagāma "he came with him on this night" (rātriṃ) (ŚB I. 6. 4. 2).

ati vai prajā (ā)tmānam "The offering (prajā) exceeds itself."

taṃ vijigṃṣāṃ sarve devā abhīḥ...paryaviśan "all the gods (devāḥ) sat round him (who) had conquered" (JB 141).

taṃ u ha brāhmaṇā abhito niśeduh "the Brāhmans (brāhmaṇāḥ) sat round him" (JB 135).

asminn eva no vijayo (a)dhi astu "may our conquest (vijayaḥ) be over him" (JB 92).

ahorātrayor vai devāsura adhi samyattā ūsan "The gods and the demons (devāsuraḥ) were fighting for (the possession) of the day and the night" (JB 74).

pūrvapakṣaṃ devā anvasṛjyanta "the gods (devāḥ) were created after the first half of the lunar month" (TB II. 2. 3. 1).

tas्यāgniḥ purastādait "Agni (agniḥ) went before him"

(AB II. 6).

purā vācaḥ pravādīḥ "before speaking the words (vācaḥ)"

(AB II. 15).

tasyclmukam purastāt haranti "they carry glowing coal (ulmukam) before it" (AB II. 11).

The occurrence of a verb between the preposition and the case is very rare, but the following two examples may be recorded:—

tenāntareṇa pratipadyante cātēḥ cākaraṇa ca "so they come (pratipadyante) between the pit and the heap of clay" (ŚB III. 1).

Indro nāsaknot abhi vajraṃ prahartum "Indra was not able (āsaknot) to strike them his thunderbolt" (Śān B. III. 6.).

The free position of the preposition indicates that the genius of the language did not consider the preposition as a mere adjunct to cases, but that the preposition was felt to have a more or less independent entity of its own.

DIVODĀSA ATITHIGVA AND THE OTHER ATITHIGVAS

By

H. D. VELANKAR

[ Summary : 1 The problem ; 2-3 the name Divodāsa ; 4 the Divodāsa priests ; 5 the name Atithigva ; 6 Atithigva Divodāsa was a Bharata and the chief event connected with him was the overthrow of Śambara ; 7 the relations of the Bharatas with the Turvaśas, the Yadus and the Purus ; 8 Atithigva Gaṅgu connected with the overthrow of Parjanya and Karañja only ; 9 Atithigva, father of Indrota who was not a Bharata ; 10-11 Atithigva Kutsa of the Āyu family who was overthrown by Indra and the three different Kutsas ; 12 the conclusion ].

1 Some older scholars believed that Divodāsa and Atithigva mentioned in the Rgvedic hymns were two different persons, but now generally the two are supposed to be identical. The present view, however, is not still very accurate in my opinion. For, though there is only one king called Divodāsa, there are not less than four different kings of the name Atithigva mentioned in the Rgveda, as will be shown in the sequel. Naturally, King Divodāsa is identical with only one of these, but he has absolutely nothing to do with the other three.

2 The name Divodāsa is very striking and quite unusual so far as the Rgveda is concerned. It means 'A Slave of the Heaven.' The practice of attaching the word 'dāsa' to the names of deities and using them as one's own appellation is absolutely unrgvedic. The Dāsa was as a rule, held in contempt by the Aryans and no Aryan could ordinarily have thought of calling himself a Dāsa, even of a deity. In the post-vedic days, especially when the cult of Bhakti became greatly developed and the idea of absolute dependence on and complete merging of one's self in the object of worship became gradually established, the word Dāsa came to be often applied to a devotee and ultimately lost the sting in its meaning i.e., the suggested distinction between the Dāsa and the Aryan and retained only the sense of 'absolute dependence on and faithful devotion to the Master.'

People then could call themselves the Dāsa of this or that deity without any sense of shame. But this was impossible in the days of the R̥gveda, where deep contempt and hatred for the Dāsas and the Dasyus is quite evident almost everywhere. It is indeed true, that the process of a change in the meaning of the word Dāsa must have been gradual and this is partly borne out by the R̥gvedic evidence itself. The Dāsas when conquered in battles were often turned into slaves by the Āryan princes. In course of time these conquered tribes of the Dāsas became so mild and innocent that they could be employed in their household even by ordinary men. They evidently proved themselves not only very useful and efficient servants, but also very loyal and trustworthy followers. This is why a priest-poet describes the gift of a hundreded Dāsas to himself from a prince called Dasyave Vṛka as a noble one at R̥v. VIII. 56.3 (see v. 1 ahrayam rādhaḥ). Similarly, at R̥v. X. 62.10, two Dāsas who are described as very well trained (smaddiṣṭi) are said to have formed part of a valued gift. Again, at R̥v. I. 92. 8, Uṣas is requested to give a Treasure which is accompanied by a multitude of Dāsas. But more important than these is a reference to a Dāsa as the standard of loyal and willing service at R̥v. VII, 86.7. Here a devotee of Varuna goes to the length of comparing himself with a Dāsa (aram dāso na mihṛuse karāṇi: May I serve the bounteous god like a Dāsa). Surely here at least the word Dāsa could not have conveyed its usual R̥gvedic meaning implying contempt. Like this word used in later literature, it could have suggested only 'deep and loyal devotion.' This passage then among others, may suggest that the name Divodāsa when heard by the R̥gvedic people could not have conveyed any sense of condemnation of the person for whom it was used. It is surely interesting to note that a poet-priest of the Vasiṣṭha family which was later on patronized by Divodāsa's descendent Sudās of the Bharata dynasty, compares himself with a Dāsa, while a prince of the Bharata dynasty calls himself 'a Dāsa of Dyaub.' Dyaub is said to be the skilful father and generator of Indra at R̥v. IV. 17. 4; and Indra was the great Defender of Divodāsa. This may be regarded as a sort of justification for Divodāsa's unusual name. But evidently this is not very convincing. I may hazard two more guesses for the justification of this name. Indeed they are not more than mere conjectures at the present stage of our knowledge of the Rgvedic society.

3 The Bharadvājas describe Divodāsa, who was impetuous and destroyer of misfortunes ( ṛacyutam ), as a gift to Vadhryaśva from Sarasvatī, who is conceived as a goddess without losing sight of her physical form of a river in their hymn to her by the Bharadvājas, namely, VI. 61 ( īyam adadāt rabhasam ṛacyutam divodāsam vadhryśvāya dāṣuṣe ). Now this may mean that Divodāsa was not Vadhryśva's own son, but was borne to him by the stream of the river Sarasvatī and then was adopted by him as his son. In that same hymn, we are told that Sarasvatī helped Vadhryaśva in uprooting his Dāsa enemies, chief among whom was Bṛsaya (cf. VI. 61. 1c; 3<sup>ab</sup>), like the other deity Agnī Vaiśvānara. This means that the Dāsa chief Bṛsaya lived on the banks of the Sarasvatī, and that his fortress was burnt and destroyed by Vadhryaśva. Whatever remained untouched by the ravages of the fire was washed out by the broad and unfordable stream of the mighty Sarasvatī. Among such things may have been a royal child belonging to the Dāsa chieftain; this was borne alive for a time by the stream until it fell into the hands of the conqueror Vadhryaśva. It was adopted by him as his own son and a significant name was given to him which implied that though the boy was a Dāsa, still he was not the Dāsa of a human being namely the Aryan, but of the great god of the Aryans, the father of the mighty Indra. This conjecture may seem absurd, particularly because it would make Divodāsa and his descendants belong to the Dāsa stock, but it need not be summarily rejected as impossible. Divodāsa is considered as a Dāsa king, like Bṛbu, by Hillebrandt, Vedische Mythologie (2nd ed.), p. 515. It is however more likely, that this child namely Divodāsa was some real Aryan prince who had fallen in the hands of the Dāsa chief Bṛsaya after the death of his father at his hands and who was brought up by him for a while until Bṛsaya himself was annihilated with his followers and possessions by the floods of Sarasvatī and the flames of Agnī Vaiśvānara (cf. VI. 61.3 with I. 93. 4c). On this occasion the young Divodāsa may have been borne alive by the stream of the Sarasvatī to Vadhryaśva, who then adopted him as his son and gave him a significant name Dīvodāsa to commemorate his connection with the Dāsas for a while!

4 The Dīvodāsas who praise Indra with new hymns at I. 130. 10 belong evidently to a priestly family; similarly Paruccheṣa Dīvodāsa and Prātardana Dīvodāsa to whom Tradition according to Sarvānukrama ascribes the authorship of Rv. I. 127-139 and IX. 96 respectively appear also to be priests and poets. Prātardana was indeed the name of a ruling prince; he was very likely the son of King Dīvodāsa and is described as having gained back his kingdom from the hands of the Bharadvājas at Kathaka Samhitā 21. 10; this same Prātardana, son of Dīvodāsa, is said to have gone to Indra by means of 'war and bravery' at Kauṣṭhiki Brāhmaṇa Upaniṣad III. 1. He is probably also the father of King Kṣātrañri Prātardani mentioned at VI. 26.8. It is quite possible that the authorship of IX. 96 was ascribed to this 'Fighter' Prātardana, just as the authorship of X. 133 is ascribed to the 'Fighter' Sudās Pañjavana. But it is well nigh impossible to say and maintain that the Paruccheṣa of Rv. I. 127-139 and the Dīvodāsas of Rv. I. 130. 10 were also 'Fighters.' They surely must have belonged to a priestly family and thus we are forced to conclude that there was also a priest who was known by the name Dīvodāsa. The conclusion is unpalatable but, I think, unavoidable.

5 The name Atithigva either signifies (1) 'one whose cows are respected wanderers' (atithīṅyaḥ gāvo yasya; cf. atithīnīr gāḥ at X. 68. 3); or (2) 'One whose cows are meant for honoured guests' (atithyarthā gāvo yasya; cf. atithīn nṛn at V. 50. 3); or lastly, (3) 'one who goes to, i. e., patronizes the human or the divine guest' (atithīm gacchati atithigavaḥ atithigvaḥ; cf. purogavaḥ Agniḥ at X. 85. 8). I personally prefer the first two explanations and consider the latter part of the word, namely gva, to be remnant of the noun go rather than that of the root gā 'to go' as is supposed by Grassmann, WB. p. 419. In almost all the passages, the name Atithigva would appear to be merely an epithet and not the proper name. It is no doubt sometimes used independently but it is so used only where the proper name of the person can be known from the context as we shall see below.

6 We shall now proceed to describe the four Atithigvas from the R̥gveda. The first of these is Divodāsa Atithigva of the Bharata Dynasty. That Divodāsa was a Bharata is not to be doubted. The Bharata at VI. 16. 4 is no other than our Divodāsa and this is clear from the next stanza of that hymn. Similarly, v. 19 of the same hymn leaves no doubt about this, since it mentions Divodāsasya bhārato agnīḥ. Divodāsa's father was Vadhryasva, whose guardian deity was Agni Vaiśvānara as is seen from Rv. X. 69. Vadhryasva's priests at that time were the Sumitras and his chief enemy was the Dāsa chief Bṛsaya (VI. 61. 3). Bṛsaya and his followers were killed by Vadhryasva with the help of Sarasvatī and Agni Vaiśvānara; this is why Agni Vaiśvānara is said to have killed Bṛsaya's followers (bṛsayasya śeṣaḥ) at I. 93. 4c. Like his father Divodāsa too, was a devotee of Agni Vaiśvānara, who on that account is called divodāsiḥ at VIII. 103. 2. Agni is again described as a 'reliable leader' (saṃpatīḥ) of Divodāsa at VI. 16. 19. It appears that on one occasion Divodāsa received help from the Maruta, as is hinted at VII. 18. 25; so that the words bharata and rājā at V. 54. 14d possibly refer to him. The principal exploit which Indra is said to have performed for Divodāsa Atithigva is the overthrow of the demon chief Śambara and the destruction of his hundred mountain forts. In three passages of the R̥gveda, both the proper name Divodāsa and the appellation Atithigva are mentioned side by side in connection with the event of Śambara's overthrow; these are I. 112. 14 (mahām atithigvam kasojuvam divodāsam śambarahatya ūvatam: 'You favoured the great Divodāsa Atithigva, who has the speed of a whip, in the slaughter of Śambara'); IV. 26. 3 (aham puro mandasāno vi airam nava sākam novatīḥ śambarasya.... divodāsam Atithigvam yad ūvam: 'I overthrew the 99 forts of Śambara at one stroke, being filled with wild delight, when I favoured Divodāsa Atithigva') and VI. 47. 22 (divodāsād atithigvasya rādhaḥ śāmbaram vasu pratyagrabhīḥ: 'we received from Divodāsa a gift which is worthy of Atithigva i. e., of a man whose name is Atithigva, and which consists of the treasures of Śambara conquered from him'). In the first passage, the exploit is ascribed to the Aśvinā, but such an exchange of exploits between Indra and the Aśvinā is also seen in the case of the maiden's son Parāvṛj and Kutsa Ārjuneya. This passage also confirms that Divodāsa mentioned at L. 116. 18 and 119. 4 as a protégé of the Aśvinā is no other than Divodāsa Atithigva. In the third passage the two names are put in different cases, but that does not mean that two different persons are intended thereby; it only suggests that the name Atithigva was intended by the poet to be suggestive, like the name Goṣaṇo Napāt at IV. 32. 22. In the next passage, the name Atithigva alone, without the name Divodāsa, is mentioned in connection with the same event, i. e., the overthrow of the demon Śambara thus leaving no doubt whatever that Divodāsa Atithigva alone is meant (arandhaya atithigvāya śambaram: you overthrew Śambara for Atithigva' I. 51. 6). There is one more passage which mentions Divodāsa and Atithigva both in the same stanza, though in different halves; it is L. 130. 7:—bhīnat puro navatim indra pūrave divodāsāya mahi dāśuṣa nṛto...atithigvāya śambaram girer ugro avābharat: 'Oh, Indra, the fierce one, i. e., yourself, battered the 90 forts mightily for the sake of the worshipper Divodāsa and Pūru; he also threw down Śambara from the mountain for the Atithigva'. I shall discuss the connection of Pūru in this event in the sequel; but there can be no doubt that Divodāsa and Atithigva in the passage are identical. On the other hand, Divodāsa alone without the appellation Atithigva, is mentioned in the following 8 passages in connection with the same event namely the overthrow of Śambara:—L. 116. 18 (yad ayātam divodāsāya vartih bhavadvājāya aśvinā hayantā: 'When with great speed you, oh, Aśvinā, went to Divodāsa, to Bhavadvāja, on your usual round'); L. 119. 4 (yūsiṣṭam vartir vṛṣṇā vijenjam divodāsāya mahi ceti vām aṛaḥ: 'You went on your round to Divodāsa, oh mighty ones; that favour of yours was proclaimed as great and covetable'); II. 19. 6 (divodāsāya navatim ca navendrah puro vi aīrat śambarasya: 'Indra overthrew 99 forts of Śambara for Divodāsa' IV. 30. 20 (śatam aśmanmayīnām purām indro vi āśyat: divodāsāya dāśuṣa: 'Indra overthrew a hundred stone-forts for the sacrificer Divodāsa'; VI. 26. 5 (ava girer dāsam śambaram han prāvo divodāsam: 'You threw down the Dāsa Śambara from the mountain and favoured Divodāsa'); VI. 31. 4 (tram śatāni ava śambarasya puro jaghantha apratini dasyoḥ aśihṇo yatra... divodāsāya: 'You battered down the hundred impregnable forts of the Dasyu Śambara when you gave help to Divodāsa'; VI. 43. 1 ( yasya tyat śambaram made divodāsāya randhayaḥ : ' in whose wild joy you subdued Śambara at that time for divodāsa ' ); and IX, 61, 2 ( anāhan navatir nava puraḥ sadya itthā-dhiye divodāsāya śambaram adha tyam turvaśam yaduḥ ' You threw down at one stroke the 99 forts ( of Śambara ), Śambara himself, as also that Turvaśa and Yādu, for the sake of so-inclined Divodāsa ' ). This last passage where Turvaśa and Yādu are mentioned as the enemies of Divodāsa in addition to Śambara, shows how the Atithigva who is mentioned as the enemy of Turvaśa and Yādu at VII. 19.8 ( ni turvaśam ni yūdham śisihī atithigvāya śakṣyam kariṣyan ' Intending to give the praiseworthy ( protection ) to Atithigva, strike down Turvaśa and Yādva i. e. Yādu ' ), is no other than Atithigva Divodāsa himself.

7 The Bharatas in general seem to have been inimical to these two tribes of the Turvaśas and the Yadus. A Turvaśa was defeated by Sudās in the well known Dāśarājā war; cf. VII. 18. 6. Another Turvaśa was subdued by Śrījaya Daivavāta ( VI. 27. 7 ), who was himself a Bharata, son of Devavāta mentioned at III. 23. 2. Yet it need not be imagined that these two clans were never reconciled with the Bharatas; it is on the other hand more logical to suppose that the relations of the Bharatas with these clans were only of occasional enmity. The Bharadvājas sing the exploits of Indra when he helped Yādu and Turvaśa to cross a broad stream at VI. 20. 12 and 45.1; and yet they were the family-priests of the Bharatas under the leadership of Divodāsa. A similar relation namely of occasional enmity seems to have existed also between the Bharatas and the Pūrus. At I. 130.7, Divodāsa is almost called a Pūru in the description of his fight with Śambara; but probably a Pūru chief as an ally of Divodāsa is meant in that passage. At VI. 47, we do not get the mention of any Pūru in the context of the overthrow of Śambara but at I. 59. 6-7, the Pūrus appear to have been referred to in the same context, as is also clear from the reference to the Bharadvāja in v. 7. At I. 63.7, Sudās and the Pūru king Purukutsa are mentioned together in one stanza, as if they were allies, which is however chronologically impossible; while at I. 112.14 Divodāsa Atithigva and Trasadasyu, son of Purukutsa, are again mentioned in the same stanza. It must be admitted however, that in the first of these passages sudāse may be taken as an adjective of pūrave and in the second, the two princes are mentioned together with the intention of recording similar feats of Indra together. For, Indra had destroyed the seven autumnal forts of the Dāsas for the Pūrus; cf. I. 63. 7; 131. 4; 174.2; VI. 20.10; and he had also destroyed the 100 forts of the Dāsa Śambara for Divodāsa Atithigva. King Sadāś and Trasadasyu Pūru are again mentioned together in the same stanza at VII. 19.3. Similarly at V. 27, Trasadasyu Pūru and Aśvamedha Bhārata are mentioned as allies. On the other hand, from VII. 8.4 and VII. 18. 13, the Pūrus would appear to be the enemies of the Bharatas.

8 The second Atithigva is the Atithigva of the Guṅgus who was helped by Indra in killing Parṇaya and Karañja; see I. 53.8 (tvam karañjam uta parṇayam vadhīs tejisṭhayaṭi atithigvasya vartanī : 'You have killed Karañja and Parṇaya with the sharpest edge of ( the wheel ) of Atithigva' ); X. 48.8 (aham guṅgubhyo atithigvam iṣkaram iṣam na vṛtraturam vikṣu dhārayam yat parṇayaghna uta vū karañjāhe prāham mahe vṛtrahatyē aśuśruvi : I brought Atithigva as a gift to the Guṅgus; I placed among their people that killer of their enemies ( who became welcome to them ) like food when I became famous in the great battle where Parṇaya and Karañja were killed ). This Atithigva belonged to the clan of the Guṅgus, which is otherwise unknown in the R̥gveda. Parṇaya and Karañja were very likely two powerful allies belonging to the Dāsa tribes; they were at war with the Aryan clan of the Guṅgus, who were evidently fighting a losing battle until at last they got a valiant and skillful leader in the person of Atithigva. This Atithigva was specially fitted for the purpose by Indra, as we are told. He is described as vṛtratur like the other similar warrior Trasadasyu, son of Purukutsa and the leader of the Pūrus ( cf. IV. 42.8 ). Both these leaders are conceived as compassionate gifts to helpless persons by the war-like god Indra, in one case the people without a leader, and in the other, a distressed woman. On the other hand, Divodāsa Atithigva is imagined as an affectionate gift to a warrior named Vadhryasva by the River-deity Sarasvatī. He is described merely as ṛṇacyut 'remover of wrongs, weaknesses or defects' in general. ṛṇa in R̥gveda does not mean 'debt,' as it does in the post-R̥gvedic literature, when a son was regarded as 'the remover' of the father's pitr-ṛṇa, by his very birth. Yet it is quite possible that our passage might have formed the transitional stage in the change of the meaning of the word. This difference of situation attendant upon the birth of Atithigva Divodāsa of the Bhārata dynasty and Atithigva of the Guṅguś makes it quite plain that the two are entirely different. It is also not to be forgotten that it was very likely that Divodāsa Atithigva was borne to Vadhryāśva by the stream of the river Sarasvatī and that this was poetically conceived as a gift from the deity presiding over the river-stream. Neither the Guṅguś nor their enemies Parṇaya and Karañja are unfortunately mentioned anywhere else in the Rgveda. But the Bharadvājas who were patronized by Divodāsa Atithigva for a considerable period do not mention any of these personalities and this would not have happened had the two Atithigvas been known to them as identical. The word Guṅgu occurs once in the Rgveda (II. 82.8); but there it seems to be the name of a river-deity or of some other kind of deity. In the former case, Guṅgu may be regarded as the name of an actual river and the Guṅguś may be the people dwelling on the banks of this river. But this practice of naming a people from the place of their habitation, particularly a river, is not much in evidence in the Rgveda. At any rate, The Guṅguś cannot be identified with the Bharatas and it is quite obvious that the Atithigva of the Guṅguś, the vanquisher of Parṇaya and Karañja, is distinct from Divodāsa Atithigva of the Bhārata dynasty.

9 The third Atithigva is mentioned as the father of a prince called Indrota, who is praised as a great donor along with the sons of Rkṣa and Aśvamedha, at VIII. 68. 15-17. In this passage, it is all very doubtful as to what relation the names bear to the patronymics. It is for example not clear whether rkṣasya sūnāvī in v. 15 refers to Indrota or to another prince called Śrutarvan whose name is not at all mentioned in this hymn, but who is said to have been favoured by Indra in vanquishing his enemy Mṛgaya at X. 49.5 and who is mentioned as a donor at VII. 74. 13 by an Atri poet. Pūtakratu in v. 17 is very likely a proper name and that too of Aśvamedha's son. One Aśvamedha Bhārata is mentioned as an ally of King Trasadasyu Paurukutsi at V. 27. This Pūtakratu Aśvamedha is not known from any other passage in the Rgveda, though a queen called Pūtakratā, mother of a king who was popularly known as 'a wolf of the Dasyus,' is known from Rv. VIII. 56. 2 and 4. Indrota is evidently a proper name of Atithigva's son. But who this Atithigva was cannot be ascertained. If the three princes are supposed to be allies, and if Aëvamedha Pātakratu is a Bhārata, it is very unlikely that Indrota too was a Bhārata and thus this Atithigva too is surely different from Divodāsa Atithigva.

10 The fourth Atithigva is entirely different from the first three, since, he is said to have been overthrown by Indra and his brave followers are described as slain by him for assisting a prince called Tūrvayāṇa. He is mentioned in the following passages:—I. 53. 10; II. 14. 7; VI. 18, 13; VIII. 53.2.

tvam āvitha suśavasam tavotibhis tava trāmabhir indra tūrvayāṇam |
tvam asmai kutsam atithigvam āyū mahe rājā yūne arandhanāyaḥ (1) adhvaryavo yaḥ śatam ā sahasram bhūmyā upasthe avapaj jaghanvān |
kutsaya āyor atithigvasya virān nyavṛṣṭag bharatā somam asmā (2)
pra tat te adya karaṇam kṛtam bhūt kutsam yad āyū
atithigvam asmai |
purū sahasrā nī śiśā abhi kṣām ut tūrvayāṇam dhṛṣatā ninetha (3)
ya āyū kutsam atithigvam ardayo vāvṛdhāno divēdive (4)

'You helped that well-known Tūrvayāṇa with your favours and protections, Oh Indra. You subdued Kutsa Atithigva Āyu for the sake of this great and youthful king. (1) Adhvaryus! bring your Soma to him, who killed and laid low on the bosom of the earth and thus uprooted a hundred and a thousand warriors of Kutsa Atithigva Āyu. (2) That deed of yours was well executed today when you subdued Kutsa Āyu Atithigva for him. (At that time), you laid low on the ground many thousand (of warriors), and boldly carried off Tūrvayāṇa from their midst. (3) You, who overpowered Āyu Kutsa Atithigva, yourself growing powerful day by day (4).'

11 Generally Kutsa, Āyu and Atithigva in these passages are supposed to be three different persons and it is also further assumed that these three, though they were separately assisted and favoured by Indra on other occasions, were nevertheless overthrown together on one occasion, when they had allied themselves against a prince called Tūrvayāna, by that same deity who wanted to help that prince. It is also said that on this one occasion, hundreds and thousands of warriors of these three allies were killed by Indra on the battle-field. To me however, it appears more probable that all the three names i. e., Kutsa Āyu and Atithigva, belong to one and the same person, whose proper name was Kutsa, who belonged to the family of the Āyus, and who bore the appellation Atithigva. All the three names appear together one after the other and in the same case-termination, in the context of the defence of Tūrvayāna. In two of the four passages which refer to this event, we get a reference to the slaughter of the many hundred and thousand followers. But in neither of the two do we get a genitive plural of a pronoun referring to the three as is very naturally expected particularly in the second of the two passages, i. e. VI. 18. 13. It is again, I think, significant that the three names are never used separately or singly in this context, nor is there a plural form ever used to suggest that the three names signified three different persons. As a matter of fact, there are no definite grounds in any of the four passages to assume that Kutsa, Āyu and Atithigva were different persons. We have such an evidence, for example, in the case of the four or five allies who are mentioned at VI. 20. 8. Only two of these are mentioned in the same context at VI. 26. 8 and all the four or five are meant by the plural form vetasān at X. 49. 4. For this reason, I would rather understand that the three names belong to one and the same person as said above. This Kutsa Atithigva must however be distinguished from Kutsa Ārjuneya who was assisted by Indra in his fight with the demon Śuśpa (see in particular Rv. VII. 19. 2; VIII. 1. 11; and IV. 26. 1. Also see I. 112. 23, where the defence of this same Kutsa is ascribed to the Āśvinā). Both these Kutsas were warriors and princes. The second is repeatedly mentioned as a protégé of Indra in his battle with Śuśpa and in many of the passages, his patronymic is dropped. He has almost assumed a semi-divine character in the Rgvedic hymns; see Macdonell, Vedic Mythology, p. 146. There is a third Kutsa; but he is only a priest and poet mentioned at I. 106. 6ab (the word Kutsa is an adjective, I think, at VII. 25. 5a and X. 49. 4b; it means 'skilful, active' etc.). The historical character which is supposed to be indicated at Vedic Mythology, really belongs to the first and the third Kutsa but not to the second. It is I suppose, not correct to identify the three Kutsas who are found in entirely different situations and surroundings, merely because they bear the same name.

12 There is also an independent evidence to show that the second and the fourth Atithigvas were not identical. The two are mentioned very near each other, one as Indra's enemy and the other as his protégé, in stanzas 8 and 10 of Rv. I. 53. This would not have happened had the poet of the hymn known them to be identical. Similarly, it cannot be imagined that Atithigva Kutsa whose defeat is recorded at VI. 18. 13. was known to the Bharadvāja poet of that hymn to be identical with the great patron of the Bharadvājas, namely, Divodāsa Atithigva. For, had he so known him to be, he would not have mentioned his defeat and overthrow by Indra in his hymn with such enthusiasm as is suggested by the stanza. Thus then, we find that the four Atithigvas stand distinguished from each other by being associated with entirely different and unconnected events and individuals; and that there do not exist any grounds whatever, beyond the common appellation Atithigva, to suppose that they were identical. It is of course very difficult to say which of these four was the oldest; but it would seem that Divodāsa was the first to be called Atithigva and the others might have imitated him in assuming the appellation.

THE PSYCHOLOGY OF THE RASA-THEORY

By

K. N. WATAVE

Bharata, the reputed author of the Nāṭya-Śāstra, is the earliest known exponent of literary criticism in India. Like a true critic, he unmistakably sees that emotional appeal or emotional response on the part of the enjoyer is the end and aim of literature. Any piece of literary composition that is without this appeal is according to him, a misnomer ( न हि रसादहे कश्चिदुपपन्नः प्रवर्तते । N.S. VI. 34 ). The accessories of a dramatic composition and performance which he names as आंगिक, वाचिक and आहार्य अभिनय must subserve the सार्विक अभिनय which is the principal thing, and which includes the conception of रस. It is generated by the combination of the विभाव, अनुभाव and व्यभिचारिभाव. This, in short, is the Rasa-theory of Bharata, which in the hands of later rhetoricians has developed into the Rasa-system and has dominated all Indian literary speculations down to this day.

In his exposition of the Rasa-theory, Bharata brings us face to face with the subtle play of emotions both in the heart of the reader and the actor. In other words, he is giving us, unconsciously perhaps, a psychological explanation of the whole process. Psychology, as an independent science, did not exist in those days. All the same, with the aid of the method of introspection alone he and other literary critics belonging to his school, have formulated a sort of a literary psychology, centuries before the dawn of psychological investigation in the West.

I propose first to explain this old psychology of the Rasas in terms of the recent advancement of this science and then to scrutinise the same in its light. In attempting this task, which as far as I know is the first of its kind, I have followed leading psychologists like William McDougall, Stout, Ribot, S. Woodworth, Thouless and the rest.

Let me, first of all, explain and scrutinise the famous Rasa-Śūtra of Bharata. This Śūtra runs as—तत्र विभावानुभावव्यभिचारि-संदोषादसनिष्पत्तिः । ( N. S. VI-34 ) and it explains the process of the रसनिष्पत्ति (call it generation or enjoyment or revelation of रस) in the spectator. What the Sūtra purports to mean is—when the विभावs, अनुभावs, and the स्वभिचारिभावs combine to awaken the स्वाधिभाव of the reader or the spectator, the awakened स्वाधिभाव finally develops into रस.

Western psychology always prefers to talk of a living organism, as responding to some stimulus or as behaving in a particular way under some situation. To adopt the same terminology, the spectator or the reader is the living organism emotionally responding to the situation in the drama i. e. the characters and their surrounding. The विभावs (both आलम्बन and उद्दीपन) are, therefore, the stimuli (external in the case of a performance and internal in the case of reading a play—in the form of mental images). अनुभावs are the expressions of the emotions so ably treated by Charles Darwin in his "Expressions of the emotions in Man and Animal" and adopted by psychologists. There is a wide divergence of opinion amongst Indian scholars in assigning to the स्वभिचारिभावs and the स्वाधिभावs their English equivalents. (The term स्वाधिभाव although not actually used in the Sūtra, is understood and is to be supplied as स्वाधिनः विभावानुभावस्वभिचारिभिः संपोमाद् स्वाधिनः रसत्वेन निष्पत्तिः ।).

This lack of harmony in the proper use of suitable equivalents to these two terms is, probably, due to the fact that none of the scholars have, as yet, made a psychological approach to the problem. The स्वाधिभाव is the "Sentiment" the conception of which was first expounded by A. F. Shand in his "The Foundations of Character" (1914) and accepted by W. McDougall with some important alterations in his "Social Psychology". Our Sanskrit स्वाधिभाव is neither an instinct, nor an emotion, nor a mood; although it has got an instinctive base and is a primary emotion in character. Primary emotions, which are indicators of corresponding instincts at work, become organised in systems about the various objects and classes of objects that excite them. Such an organised system of emotional tendencies is not a fact or mode of experience, but it is a feature of the completely organised structure of the mind that underlies all our mental activities. Such organised systems of emotions are sentiments (see p. 122 Social and p. 420 Outline). The sentiment when once formed is the enduring condition of a considerable range of emotions and desires to which McDougall calls Derived emotions. These Derived emotions of McDougall ( for which see pages 338-346 Outline ) are our स्वाभिचारिभावs. The Derived emotions fall into two groups :—( 1 ) The prospective emotions of desire such as hope, anxiety, despondency etc. and ( 2 ) The Retrospective emotions of desire, such as sorrow, regret, remorse. Joy and surprise are, also, Derived emotions. The derived emotions are not like the primary emotions, constantly conjoined with any one instinctive impulse. These emotions may arise in the course of the operation of any strong impulse or tendency, the emotion being dependant upon or derived from the working of the impulse under certain conditions. On page 345 of his "Outline" W. McDougall gives us a clear distinction between the primary and Derived emotions. After grasping it a student of the Sāhitya Śāstra, shall have no difficulty in identifying these with his स्वाभिचारिभावs. It must be noted that the Derived emotions never develop into sentiments as they have no clear instinctive base and have no independent end. It is either the primary or the blended emotion which enters into sentiment-formations.

Scrutinised in the light of this discussion, Bharata's list of the eight स्वाभिभावs and the thirty-three स्वाभिचारिभावs discloses certain serious flaws. Out of the eight, उत्साह is not an emotion at all. It is either the physical or mental energy; and what is more, it is not peculiar to रस of which it is given as the स्वाभिभाव. It is at the bottom of any energetic action be it a love-affair (रति), devotion to God (भक्ति) or for the matter of that a hearty laugh (हास). Sorrow (शोक) and surprise (विस्मय) are Derived emotions and present difficulties in the way of the कृष्ण and अद्भुत रसs. हास, and शम are highly complex. निर्वेद stands on dubious grounds. रति, क्रोध, भय and लज्जुप्ता alone stand the test, as they are either primary or blended emotions capable of sentiment-formation.

The list of the thirty-three स्वाभिचारिभावs is far too faulty. Of the 33, ग्लानि, मद, भ्रम, आलस्य, जडता, मोह, निद्रा, अपस्मार, सुप्त, प्रबोध, स्वाधि, उत्साह and मरण ( 13 in all ) are not emotions at all, being all of them physical states !! क्षुब्धता, अविन and उग्रता are not emotions, but are terms indicative of the intensity of any emotions. ईर्ष्या, अमर्ष, घात, and गर्व are primary emotions and have no business to be in this list. वीहता and अलुपता are blended emotions and should not appear here. मति, चिन्तक, अवहित्य and स्मृति, being cognitive mental conditions, cannot be set down as emotions properly so-called. What remains as व्यभिचारिभाव proper, after this careful sifting, is a group of seven Derived emotions, औत्सुक्य, द्वेष, विशाद, हर्ष, घृति, चिन्ता and निर्वेद. Repetition and insufficiency are two additional draw-backs in this list. आशा, भैराद्य, पञ्चाताप, आश्चर्य etc. could have been added to it.

What is responsible for this defective treatment is that unaided introspection could not enable even clever minds of those old days to distinguish between psychological and physiological functions. Nor was human knowledge, then, so advanced as to mark the three distinct aspects of the cyclic process of the mental activity—the cognitive, conative and affective. This need not at all, therefore, lead to the depreciation of the contribution of ancient critics. Such psychologists as Spinoza, Descartes, John Lock, A. F. Shand who lived in what may be called the Scientific age, have similarly or more seriously blundered !! Hence we must have deeper admiration for their genius by our realisation of their limitations.

As regards the hotly discussed nature of the सात्त्विक भाव modern psychology tends to hold the view that they should be classed with the अनभाव; as both of them are expressions of the emotion and the difference in them is one of degree and not of kind.

More psychologically correct is the stand of the Sanskrit rhetoricians when they explain the process of the Rasa-realisation. अभिनवद्युत gives us a very accurate idea of the mental attitude of a सहृदय when he is enjoying a work of art. The characters and scenes described therein are seen by him with the eye of imagination, (the वर्णनीयतन्मयमिदमप्यव्यक्ता which अभिनव gives as the qualification of a सहृदय implies this 'eye of imagination'). This process is known as the 'Ideational Representation to consciousness of objects. सादृश्य is Empathy which has been clearly defined by Lipps. सादृश्य is detachment or 'psychical distance' and has been given in this context by R. H. Thouless. साधारणीकरणव्यापार reveals a very clear psychological insight of our critics. It is known today as the process of Universalization. Prof. C. T. Winchester calls it 'Idealization' in which the reader strips himself of whatever is individual and local and creates types that hold good at all times and in all places and perceives all these things in an abstract way. This साधारणीकरण has been suggested by भरत himself, (एभ्यश्च सामान्यमुन्नयमेन रसा निव्यवन्ते । N.S. VII. 9), referred to by भट्टनायक by the term भावना or भावकत्व and so ably explained by अभिनव. Even I. A. Richards, who is an accepted psychological literary critic, has not much improved upon our critics ( see his 'Poetic experience' in his 'Science and Poetry' and in his 'Principles of literary criticism' ).

Our Sanskrit critics have clearly stated that रस is both कान्यगत ( which they call लौकिक रस ) and रसिकगत ( which is अलौकिकरस ). But they affirm, and rightly too, that the अलौकिक रस is the higher of the two, as it is the final effect. C. T. Winchester supports this view. There must be 'emotional element' in literature no doubt, but its power of awakening in the reader corresponding emotions ( which is his emotional response ) is displayed in the minds of and is to be ultimately felt by the reader. Sanskrit rhetoricians do not clearly define रस although they describe the process of its generation and realization. We may frame here a psychological definition of रस. " The pleasant and total emotional response of a sympathetic reader to the elegant expression of intense emotions in Poetry is रस. " The same may be rendered thus in Sanskrit by coining the word 'प्रत्युद्गार' for 'response.'

ललितविभक्तिं ग्राहं भावमुद्दिश्य काव्यमं

सहृदः सुखनिव्यन्दी प्रत्युद्गारो रसः स्मृतः ।

One thing, however, must be noted in passing, with regard to our Rasa-realization that it is immensely steeped in mysticism, as the critics that propounded it were all of them followers of one or the other school of mystic philosophy. The West, also, is not totally free from this mysticism in arts, and I. A. Richard had to raise a voice of warning against this tendency. Delight ( आनन्द, हर्ष ), aesthetic pleasure ( सुख ) and ecstasy ( वल्लासवादसहोदर आनन्द ) are given as the ends of Poetry. But no rational and clear analysis of this pleasure has been attempted. भरत suggests the why of this pleasure by the word हृदयसंवाद ( पोथ्ये हृदयसंवादी । N. S. VII,10 ) and अभिनव only reiterates the same by his वासना संवाद or हृदय संवाद. Some modern psychologists have put forward their 'Repression-theory' and the consequent 'sublimation' that is effected by the reading of literature. Some of them have advanced the Play-theory also. Fulfilment of the various instinctive tendencies seems to be the goal of human life; and the expression of the Ego is the way to achieve it. In actual life man is expressing himself through various serious activities. But his surplus energy finds another and a more delightful outlet for them i. e. play. Human activity in this field of play has given rise to all arts. "Playful self-expression" क्रीडास्वर आत्माविष्कार, therefore, may be offered as an all-embracing theory of aesthetic pleasure.

The number of *Rasa*s and their relative position is an important item of the Rasa-theory that now calls for a psychological scrutiny. Bharata enumerates eight *rasa*s, the ninth is added, later on, to the list and the claims of a dozen others have been pressed by some revolutionary critics like रुद्र and भोज. The reactionary element of our Sanskrit writers appears to be mainly guided by tradition in this respect, although a few of them have taken their stand on reason. Ruskin in his 'Modern Painters' names some eight or nine emotions always expressed in literature. Winchester disagrees with him and instead of giving the exact number of such emotions he only states certain qualities of such emotions such as steadiness, power, propriety etc. Generally speaking, Western criticism does not sit tight over the question of the exact number of emotions in literature. If, however, a general principle to limit the number of emotions (or स्वापिभाव) in literature is to be laid down it shall be something like this. "There should be as many *rasa*s as there are intense emotions which can adequately unfold the emotional life of man and which when delineated in literature would be highly delectable."

This enunciation implies the following tests in order: (1) As literature ought to be pleasing above everything else, the emotion must be delectable. The delectability of an emotion, primarily, depends on the fineness and complexity that it attains in the course of evolution. Crude and simple primary emotions working on a mere Instinctive physical plane—and not reaching the aesthetic or intellectual level—do not commend themselves to cultured taste. Appetite for food, the feeling of possession and that of creativeness have always remained on a lower plane in revolution and although they are primary, they have seldom been used in literature to evoke any good emotional response. The same can be said of disgust also. (2) The emotion must be primary and not Derived. It may be simple or composite or blended. Primary emotions are very powerful and active as they are vitally connected with the ruling tendencies of self-preservation and the preservation of the species. (3) The object that excites these emotions must be so important as to determine the major goals towards which we strive. In the absence of such objects we form what are called 'tastes' and 'hobbies' ( see 'Energies of Men' pp. 239-41 ). This has been anticipated by Mammata ( see रतिर्द्वयादिदिप्या K. P. IV ).

In the light of the above remarks, the following shall be the reconstruction of the Rasas. वीमल and रौद्र should be struck off from the list and they should be replaced by वत्सल and भक्ति. वीमल is not independently relishable and रौद्र is nothing but वीराभास ( an improper sort of वीर ). वत्सल has got a very strong instinctive base ( being conjoined with the parental instinct ) and is highly delectable. भक्ति has unnecessarily suffered at the hands of older rhetoricians who relegated it to the position of a mere भाव, simply because they could not go against overwhelming tradition. भक्ति or devotion to God is a highly complex emotion conjoined with the Instincts of Submission, of appeal, of curiosity, of escape and of the social. भक्ति is not a mere sentiment; it is a master-sentiment as well. Those that have read the lives and literature of the Marathi saint-poets will appreciate these remarks. करुण should have sympathy ( Passive primitive sympathy of McDougall ) for its स्थायी भाव instead of शोक which means Sorrow. In sympathetic behaviour each of several instincts seems to be adopted on the receptive side in such a way as to be played upon by the expressions of the same instincts in other members of the same species. This is what McDougall calls "The Sympathetic Induction of emotions" in his 'Group mind' ( p. 25 ).

अमर्ष instead of उन्मत्त should be the स्थायिभाव of वीर. This रस is based on the instinct of self-assertion which manifests itself in resentment or intolerance. Wonder (विस्मय) instead of surprise (आश्चर्य) should be the स्थायिभाव of अद्भुत. Commonly speaking surprise which is a Derived emotion is the emotion of the अद्भुतरस in Sanskrit. Let us hope that wonder would take its place in this scientific age. Other Rasas present no difficulty. शान्त Rasa is more philosophic in nature and is fraught with a number of complications. If psychology is, at all, to be allowed to probe into the secrets of the serenity of this रस, one can say that an emotion of complacency or supreme satisfaction connected with the elevated Ego-Instinct is at the base of शान्त, which is its स्थायिभाव. Thus the number of Rasas comes to nine. In fixing the number of the Rasas one should not take into account the variety of objects but should look to their स्थायिभाव alone. For instance, भक्ति should be a रस and राष्ट्रभक्ति, धर्मभक्ति, गुरुभक्ति, मातृभक्ति etc. should be its sub-divisions and not so many Rasas. There have been numerous attempts at Rasa-Synthesis or unification of the eight accepted Rasas. They have tended to limit the number of Rasas on the one hand and to determine their relative position on the other. Bhoja's attempt is the most scientific of them all. He says for instance that अहंकार (अहंकार) is the root of all human emotions. There may be scientific accuracy in these and similar attempts, but they defeat their own end i. e. the aesthetic satisfaction derived from the unfoldment of emotional life. The relative position of the Rasas has been determined by Sanskrit scholars by establishing in them the relation of व्याप्यव्यापक, उपकार्योपकारक and प्रकृतिविकृति. Out of these the प्रकृतिविकृतिभाव (that is one Rasa being the cause and the other its effect) propounded by भरत is unscientific as no primary emotion is related to other primary one in that way.

There are a number of other points in the Rasa-theory that need clarification and scrutiny such as—(1) The nature of रति which is rather an unhappy term and has consequently led to unnecessary complications. (2) The place of the रससामग्री (अनुभाव व्यभिचारिभाव, विभाव and स्थायिभाव) i. e. whether they belong to the काव्य or to the रसिक or to both? What is the exact relation of the अहंकार, the ध्वनि, वक्रोक्ति, रीति etc. to रस? But the short compass of this very small article does not permit me to make even a passing reference to their treatment. The reader may find the whole subject exhaustively dealt with in my Marathi work entitled the रसविमर्श.

Let me observe, in conclusion, that all such clarification and scrutiny of the Sanskrit Rasa-theory shall undoubtedly have their value in the field of pure Sanskrit Research, but if they are to be really fruitful in the field of Vernacular literatures which derive from Sanskrit and look up to Sanskrit as the Parent-language, the clarified and scrutinised Rasa-theory shall have to be re-adjusted to the current literature and brought uptodate in the light of the modern developments. Then alone shall Sanskrit scholarship have served its practical end by supplying a strong and indigenous nucleus of Vernacular Rhetorics.

WOMAN IN THE SCULPTURE OF THE DECCAN, AN ARTISTIC STUDY

BY

G. YAZDANI

Until quite recently Indian sculpture was considered to be completely devoid of any artistic merit, and the object of those who studied it was to estimate its character from only the antiquarian and iconographic points of view. The above opinion is however being superseded rapidly, so much so that art connoisseurs are not only enthusiastic in their praise of Indian sculpture; but they place it above the sculpture of other countries by virtue of its giving a better expression of the fullness of life. An interesting article on this subject was contributed by Dora Gordine (Hon. Mrs. Richard Hare) to the J. R. A. S. in January, 1941.

The object of the present article is however to judge the merits of Deccan sculpture, particularly of female figures, in the light of the universal criterion of beauty of form, naturalness of pose, and expression of inner feeling. The reason for restricting my remarks to the sculpture of the Deccan is that I consider that the sister arts of Painting and Sculpture have a much earlier history in the Deccan than in the rest of India and for any aesthetic appreciation specimens from this part of India better represent the historical sequence in the development of plastic arts than those of North India.

Woman has been the symbol of grace and beauty in the sculpture of the Deccan from the very beginning; but this view does not apply to totemic specimens, the features of which are determined more by tribal or racial superstitions than by any consideration of symmetry in human form. The sculptors of the Deccan must have been adept in carving figures in wood, ivory and stone long before the spread of Buddhism, which took place during the reign of Asoka in the third century B. C., for the specimens which we find in the caves at Kondane, Bedsa and Karle, all belonging to the 2nd century B. C., show a highly developed art, which could not have reached that stage in less than a millenium of continuous intellectual and technical progress. To elucidate this view I invite the attention of readers to the panels representing some male and female figures, carved on the left wall of the façade

Chalukya-cave at Kōndane, Bombay Presidency. Carving on the left wall of the facade.
( By courtesy of the Archaeological survey of Government of India ).

Chaitya-cave at Karle, Bombay Presidency. Carving on the right wall of the portico.
( By courtesy of the Archaeological survey of Government of India ).

Vihara-cave No. 7, Aurangabad, Nizam's Dominions.
Dance-scene carved on the left wall of the shrine.

Vihara-cave No. 7, Aurangabad, Nizam's Dominions.

18 A woman and a dwarf carved on the outer wall of the shrine near the door.

Brahmanical cave No. XXI, Ellora.

A river-goddess carved on the left wall of the cave.

PLATE VI

The Brahmanical cave Kailasa ( No. XVI ), Ellora.
Ravana shaking Kailasa.

PLATE VII (a)

Figure of a dancer.

PLATE VII (b)

The Great Temple at Palampet, Warrangal District.

Another dancer.

The Great Temple of Palampet, Warangal District.

Figure of a dancer.

PLATE IX (a)

The Temple near the tank at Pangal, Nalgonda District.
A female figure carved on the wall of the shrine.

PLATE IX (b)

The Temple on the embankment of Ramappa Lake, Warrangal District.
A female figure carved near the door-jamb of the shrine.

of the chaitya cave at Kondane. As the photograph reproduced in this article (Pl. I) has been taken from the ground, the figures are not only small but also lack considerably the grace of poise of the originals.*

There are four panels which may represent the story of the gay life of some rāja who ultimately embraced Buddhism, or they may be copies of the panels of decorative statuary of some important building. The latter view seems to be more correct for it was customary in early Buddhist architecture to adorn buildings with carvings representing the salient features of the abodes of the Lord or secular personages.

Commencing from the right the first panel represents a cavalier in a sportive mood, accompanied by two young ladies. He is armed with a large bow, but the dress consists of a loin-cloth and a scarf which is worn artistically round his arm and waist. In contrast to this scantiness of dress he has considerable jewellery on his body, comprising wristlets, necklace, ear-rings and some head ornament which is intertwined with the hair in an artistic manner. The cavalier is caressing the lady standing to his left, and the twinkle in his eyes and the inclination of his head present a perfect picture of love-making. The lady is in a responsive mood and seems to be enjoying the attention of her paramour. To keep the balance of her joyful poise she holds the scarf of the cavalier with one hand while the other is placed gracefully on her hip. The lady on the right, who is sitting on a boulder, apparently resents this fooling and she pinches with her left hand the side of the cavalier and to show her disapproval is looking in another direction. The raiment of both the ladies is scanty in the extreme; but the hair has been dressed with great care, indicating a highly developed style of coiffure. However what strikes a student of art the most is the rhythm and the apparent movement shown by the sculptor in carving these figures. The body line turns and twists to indicate the pulsation of life, and although there is no anatomical precision as in Greek sculpture, yet the eye is not offended in any way; on the contrary it is filled with joy by the grace of pose and and vividness of expression.

The second panel also represents the same cavalier; but there is only one lady, probably the one whom he was caressing in the first panel. The cavalier in this scene is armed with a heavy club, the shape of which may be of interest to those who are collecting information on the weapons of India before the Christian era. Both the figures seem to be intoxicated with joy and the swing of their bodies indicates that they are dancing. The pose of the cavalier resembles to a certain extent that of Śiva in the lāṇḍava dance, as shown in the later sculptures of the Śaivite cult, dating from the 6th century A. D. onwards. The pose of the lady is still more graceful and she has clasped the scarf of her lover in order to sway her body in harmony with his steps.

---

* Rao Bahadur K. N. Dikshit, Director-General of Archaeology in India is now kindly arranging for a close-up photograph of these panels from a point in which the lens should be on the same level with the panels.

In the third panel the figures are the same, but their positions have been reversed. The cavalier appears on the right and the lady on the left; and, further, instead of the lady's clasping the scarf of the cavalier he is holding the waist-band of the lady, who has placed her hand fondly on the head of her partner with a view to keeping balance.

The fourth panel is broken and we see only the cavalier and one of the hind-legs of his horse. He is in a mirthful attitude in this scene also and seems to be dancing. The Hīnayāna school of Buddhism, from its strict injunction against the representation of the Great Being in human form may appear to those who are not familiar with the early sculpture of this school as somewhat puritan in taste, but the fact is not exactly that. The artist, sculptor or painter, displayed a zest for life from the very beginning, and in the Jātakas, the stories of the previous lives of the Buddha, he could find ready material to show his soft feelings on the one hand and the perfection of technical skill on the other.

I describe two more sculptures of the Hīnayāna school of the earliest period (cir. 200 B. C.) of which the specimens have been identified with certainty. One of these is from the chaitya at Karle, representing a Nāga rāja or a Yakṣa accompanied by a woman (Pl. II). The pose of the latter is extremely graceful and she appears to be dancing. Like the plastic arts dancing also appears to have reached a high level before the Christian era, for in the early paintings of Ajanta in cave X there are some delightful specimens. In this subject the lady has curved her right arm, her fingers gently touching her head, while the left arm she has placed round the waist of her partner. As regards the lower part of her body the left leg is bent near the knee and the toes only rest on the ground, the attitude conveying an idea of movement. As a matter of fact such poses and steps are still to be seen in Indian dancing.*<sup>1</sup> Now who would deny the charm of such a subject, judging from the canons governing art-criticism prevalent in any country of the world.

The other specimen of the Hinayāna school belonging to the 2nd century B. C., is the sculpture representing two horse-riders, carved on the top of a pillar at Bedsa.*<sup>2</sup> One of the horse-riders is a Yakṣa or a rāja and the other his consort. The happy couple have very refined features and the male figure in an amorous mood has stretched out his hand to caress the lady. The love-light is reflected from the countenance of both and the same feeling is reciprocated in the almost quivering nostrils, up-raised ears and manes and glistening eyes of the two horses. As these figures are of considerable size, and finished with extraordinary skill, I consider them to be the finest specimens of the Buddhist sculpture of the Hinayāna school of the Deccan. Fergusson has published a photograph of these figures;*<sup>3</sup> but it does not do justice to the beauty of the sculpture, having been taken from the ground. Rao Bahadur K. N. Dikshit, the Director-General of Archaeology in India, who was addressed by me regarding the importance of this sculpture, has kindly promised to have a scaffolding erected with a view to securing a faithful photograph of the subject.

Despite the rigidity of the early Buddhist monasticism the idea of the incompleteness of human life without woman, even in its religious aspect, seems to be present from the very beginning of the faith, for the story of the Buddha's visiting his own wife after his 'renunciation' indicates to a considerable extent this tendency. Further, the inclusion of goddesses like Tārā, possessing all the attributes of the Bodhisattavas, in the pantheon, and permission to women to join the holy order as nuns, support the view that Buddhism from its earliest days allowed the fair sex to enjoy to the full

---

* 1 As the photograph of this subject also has been taken from the ground the figures appear very small.

* 2 Bedsa is approached by a cart-track beginning at the 28th mile-stone of the Poona-Bombay road. The track is tolerable up to a distance of four miles where the Local Fund Ghat Road ends; but beyond that it is lost in boulders and fields and it is much better to walk than to get a jolting in a country cart which is the only means of conveyance suitable for the place. At my request the Bombay Government are now kindly considering a scheme to make this track fit for motor traffic.

* 3 History of Indian and Eastern Architecture (Revised edition), Vol. I. p. 139, fig. 64.

their right of companionship with man in moral and spiritual pursuits. On the left wall of cave X at Ajanta, which belongs to the 2nd century B. C., there is a scene representing a Rāja visiting the sacred Bodhi-tree under which the Buddha received 'enlightenment.' The religious orchestra shown in this scene consists of a bevy of most beautiful girls attired in a chic manner.*<sup>1</sup> The inclusion of these girls in the religious ceremonies of the faith makes one believe that the organisation of deva-dāsīs or krīḍanīs, such as we notice in the Brahmanical temples of the 8th century A. D. onwards, existed in some form in the Buddhist institutions of both Hīnayāna and Mahāyāna schools, and they apparently borrowed it from the post-Vedic ritual obtaining in India before the birth of the Buddha. The representations of female musicians and dancers may be rare in the art of the Hīnayāna school, but with the advent of the Mahāyāna doctrine their association with the religious institutions is confirmed to a number of dance-scenes painted on the rock-walls of Ajanta, notably in cave I** and also supported by a sculpture in temple No. 7 at Aurangabad, which is reproduced here (Plate III).*<sup>2</sup> This scene is carved on the left wall of the shrine almost in front of the figure of the Buddha. The subject represents seven artistes, six of whom are playing on musical instruments and the seventh is dancing in the middle. The images of the artistes were originally covered with stucco with the object of beauty of finish, but the plaster has now peeled off and the little white spots where it is still sticking spoil the artistic effect of the statues. An expression of joy can however be traced from the countenance of the flute-player to the right of the dancer. The latter herself is treading gently, moving on the toes of her right foot, a step preparatory in Indian dancing before going into a whirl. The expression of calm over her face and the gesture indicated by the fingers of both hands have given a religious significance to the performance, and it is not unlikely that the figure represents a deity of the Buddhist pantheon. In this temple there are a number of other female deities all carved with considerable vigour. The most notable among them is an attendant of Bhṛīkūtī Tārā, carved on the left side of the shrine-door. The

* 1 The Wall-Paintings of Ajanta, by G. Yazdani, vide Journal of the Bihar and Orissa Research Society, Vol. XXVII, Pt. 1, p. 12.

* 2 Ajanta, by G. Yazdani, Vol. I. Plates Xa, XII and XIII.

* 3 The Rock-hewn Temples of Aurangabad, by G. Yazdani, Journal of Indian Art and Letters, Vol. XI. No. 1, 1937 (London).

figure is somewhat heavy in proportion but it displays great technical skill and artistic conception and above all an exuberance of spirit which is rarely met with in Buddhist sculpture. The artist has shown her absorbed in some serious religious problem; but at the same time he has attempted to indicate her restless nature due to her youth by the special position of her feet, one of which is placed sidewise and the other rests on the ground, only on the toes ( Plate IV ).

Another interesting feature of this sculpture is the comic figure of a dwarf, on whose head the goddess has placed her hand to keep the balance of her poise. The features of the dwarf are coarse, and such figures are frequently found in both painting and sculpture, either to relieve the seriousness of religious theme, or to enhance the beauty and grace of the principal figure of the sculpture by way of contrast. Dr. J. Ph. Vogel in one of his papers entitled Bālarāma in the Sculpture of Māmāllapuram, read at the XVIIth International Oriental Congress at Oxford, has pointed out Roman influence in these schemes and as a prototype referred to the sculpture of Dionysius. The influence of Roman art in the Deccan has not been traced as yet, but minor similarities in the work of master artists sometimes arise, and find prevalence in countries which have had no cultural or political contacts. The presence of dwarfs near stately figures with a view to accentuating the difference is a common theme in India, and another pleasing example of it is the river-goddess carved in the left wall of the Brahmanical cave, Rāmeśvara ( cave XXI ), at Ellora ( Plate V ). The cave belongs to the seventh century A. D.; but the sculpture possesses all the best qualities of the early Buddhist art in regard to spiritual calm, plastic beauty of the limbs and the grace of pose. The dwarf here is a chubby figure with a smiling face and long curled hair. The right arm of the goddess is mutilated and a fissure in the rock running almost across the face has spoiled its beauty to some extent, but notwithstanding these blemishes the statue is worthy of being adored for both its æsthetic grace and holy serenity.

The sculptor of the Deccan has taken delight in giving a number of attractive poses to woman, whether she is carved singly or in groups. Whether she is a goddess or an artiste, or only an architectural motif, she is always beautiful, and thus commands respect and wins admiration. Among Brahmanical sculpture another subject to show a graceful pose is the figure of Pārvatī in Rāvana shaking the Kailāsa, cave XVI, Ellora ( Plate VI ). She is seized with fright by the earthquake caused by the violent shake of the demon and has clung to Śiva for relief. Although the legs of Pārvatī are doubled up yet she has stretched herself in a charming pose, the body-line undulating in a delightful manner. The dramatic effect of the theme is to be seen in the figure of the maid who is running away in a state of panic. The sculpture according to an inscription incised in the cave where it exists, belongs to the eighth century A. D.

After the revival of Brahmanism the sculpture of the Deccan with the passage of time gained much in vigor and force; but it also lost considerably the spiritual calm and repose which were the characteristic features of Buddhist art. The representations of Śiva dancing the tāṇḍava<sup>*1</sup> the Bhairva in an angry mood<sup>*2</sup> and, Narasimha and Hiranya Kaśipu<sup>*3</sup>, may each be considered a tour de force; but they convey the embodiment of a different line of religious thought to what is represented in Buddhist gods and goddesses. Some European art-critics have consequently found an 'aggressiveness' in the Brahmanical sculpture of the 'revival' period, which may be true to a certain extent, but from the 10th century A. D. onwards, under the influence of Tantric doctrine, this 'aggressiveness' is replaced by a joyousness and we notice the walls and friezes of the temples decorated with figures of gods and goddesses, musicians and dancers, and acrobats and wrestlers, all permeated by a spirit of hilarity. The great temple at Palampet in the Warangal district of His Exalted Highness the Nizam's Dominions, has very fine sculpture of this class. The carvings represent scenes from the life of Rāma and other subjects showing coquetry and love-making, but the most striking among them are the figures of twelve female dancers carved in the form of struts to support the dripstones (chhuggās) of the roof. Three of them, which are reproduced in this article (Plates VII and VIII), represent dancing poses on the one hand, and the artistic import of the music by the gesture of fingers on the other - nṛī (नृती). The suppleness of limbs as indicated by the pose matches well the general elegance of these figures, and the sculptor has fully succeeded in conveying how human beauty can be enhanced when the body is set to a rhythmic movement under the technique of art. Greece may rightly be proud of the sober dignity of the caryatids of the Erechtheum, but as art must represent human thought and life in all its phases, the figure-brackets of Pālampet occupy a distinct position among the sculpture of their kind, showing elegance combined with a joyful mood.

*1 Kailāsa, cave XVI, Ellora.

*2 Dumar Lena, cave XXIX, Ellora.

*3 Das Avatara, cave XV, Ellora.

The figure-brackets of Pālampet may remind the reader of the struts of Sanchi representing Yakṣis in mango groves or other pleasant environment; but the difference between the two is that while the former embody all the charm of an accomplished dancer, the latter represent sylvan deities of youthful type. However, a good replica of the Sanchi caryatids is the nymph holding the stalk of a lotus creeper, carved on a wall of the shrine near the Pangal Tank in the Nalgonda district, of H. E. H. the Nizam's Dominions (Plate IX a).<sup>*1</sup> She has a buxom figure resembling that of a girl of a rich family in the Telingana country, and the sculptor has bedecked her with ornaments suitable to her high social status. The dress, like that of the women of Ajanta, is scanty, comprising a tight bodice of a transparent fabric and a pair of drawers which although covering the lower part of the body do not reach the knees. The features<sup>**</sup> and limbs have been finished with great care and in this respect this figure shows a much more developed art than that to be seen in the caryatids of Sanchi.

The love of variety in pose stirred to a degree the imagination of the sculptor, who has worked out in stone hundreds of attitudes; but he selected his specimens generally from human life. A novel poise may be seen in the figure of a lady who has got a thorn stuck in the sole of her foot, which she is pointing out to the attendant standing to her right (Plate IX b). She has raised her right leg and to balance her body has encircled her right arm round a post. This lady is holding a rolled sheet in her hand which may represent a land grant, and the lady may be the donor, Rudramā, daughter of the Kakatiya king, Gaṇapati-deva. But it is only a guess. The figure is however carved on the doorway of a temple built on the embankment of the Ramappa lake, which was constructed by Recherla Rudra, a general in the service of king Gaṇapati-deva in the first half of the 13th century A. D. The subject of this article being only to appreciate the artistic merits of the statue I need

* 1 The temple was probably built in the Saka year 1189 (1267 A. D.) Cf. A Corpus of Telugu Inscriptions Hyd. Arch. Ser., Mem. No. 13.

* 2 The nose of the statue has been damaged which has considerably spoilt the beauty of the face.

not say anything further regarding its historical significance. The head of the figure has lost some of the sharpness of its features by the passage of time and inclemencies of weather, and the feet are also rather large: but the latter blemish is common among the women of the Deccan, who walk bare-footed. The pose is, however, most graceful; its rhythm showing all the beautiful parts of the body to advantage.

Examples of the beauty of woman and the charm of her supple limbs as shewn in the Deccan sculpture, would easily fill a volume, and I venture to state that the few specimens, reproduced in this article, are sufficient to vindicate the skill of the artist and to confirm his homage to the fair sex.

